(1) The judiciary consisting of a supreme court, with a chief justice (a Filipino) and eight associate justices (three Filipinos); 28 judicial districts, each with a judge of first instance, except the third, fifth, sixth, seventh, fourteenth, fifteenth, twentieth, and twenty-third districts, which have 2 judges each, and the ninth district, which has 6 judges, this last covering the city of Manila. In addition to judges of first instance there are fifteen auxiliary judges of first instance who shall, at the direction of the Secretary of Justice, assist any District Judge, act as substitute for said Judge in case of his absence, illness or incapacity, and temporarily supply any vacancy that may occur among them. There is one justice of the peace and one auxiliary justice of the peace for the city of Baguio, and for each municipality or municipal district, or for municipalities or municipal districts combined into one single jurisdiction. In the city of Manila there is a municipal court having 3 judges, who take cognisance of civil and criminal cases and also of juvenile offences.

(2) The Bureau of Justice, with one chief known as the Attorney-General, and one assistant chief known as the Solicitor-General, together with 16 assistant attorneys and 4 special attorneys. Working under the supervision of the Bureau of Justice there is a fiscal or prosecuting attorney for each province, sometimes with assistants.

Public order is maintained through the municipal police and the Philippine Constabulary. The strength of the Constabulary at present is 398 officers and 6,331 enlisted men, distributed throughout the Archipelago and occupying 163 stations. The United States maintains in the Philippine Islands at present a force of about 11,700 troops of the United States Army. This includes 6 regiments of Filipino soldiers.

Religion.—The dominant religion of the islands is the Roman Catholic (9,282,751 adherents). In 1902, an independent Filipino Church was founded by the Rt. Rev. Gregorio Aglipay, at one time Ecclesiastical Governor of the diocese of Nueva Segovia, under the Roman Catholic Church. The new church adheres to modern science, proclaims that science is superior to Biblical tradition, denies the possibility of miracles, and conceives God as an invisible Father with one essence and a single person. The rituals resemble somewhat those of the Roman Church. Latin was originally prescribed, but the Spanish language is now the official tongue, and encouragement is given to the vernacular dialects. Marriage is allowed to its apostles. According to the Government Census of 1918, the Independent Filipino Church had 1,417,448 followers, but in the last Church Census its followers numbered 4,000,000. Several Protestant denominations have extensive organisations and have many communicants (165,235). They co-operate in maintaining a Union Theological Seminary, a Sunday School Union and an "Evangelical Union" which forwards reform movements, evangelistic campaigns, etc. The Buddhist religion is professed by 24,263 men and women, while the Mahommedans number 443,037, and are chiefly to be found in the districts of Mindanao and Sulu.

Education.—Education in the public schools of the Philippines is free, secular, and co-educational, its principal aim being the spread of literacy on the basis of a common language, English. In December, 1926, there was an annual enrolment of 1,068,453 pupils in the 7,280 public schools, with 299 American and 24,998 Filipino teachers. The expenditure on public-school education for 1925 was 8,134,371 dollars (Insular only, excluding provincial and municipal). There are a number of special schools, including the Philippine Normal School, and nine provincial normal schools; the Philippine School of Arts and Trades, and 21 provincial trade schools; the Central Luzon Agricultural School, together with some 271 schools (on December, 1926) specializing in agriculture, a number of which are particularly intended to benefit the non-Christian population; the Philippine Nautical School, the Philippine School of Commerce and the School for the Deaf and the Blind. For higher education there is the State-supported University of the Philippines; the total number of students in 1926-27 was 4,956 in the collegiate departments and 1,508 in the other departments; and 22 accredited private institutions of higher learning—among them the University of Sto. Tomas, founded in 1611, the oldest university under the American flag—giving collegiate instruction in liberal arts and sciences and in technical courses. There are eight schools of nursing of secondary grade. There are in all 347 separate private schools of all grades of instruction accredited by the Government. The total enrolment in these approved private schools and colleges in 1926 was 88,001, and the total number of instructors and teachers was about 3,500.

On January 1, 1927, there were 33 newspapers and periodicals published in English, and a total of 148 newspapers in various languages.

Finance.—The revenues and expenditures of the central government for six fiscal years were:—

—	1921	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
Revenues .	55,637,904	80,475,552	33,390,415	37,879,218	41,716,344	89,808,463
Expenditure .	59,093,977	87,806,722	34,039,878	33,615,386	81,437,849	83,060,577

The total bonded debt on September 1, 1927, amounted to 79,634,500 dollars. The total debt service in 1926 amounted to 4,998,685 dollars.

Production and Industry.—The principal products are rough rice ('palay'), Manila hemp ('abacá'), coconut, sugar cane, corn, tobacco and maguey. During the year ending June 30, 1926, the areas planted were: abacá, 492,050 hectares; coconut, 485,030 hectares; sugar-cane, 231,840 hectares; tobacco, 74,790 hectares; rice, 1,755,920 hectares; corn, 533,570 hectares, and sweet potatoes, 76,480 hectares. The principal fruit is the banana, with 94,820 hectares planted; there are also mangoes, 12,310 hectares; and papaya, anonas, pilinut (Canarium commune), and mandarin and oranges. The cultivation of rubber is increasing yearly, especially in the southern provinces where the large plantations are located. The total area planted to rubber throughout the Islands is 2,410 hectares.

In the production of copra and coconut oil the Islands are classed among the foremost countries in the world. During the year 1926, there were produced 366,000 metric tons of copra which represented the return of only 59 per cent. of the trees cultivated. The remaining trees were still young.

The live-stock industry is increasing steadily. On December 31, 1925, there were: 1,706,000 carabaos (water buffaloes); 914,000 cattle; 277,000 horses and mules; 8,811,000 hogs; 1,349,000 goats and 343,000 sheep.

The areas of uncultivated land are very considerable. The Archipelago has a total area of 29,629,600 hectares, and of these only 3,608,980 hectares, or 12 per cent., are cultivated, the remainder being distributed as follows: commercial and non-commercial forest lands, 18,824,800 hectares; grass or bare lands, 5,659,320 hectares; mangrove swamps, 270,600 hectares; unexplored lands, 1,265,900 hectares.

The Islands possess about 72,661 square miles of forests furnishing chiefly cabinet and construction timber, but also gums and resins, vegetable oils, rattan and bamboo, tan and dye barks and dye woods.

Gold is the leading mineral product. Some silver and a small amount of platinum are recovered from the gold mining operations. The iron production is small and consists entirely in the manufacture of native agricultural implements. Of the non-metals the important products are coal, limestone, gypsum, guano, phosphatic rocks, building stone, clay, salt, and mineral waters. The total value of mineral production in 1922 was 2,871,360 dollars; in 1923, 3,353,042 dollars; in 1924, 3,761,507 dollars; in 1925, 4,013,962 dollars, and in 1926, 4,400,755 dollars.

Commerce.—The values of imports and exports for fiscal years ending June 30 are stated as follows in U.S. dollars (50 cents U.S. currency = 1 peso):—

	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927

Exports to United Kingdom (Board of Trade figures) for calendar year 1927, £2,366,927; imports from United Kingdom, £1,200,145. These totals include Guam.

Shipping and Communications.—The overseas trade of the Philippine Islands during the year ending June, 1927, was carried mainly by 273 American vessels aggregating 1,393,896 register net tons, 419 British with 1,517,721 net tons, 161 Japanese with 531,233 net tons, 85 German with 364,683 net tons, 63 Dutch with 200,643 net tons, 60 Philippine with 138,547 net tons, and 75 vessels of other nationalities, making a total of 1,136 vessels with a net tonnage of 4,246,375 entered direct from foreign countries.

The coastwise trade of the Islands is carried exclusively by domestic vessels, which numbered 1,632 with an aggregate net tonnage of 82,338 on June 30, 1926.

On January 1, 1927, there were in operation, 935 post-offices, 461 money-order offices, 8,139 miles of insular telegraph lines, and 677 miles of cable, with 428 telegraph offices, including 37 radio stations. At the same time there were 684 postal savings banks in operation, with 176,056 accounts. The amount of deposits in the banks on January 1, 1927, was 4,910,464 pesos (Philippine currency).

When the United States entered the islands in 1898 there was but a single line of narrow gauge track running between Manila and Dagupan, a distance of about 120 miles. At the end of 1926, the Manila Railroad Co. had 660 miles on Luzon, and the Philippine Railroad Co. had 130 miles on Panay and Cebu. The Government has taken over the former of these companies. Total length of roads, 6,796.8 miles. Besides the foregoing roads there were 3,001 miles of foot and horse trails.

Banking and Coinage.—There are twelve banks doing business in the Islands: the International Banking Corporation, the Hong-Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, the Yokohama Specie Bank, the Bank of the Philippine Islands, formerly the Banco Español Filipino, the Philippine National Bank, the Mercantile Bank of China, the China Banking Corporation, the Philippine Trust Company, the People's Bank and Trust Company, the Postal Savings Bank and the Monte de Piedad and Savings Bank. The first four of these are foreign concerns, the rest domestic. Combined resources of all banks on December 31, 1926, was 245,582,200 pesos. The Philippine National Bank was inaugurated, under a special charter granted by the Philippine Legislature, on May 2, 1916, with an authorised capital of 10,000,000 dollars, of which 5,050,000 dollars was subscribed by the Government. By subsequent enactment, the said capital was increased to 25,000,000 dollars, of which 12,700,000 dollars were subscribed by the Government. By virtue of Act No. 3174, the Government purchased all the privately-owned shares of stock of the bank and its capital stock has been reduced to 5,000,000 dollars, fully paid-up by the Government, which guarantees the final redemption and payment of the circulating notes of the institution. Since July 1, 1916, the Bank has been the sole Government depository. This bank and the Bank of the Philippine Islands, founded 1852, are the only ones that have the privilege of issuing notes.

The Philippines is on the gold-exchange standard.

The coins used in the Philippine Islands are of the following decimal denominations: Peso, one-half peso, peseta (20 centavos), media peseta (10 centavos), all in silver; five centavo, in nickel; and one centavo, in copper. Treasury certificates and bank notes are issued in one, two, five, ten, twenty, fifty, one-hundred, two-hundred, and five-hundred peso denominations. The Philippine peso is equivalent to fifty cents of the United States money. The maintenance of the parity of the peso with the gold is provided for by the Gold Standard Fund Act of June 13, 1922. The new peso now coined contains twenty grammes of silver, 800 fine. The Philippine coins are now coined at the Mint in Manila.

GUAM

The Island of Guam, situated at the southern extremity of the Mariana Archipelago, in latitude 13° 26' N, longitude 144° 43' E, is the largest island of that group. It was ceded by Spain to the United States by the Treaty of Paris (December 10, 1898). It is under the jurisdiction of the Navy Department of the United States, and has been designated as a Naval Station for the purposes of government and protection. A garrison of marines and a shore naval force are maintained here. Guam is a saluting port.

The length of the island is 32 miles, the breadth from 4 to 10 miles, and the area 210 square miles. Agaña, the seat of Government, is about eight miles from the anchorage in Apra Harbour. The port of entry is Piti. The number of inhabitants (exclusive of the military establishment and non-native residents) on June 30, 1927, was 17,018, of whom 15,944 were classed as 'natives.' The number of births in the fiscal year 1927 was 795, representing 50·9 per 1,000, and the number of deaths 267, representing 17·1 per 1,000 of population. The native language is Chamorro, but Spanish and English are also spoken. English is the official language.

The Governor of the island, a naval officer appointed by the President, takes precedence over and is entitled to the honours due to an Admiral. The Governor is also the Military Commander of the island, Commandant of the naval station, and combines the functions of the executive, legislative and judicial power of the Government. The judiciary system comprises one police court, an Island Court, a Court of Equity, a Higher Court of Equity, and one Court of Appeal. The Spanish Colonial laws, modified when necessary by executive general orders of the Governor, are still in force.

Elementary education is compulsory. There are 3,272 pupils registered, 2,492 of whom are of school age (7 to 12). English, handicrafts and agriculture are taught.

There is a Government radio station on the island, which is also in cable telegraphic communication with all parts of the world. There is an irregular mail service per west bound U.S. army and navy transports, from San Francisco, via Honolulu, and to Manila.

A line of commercial steamers, with scheduled sailings from San Francisco every 90 days, stops at Guam westbound en route to Manila. The station ship makes about four trips a year to Manila, China, and Japan for freight and coal.

The port is closed to foreign vessels of war and commerce except in special cases. Permission to visit the island must be obtained of the Navy Department in each case.

The products of the island are maize, copra, rice, sweet potatoes, coffee, cocoa, and sugar, besides valuable timber. Copra and coconut oil are the principal exports. There are about 4,000 head of cattle, including 900 water buffaloes. The imports into the island in the year ending June 30, 1927, amounted to 415,936 dollars, and the exports to 88,367 dollars.

The official currency is that of the United States.

SAMOAN ISLANDS.

(AMERICAN SAMOA.)

The Dutch were the first to visit the Samoan Islands, in 1721-22; French explorers followed in 1768 and 1787. In 1791, a British war vessel visited the islands.

The history of American Samoa commenced in the year 1872, when the harbour of Pagopago, in Tutuila, was ceded to the United States for a naval and coaling station. In 1878, this cession was confirmed and rights of freedom of trade and extra-territorial jurisdiction in Samoa were granted. On June 14, 1889, the conference between the representatives of the United States, Germany, and Great Britain was held at Berlin, resulting in the treaty recognising the Samoan Islands as neutral territory, with an independent government, the natives being allowed to follow their own laws and customs, while for civil and criminal causes, in which foreigners were concerned, there was established a Supreme Court of Justice, in which an American citizen was the presiding judge. This arrangement continued till 1898, when disturbances regarding the right of succession to the office of king arose. In 1899, the kingship was abolished, and, by the Tripartite Treaty of November 14 of that year, accepted in February 13, 1900, by the United States, Great Britain and Germany renounced in favour of the United States all rights over the island of Tutuila and the other islands of the Samoan group east of 171 degrees of longitude west of Greenwich, the islands to the west of that meridian being assigned to Germany.

The Island of Tutuila, 70 miles from Apia, has an area of about 40·2 square miles, with a population of 6,616 (including the island of Aunu'u) according to the 1926 census. Ta'u has an area of 14 square miles, and the other islets (Ofu and Olosega) of the Mann'a group have an area of about 4 square miles with a population of 2,069. Public Resolution No. 75, 68th Congress, approved March 4, 1925, extended the sovereignty of the United States of America over Swains Island, and made it a part of American Samoa, placing same under the jurisdiction of the administrative and judicial authorities of the government established therein by the United States. Sovereignty was proclaimed, and the United States flag raised, over Swains Island on May 18, 1925. The island is from a mile and a half to two miles in diameter. In the interior is a lake or lagoon of brackish water about a half mile in diameter, eight fathoms in depth, and without access to the sea. Population (1926) is 87. The total area of American Samoa is thus 60 square miles. According to the 1926 census American Samoa thus contained 8,763 inhabitants. The harbour at Pagopago, which penetrates the south coast like a fiord, is the only good harbour in Samoa. It is a United States naval station under a Commandant, the Government having acquired there a land area of about 160 acres.

The Commandant is also the Governor of American Samoa by commission from the President of the United States. He appoints officers and frames laws or ordinances, but native customs (not inconsistent with United States laws) are not changed without the consent of the people.

The islands are organised in three political divisions corresponding to the old Samoan political units:—1, the Eastern District of Tutuila, with the islet of Aunu'u; 2, the Western district of Tutuila; and 3, the District of Manu'a, composed of Ta'u and the neighbouring islets. In each District there is a Native Governor, County Chiefs and Village Chiefs, the latter acting as Mayors (Pulenuus) of their respective villages. All of these officials are appointed by governmental authority although the District Governor has indirect control of the County Chiefs, and the County Chiefs of the Village Chiefs. Judicial power is vested in village courts, in six judicial district courts, and in a High Court.

There are no public lands in American Samoa. Nearly all the land is owned by natives. The soil is fertile; the fruits comprise orange, lime, banana, mangoes and alligator pears. Copra is abundant and is of excellent quality.

The Island Government has established a system of public schools at 19 school centres, giving every child over 6 years of age the opportunity of an elementary English education: 1,868 pupils are enrolled. All private schools must teach English a percentage of the time. The four religious missions here also conduct schools for pupils of all ages, instruction being given chiefly in Samoan. Pupil enrolment is as follows: London Missionary Society (established 1830), 2,214; Roman Catholic (French), 159; and Mormon, 167. Mission schools, total, 2,440.

The natives pay their taxes in cash, or copra, on the 1st of January of each year, after the budget for that year has been prepared and approved. The annual output of copra is approximately 1,300 tons. There is a native guard (known as the Fitaftas) of 77 which includes 13 bandsmen and 6 Hospital corpsmen. The chief island products, besides copra, are taro, breadfruit, yams, coconuts, pine-apples, oranges, and bananas. Copra is the only article exported. Imports: 1924, 194,862 dollars; 1925, 192,412 dollars; 1926, 148,163 dollars. Exports: 1924, 150,280 dollars; 1925, 150,333 dollars; 1926, 78,033 dollars.

About 80 miles of public roads have been constructed. There is a United States Naval high-powered radio station located on the island of Tutuila, which has daily communication with New Zealand, Australia, Honolulu, the United States, and the islands of the Pacific. This radio station is open to commercial traffic. The fast mail steamers of the Oceanic Steamship Company touch here on their regular trips between the United States, Hawaii and Australia.

ABYSSINIA.

(ETHIOPIA.)

THE ancient Empire of Abyssinia, or 'Ethiopia,' includes the former Kingdoms of Tigré, in the north-east; Amhara and Gojjam, in the centre, and Shoa in the south; besides many other smaller and formerly independent or quasi-independent dependencies, together with the modern acquisitions to the south, Harrar, and the Galla, Shankalla and Dankali territories. The following are the principal provinces into which the country is divided: Harrar, Wollo, Gurage, Kaffa, Gore, Sayu, Benishangul, Wogera, Southern Tigré, Adowa and Aksun, Sokota, Lasta, Goffa, Nekemti (Lekempti) and the Western Galla countries, Sellale, Wollaga, Gimira, Sidamo, Arussi, Borana, Gojjam, Gondar, Jimma. The whole area is 350,000 sq. miles. For treaties relating to the boundaries of Abyssinia see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1907, p. 667, and for 1923, p. 677.

By the convention of Addis Ababa of October 26, 1896, between Italy and King Menelik, the independence of Abyssinia was recognized.

Under an Agreement signed December 13, 1906, on behalf of Great Britain, France, and Italy, the three Powers undertake to respect and endeavour to preserve the integrity of Abyssinia; to act so that industrial concessions granted in the interest of one of them may not injure the others; to abstain from intervention in Abyssinian internal affairs; to concert together for the safeguarding of their respective interests in territories bordering on Abyssinia; and they make agreements concerning railway construction in Abyssinia and equal treatment in trade and transit for their nationals. By an exchange of Notes dated December 14-20, 1925, Great Britain and Italy more specifically defined their respective spheres of interest in Abyssinia, as indicated in the above agreement; in particular Italy recognised the exclusive right of Great Britain to deal with the waters of Lake Tsana, while Great Britain agreed not to oppose any Italian scheme for railway development in the hinterland of Eritrea or Italian Somaliland, which may affect Abyssinia.

Government.

After the overthrow of the Emperor Theodore by the British in 1868, the suzerain power passed to Prince Kassai of Tigré, who assumed the old title of Negusa Nagast ('King of Kings'), and was crowned in 1872 as John II., Emperor of Ethiopia. After the death of this potentate in 1889, Menelik II., King of Shoa (born 1844), G.C.B., G.C.M.G., became the supreme ruler of Abyssinia. Menelik died in December, 1913, and was succeeded by Lij Yasu, born in 1896, son of his second daughter, Waizeru Shoaragga and Ras Mikael, the chief of the Wollo Gallas.

On September 27, 1916, Lij Yasu was deposed by public proclamation, and Zauditu, another daughter of Menelik, born 1876, was nominated Empress, and Ras Taffari, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., born July 17, 1891, son of Ras Makonnen, and great-nephew of Menelik, proclaimed heir to the throne. The Empress was crowned at Addis Ababa on February 11, 1917. To a great extent the exercise of power is in the hands of Ras Taffari, who acts as Regent. He married Waizeru Menen in 1912, and has 2 sons and 3 daughters.

The political institutions are essentially of a feudal character, analogous to those of early mediæval Europe. In August, 1919, a modified form of Cabinet Government was introduced, but its functions are somewhat nebulous.

Abyssinia was admitted into the League of Nations on September 28, 1923.

Population.

No reliable figures of population exist, but recent estimates indicate a figure of about 10,000,000. The Abyssinians, properly so called, number rather less than 3½ millions, and inhabit the provinces of Tigré, Amhara, Gojjam, and Shoa (in part), covering an area of over one-third of the whole country. They are Christians, and are of Hamitic origin, semiticized by waves of Semitic invasion from Arabia and adulterated by intermarriage with Negro and other conquered races. The Gallas, some of whom are Christian, some Moslem, and some Pagan, comprise considerably more than one-half of the entire population, and are a pastoral and agricultural people of Hamitic origin. Ogaden, Issa and other Somalis inhabit Harrar, the Somaliland plateau, and the south-east. The Danakil are Mohammedans, and are still somewhat turbulent. There are also Negroes (in the South-West), and the Falashas (of Jewish religion), in the N.-E. centre with a growing number of foreigners (Indians, Arabs, Armenians, Europeans) in the towns.

There are few towns in Abyssinia in our sense of the word—Addis Ababa, Dire Dawa and Harrar being the most important. Addis Ababa, the capital, has 60,000 to 70,000 inhabitants with a foreign population of several thousands, of whom the majority are British Indian and British Arab subjects, Greeks and Armenians. Dire Dawa contains about 30,000 people, of whom about 300 are Europeans, and the old walled city of Harrar has a population of about 40,000, with about 100 foreigners, mostly Indians and Arabs. Other important towns, politically or commercially, are: Debra Markos, capital of Gojjam, 5,000; Gondar, capital of Amhara, 3,000; Adua, capital of Tigré, 5,000; Axum, ancient capital of Ethiopia, 5,000; Antalo, former capital of Tigré, 1,000; Ankober, former capital of Shoa, 2,000; Debra-Tabor and Makallé; Gore, Saiyu, Nekemti, Saméré, 3,000–4,000, and Sokoto, 1,500, important trading centres. Gambeila, in Western Abyssinia, is a trading station leased to the Sudan Government. It is an important outlet for the trade in the West. A service of steamers is maintained from June to November with Khartum.

Domestic slavery is a recognized institution, but slave trading, by an ancient law renewed by a decree issued in June 1923, is punishable by death. A comprehensive edict of 45 clauses was issued by Ras Tafari in March 1924, providing for the gradual emancipation of slaves, beginning with the children born of slaves.

Religion and Instruction.

Since the conversion of the Abyssinians to Christianity in the fourth century they have retained their connection with the Alexandrian Church through the Abuna, or head bishop, who is always a Copt, and who is appointed and consecrated by the Coptic Patriarch of Alexandria. Under the Abuna is the Itchege, a native ecclesiastical dignitary, who presides over the spirituality, numbering about 100,000 ecclesiastics. It is estimated that a quarter of the adult male population are priests, monks, or debera (deacons), and a third of the land belongs to the Church, whose power is very great. Both Copts and Abyssinians are monophysite, rejecting the decrees of the Council of Chalcedon (A.D. 451).

Education is restricted to the teaching of the secular and regular clergy. There are 2 schools at Addis Ababa and 2 Mission schools at Harrar, a French and Greek school at Dire Dawa. The attendance is not large as yet. The people are in consequence illiterate and ignorant. A few foreign missions, Swedish, American, French, Italian and German, carry on a limited amount of educational work. The Greeks and Armenians have their own schools.

Justice is administered by the provincial governors, and shums, or petty chiefs, with the right of appeal to the Emperor. The Fetha Nagast, or Code of Laws, deals with ecclesiastical, civil and penal law. The legal system is said to be based on the Justinian Code. The penal code is based on the Mosaic law. Foreigners are subject to the jurisdiction of a special court or to their own consular Courts according to circumstances. Administration of Justice is very defective, but punishments for crimes are less barbarous than formerly.

Defence.

The Abyssinian Army in the field consists of two main parts. The standing army composes the nucleus, and the remainder of the forces are drawn from the chiefs and their retainers summoned in time of war, a sort of militia. Besides the above, a varying number of irregulars join the army on the outbreak of war, every man, except the priests, being an actual or potential soldier. The standing army, instituted by Menelik, forms in effect the paid standing garrison of each province, and amounts altogether to something under 100,000 men. Both they and the militia, amounting to perhaps 300,000-400,000 men, are very loosely organized, and have nothing in the shape of transport, and little modern equipment. Practically every man is armed with a rifle, and often with shield and sword as well. The personal army of the Regent, Ras Tafari, consists of a few thousand men, and is armed with modern rifles, some Lewis guns and mountain guns. The Regent possesses a 5-ton tank given to him by the Duke of the Abruzzi during his visit to Abyssinia in May, 1927.

Agriculture and Industry.

The chief industries are pastoral and agricultural. Cattle, sheep, and goats are numerous. The horses of the country are small but hardy, and make excellent polo ponies; mules are bred, being used as pack animals; donkeys are also small and serve for baggage animals. The soil belongs theoretically to the Négus; the idea of landed property scarcely exists among the populace, and agriculture is therefore backward. Cotton, the sugar-cane, date-palm, coffee, and vine thrive well in many districts, but, except coffee, are nowhere extensively cultivated. The production of Harari coffee (long berry Mocha) is on the increase. Besides this, which is cultivated, there grows more especially in southern and western Abyssinia a wild coffee plant, yielding a berry known as Abyssinian coffee, which grows in extensive forests. The supply is said to be unlimited. The native produce includes hides and skins, wax, barley, millet (dhurra), wheat, gesho (which serves as a substitute for hops), and tobacco; but, with the exception of hides, skins, wax, grain and coffee, not in sufficient quantities for export. Manufacturing industries are practically non-existent. The forests abound in valuable trees and rubber. Iron is found in some districts and is manufactured into spears, knives, hatchets, &c. Placer gold mining and washing are carried on in the western districts; coal, copper and sulphur have been found, also platinum. There are said to be valuable deposits of potash salts in the north-eastern part of the country, and their exploitation has been carried on with the aid of Italian capital.

Foreign enterprise has begun to establish itself in the country; three Belgian companies are working coffee plantations, and a Franco-Belgian company is experimenting on a large scale with cotton. A Belgian company has also acquired the alcohol monopoly.

Commerce.

The principal artery of trade is the Franco-Ethiopian railroad, but caravans also do a large trade in the interior. The chief trade routes besides the railway are the following :—(1) Khartum-Gambeila, Khartum-Gallabat, and Sudan; (2) Mombasa-Nairobi-Moyale (British East Africa); (3) Zeilah-Jijiga, Hargeisa-Ogaden (British Somaliland); (4) Massawa-Asmara-Gondar, Assab-Dessie (Italian Eritrea); (5) Mogadishu-Lugh-Dolo-Arusi (Italian Somaliland).

The exports consist mainly of hides and skins (including leopard and monkey), coffee, wax, ivory, civet, and native butter. The imports comprise grey shirting, cotton goods, corrugated iron roofing, provisions, liquors, railway material, sugar, and petroleum. The imports are chiefly from England, France, India, Italy, Germany, Japan, and the United States. No reliable trade figures are available, but estimates place the figures at about 2,500,000*l.* annually.

The total trade between Abyssinia and Great Britain for 5 years (according to Board of Trade returns) was as follows :—

—	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Abyssinia.	4,970	28,094	119,057	104,892	221,697
Exports to Abyssinia	7,962	12,838	21,781	16,368	16,051

Communications.

Roads in Abyssinia are mere tracks, and transport is effected by means of mules, pack-horses, donkeys, and, in some places, camels. In the capital and its vicinity several miles of metalled road were constructed in 1926. In 1896 the Franco-Ethiopian Railway Co. was formed for the construction of a line from Jibuti in French Somaliland, which reached the capital in 1917. The line is of metre gauge, with a total length of 488½ miles. Trains run twice weekly in each direction, covering the distance in three days, but running by day only. The railway is under French management, and depends financially on a subvention from the French government.

There are telegraph lines (about 2,000 miles) connecting Addis Ababa with Harrar, with Sidamo, with Jibuti in French Somaliland, and with Massawa in Eritrea. Telephone lines connect Addis Ababa with Harrar, also with Gore and Gambella (in the west), Jimma and Sharada (south-west), Dessie (north), and Debra Tabor and Gojjam, and with Ankober, and Asmara with Adua and Borromaida. In 1925, there were 10 post offices.

Money and Credit.

The Bank of Abyssinia, with authorised capital of 500,000*l.* and paid-up capital of 125,000*l.*, has its head office at Addis Ababa and agencies at Diré Dawa, Goré, Gambella and Dessie. By its constitution the Governor of the National Bank of Egypt is its President, and its governing body sits at Cairo. The amount of the bank-note issue on December 31, 1926, was 500,000 dollars. The notes circulate mainly in Addis Ababa.

The current coin of Abyssinia is the Maria Theresa dollar and the Menelik dollar. This latter coin, worth about 2*s.*, weighs 28·075 grammes, ·835 fine. It has nominally the same value as the Maria Theresa dollar, but in some places it is not taken at all. Other silver coins are the half, quarter, and sixteenth (girsh or piastre) of a dollar, and there is also a copper coin, the besa (= one-thirty-second of a dollar). The number of piastres or besa obtainable for a dollar although theoretically fixed by law, is in fact liable to constant fluctuation. Various articles, however, are used as medium of exchange; bars of salt are accepted as money in many parts of the country, at a fluctuating rate according to supply and cost of transport. Cartridges are also currency, although to a diminishing extent; and in most places barter prevails.

The metric system of weights and measures is used to a certain extent in the capital and district bordering the railway line. The principal native weights and measures, which are also used in trade with foreigners, are shown below.

Weights and Measures.

WEIGHTS.

Oke = weight of Maria Theresa/Menelik dollar = 28,067 grammes, approximately 1 oz. avoirdupois.

Natr = 30 okets, approximately 1 lb. 14 ozs. avoirdupois.

Farasula = 20 natrs, approximately 37½ lbs.

Kantar = 100 lbs.

1 Waggia (for ivory) = 480 dollars weight.

1 „ (for rubber) = 640 dollars weight.

LINEAL MEASURES.

Kinnd = French Coudée (length of forearm and hand) = cubit = 50 centimetres = 19¾ inches.

Khalad = 130 kinnds = 65 metres = 213½ feet, say 71 yards.

LAND MEASURE.

The measure is a Gasha, which varies according to the quality of the land, and ranges between 15 khalads by 25 khalads, and 7 khalads by 11 khalads, the latter equalling roughly 80 acres.

GRAIN MEASURES.

10 kounna = 1 ladan.

2 ladan = 1 dawala = 80 kilos.

MEASURE FOR HONEY AND CIVET.

10 wanche (horn cups) = 1 goundo = about 3 litres.

Diplomatic Representatives.

1. OF ABYSSINIA IN GREAT BRITAIN.

None.

2. OF GREAT BRITAIN IN ABYSSINIA.

Minister.—Charles Henry Bentinck, C. M. G. (appointed February 24, 1925)

Second Secretary.—Henry Dobinson, M. C.

Consul at Addis Ababa.—G. T. Maclean.

There are Consuls also at Harrar, Goré, Maji, Dangila and Mega.

There is also an Honorary British Vice-Consul at Jibuti in French Somaliland.

AFGHÁNISTÁN.

AFGHÁNISTÁN is a country of Asia lying between parallels 29° and 38° 20' of north latitude, and 61° and 72° of east longitude, with a long narrow strip extending to 75° east longitude (Wákhán). For the boundaries, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1925, pp. 654-55.

On November 22, 1921, a treaty between Great Britain and Afghánistán was signed at Kabul, in accordance with which Great Britain recognises the complete independence of Afghánistán, and agrees to an interchange of diplomatic representatives; while Afghánistán accepts the existing Anglo-Afghán frontier. The Afghán Government may import munitions of war through India. The treaty is for a minimum period of three years. An Anglo-Afghan Trade Convention was ratified and exchanged on August 5, 1923.

For earlier British relations with Afghanistan, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, pp. 662-3.

Amanullah Khán, the reigning King, the third son of Amír Habibullah Khán by his principal wife, Ulya Hazrat, was born on June 1, 1892, and succeeded on the assassination of his father, February 20, 1919. The Queen-Consort, the second wife of the King, whom he married in 1914, is Surayya, her official style being the Shah Khánum. The King has five children: Prince Hidayatullah Khán, the Shahzadjan, born on June 5, 1921 (son of the King's first wife); Prince Sultanjan, born 1918; two other daughters born respectively in 1920 and 1923; and Prince Rahmatullah Khán, born in 1922. The King has five brothers: Inayatulla Khán (born Oct. 20, 1888), Hayatulla Khán (born Dec. 29, 1888), Mohammed Kabir Khán (born Oct. 4, 1895), Asadulla Jan (born May 23, 1910), and Ohedulla Khán (born Nov. 18, 1915). Uncles of the King are: Aminulla Khán (born Oct. 12, 1885) and Muhammad Umar Khán (born Sept. 16, 1889).

The title of King instead of Amír was adopted in 1926.

The government of Afghanistan is, since 1922, a constitutional monarchy with Legislative and State Assemblies, and a cabinet presided over by the King himself. The country is divided into five major provinces of Kábul, Afghan Turkistan, Kandahár, Herat, and Kataghan-Badakhshán; and four minor provinces: Simat-i-Mashriqi (i.e. Eastern Province), Simat-i-Janubi (Southern Province), Farah, and Maimana. Each province is under a governor (called in major provinces Naib-ul-Hukumeh and in minor provinces Hakim-i-'Aala).

There are separate departments of War, Foreign Affairs, Internal Affairs, Education, Commerce, Justice, and Revenue, each in charge of a Minister.

Area and Population.—The extreme breadth of Afghanistan from north-east to south-west is about 700 miles; its length from the Herát frontier to the Kháibar Pass, about 600 miles; the area is given variously as about 245,000 or 270,000 square miles. Population, according to the latest estimate, about eight millions. The languages spoken are Persian and Pushtoo, and Turkish in Turkistan and parts of Badakhshán. The predominant religion is Islam.

The largest towns are Kábul, the capital (population about 100,000), Kandahár (population with suburbs 60,000), Herát (population 121,000), and Mazar-i Sharif (46,200).

Instruction.—Besides the two principal colleges in Kábul—the Harbia or Military College, and the Habibia or Arts College—there are a number of others for civil servants, fine arts, etc. Elementary and secondary schools exist throughout the country. Elementary education is free and compulsory, and higher education is also free. Two schools under French and German superintendence respectively have recently been opened. In the 1927 Budget provision was made for opening 27 new primary boys' schools and 3 girls' schools, also schools of agriculture and telegraphy.

Justice.—The law is based on the Shara' or Islamic law. Lower Courts (Mahakima-i-Ibtidaia) are established in each seat of government, and Higher Courts (Mahakima-i-Murafaah) may have appeals from the former brought before them. A High Court in Kábul is the supreme judicial authority. In many instances efforts are made by litigants to compose their differences by the aid of unofficial juries in each locality.

Finance.—The revenue of Afghânistân is subject to considerable fluctuations. The Government share of the produce recoverable is said to vary from one-third to one-tenth according to the advantages of irrigation. The total revenue is estimated at about fifty million rupees, a considerable portion of which is found from Customs.

Defence.—In addition to a standing army numbering about 25,000 all arms, the King can count on the support of large numbers of well-armed tribesmen, who rally to his standard in time of war. The regular army is recruited on the Hasht Nafari system, by which one in every eight of the able-bodied population is conscripted for service. The army generally is trained and organised more on the lines of a gendarmerie than of a modern army. Officers graduate at a military college, but recently large batches of cadets have been sent to foreign capitals to undergo training, particularly to Turkey, and Turkish influence may be said to predominate in the army. A small air force is maintained under Russian influence, the personnel being obtained from Moscow under contract; but a considerable number of Afghan students are undergoing aeronautical training in Moscow and Paris. The real military strength of Afghânistân lies in the rugged and inhospitable nature of the country.

Production and Industry.—Although the greater part of Afghânistân is more or less mountainous, and a good deal of the country is too dry and rocky for successful cultivation, yet there are many fertile plains and valleys, which, with the assistance of irrigation from small rivers or wells, yield very satisfactory crops of fruit, vegetables, and cereals. There are two harvests in the year in most parts of Afghânistân. One of these is sown in the end of autumn and reaped in summer, and consists of wheat, barley, Erum Lens, and Cicer arietinum, with some peas and beans. The other harvest is sown in the end of spring and reaped in autumn. It consists of rice, millet, arzna (Panicum italicum), Indian corn, &c. The castor-oil plant, madder, and the asafetida plant abound. Fruit, viz. the apple, pear, almond, peach, quince, apricot, plum, cherry, pomegranate, grape, fig, mulberry, is produced in profuse abundance. They form a staple food of a large class of the people throughout the year, both in the fresh and preserved state, and in the latter condition are exported in great quantities. The fat-tailed sheep is native to Afghânistân. It is characterised by the immense weight and size of its tail, caused by development of masses of fat, forming stores of nourishment which are drawn upon during the winter months, when fodder is scarce. These sheep furnish the principal meat diet of the inhabitants, and the grease of the tail is a substitute for butter. The wool and skins not only provide material for warm apparel, but also furnish the country's main article of export.

Northern Afghânistân is reputed to be tolerably rich in copper, and lead and iron are found in many parts. Coal is found in the Ghorband Valley and near the Khurd Kâbul Pass. Gold in small quantities is also brought from the Laghman Hills and Kunar. Badakhshan is said to be the only country in the world to produce first-quality lapis lazuli. This is smuggled in considerable quantities to China and Bokhara.

Silks, felts, carpets, articles from camels' and goats' hair, are some of the principal industries. At Kâbul, soap, cloth, boots, and some other articles are manufactured for local consumption, but chiefly for the army. The sheepskin coat, or poftin, manufacture is one of the important industries. The Government factories and workshops at Kâbul have as their partial object public education in mechanical methods and appliances, and as a feature of such work classes are organised in different industries.

Commerce.—No accurate registration of the trade of Afghánistán has yet been obtained. The trans-frontier trade between India and Afghánistán (according to Indian statistics) was as follows in five years ending March 31:

—	1920-21	1921-22	1922-23	1923-24	1924-25
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports into India .	1,543,200	809,500	1,006,160	943,350	203,100
Exports into Afghanistan .	1,328,500	1,352,700	1,575,240	1,726,850	122,600

Of the exports from India to Afghánistán the chief items are cotton goods, indigo and other dyeing materials, sugar, hardware, leather and silver treasure. The imports into India include timber, fruits and vegetables, grain and pulse, ghi and other provisions, asafoetida and other drugs, spices, wool, silk, cattle, hides, and tobacco.

Communications.—Afghánistán is not a member of the International Postal Union. Letters, etc., from all parts of the world have to be sent to Peshawar. They are forwarded by the Indian Postal Department to the Frontier and are there handed over to the Afghan postal officials and sent to their destination 'unpaid,' Afghan postage being recovered from the addressee on delivery.

The trade routes of Afghánistán are as follows:—From Persia by Meshed to Herát; from Bokhára by Merv to Herát; from Bokhára by Karshi, Balkh, and Khulm to Kábul; from East Turkistán by Badakhshán and Nuristan (formerly Kafiristan) to Kábul; from India by the Kháibar road to Kábul; from India by the Gomál Pass to Ghazní and Kelat-i-Ghilzai; from Chaman, the terminus of the North-Western Railway beyond Quetta, to Kandahár and thence to Kábul or Herát; from Parachinar (Kurram) via Peiwar and Shurtargardan Passes to Logar and Kábul.

There are no railways in the country. The following roads are fit for motor traffic, except after snow or heavy rain, but are badly constructed and mostly unmetalled: Kháibar-Kábul, Kábul-Kandahár, Kábul-Gardez, Kandahár-Chaman, and Kábul-Bamian. In addition there are some 200 miles of minor roads fit for motor traffic, mostly in the vicinity of Kábul. Merchandise, however, is still transported chiefly on camel or pony back. There are practically no navigable rivers in Afghánistán, and timber is the only article of commerce conveyed by water, floated down stream in rafts. Telephones are installed in a few of the larger towns. There is telegraphic communication between Peshawar-Kábul, Kábul-Kandahár, and under construction between Termez-Kábul, Kandahár-Chaman and Kandahár-Herát. A wireless installation connects Kábul with Eastern Europe and India.

Money and Currency.—The following new coinage was introduced in March 1926: Gold coins: the amani, equivalent to Rs. 20 Afghani, and the half-amani; silver coins: the Afghani rupee, equivalent to 100 pools, the half-Afghani, and the 20-pooli; copper coins: the 10-pooli, the 5-pooli and the 2-pooli. The old coinage has not yet been withdrawn. Relative values fixed by the Afghan Government are as follows: 11 Kabuli rupees equal 10 Afghani rupees; 1 Kabuli rupee equals 91 pools.

Weights and Measures.—The metric units have now officially replaced the old Afghani units—the Gaz-i-shah (the Persian Zar), the linear standard equal to 40.95 inches; the Gaz-i-zarib, the square standard equal to 1,000 to 1,066 Gaz-i-shah or 1,294 to 1,379 square yards, about  $\frac{1}{2}$  acre; and the Gaz-i-nix memar, the cubic standard equal to one cubic Gaz-i-shah or 1,625 cubic feet. All avoirdupois weights, formerly current hitherto under the name nakhud (3 grains), are now in terms of the gramme.

ALBANIA.

(SHQYPENIA.)

THE territory known as Albania was made up of the old Turkish Provinces of Scutari and of Yanina, and of the parts of the Ottoman vilayets of Kossovo and Monastir, which bordered upon those Provinces. The Albanians are divided into two principal groups—the Ghegs, who live in the north, and the Tosks, who live in the south.

Little is known of their early history. From 1431, when the Turks captured Yanina, the Albanians remained under Turkish rule, except for two brief periods of independence, first between 1443 and 1468, under Prince George Castriot II, surnamed Scanderbeg, and again in the eighteenth century, under the Tosk, Ali Tepelen of Yanina, in the south, and the Bushati Dynasty of Scutari, in the north. In 1890 the short-lived Albanian League was founded, and ruled Albania for two years, making an unsuccessful effort to obtain independence.

The independence of Albania was proclaimed at Valona on November 28, 1912, and on December 20, 1912, the London Ambassadorial Conference agreed to the principle of Albanian independence. Subsequently that Conference approximately decided the frontiers of the new country, and agreed that a European Prince be nominated to rule it. Prince William of Wied, having accepted the crown of the new country from an Albanian deputation, which offered it to him at Neuwied, on February 21, 1914, arrived at Durazzo on March 7, 1914. The Government of the country was vested in the hands of the Prince, supported and advised by a financial International Commission of Control, the creation of which was agreed to by the Ambassadorial Conference in July, 1913.

After the outbreak of the European War in 1914, the Prince and nearly all the members of the International Commission left Albania, which fell into a state of anarchy. It was not until June 3, 1917, that the general in charge of the Italian forces proclaimed Albania an independent country, and a provisional Government was set up at Durazzo. A Republic was subsequently proclaimed with a constitution, under which there is a Parliament of 54 members elected every 4 years and a Senate of 18 members, 12 elected for 6 years and 6 nominated.

President of the Republic.—Ahmed Zogu (elected January 31, 1925).

The President, who is elected for 7 years by the Senate and Chamber sitting as the National Assembly, has the same executive powers as those enjoyed by the President of the United States.

On November 27, 1927, a treaty of friendship and arbitration was signed at Tirana between Albania and Italy.

Area and Population.—The frontiers of Albania, which were provisional, were shown in the map of the Balkan Peninsula which accompanied THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1914. An International Commission in 1925 definitely determined the boundaries of Albania. The estimated probable area of the country is about 17,374 square miles, while the population is estimated at 831,877, and divided as follows:—

—	North Albania	Central Albania	South Albania	Total	Per cent.
Mahommedan . . .	160,573	254,884	169,218	584,675	71
Roman Catholic . .	85,098	3 857	32	88,987	10
National Albanian Orthodox Church .	2,705	36,316	119,194	158,215	19
Total . . .	248,376	295,057	288,444	831,877	—

The country is divided into 8 provinces, named after the principal towns, which with estimated population are as follows:—Durazzo, 5,000; Scutari, 32,000; Korytza, 24,000; Elbasan, 13,000; Tirana, the capital, 12,000; Argyrocastro, 12,000; Berat, 8,500; Valona, 6,500.

Religion and Instruction.—There is no State religion. About two-thirds of the Albanians are Moslems. Of the remaining one-third the Christians in the north are for the most part Roman Catholics, and the Christians in the south are members of the Greek-Orthodox Albanian Church, which is under the rule of the Archbishop of Tirana and four bishops. A concordat between the Vatican and Albania was concluded in 1928. The Holy See is represented in Albania by an Apostolic Delegate, and as a result of the concordat Albania will appoint a diplomatic representative to the Vatican. In Albania the freedom of the Roman Catholic Church is assured.

There are 548 primary schools in the country, of which 474 have only one class, while 28 have five classes. There are 854 teachers and about 24,000 pupils. There are, besides, 12 continuation schools, 2 secondary schools (at Scutari and Korytza), and a teachers' training college at Elbasan, opened in 1921. There is also an American technical school and a college for girls in Tirana.

Justice.—There is in every province a tribunal of first instance with three judges, and a court of cassation, composed of six judges, at Tirana. On January 1, 1928, the new Albanian Penal Code, which is based on that of Italy, came into force, to take the place of the Ottoman laws previously imposed. According to the new Code polygamy is abolished, although Islam is the dominant religion in Albania.

Finance.—The estimated revenue and expenditure for five years ending March 31 is as follows (in gold francs):—

	gold francs	gold francs	gold francs	gold francs	gold francs
Expenditure .	21,664,078	17,874,500	15,711,150	23,012,260	26,000,000
Revenue . .	21,664,178	24,109,257	23,223,142	23,102,007	29,000,000

In 1927 the principal items of revenue were:—customs duties, 5,496,700 gold francs; State lands and forests, 1,322,010 gold francs; posts and telegraphs, 357,000 gold francs; and the principal items of expenditure:—army, 5,051,814 gold francs; posts and telegraph service, 893,540 gold francs.

In May 1925 Albania obtained a foreign loan for the nominal amount of 70,500,000 gold francs, taken up by the Company for the Economic Development of Albania, and guaranteed by the yield of all the Albanian Customs and by the monopolies on salt, matches cigarette papers and playing cards. The loan, which is also guaranteed by the Italian Treasury, was to be used exclusively in carrying out public works.

Defence.—Military service is compulsory and begins at the age of 18. Liability to service continues to the age of 50. Service in the active army is for 18 months. The peace strength of the army is 7,557. The gendarmerie numbers 3,134.

Production and Industry.—The Albanian economic system is very primitive; each family provides for its own needs. Great tracts of the country remain uncultivated, and the areas at present under cultivation are dealt with in a primitive way. The State owns some 125,000 acres of the best land in the plain between the rivers Shkumbi and Vojussa. The country for the greater part is rugged, wild, and mountainous, the exceptions being along the Adriatic littoral and the Korytza Basin, which are fertile. Tobacco, timber, wool, hides, furs, cheese and dairy products, fish, olive oil, corn, cattle and bitumen are the principal products of the country. Cattle-breeding receives special attention. The wool is made up into coarse and heavy native cloth and exported. There are vast tracts of forest land composed of oak, walnut and chestnut trees, as well as beeches, pines and firs. The mineral wealth of Albania is considerable but undeveloped. The only industries in the country are those connected with agriculture, such as flour-milling, olive-pressing and cheese-making.

—	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926
Imports .	12,099,516	23,418,085	20,489,688	21,799,411	24,864,731
Exports .	2,961,996	8,137,917	12,379,410	17,122,761	11,963,962

In 1926 the principal articles of import were (in gold francs):—cotton goods, 2,619,318; woollen goods, 1,986,752; kerosene, 707,458; petrol, 636,331; motor-cars, 342,094. The principal exports were cheese, 2,546,980; grains, 1,308,783; hides, 1,148,341; and various fruits, 374,591.

In 1926 the imports from Italy amounted to 16,673,559 gold francs, or 67 per cent. of the total compared with 75 per cent. in 1925. Greece followed with 12.5 per cent. (20.7 per cent. in 1925), United Kingdom 1,233,768 gold francs or 5 per cent. of the total, and Yugoslavia 4.5 per cent. Exports to Italy in 1926 amounted to 5,434,136 gold francs, or 45.8 per cent. of the total as against 57 per cent. in 1925. Greece ranks second with 32.8 per cent. (25.7 per cent. in 1925), while the United States was third with 16.7 per cent. (15 per cent. in 1925).

Central Albania has no roads, but in the South the Italian administration has constructed military roads extending South via Tepeleni and Argyrocastro, and North and East via Liacoviki and Erzek to Korytza. Northern Albania has one road, connecting Durazzo and Tirana with Alessio and Scutari. Total length of roads, 310 miles. A railway to join Durazzo with Tirana, 22 miles in length, is under construction. The ports are five in number, viz. San Giovanni di Medua, Durazzo, Valona, Porto Palermo, and Santi Quaranta; but all the ports need to be improved. Two Italian shipping lines maintain communications with the rest of Europe.

Banking and Currency.—On September 2, 1925, the National Bank of Albania was established in Rome, with branches in Tirana, Durazzo, Coriza, Valona and Scutari. It has a capital of 12,500,000 gold francs, of which 49 per cent. was subscribed in Albania, and 51 per cent. by an international financial group headed by the Credito Italiano. The Bank has the exclusive right of issuing paper money and metal coinage. A new currency based on notes freely convertible into gold coin, gold exchange, or foreign bank notes convertible into gold has recently been established. The monetary unit chosen is the gold franc (5 Lek) (.8225806 gr. 900 fine), with a parity of approximately 25 to the £.

The Bank has already issued Bank notes of 100, 20, 5 gold francs and 5 Lek (1 gold franc); and metallic currency as follows:—gold, 100 and 20 franc pieces; silver, 5, 2 and 1 franc pieces; nickel, 1,  $\frac{1}{2}$  and  $\frac{1}{4}$  Lek; and bronze, 0·10 and 0·05 Lek. On March 31, 1927, there were in circulation notes amounting to 2,657,000 francs and coin to the value of 465,000 francs, of which 159,000 francs were gold. The cover for the note circulation on that date consisted of 5,848,000 francs, of which 1,229,000 francs were in gold (46 per cent.), 3,812,000 francs in Swiss francs and 807,000 francs in other currencies.

ARABIA.

ARABIA is essentially a desert country comprising an area of roughly 1,000,000 square miles and inhabited for the most part by nomadic Bedouin tribes eking out a precarious pastoral existence by the breeding of camels, sheep and goats. Bounded on the north by Iraq, Syria and Trans-Jordan (Palestine), it is enclosed on the other three sides by the sea—the Red Sea on the west, the Indian Ocean on the south and the Persian Gulf on the east. The land-surface of the peninsula enclosed within these limits slopes down steadily from the elevated mountain barrier, which runs down the whole length of its western side parallel with the Red Sea, to sea-level on the Persian Gulf, and the uniformity of this slope is only interrupted in the extreme south-eastern corner of the peninsula, where the mountains of the Oman district rear their crests to an elevation of 10,000 feet above sea-level. With the exception of this mountainous district and the similar district of Yemen, Arabia is a barren country consisting of vast tracts of steppe-desert, sand-waste and mountainous wilderness. It is a country of insignificant rainfall (Yemen and Oman excepted); here and there, scattered oases, or oasis-groups, are formed. The Taif district, for instance, in the Hejaz mountains above Mecca, the Qasim and Jabal Shammar province in Central Arabia and the Hasa province near the Persian Gulf are among the best examples of such districts, while Madina, Taima, Riyadh, Jaufr and Wadi Dawasir are but a few among the many large oases which occur frequently throughout the country.

The population of Arabia cannot be estimated with any certainty, but would seem to be about 7 millions.

The inhabitants of Arabia are at present found in every degree of transition from the purely nomadic life of the Bedouin to the highly developed though simple civic life of the greater towns such as Madina, Ansa, or Buraida. This development has been accompanied by corresponding political changes and the patriarchal, tribal organisation of the Bedouin has weakened steadily before a natural tendency to communal organisation into States and principalities imposed on the people by the development of civic life. The introduction of modern fire-arms and the growth of an Arab nationalist spirit (directed against Turkish domination) in the borderlands of Syria and Iraq tended to encourage this process during the first decade of the present century, and the rise to power of Abdul Aziz ibn Saud, the present Sultan of Nejd, gave it a further impetus. Ibn Saud set to work to organise the unsettled Bedouin into civic communities under cover of a great Wahhabi revival, and in the spring of 1913 struck the first blow for the Arabs against the Turks by capturing the Hasa province from the latter. The Great War completed and stereotyped the process of political organisation in Arabia, and the ejection of the Turks from the Hejaz, Asir and Yemen left the Arabs to work out their own salvation unchecked by foreign control. Internecine warfare not unnaturally followed, and the result of a six years' struggle is that a single power (the Ibn Saud dynasty of Nejd) achieved a paramount position throughout the peninsula beyond the southern coastal fringe, where the States of Yemen and Oman are the most important of those which maintain an independent existence together with the lesser principalities of Kuwait and Bahrain, the tribal chiefs of the Oman coast, the Hadramaut and the Aden hinterland, all of which enjoy in a greater or less degree the protection of Great Britain. The principality of Asir, reduced in extent to a mere strip of the coast between Hali Point and Jizan, maintained a precarious independence between Ibn Saud and the Imam of the Yemen until in October, 1926, it was placed under the protectorate of the former; while the Hejaz was annexed at the end of 1925 by Ibn Saud, who is now King of Hejaz. The northern province of Aqaba-Maan was annexed by the British Government to the Palestine mandated area in July 1925.

The Kingdom of Hejaz and Nejd.—At the end of the nineteenth century the Wahhabi State of Nejd formed a part of the dominions of the Amirate of Jabal Shammar, which, in the reign of Muhammad ibn Rashid, had by crushing the rival dynasty of Ibn Saud established itself as the dominant power in Central Arabia. The surviving representatives of the Wahhabi dynasty of Ibn Saud were in exile at Kuwait. In 1901, however, Abdul Aziz III ibn Saud, G.C.I.E., then a youth of 20 and the representative of a cadet branch of the dynasty, recovered the Wahhabi capital of Riyadh from the Rashidite forces by a bold stroke, and by 1908, when Abdul Aziz ibn Rashid, the successor of Muhammad ibn Rashid, was killed in battle, had largely re-established the position of his dynasty throughout the territory ruled by his grandfather, Faisal ibn Saud, i. e. from the Qasim province in the north to Wadi Dawasi in the south, and from the confines of the Hejaz on the west to the confines of the Hasa province (held by the Turks) on the east. In 1910 he initiated at Artawiya the Wahhabi revival, which has since produced such far-reaching results, and in the spring of 1914 he wrestled the Hasa province from the Turks, thus extending his territories on the east to the Persian Gulf. During the war he, like the Grand Sherif of Mecca, allied himself with Great Britain, but, after a failure against Ibn Rashid, who was in alliance with the Turks, in January 1915, at the battle of Jarrab, he played no active part in the war till 1918, when a renewal of his activities against Ibn Rashid met with no substantial success. At this period his territories were exactly as they were at the outbreak of the Great War, while the oasis of Khurma, on his western frontier, was claimed by Husein as belonging to the Hejaz. This claim on the part of the Hejaz was destined to precipitate a conflict of far-reaching consequences between the two States, and Husein enjoyed the advantage of alliance with Ibn Rashid, the Amir of Jabal Shammar, who, apart from the traditional enmity of the Rashid and Saud dynasties, had every reason to desire to avenge himself on Ibn Saud for the latter's activities against him during the Great War. Ibn Saud with characteristic vigour did not allow himself to rest content with mere defence. In 1919 the Arabian war may be deemed to have started in earnest. In May of that year Husein sent his troops to occupy Khurma, the disputed oasis, but Ibn Saud's Wahhabis met and annihilated them at Turaba, which was duly annexed to Nejd. In 1920 Ibn Saud captured and annexed Abha and other parts of upland Asir, the Idrisi being in league with Husein. Meantime he had kept up steady pressure against Jabal Shammar, and in August, 1921, he captured Hail, the capital; the surviving remnants of the Rashid dynasty were led into captivity to Riyadh and the Amirate of Jabal Shammar was annexed to his dominions. In July 1922 he captured the Jauf district from the Shalan dynasty and extended his influence up Wadi Sirhan (January 1926). Meanwhile Wahhabi forces occupied Taima and Khaibar on the confines of the Hejaz, and Ibn Saud's dominions seemed to have reached their natural limit, embracing as they did the whole area of Desert Arabia. An attempt made under British auspices at the beginning of 1924 to compose the differences between Ibn Saud and the Sherifian rulers of the Hejaz, Trans-Jordan and Iraq broke down at the conference of Kuwait. In September 1924, accordingly, a Wahhabi force appeared before Taif, the summer capital of the Hejaz, whose garrison fled, leaving the town an easy prey to the invaders. Shortly afterwards the Sherifian troops were attacked, and defeated at Hadda. King Husein having abdicated, his successor Ali moved the seat of government to Jeddah, and on October 13, 1924, the Wahhabis entered Mecca without opposition for the second time in their history. Ibn Saud himself arrived at the city on December 5, and for the first time in his life performed the customary rites in the Great Mosque. King Ali remained behind the walls of Jeddah till December 19, 1925, when, Medina having fallen, he was compelled to abdicate and leave Hejaz. Ibn Saud entered Jeddah, and on January 8, 1926, he was proclaimed king in Mecca under the style King of Hejaz and Sultan of Nejd and its dependencies. On May 20, 1927, a treaty was signed at Jeddah between Great Britain and Ibn Saud, by which the former recognized the complete independence of the dominions of the latter.

Ibn Saud has placed his State in a dominant position among the States of Arabia. His capital is at Riyadh, whence he exercises effective control over the whole peninsula except the areas already mentioned. His administration is simple and of a patriarchal character, without ministers of State or other imitations of Western governments. The law of the land is the Sharia administered by Cadis in the various districts under the control of chief Shaiks at Riyadh and Mecca. A special administration exists in the Hasa province for the collection of Customs duty, one of the chief sources of State revenue, while land revenue, which takes the form of a tithe on date and corn cultivation, is collected by revenue officials working under the orders of the various district governors, who likewise make the necessary arrangements for the collection of camel and sheep tax from the Bedouin. The chief administrative divisions or districts of the Kingdom of Nejd are: (1) Ha-a; (2) Aridh including Riyadh; (3) Wadi Dawasir; (4) Adfaj; (5) Khurj; (6) Sudair; (7) Mahmal; (8) Washm; (9) Qasim; (10) Jabal Shammar including Hail; (11) Jauf; and (12) numerous scattered oasis groups such as Khurma, Turaba, Ranya, and Khaibar, each of which is administered independently by a local Amir. The total population is estimated at about 3,000,000. Towns with a population exceeding 10,000 inhabitants are: (1) Hufuf; (2) Muzarras; (3) Riyadh; (4) Shaqra; (5) Anaiza; (6) Buraida; (7) Hail; (8) Jauf; (9) Sakaka; and (10) Hanta. Of these Hufuf has a population of about 30,000, but none of the others exceed 20,000. The products of Nejd are dates, wheat, barley, fruit of various kinds, hides, wool, clarified butter (saman or ghi) and abas (Arab cloaks), besides camels, horses, donkeys and sheep. The export trade is still insignificant, though capable of considerable development especially as regards dates, hides and clarified butter. The export of Arab horses to Bombay is not as active as it was in the past, but the annual export of camels to Syria and Egypt is a steady source of income to the Bedouin. The chief imports of Nejd are piece-goods, tea, coffee, sugar and rice.

Ibn Saud has thirteen surviving sons, of whom the four eldest are Saud, aged 22, Faisal, aged 19, Muhammad and Khalid, and numerous daughters. The surviving members of the Ibn Rashid dynasty in captivity at Riyadh are Abdullah ibn Mitab, who became Amir of Hail on the assassination of his cousin, Saud ibn Rashid, in May 1920, and Muhammad ibn Talal, who succeeded Abdullah for a brief reign before the fall of Hail in the summer of 1921.

The now extinct Hashimite dynasty of Hejaz was a creation of the Great War; it ceased to exist on December 19, 1925. At an early stage of the hostilities between the Allies and Turkey Hussein ibn Ali, then Grand Sherif of Mecca, received from Great Britain a guarantee of the autonomy and independence of the Arab countries in the event of a successful rebellion against the Turks, and on June 5, 1916, he raised the standard of revolt and proclaimed his independence. In November of the same year, having by then captured Jeddah, Mecca and Taif, he assumed the title of King, while the subsequent Treaty of Peace with Turkey recognised the Hejaz as a free and independent State. While, however, he was only recognised as King of the Hejaz by the British Government, Hussein aspired to a greater position, and commonly assumed in his correspondence the title of King of the Arabs. The early months of 1924 witnessed the assumption by King Hussein of the Caliphate, rendered vacant by the deposition of Sultan Abdul Majid by the Turks, and this act, together with the breakdown of a conference held at Kuwait under the auspices of the British Government for a settlement of outstanding differences between Ibn Saud on the one hand and the various Sherifian rulers on the other, precipitated the renewal of hostilities with the result indicated above.

The frontiers of the Hejaz are not sufficiently definite to allow of anything like an accurate estimate of its area, which probably does not exceed 150,000 square miles. The population is probably between 800,000 and 900,000, of whom Mecca, the capital, accounts for some 70,000, Madina for 15,000 and Jedda for 25,000, while the great majority of the rest are Bedouin. The chief port is Jedda, the seaport of Mecca; Yanbu, next in importance, occupies a similar position in relation to Madina; while ports of less importance are Aqaba (now annexed to Palestine), Muwaila, Wajh, Ra'igh, Lith and Qunfuda. Madina produces excellent dates in abundance; Taif and other oases in the mountains and valleys produce honey and a large variety of fruit; while Bedouin products are hides, wool and clarified butter. But the exports of the Hejaz are insignificant, and the country depends for existence almost entirely on the annual pilgrimage which used to attract an average of 100,000 pilgrims from abroad each year.

The Hejaz Railway from Amman to Madina was administered from April 1924 to July 1925 by the Hejaz Government, the Amir (afterwards King) Ali having taken a prominent part in restoring through-traffic to Madina, as a result of which the section of the line in question is said to have earned £40,000 in eight months; the figures of actual profits are not available. In July 1925 the Palestine Railway administration took over the section from Amman to Maan, while the southern section was put out of commission by the Wahhabi siege of Madina.

On January 22, 1928, a new silver currency of Riyals was introduced in place of the Turkish Mejidie currency. Ten Riyals = £1.

Yemen.—The Yemen, which geographically comprises the Province of Asir, and its capital Abha, may be divided as follows: Aden; the Aden Protectorate; the domains of Imam Yahya b. Muhammad b. Hamid al Din, and finally, those of the Idrisi Seyyid Ali b. Muhammad, whose headquarters are in Sabia (Lat. 17° 11' N., Long. 42° 37' E.) and Abu Arish to its S.S.E. He also holds the ports from Hali Point (Lat. 18° 37' N., Long. 41° 24' E.) to Al Hahl (Lat. 16° 10' N., Long. 42° 42' E.); and after the exit of the Turks after the armistice of 1918, his influence extended still further and he retained Luhaiya, and possessed himself of Hodeida, the chief port and the 'key to San'a.' The Idrisi family hark back to one Seyyid Ahmed, whose 'Way' is akin to that of the Senusis of Africa, and also to that of the late Mad Mullah of Somaliland.

The Imam of the Yemen Proper, capital San'a (Lat. 15° 20' N., Long. 44° 12' E.), has a domain of some 75,000 square miles with a population of two to three millions. His territories include the area recently abandoned by the Turks, and so march with the Anglo-Turkish boundary drawn in 1902-4. In a northerly direction his influence extends to Nejran (Lat. 17° 30' N., Long. 44° 15' E.) of the Yam, whose tenets are those of the sect of Ismailiya or Fatimiya, and their chief is the Da'i Ali Mohsin Al Shibami, of the house of the Makarima, whose descent is from Ismail b. Jafar Alsadiq, the offspring of Al Husein, the second son of the fourth Caliph Ali. The same tenets are professed by the inhabitants of Haraz near Menakha. To the north of San'a are the Imamic large towns of Amran, Tawila, Al Khamr, Al Suda, Sada (Lat. 16° 47' N., Long. 43° 48' E.), Qufat Al Udhr, and also the region of Al Jauf, Upper, Middle and Lower, with their capitals respectively at Al Matamma, Al Hazm, and Al Ghail, where live the 'Shawaf,' clansmen of the influential Bakil tribe, all of which tracts, watered by the River Kharid, own the Imam's suzerainty. To south of Al Jauf, and to the east by north, of San'a at a distance of six days' journey, lies the district of Marib, or Saba, whose ruler pays homage to Imam Yahya. Other large towns in the Yemen are Taizz (alt. 4600 ft.), Ibb (6275 ft.), Yerim (8600 ft.), Dhamar (7650 ft.). The altitude of San'a is 7260 ft. The highest mountain is Nabi Shuaib (11,000 ft.). Sumara, Kinan, Takar and many others are all over 9000 feet altitude.

The population of San'a, a walled city with eight gates, is between 20,000 and 25,000. The old-time granaries of the Upper Yemen still exist, and lie chiefly between the towns of Ibb and Al Jubla, and in the Wadi Sahul be'ow Ibb and to its north, though indeed the agricultural products are widely distributed throughout the country and comprise barley, wheat, and millet, together with coffee—the finest berries coming from Menakha. Hides also are largely exported.

The Zaidi Imams are descended from Zaid, a Huseini, the second son of Ali Zain al Abidin, the son of Al Husein, the second son of the fourth Caliph Ali. Imam Yahya, who succeeded his father Muhammad in 1904, traces his own descent from Al Hasan and his descendant Imam Al Hadi ila'l Haqq Yahya, who died in A.H. 298 (A.D. 910). Thus the present Imam is of Hasani stock, as are the Sherifs (Ashraf) of Mecca, and the Idrisi Saiyid of Sabia in the Asir Province. The early line of Imams began their rule in the town of Sada (above mentioned).

The Imam has twelve sons, the eldest of whom is the 'Saif al Islam,' Ahmed, who commands in the country to San'a's north.

No mention is made of the uplands of Asir, for the control there is uncertain. Abha, the capital, is in Nejdean hands.

The Hadramaut is a considerable tract of fertile valleys lying to the East of the Aden Protectorate. The greater part of it owes allegiance to the Qa'aiti dynasty, whose representative is the present Sultan of Makalla. A rival dynasty, the Kathiri, rules a number of towns and villages inland. The whole area is loosely under British protection and control.

Oman.—An independent State, in South-eastern Arabia, extending along the southern shore of the gulf of that name from the entrance into the Persian Gulf to the extreme eastern point of Arabia, and thence S.W. as far as Ras Sajir, lat. 16° 8' N. The coast line is nearly 1,000 miles long. Inland Oman is bounded on the S.W. by the great desert. Area, 82,000 square miles; population, estimated at 500,000, chiefly Arabs, but there is a strong infusion of negro blood, especially along the coast. The towns of Muscat and Matrah hardly contain an Arab, being inhabited almost entirely by Baluchis and Negroes. The capital, Muscat, and the adjacent town of Matrah have together about 20,000 inhabitants.

Muscat was occupied by the Portuguese from 1508 to the middle of the seventeenth century. After various vicissitudes it was recovered in the eighteenth century by Ahmed bin Sa'id, of Yemenite origin, who was elected Imam in 1741, and whose family has since ruled, though under the title of Sultans for the last three generations.

The present Sultan is H.H. Seyyid Taimur bin Feisal bin Turki, C.S.I., eldest son of H.H. the late Seyyid Feisal bin Turki, who succeeded his father October 5. 1913.

In the beginning of last century the power of the Imam of Oman extended over a large area of Arabia, the islands in the Persian Gulf, a strip of the Persian coast, and a long strip of the African coast south of Cape Guardafui, including Socotra and Zanzibar. But now the sole remaining possession of the Sultan on the Persian coast is the town of Gwadar, which is of considerable importance, as through it passes a fair amount of the trade of Mekran. The closest relations have for years existed between the Government of India and Oman ; a British Consul and Political Agent resides at Muscat.

The revenue of the Sultan from all sources varies between ten and eleven lakhs of rupees yearly. The population is poor. In the valleys of the interior, date cultivation has reached a high level, and there are possibilities of agricultural development where the water supply more certain. Inland camels are bred in large numbers by the tribes, and these are said to be the best breed in Arabia, but in size and strength they are inferior to those of north-western India.

Trade is mainly in the hands of British Indians, and imports and exports are mainly from and to India. Rice, coffee and cotton piece goods are the chief imports. Dates are the principal export. Pomegranates, dried limes and dried fish are the only other export of any note. There are no industries of any importance. Total imports for 1925-26 amounted to 447,910*l.* and total exports to 225,907*l.* Import duty is at present 5 per cent. ad valorem. There is no export duty, and imports for re-export by the importer within six months are not subject to any duty.

The only port of call for steamers is Muscat. It is one of the ports on the subsidiary mail route between Bombay and Basrah. The mail service is a weekly one in both directions. The Indian Government maintains a post office and a telegraph office at Muscat.

The common medium of exchange is the Maria Theresa dollar. On the coast, but not in the interior, the rupee circulates. There is one Omani copper coin, which fluctuates in value. The muhammadi of 20 gaj (1 dollar = 11½ muhammadi) is only money of account. The weights in use are 1 Kiyas = the weight of 6 dollars or 5·9375 oz. ; 24 Kiyas = 1 Maskat Maund ; 10 Maunds = 1 Farásala ; 200 Maunds = 2 Bahár. Rice is sold by the bag ; other cereals by the following measures :—40 Palis = 1 Farrah ; 20 Farrahs = 1 Khandi

Political Agent and H.B.M.'s Consul.—Major C. C. J. Barrett, C.S.I., C.I.E.

The Sultanate of Kuwait is situated on the north-western coast of the Persian Gulf. The Sultan is subsidised by the British Government, which maintains a Political Agent at his Court. The present Sultan, Ahmed Ibn Jabir al Subah, succeeded his uncle in March, 1921. Estimated population, 50,000, to which an indeterminate number of Bedonins must be added.

ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

(REPÚBLICA ARGENTINA.)

Constitution and Government.

ARGENTINA was discovered in 1516 by Juan Diaz de Solis and Vicente Yáñez Pinzón. In 1535 Don Pedro de Mendoza was sent out by the King of Spain and in that same year founded the town of Buenos Aires. On May 25, 1810, the population rose against the Spanish rule, and on July 9, 1816, Argentine independence was proclaimed. Between 1816 and 1852 was a period of anarchy, and in 1853 stable government was once more established.

The Constitution of the Argentine Republic bears date May 15, 1853, with modifications in 1860, 1866 and 1898. The executive power is left to a President, elected for six years by electors appointed by the fourteen provinces and the capital, equal to double the number of senators and deputies combined; while the legislative authority is vested in a National Congress, consisting of a Senate and a House of Deputies, the former numbering 30, two from the capital and from each province, elected for nine years by a special body of electors in the capital, and by the legislatures in the provinces; and the latter 158 members elected by the people. By the Constitution there should be one deputy for every 33,000 inhabitants. According to the census of 1914 the rate is one deputy for every 49,000 inhabitants. A deputy must be 25 years of age, and have been a citizen for four years. The deputies are elected for four years, but one-half of the House must retire every two years. Senators must be 30 years of age, have been citizens for six years. One-third of the Senate is renewed every three years. The two chambers meet annually from May 1 to September 30. The members of both the Senate and the House of Deputies each receive 18,000 paper pesos per annum. A Vice-President, elected in the same manner and at the same time as the President, fills the office of Chairman of the Senate, but has otherwise no political power. The President is commander-in-chief of the army and navy, and appoints to all civil, military, naval, and judicial offices, and has the right of presentation to bishoprics; he is responsible with the Ministry for the acts of the executive; both President and Vice-President must be Roman Catholics, Argentine by birth, and cannot be re-elected, unless a period of six years intervenes.

The Ministry, appointed by and acting under the orders of the President, consists of eight Secretaries of State—namely, of the Interior, Foreign Affairs, Finance, War, Justice and Public Instruction, Agriculture, Marine, and Public Works.

The President has a salary of 96,000 paper pesos (£8,800), and 28,800 paper pesos for official expenses; the Vice-President 36,000 paper pesos as his salary, and 24,000 for official expenses, and each of the eight ministers 39,600 paper pesos per annum.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The Constitution, with certain small exceptions, is identical with that of the United States. Such matters as affect the Republic as a whole are under the superintendence of the Central Government. The Republic is divided into 14 provinces, 10 territories and 1 federal district (Buenos Aires). The governors of the various provinces are invested with very extensive powers, and in their constitutional functions are independent of the central executive. They are elected by the people of each province for a term varying between three and four years. The provinces elect their own legislatures, and have complete control over their own affairs. The territories are under the supervision of governors appointed by the President. In Buenos Aires municipal government is exercised by a Mayor appointed by the President with the approval of the Senate. He is assisted by a deliberative council of 30 elected by the male inhabitants over 18 years including foreigners who comply with certain conditions. Voting is compulsory under penalty of a fine. The deliberative council votes on measures relating to city finance, works, and general administration, and its decisions are carried out by the Mayor. Other municipalities have constitutions of a similar character.

Area and Population.

The Argentine Republic consists of fourteen provinces, ten territories and one federal district, containing the land area and population shown below:—

Population of the capital, Buenos Aires, on June 1, 1925 (census), was 2,310,441; Rosario (Santa Fé), June, 1922, 265,000; Córdoba, November 30, 1918, 156,000; La Plata, June, 1922, 151,000; Avellaneda (1914), 46,277; Tucumán, 91,216; Bahía Blanca, 44,143; Santa Fé, 59,574; Mendoza, 58,790; Paraná, 36,039; Salta, 28,436; Lomas de Zamora, 22,231; Río Cuarto, 18,421; Corrientes, 28,681; Quilmes, 19,311; Concordia, 20,107; Mar del Plata, 27,611; Santiago del Estero, 23,479; Chivilcoy, 23,241; Resistencia, 21,322; Mercedes (San Luis), 18,256; Tandil, 15,784; Junín, 21,172; Bell-ville, 8,732; Gualaguaychú, 17,880; Pergamino, 20,549; San Juan, 16,631; Catamarca, 13,262; Posadas, 15,734; La Rioja, 12,536; Jujuy, 7,956.

Religion and Instruction.

There is no State religion, though the Roman Catholic religion is supported by the State; all other creeds are tolerated and freedom of conscience prevails. There are 1 archbishop (Buenos Aires) and 10 suffragan bishops.

For the clergy there are 3 seminaries. In 1888 civil marriage was established in the Republic.

Primary education is free (subsidised by the General and Provincial Governments), secular and compulsory for children from 6 to 14 years of age. In 1926 the primary schools numbered 10,358 with an average daily attendance of 1,036,819. During 1925 there were in the entire country 207 secondary, normal and special schools under the Ministry of Public Instruction, including 44 national secondary schools with 13,437 pupils; 1 secondary school for girls; 84 normal schools with 12,650 students; 9 commercial schools; 3 industrial schools; 15 vocational schools; 1 school of mining and chemical industries; 19 women's vocational schools; 1 institute of pedagogy; 1 institute for teachers of modern languages; 2 deaf mute schools; 1 institute for the blind; a national academy of fine arts and a school of arts. The registration of pupils in these schools was 74,628, of whom 32,138 were boys and 42,490 girls, the average attendance being 66,542. Ninety-five per cent. were Argentinos and the rest foreigners. The teachers in these schools numbered 6,763. There were also 107 private schools with 4,655 pupils. There was also 1 national normal school for teachers in secondary schools with (1924) 76 teachers and 775 students. There are national universities at Córdoba (founded 1613), with 2,551 students in 1925; Buenos Aires (founded 1821), with 10,433 students (1926); La Plata (founded 1905), with 3,126 students (1926); the university of Tucumán (founded in 1912), with 682 students in 1925; and the National University of the Litoral, in Rosario (founded in 1920) with 3,954 students (1925); and provincial universities at Santa Fé and the university of Cuyo (founded in 1921) for the provinces of Mendoza, San Juan and San Luis. There is a well-equipped national observatory at Córdoba, and another at La Plata, museums at Buenos Aires and La Plata, and a national meteorological bureau at Buenos Aires. In 1925, 19,272,232 paper pesos were spent on university education.

In Argentina there are 520 newspapers published, 493 in Spanish, 4 in Italian, 5 in German, 5 in English, and others in Scandinavian, French, Basque, Russian.

Justice.

Justice is administered by Federal and by Provincial Courts. The former deal only with cases of a national character, or in which different provinces or inhabitants of different provinces are parties. The Federal Courts are the Supreme Courts, with 5 judges at Buenos Aires; 5 Appeal Courts, one with 5 judges at Buenos Aires and with 3 each at La Plata, Paraná, Córdoba, and Rosario (Santa Fé), and courts of first instance in each of the provinces and territories. Each province has its own judicial system, with a Supreme Court (generally so-called) and several minor courts. Trial by jury is established by the Constitution for criminal cases, but never practised.

Finance<sup>1</sup>

The revenue was estimated at 640,000,000 pesos. The preliminary budget for 1928 authorizes expenditures of 660,000,000 paper pesos.

On June 30, 1927, the national debt of Argentine was equal to 1,090,525,643 United States gold dollars, or about 109 dollars per capita.

On August 31, 1927, the national consolidated debt was as follows : external debt, 1,015,640,200 paper pesos, internal debt, 1,025,513,700 paper pesos, making a total of 2,038,153,900 paper pesos. The floating debt on August 31, 1927, was 441,668,200 paper pesos.

Defence.

ARMY

The army of the Argentine Republic is a National Militia, service in which is compulsory for all citizens from their 20th to their 45th year. Naturalised citizens are exempt for a period of 10 years. For the first 10 years the men belong to the 'active' army, or first line (Permanent Forces). After completing 10 years in the first line, the men pass to the National Guard and serve in it for another 10 years, finishing their service with 5 years in the Territorial Guard ; the latter is only mobilised in case of war. The period of continuous service, or training in the ranks with the Permanent Forces, is for 1 year. The reservists can be called out for training periodically.

The territory of the Republic is divided into 5 military districts for administrative purposes. According to the Army Regulations which came into force in January 1916, the establishment of officers for 1926 was 1,497, and of other ranks 3,162 N.C.O.'s, 2,787 volunteers, and 21,000 conscripts called up. The army is organised in 5 divisions, 3 cavalry brigades and 2 mountain detachments, comprising —

	Regiments	Battalions	Batteries	Signals	Companies	Troops
Infantry . . . .	17	34	—	—	68	—

There is a trained reserve numbering 300,000 men, of whom 150,000 men are of the first line, and 150,000 of the special reserve. The territorial reserve numbers 100,000 men.

The weapon of the Argentine infantry is at present the Mauser magazine rifle. The cavalry have a carbine of the same pattern. The artillery are armed with a Krupp 7.5 cm. Q.F. gun.

The estimated military budget for the year 1925 was 58,214,000 paper pesos.

There is a Military Aviation Training School at El Palomar. In December, 1924, the air force was organised in 1 bombing flight, 1 fighting flight, and one observation flight.

There are also 7 destroyers and some training and miscellaneous craft.

During 1924, the battleships Moreno and Rivadavia and 4 destroyers were refitted at a cost of 9,500,000 gold pesos, the boilers of all six vessels being adapted to burn oil. The coast defence ironclads Independencia and Libertad have also been converted to oil burning. A new naval programme, to involve the expenditure of 75,000,000 gold pesos, spread over a period of ten years, was approved in 1926. It is proposed to extend the present dockyard accommodation in the River Plate and at Puerto Belgrano, and to begin the construction of a new yard at Mar del Plata. New construction covered by this legislation includes the 6,800 ton cruisers Almirante Brown and 25 de Mayo, 3 submarines, building in Italy; 2 flotilla leaders, purchased from Spain, 3 flotilla leaders and 2 surveying vessels, building in England. Further orders are to be placed later.

The personnel of the navy comprises 337 officers, 130 engineers, 27 electrical engineers, and about 9,100 men (these numbers include about 5,000 conscripts), who have to serve two years. There is a corps of coast artillery of 450 men, a naval school, a school of mechanics, a school for artillery, and a school for torpedo practice. The training of officers and men has recently been placed on a much higher scientific level.

Production and Industry.

Argentina has an area of about 699,278,300 acres, of which about 250,000,000 acres may be used for agriculture, 250,000,000 acres for cattle raising, 96,250,000 acres are woodland, and the remainder, 103,028,300 acres, are mountain, lake, river, or arid regions. Of the cultivable portion, about 10,000,000 acres require irrigation. In the territories the Federal Government has wide tracts of land amounting to 237,768,000 acres suitable in general for pastoral colonisation, and these lands are conditionally offered free, or for sale or on lease.

The area and produce of principal crops are shown as follows for three years :—

	Acreage			Produce (Metric Tons)

Cotton, sugar, vine, and tobacco are also cultivated. The area under sugar is about 237,500 acres, chiefly in Tucumán, Jujuy, and Salta; production of sugar in 1925, 394,700 tons; in 1926, 475,600 tons; in 1927, 474,256 tons. The total vine area is about 280,000 acres, chiefly in Mendoza and San Juan; production of wine in 1927, 90,640,000 gallons. The area under tobacco averages 22,000 acres; output, 7,700 metric tons; under cotton in 1926-27, 71,746 acres; production, 42,000 tons. The production of butter, cheese and caseine in 1926 was, in kilos: butter, 34,495,549; cheese, 15,119,666; and caseine, 19,863,507.

In 1922 (census, December 31) the number of animals within the Republic was: cattle, 37,064,850 (25,866,763 in 1914); sheep, 30,671,841 (43,225,452 in 1914); pigs, 1,436,638. The Province of Buenos Aires contains over 43 per cent. of the sheep within the Republic. Argentine wool production in 1927-28 (sheared in the Autumn of 1927) was estimated at 146,098 metric tons.

In the provinces of Buenos Aires, Santa Fé, and Entre Rios, agricultural lands to the extent of 463,000 acres have been acquired by the Jewish Colonisation Association. Of this land 153,000 acres are under cultivation. Some 30,000 square miles of State lands are cultivated as follows: in Misiones, 1,060,199 acres; in Chaco, 3,592,216 acres; in Formosa, 2,031,285 acres; in Chubut (Patagonia), 8,394,234 acres; in Santa Cruz, 3,805,340 acres; and in Tierra del Fuego, 12,355 acres.

The principal industry is meat refrigeration. In 1926, 430,728 tons of chilled beef, 226,739 tons of frozen beef, and 67,229 tons of frozen mutton were exported. The largest killing and freezing plant in the world, with a daily capacity of 5,000 cattle and 10,000 sheep, is situated at Buenos Aires. Cattle killed and refrigerated in Argentina in 1926, 3,050,970 head; in 1925, 3,357,014. Flour milling ranks second to refrigeration. The average yearly output is 7,000,000 sacks. Near Bahia Blanca is being constructed the largest grain elevator in the southern hemisphere, with capacity of 81,000 tons. Mining is of no great importance. Gold, silver, and copper are worked in Catamarca, where there are also two valuable tin mines, and gold and copper in San Juan and La Rioja. Gold is also mined in the south-western territories. Coal is found in the Andine Provinces, in the Cordillera region of Patagonia and in Northern Patagonia. Tungsten is also an important mineral, others being borate, salt, and limestone. There are no Government statistics as to mineral output, excepting only the output of petroleum. During 1927 the crude-oil production in the oil-fields in Argentina amounted to 5,106,900 barrels, compared with 3,773,535 barrels in 1925.

The Government estimated Argentine industrial production in 1927 at: gross 2,889,000,000 paper pesos; raw materials used, 1,624,000,000; net added value, 1,265,000,000 (about 101,000,000%).

Shipping and Navigation.

On January 1, 1922, the registered shipping consisted of 216 steamers over 100 tons, of 181,555 tons.

The total tonnage of shipping entering Argentine ports (except Bahia Blanca) in 1924 was 2,949 vessels with 10,011,331 tons, of which 1,343 with 4,689,945 tons were British.

Internal Communications.

The first railway concession dates from 1854. In 1857 there were 6 miles of railway. Railways open, Jan. 1, 1928, 22,791 miles, of which 4,418 miles belong to the State, and 18,373 miles to private companies. The total receipts in 1927 of both the State and private railways were 146,840,800 gold pesos as against 137,942,400 gold pesos in 1926. Passenger traffic in 1926 was 145,000,000; freight traffic, 45,500,000 tons. The capital invested amounted in 1925 to 1,276,843,316 gold pesos. Length of motor roads in 1924, 2,992 kilometres (1,858 miles).

Aviation has developed rapidly in the Republic. Aerial routes have been organised from Buenos Aires to Salta, Catamarca, Posadas, Corrientes, Mendoza and San Juan. There is an aerial post service between Buenos Aires and Montevideo three times a week, inaugurated in April, 1922.

National telegraph lines, 25,763 miles in 1922. Number of telephone exchanges in Argentina in 1927, 395, with 171,000 subscribers.

There are 12 stations for wireless telegraphy. All ships with a crew of over 50 and touching at Argentine ports are compelled by law to be equipped with wireless telegraphy.

Banking and Credit.

According to the First Banking Census taken by the National Department of Statistics, on December 31, 1925, there were 112 banks in Argentina with 1,033,946,000 paper pesos of capital and reserves, and loans amounting to 4,984,014,000 paper pesos. Of those 112 banking establishments, 91 (1 State Bank—Banco de la Nación—77 other Argentine banks, and 13 foreign banks) were ordinary Discount and Deposit Banks with capital and reserves amounting to 710,228,000 paper pesos and loans amounting to 3,552,316,000 paper pesos; 15 Mortgage Banks with 310,000,000 paper pesos of capital and reserves and 1,407,099,000 paper pesos of loans; and 6 Pignorative Banks whose capital and reserves and loans amounted to 13,454,000 paper pesos and 24,599,000 paper pesos respectively.

The 29 banks located in the capital, had, with their branches in the provinces, on June 30, 1927: (in paper pesos) capital and reserves, 620,362,386; cash, 841,903,714; loans, 3,662,259,120; and deposits, 3,635,890,183.

On April 5, 1915, a national postal savings bank (Caja Nacional de Ahorro Postal) was incorporated. On December 31, 1927, it had 1,446,756 depositors with total deposits amounting to 5,599,369 paper pesos.

In 1899 a conversion law was approved by Congress fixing the value of the paper peso at .44 of the value of the gold peso. The gold peso is usually indicated by the sign $ o/s, which means 'oro sellado' (coined gold); the abbreviation commonly follows the figure, e.g. $1,000 o/s. The paper peso is indicated by the sign $ m/n, meaning 'moneda nacional' (national money).

In August, 1927, the Caja de Conversion returned to the gold standard after a suspension lasting for 13 years. It now undertakes to redeem paper pesos at the legal rate established in 1889, that is, 1 paper peso for 44 centavos in gold. Previously the value of the peso had fluctuated considerably. In November, 1927, the Government restored to the Banco de la Nación 7,000,000 gold pesos belonging to the Conversion Fund; this was the balance of the 14,900,000 gold pesos which the authorities had shipped abroad under the 1923-24 Budget for the service of the foreign debt. The stock of gold in the Caja de Conversion, serving as a backing for the paper currency, stood on December 23, 1927, at 468,233,594 gold pesos; paper currency was 1,357,185,490 pesos.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The monetary system of the Republic is on a gold standard, the unit being the peso oro (gold dollar) which weighs 1.6129 grammes of gold  $\frac{1}{10}$  fine. The Peso oro which is divided into 100 centavos, is of the value of 47 5/8d. One pound sterling = 5.04 gold pesos. The monetary law of November 5, 1881, authorizes the coinage of five and two-and-a-half gold peso pieces. The 5-peso gold piece (the Argentino) weighs 8.0645 grammes, .900 fine, and therefore contains 7.25805 grammes of fine gold.

Gold is not widely in circulation. The money in circulation is chiefly paper (peso papel). The paper peso, being convertible at .44 gold peso, is worth 1s. 8½d. (11'45 to the £). In 1926 the Mint coined 15,000,000 10-centavo pieces of nickel to meet the demand for small currency.

Since January 1, 1887, the use of the metric system is compulsory.

AUSTRIA.

(DIE REPUBLIK ÖSTERREICH.)

Constitution and Government.

The Republic of Austria was proclaimed on November 12, 1918. The Government was taken in hand by a National Assembly which appointed a temporary cabinet and proceeded to pass laws. On February 16, 1919, the National Constitutional Assembly, consisting of only one Chamber, was duly elected on the basis of universal and proportional suffrage; every Austrian subject, male and female, has a vote if 21 years of age, and is eligible if 30 years of age. At the elections held on April 24, 1927, the following parties were returned :—Christian Socialists, 73 ; Social Democrats, 71 ; German Nationalists, 12 ; Peasants' Party, 9 ; total, 165.

The Constitution, which was adopted October 1, 1920, and came into force on November 10, 1920, provides for a President, chosen by the two Houses assembled for a joint session ; his term is for 4 years, and he may be re-elected once only ; for an Assembly (Nationalrat), elected by popular vote for 4 years ; and for a First Chamber (Bundesrat), chosen by the Provincial Diets in proportion to their population (at present the member-number 46). The powers of the Bundesrat are advisory. Austria is declared to be a Federal Republic composed of eight provinces and the city of Vienna. All special privileges are abolished, and equal rights granted to all citizens. The qualifying age for voting, in the case of both men and women, is 21.

President of the Republic.—Dr. Michael Hainisch. Born 1858. Elected December 9, 1920. Re-elected December, 1924.

The Ministry, constituted on May 19, 1927, is as follows :—

Federal Chancellor and Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Dr. Ignaz Seipel (Christian Socialist).

Vice-Chancellor.—Karl Hartleb (Peasant Party).

Minister of Justice.—Dr. Franz Dinghofer (Pan-German).

Minister of Social Welfare.—Dr. Joseph Resch (Christian Socialist).

Minister of Agriculture and Forestry.—Andreas Thaler.

Minister of Finance.—Dr. Victor Kienböck.

Minister of Commerce and Communications.—Dr. Hans Schusterff (Pan-German).

Minister of Education.—Dr. Richard Schmitz (Christian Socialist).

Minister of Defence.—Karl Vaugoin (Christian Socialist).

The national flag consists of three horizontal stripes, the top and bottom being red and the centre white.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The Republic of Austria comprises 9 provinces, viz., the City of Vienna, Lower Austria, Upper Austria, Salzburg, Styria, Carinthia, Tyrol, Vorarlberg, and Burgenland. There is in every province a Provincial Assembly (Landtag), consisting likewise of one chamber which is elected on the basis of the same suffrage as the National Assembly. The cultivation of the soil, the educational, ecclesiastical, and charitable institutions, as also public works, chiefly fall within the competence of the provinces. At the head of the Provincial Assembly is the Provincial Committee (Landesausschuss) elected by the Provincial Assembly.

Every commune has a council to deliberate and decide its affairs. The members are mostly elected for 5 years. The council elects from its midst the head of the commune (burgomaster) and a committee for the administration of the affairs and execution of its resolutions. All who are 21 years of age have a vote, while for the passive suffrage the attained age of 24–30 years is required.

Area and Population.

For the boundaries of Austria according to the Treaty of St. Germain, signed on September 10, 1919, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1920, pp. 674–5.

The area and population (census taken on March 7 1923) of Austria are shown as follows:—

Provinces	Area, English square miles	Population (Census 1923)			Percentage of Population 1923	Population per square mile 1923
		Males	Females	Total
Vienna . . .	107	860,119	1,005,661	1,865,780	28.55	17,437
Burgenland . .	1,532	141,144	144,465	285,609	4.37	186
Lower Austria .	7,452	725,884	754,565	1,480,449	22.65	199
Upper Austria .	4,026	425,917	450,157	876,074	13.41	189
Salzburg . . .	2,762	108,847	114,176	223,023	3.41	81
Styria . . .	6,325	483,291	495,554	978,845	14.98	155
Carinthia . . .	3,680	179,911	190,906	370,817	5.67	101
Tyrol . . .	4,882	154,028	159,857	313,885	4.82	64
Vorarlberg . . .	1,005	68,263	71,736	139,999	2.14	130

Compared with the total population in 1920, the total for 1923 shows an increase of 108,137, or 1.68 per cent., excluding Burgenland of 117,427, or 1.92 per cent. The male population (excluding Burgenland) has increased by 70,530 or 2.40 per cent. as compared with 1920.

Movement of population (including Burgenland) in 1926:—Marriages, 45,877 (7.2 per mille.); living births, 118,939 (18.7 per mille.); deaths, 94,081 (14.8 per mille.); divorces (excluding Burgenland), 5,350 (0.85 per mille.). Emigrants, 1925, 4,627; 1926, 3,895. Of the emigrants in 1926, 629 went to United States, 514 to Canada, 906 to Brazil, 815 to Argentina, 18 to Australia and 433 to Russia.

PRINCIPAL TOWNS.

The population of the principal towns of Austria on March 7, 1923, was as follows:—Vienna, 1,865,780; Graz, 152,706; Linz, 102,081; Innsbruck, 56,401; Salzburg, 37,856; Wiener Neustadt, 36,956; St. Pölten, 31,619; Klagenfurt, 27,423; Steyr, 22,111; Mödling, 18,677; Villach, 22,070; Wels, 16,412; and Baden, 22,217.

Religion.

Religious liberty is one of the fundamental laws of the Republic, and the principle is embodied in the Treaty of St Germain (article 63). In 1910 there were (including Burgenland), 6,225,843 Catholics (93.68 per cent.), 206,505 Protestants (3.11 per cent.), 194,584 Jews (2.93 per cent.), and 19,052 'others' (0.28 per cent.). The Catholic Church has 2 archbishops and 4 bishoprics.

Instruction

The educational organisation of Austria comprises: (1) elementary schools; (2) middle schools; (3) high schools; (4) schools for special subjects; and (5) universities and colleges.

Attendance is compulsory at the elementary schools from 6 to 14 in Austria generally, but there are far-reaching facilities for exemption for pupils of 12 years and upwards. The cost of elementary education is borne in the first instance by the communes and provinces. In 1925 there were in the Republic 5,262 public and private elementary schools, with 29,125 teachers and 717,571 pupils.

Secondary education is provided in the Gymnasias, Realschulen, German Middle Schools, and Mädchenlyzeen (Girls' Middle Schools). These institutions are maintained by the State, the provinces, the towns, or private individuals. Of all kinds of secondary schools there were (1924-25) 145 with 44,513 pupils, and 3,593 teachers.

There is also a State Commercial Academy in Graz (1924-25), 38 teachers and 333 pupils) and 7 private commercial academies, 4 in Vienna (153 teachers and 2,378 pupils), 1 at Linz (28 teachers and 258 pupils), 1 at Klagenfurt (18 teachers and 139 pupils), and 1 at Innsbruck (26 teachers and 207 pupils).

Austria has three universities maintained by the State, viz., Vienna (in 1924-25, 824 teachers and 9,511 students), Graz (276 teachers and 2,347 students), and Innsbruck (195 teachers and 1,567 students); and there are also two technical high schools at Vienna (314 teachers and 3,820 students) and Graz (96 teachers and 1,057 students).

There is one theological high school (Fakultät) at Salzburg for Roman Catholics and 12 other theological colleges, of which 10 are Roman Catholic, 1 Armenian Catholic, and 1 Jewish. In 1925 there were also 37 training colleges for teachers, with 783 lecturers and 4,030 students, and other High Schools for Agriculture, Veterinary science, Mining, Art and Music.

Justice and Crime.

The Supreme Court of Justice (Oberster Gerichtshof) in Vienna is the highest court in the land. Besides there are 3 higher provincial courts (Oberlandesgerichte), 19 provincial and district courts (Landes- und Kreisgerichte), and, in connection with these, the jury courts (Geschworenengerichte) and the Schöffengerichte, which are courts composed of professional and non-professional judges. There are likewise 245 county courts (Bezirksgerichte), and 1 special court for commercial affairs, 1 constitutional court, 1 administrative court, 1 electoral court, and 7 for industry.

Pauperism.

Funds for poor relief are derived from endowments, voluntary contributions, the third of the property left by intestate secular priests, and certain percentages on the proceeds of voluntary sales. In some provinces the poor funds are augmented from other sources, e.g. theatre money (Spectakelgelder), hunting licences, dog certificates, and in some large towns percentages on legacies over a fixed amount. Those who are wholly or partially unfit for work may be provided for in such manner as the commune judges propose. Besides poor-houses and money relief, there exists in many provinces the practice of assigning the poor—in respect of board and lodging—to each of the resident householders in fixed succession.

The law for unemployment insurance bears date March 24, 1920. Under the Act, 12 per cent. of the cost of unemployment insurance is to be borne by the State, 4 per cent. by the communes, and 84 per cent. by employers and workers.

Finance.

The budgets for four years provided revenue and expenditure as follows, in thousands of schillings (1 schilling = 10,000 kronen):—

Surplus or Deficit . . .	+ 50,823	— 84,510	— 135,441	+ 35,600

With regard to the estimates for 1928, there will be in addition an expenditure of 191,000,000 schillings of capital investment for railway electrification, improvements to road construction and agricultural development. These capital investments are to be covered from the proceeds of the proposed foreign loan, which has now been approved by the finance control committee.

The following are some of the details of the budget for 1927 in thousands of schillings :—

Revenue	Thousands of Schillings	Expenditure	Thousands of Schillings
Direct Tax Revenue . . . . .	261,050	Interest on Debt . . . . .	150,722
Turnover Tax . . . . .	214,550	Subventions to Provinces and Municipalities . . . . .	5,974
Customs . . . . .	208,000	Pensions . . . . .	203,959

Telegraphs, Telephones and Post Office (surplus) . . . . .	157	Justice . . . . .	41,588
Excise . . . . .	83,000	Railways . . . . .	100,755
		Army . . . . .	79,742

The public debt of the Republic of Austria was composed as follows on Dec. 31, 1926 (in schillings) :—

Pre-War Debt . . . . .	143,108,690
War Debt . . . . .	303,480
Debts incurred by the Republic . . . . .	2,264,186,527

1. ARMY.

By the terms of the Treaty of St. Germain, universal compulsory military service is abolished in Austria, and the total number of military forces in the Austrian Army is limited to 30,000 men, including officers and depot troops.

Austria is permitted at her own discretion to organise this number of troops either in divisions or in mixed brigades.

The latter organisation has been chosen, and the army has been organised in 6 mixed brigades and 1 independent artillery regiment composed of :—

	Regiments	Battalions	Batteries	Squadrons	Companies	Troops
Infantry . . . . .	12	36	—	—	136 <sup>1</sup>	—
Cyclists . . . . .	—	6	—	—	—	—
Cavalry . . . . .	—	—	—	6	—	—
Artillery . . . . .	1	—	—	—	—	—
Field . . . . .	—	—	18	—	—	—
Trench Mortars . . . . .	—	—	6	—	—	—
Mountain . . . . .	—	—	8	—	—	—
Engineers . . . . .	—	6	—	—	12	6

The maximum authorised armaments and stocks of munitions are per 1,000 men :—

Rifles or carbines . . . . .	1,150	500 rounds of ammunition per arm.
Machine guns . . . . .	15	10,000 " " " "
Trench mortars, light } . . . . .	2	1,000 " " " "
" " medium } . . . . .		500 " " " "
Guns . . . . .	3	1,000 " " " "
Howitzers } field or } . . . . .
} mountain }

All officers must be regulars. Officers now serving retained in the army must serve to the age of 40. Officers newly appointed must serve on the active list for 20 consecutive years.

The period of enlistment for non-commissioned officers and privates must be for a total period of not less than 12 consecutive years, including at least six years with the colours. The proportion of officers and men discharged for any reason before the expiration of their term of enlistment must not exceed one-twentieth of the total strength. All measures of mobilisation are forbidden.

The number of gendarmes, customs officers, foresters, and members of police forces must not exceed the number employed in a similar capacity in 1913. Educational establishments and all sporting and other clubs are forbidden to occupy themselves with any military matters. Within two months of the final ratification of the Treaty the air forces of Austria are to be demobilised. The armed forces of Austria therefore do not include any military or naval air forces. The manufacture, importation, and exportation of aircraft, and parts of aircraft, are forbidden.

The military budget for 1926-27 amounted to 67,488,000 schillings.

2. NAVY.

As Austria now has no seaboard, the former Austro-Hungarian fleet has ceased to exist. The only war vessels remaining to Austria are four patrol-boats on the Danube.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture forms the main occupation of the country. In 1926 the total acreage sown amounted to 4,766,708 acres. Of the total in 1926, 2,105,479 acres were in Lower Austria, and 1,036,679 acres in Upper Austria. The chief products are shown as follows for two years:—

Crop	1925		1926
	Acreage	Yield (metric tons)	Acreage	Yield (metric tons)
Wheat . . .	489,833	290,488	500,834	256,864
Rye . . .	959,923	550,088	972,272	475,815
Barley . . .	352,060	200,673	362,352	197,555
Oats . . .	769,185	388,433	777,042	434,796
Potatoes . .	440,413	2,068,422	439,043	1,297,782
Turnips . .	126,713	1,341,188	128,596	1,202,449

Production of raw sugar in 1925-26, 78,145 metric tons.

The foodstuffs produced do not suffice for the population. Forests abound and timber forms an appreciable asset of Austria. The number of animals in 1923 was: horses, 282,651; cows, 1,074,864; oxen, 302,103; bulls, 68,143; and calves, 717,236.

The mineral output of the country is not unimportant. In 1926 the production of lignite was 2,957,700 tons, and of anthracite, 157,300 tons. There were 8 anthracite mines worked in 1926, and 52 lignite mines. The output of iron ore was 1,094,400 tons in 1926, and of pig iron, 331,635 tons. Some copper, zinc, lead, and salt (76,768 tons in 1926) are also produced.

Of important industries, piano-making and the manufacture of motor-cars, furniture, and textiles still remain in Austria to a certain extent. The knitting industry is an important branch of the textile industry, manufacturing principally sport knitted goods and hosiery. There were 7,180 knitting machines in use in 1926. The 9 factories of the Austrian tobacco monopoly in 1926 made 218,357,000 cigars, 4,568,362,000 cigarettes, and 48,967 metric quintals of smoking tobacco.

Commerce.

Imports and exports for 4 years (in 1,000 schillings) were as follows:—

	1924	1925	1926	1927
Imports . . .	3,473,784	2,891,424	2,811,090	3,141,000
Exports . . .	1,988,099	1,054,485	1,740,962	2,039,000

Principal Imports (1926): Grain, flour and rice, 857,400 tons; coal and fuel, 5,188,121 tons; wines, 7,028,472 gallons; stone and building material, 173,203 tons; raw cotton, 29,935 tons; rubber, 2,272 tons; glass, 15,881 tons; iron goods, 41,744 tons.

Principal Exports: Timber, 1,502,535 tons; ores, 77,426 tons; fruit, 11,695 tons; sugar-beet, 7,860 tons; furniture, 25,651 tons; chemicals, 39,970 tons.

The trade in 1926<sup>1</sup> was distributed among principal countries as follows:

Country	Imports	Exports	Country	Imports	Exports
	1000 Schillings	1000 Schillings		1000 Schillings	1000 Schillings
Czechoslovakia .	538,624	206,617	Yugoslavia .	167,292	153,457
Germany . . .	466,546	201,935	Hungary . . .	348,500	187,110

The total trade between England and Austria (Board of Trade returns) for five years were as follows:—

	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Austria to United Kingdom . . .	2,098,844	2,522,174	2,596,336	2,390,650	2,433,815
Exports to Austria from United Kingdom . . .	391,609	2,375,016	2,204,410	1,805,820	2,420,776

Internal Communications.

Austria had in 1925, 4,122 miles of railway lines, of which 3,602 miles were operated by the State, and 520 miles by private companies.

At the end of 1926 there were 128,278 telephones in use on the principal systems in the country.

An Austrian aviation company is subsidised by the State (1,600,000 schillings in 1928), and runs a regular service, Vienna-Salzburg-Innsbruck and Innsbruck-Constance. Some of the international routes are shared with foreign companies.

Banking and Credit.

A new National Bank for Austria was opened on January 1, 1923, with a capital of 30,000,000 gold crowns. It is a private, not a State, institution.

The note circulation on July 31, 1927, was 956,372,421 schillings. Savings banks deposits amounted to 725,538,000 schillings in 1926.

According to the Treaty of St. Germain the Austro-Hungarian Bank was liquidated on July 29, 1923.

Money, Weights and Measures.

The Austrian unit of currency was the krone. But as from June 30, 1925, there came into general use a new unit, the gold schilling, made up of 100 groschen. The schilling contains 0.21172086 grammes of fine gold. Since June 1924 the National Bank has issued new token coins as follows:—1 schilling pieces, silver (= 10,000 kronen); half-schilling pieces, silver (= 5000 kronen); 1000 kronen pieces, copper and nickel (= 10 groschen); 200 kronen pieces, copper (= 2 groschen); 100 kronen pieces, copper (= 1 groschen); 10 groschen pieces (copper and nickel), 2 groschen pieces (copper) and 1 groschen pieces (copper).

BELGIUM.

(ROYAUME DE BELGIQUE.)

Reigning King.

Albert, born April 8, 1875, son of the late Prince Philippe of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha and of Flanders (died November 17, 1905), and of the late Princess Marie de Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen (died Nov. 27, 1912); married Oct. 2, 1900, to Princess Elizabeth of Bavaria; succeeded his uncle Leopold II., Dec. 17, 1909.

Children of the King.—(1) Prince Leopold, Duke of Brabant, born Nov. 3, 1901; married on Nov. 4, 1926, to Princess Astrid of Sweden. Offspring:—Josephine Charlotte, born October 11, 1927. (2) Prince Charles, Count of Flanders, born Oct. 10, 1903. (3) Princess Marie-José, born Aug. 4, 1906.

Sisters of the King.—(1) Princess Henriette, born Nov. 30, 1870; married Feb. 12, 1896, to Prince Emmanuel of Orleans, Duke of Vendôme. (2) Princess Josephine, born Oct. 18, 1872; married May 28, 1904, to Prince Charles of Hohenzollern.

King Albert has a civil list of 9,500,000 francs.

The Kingdom of Belgium formed itself into an independent State in 1830, having from 1815 been a part of the Netherlands. The secession was decreed on October 4, 1830, by a Provisional Government, established in consequence of a revolution which broke out at Brussels, on August 25, 1830. A National Congress elected Prince Leopold of Saxe-Coburg King of the Belgians on June 4, 1831; he ascended the throne July 21, 1831. On his death in 1865 he was succeeded by his son, Leopold II., who reigned until 1909.

By the Treaty of London, Nov. 15, 1831, the neutrality of Belgium was guaranteed by Austria, Russia, Great Britain and Prussia. It was not until after the signing of the Treaty of London, April 19, 1839, which established peace between King Leopold I. and the King of the Netherlands, that all the States of Europe recognised the Kingdom of Belgium. In the Treaty of Versailles (June 28, 1919), it is stated that as the treaties of 1839 'no longer conform to the requirements of the situation,' these are abrogated and will be replaced by other treaties.

Constitution and Government.

According to the Constitution of 1831 Belgium is 'a constitutional, representative, and hereditary monarchy.' The legislative power is vested in the King, the Senate, and the Chamber of Representatives. The royal succession is in the direct male line in the order of primogeniture. By marriage without the King's consent, however, the right of succession is forfeited, but may be restored by the King with the consent of the two Chambers. No act of the King can have effect unless countersigned by one of his Ministers, who thus becomes responsible for it. The King convokes, prorogues, and dissolves the Chambers. In default of male heirs, the King may nominate his successor with the consent of the Chambers. If the successor be under eighteen years of age, the two Chambers meet together for the purpose of nominating a regent during the minority.

Those sections of the Belgian Constitution which regulate the organisation of the legislative power were revised in October 1921. For both Senate and Chamber all elections are held on the principle of universal suffrage.

The Senate consists of members elected for four years, partly directly and partly indirectly. The number elected directly is equal to half the number of members of the Chamber of Representatives. The constituent body is similar to that which elects deputies to the Chamber; the minimum age of electors is fixed at twenty-one years, and the minimum length of residence required is six months. In Belgium only the following women may vote in parliamentary elections: (1) Widows, not re-married, of soldiers killed in the Great War; widows of Belgian citizens killed by the enemy during the War, or, failing them, their mothers, if the latter are widows; (2) Widowed mothers of bachelor soldiers killed in the War; (3) Women condemned to imprisonment or subjected to preventive detention, for political reasons, during the enemy occupation of Belgium. In the election of members both of the Senate and Chamber of Representatives directly, the principle of proportional representation of parties was introduced by Law of December 29, 1899. Senators elected indirectly are chosen by the provincial councils, on the basis of one for 200,000 inhabitants. Every addition of 125,000 inhabitants gives the right to one senator more. Each provincial council elects at least three senators. There are at present forty provincial senators. No one, during two years preceding the election, must have been a member of the council appointing him. Senators are elected by the Senate itself in the proportion of half of the preceding category. The senators belonging to these two latter categories are also elected by the method of proportional representation. All senators must be at least forty years of age. They receive 4,000 francs per annum. In 1926 the senators voted in their own favour a special grant of 2,000 francs and again in April 1927 a further grant of 2000 francs. The salary, therefore, now stands at 8,000 francs per annum, though the Constitution has not been revised in this respect. Sons of the King, or failing these, Belgian princes of the reigning branch of the Royal Family are by right senators at the age of eighteen, but have no voice in the deliberations till the age of twenty-five years.

The members of the Chamber of Representatives are all elected directly by the electoral body. Their number at present, 186 (law of May 2, 1912), is proportioned to the population, and cannot exceed one for every 40,000 inhabitants. They sit for four years. Deputies must be not less than twenty-five years of age, and resident in Belgium. Each deputy has an annual indemnity of 25,000 francs, and a free pass all the year over Government and Companies' railways between his residence and the place of Session.

The Senate and Chamber meet annually in the month of November, and must sit for at least forty days; but the King has the power of convoking them on extraordinary occasions, and of dissolving them either simultaneously or separately. In the latter case a new election must take place within forty days, and a meeting of the Chambers within two months. An adjournment cannot be made for a period exceeding one month without the consent of the Chambers. Money bills and bills relating to the contingent for the army originate in the Chamber of Representatives.

Parties in the Senate elected 1925:—Catholics, 71; Liberals 23; Socialists, 59.

The Executive Government consists of 10 departments, under the following Ministers (appointed November 22, 1927):—

Prime Minister and Minister of the Colonies.—Henri Jaspar (Catholic).

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Paul Hymans (Liberal).

Minister of Justice.—M. Jamson (Liberal).

Minister of Education.—Maurice Vauthier (Liberal).

Minister of Finance.—Baron Houtart (Catholic).

Minister of Agriculture and of Public Works.—Henri Baelis (Catholic).

Minister of Industry and Labour and of Social Insurance.—M. Heyman (Christian Democrat).

Minister of Railways, Marine, Posts and Telegraphs, and Aeronautics.—M. Lippens (Liberal).

Minister of National Defence.—Comte de Broqueville (Catholic).

Minister of Interior.—M. Carnoy (Christian Democrat).

Local Government.

The provinces and communes (2,671 in 1926) of Belgium have a large measure of autonomous government.

In regard to the communal electorate, the law of April 15, 1920, definitely lays it down that all Belgians over 21 years of age without distinction of sex, who have been domiciled for at least six months, have the right to vote. Proportional representation is applied to the communal elections, and communal councils are to be renewed every six years. In each commune there is a college composed of the burgomaster, the president, and a certain number of aldermen.

Area and Population.

Belgium (including the districts of Eupen and Malmédy) has an area of 30,444 square kilometres, or 11,755 English square miles. The following table shows the population at various dates :—

Census Years	Population	Total Increase	Increase per cent. per annum	Census Years	Population	Total Increase	Increase per cent. per annum

Seraing	42,293	Jumet	30,233

Religion.

Of the inhabitants professing a religion the majority are Roman Catholic. But no inquisition on the profession or faith is now made at the censuses. There are, however, statistics concerning the clergy, and according to these there were in 1922 :—Roman Catholic higher clergy, 85; inferior clergy, 5,945; Protestant pastors, 21; Anglican Church, 8 chaplains; Jews (rabbis and ministers), 17. The State does not interfere in any way with the internal affairs of either Catholic or Protestant Churches. There is full religious liberty, and part of the income of the ministers of all denominations is paid from the national treasury.

In 1920 there were six Roman Catholic dioceses, 204 deaneries, 3,679 Catholic churches and chapels, 6 large and 11 small seminaries.

The Protestant (Evangelical) Church is under a synod.

Instruction.

There are universities at Brussels, Louvain, Ghent, and Liège, the two latter being State institutions. In 1926–27 Brussels had 1,829 students; Ghent, 1,619; Liège, 2,294; and Louvain, 3,394. In 1923 it was decided to make the university at Ghent Flemish. On November 11, 1923, the Colonial School at Antwerp (founded January 11, 1920) and the School of Tropical Medicine were constituted a Colonial University.

There were also 7 commercial high schools, the Royal Academy of Fine Arts at Antwerp, a polytechnic at Mons, a State agricultural institute at Gembloux, and a State veterinary school at Cureghem, 68 schools of design, and 4 royal conservatoires at Brussels, Liège, Ghent, and Antwerp. Higher Education: (Dec. 31, 1926): 24 royal atheneûms and colleges, with 8,230 pupils; 5 special atheneûms with 338 pupils; 4 communal and provincial colleges with 2,027 pupils, and 9 private colleges with 1,481 pupils. The next grades of schools are the higher grade schools, of which there were 131 State schools (86 for boys and 45 for girls) with 28,944 pupils (19,658 boys and 9,286 girls), 17 communal and provincial (7 for boys and 10 for girls) with 5,021 pupils (2,293 boys and 2,728 girls), and 7 private higher-grade schools with 764 pupils (6 for boys with 480 pupils, and 1 for girls with 284 pupils). Elementary Education: there were, 8,343 primary schools, with 800,400 pupils; 3,666 infant schools with 245,650 pupils; and 2,104 adult schools with 61,266 pupils. Normal Schools (1925): there are 6 for training secondary teachers (454 students) and 81 for training elementary teachers (11,876 students).

There are many private or free schools, mostly under ecclesiastical care. No statistics are available for these.

Each commune must have at least one primary school. The cost of primary instruction devolves on the communes, with subsidies from the State and provinces.

The proportion of the population (deduction made of children of less than 8 years) who could not read or write at the census of 1920 was 7.9 per cent.; at the census of 1910 it was 13.1 per cent.; in 1900, 19.1 per cent.

Justice and Crime.

Judges are appointed for life. There is one Court of Cassation, three Courts of Appeal, and Assize Courts for criminal cases. There are 26 judicial districts, each with a Court of first instance. In each of the 230 cantons is a justice and judge of the peace. There are, besides, various special tribunals. There is trial by jury.

Pauperism.

Apart from private charity, the poor are assisted by the communes through the agency of the bureaux de bienfaisance whose duty it is to provide outdoor relief, and by the governing bodies of the hospices civils. Provisions of a national character have been made for looking after war orphans and men disabled in the war. Certain other establishments, either State or provincial, provide for the needs of deaf-mutes and the blind, and of children who are placed under the control of the courts. Provision is also made for repressing begging and providing shelter for the homeless.

Finance.

On December 31, 1927, the Belgian public debt amounted to 55,060,000,000 Belgian francs. Internal consolidated debt was 22,346,000,000 francs; internal floating debt, 4,180,000,000 francs; external consolidated debt 28,577,000,000 francs.

On October 25, 1926, a debt of 20,000,000% was contracted, for 30 years, for the purpose of stabilising the franc.

Defence.

ARMY.

According to the Military Law passed in 1923, the Belgian Army is recruited by means of annual calls to the Colours and by voluntary enlistments. Military service is compulsory for those called to the Colours.

Voluntary enlistment is 4 years (for youths less than 17), 3 years (for youths less than 18), and 2 years (for youths over 18).

The young men called up compulsorily serve for 10 months in the infantry, fortress artillery and engineers; for 12 months in the cavalry, horse field artillery and horse transport corps. The duration of military obligation is 25 years, of which 15 are in the Regular Army and reserve, and 10 years in the Territorial Army.

The Law provides for the calling out of the reserve only in the event of war or if the country is threatened. The 11th, 12th and 13th Classes are not to be mobilised except in case of absolute necessity and are to be employed in the defence of fortified places and in the non-combatant services. Reservists of the active army are subject to recalls to the Colours of 4, 6, or 8 weeks, according to the branch of the service to which they belong. These recalls take place during the 2nd, 3rd, or 4th year of service.

The strength of the army with the Colours for 1927 was 5,272 officers and 75,744 other ranks organised as follows:—

NAVY.

On grounds of economy, the small Navy formerly maintained by Belgium has been abolished. The ex-British sloop Zinnia, of 1,200 tons, is still employed on fishery protection service.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

Of the total area of 2,945,104 hectares, there were in 1926, 1,786,750 hectares under cultivation, of which 38·98 per cent. were under cereals, 1·18 per cent. vegetables, 5·58 per cent. industrial plants, 13·80 per cent. root crops and 40·46 per cent. forage. In 1925, 1,794,205 hectares were under cultivation.

The following figures show the yield of the chief crops for three years:—

In 1926 the pig-iron was valued at 1,474,929,000 francs, the wrought-steel at 1,990,000,000 francs, and the zinc at 935,000,000 francs. In 1925 the value of the pig-iron was 828,063,000 francs ; of wrought steel 1,151,000,000 francs ; and of zinc, 609,000,000 francs. In 1925 the production of lead amounted to 87,480 tons ; in 1926, 87,176 tons.

In 1926 there were 54 sugar manufactories, output 210,752 tons of raw sugar ; 19 refineries (1925), output 173,313 tons ; 41 distilleries, output 41,732 kilolitres of alcohol at 50° G.-L. ; 1,939 breweries, output 1,464,966 kilolitres of beer ; 14 margarine factories, output 27,292 tons ; 59 vinegar factories, output 13,758 kilolitres.

According to an industrial census taken on October 31, 1926, there were 13,082 industrial concerns (of more than ten employees) with a total number of 1,080,331 workpeople, of whom 874,309 were men and 206,022 women. There were also 96,567 salaried officials (84,005 men and 12,562 women). Of the more important industries the following may be mentioned : artificial silk, motor-cars, glass, iron and steel, lace (particularly hand-made lace), linen, and gloves.

Commerce.

By the Convention concluded at Brussels on July 25, 1921, between Belgium and Luxembourg and ratified on March 5, 1922, an Economic Union was formed by the two countries, and the Customs frontier between them was abolished on May 1, 1922.

The following table shows imports and exports for 6 years (in thousands of paper francs):—

Shipping and Navigation.

On January 1, 1926, the Belgian merchant fleet was composed of 156 ships of 342,138 tons, among which were 150 steamers of 323,132 tons.

There were 37 Belgian shipping companies at the beginning of 1926, of which the most important were the Lloyd Royal Belge, with 35 ships, and the Adolf Deppe, with 39 ships.

The navigation at Belgian ports was as follows :—Number of vessels entered, 1925, 15,208; tonnage, 23,575,091; 1926, 18,931; tonnage, 26,944,889. Number of vessels cleared, 1925, 15,214; tonnage, 23,599,482; 1926, 18,916; tonnage, 26,946,808. In 1927, 11,418 vessels of 23,490,300 tons entered and 11,476 of 23,594,606 cleared the port of Antwerp.

Internal Communications.

The total length of the roads in Belgium (1926) was as follows :—State roads, 5,417 miles; provincial roads, 1,185 miles; conceded roads, 24 miles; total, 6,626 miles. The majority of the roads are paved with stone.

The total length of navigable waterways (rivers and canals) in 1925 was 1,040 miles.

The length of railways (1926): State railways, 2,978 miles; private railways, 189 miles; local railways 2,792 miles; total 5,959 miles. In September 1926 the State handed over its control of the railways to a private company, the Société Nationale des Chemins de Fer Belges for a period of 75 years. It is proposed to electrify the railway system of the country.

In 1926 the Post Office in Belgium handled 302,173,000 private letters, 70,547,000 official letters, 96,383,000 post-cards, 252,425,000 packets of printed matter, and 347,305,000 newspapers. On December 31, 1926, there were 1,660 post offices in Belgium. The gross revenue of the Post Office in the year 1926 amounted to 217,405,000 francs, and the expenditure to 228,469,000 francs; and in 1925 to 177,516,000 francs and 193,600,000 francs respectively.

In 1926 the telegraph system in Belgium carried 14,202,305 dispatches, of which 5,191,443 were official. The total length of public telegraph wires was 25,901 miles. There were in 1926, 1,623 telegraph offices. Receipts in 1926, 75,135,000 francs; expenditure, 84,494,000 francs (receipts in 1925, 54,228,000 francs; expenditure, 62,275,000 francs).

In 1926 there were 144 radiograph stations and 52,047 radiotelegrams were despatched.

In 1926 the telephone service comprised 384 central stations, connecting 465 public telephone stations and 132,059 subscribers. There were 661,748 miles of telephone line in service, including 567,602 miles of local line, 88,367 miles of inter-urban line and 10,779 miles of international lines, and the total number of calls, including long-distance and international calls, was 155,004,532. Receipts in 1925, 88,060,000 francs; expenditure, 59,864,000 francs; receipts in 1926, 131,600,000 francs; expenditure, 71,920,000 francs.

The following are some traffic figures relating to Belgian Air Service (Brussels, Ostend and Antwerp):—

Money and Credit.

No gold has been minted since 1882 (save only 5,000,000 francs struck in 1914), and no silver 5-franc pieces since 1876. The Germans (1915-18) ordered the striking of zinc 5, 10, 25, and 50 centime-pieces, for a total amount of 18,280,099 francs.

On October 26, 1926, the Belgian franc was stabilised and the paper currency relinked to gold, when all notes of the National Bank of Belgium became payable in gold or its equivalent in foreign currency. A new currency unit—called the Belga—has been introduced. One belga equals five paper francs and 35 belgas equal £1 gold. To provide the necessary funds, a stabilisation loan for the equivalent of 100,000,000 dollars was floated abroad.

The one bank of emission in Belgium is the National Bank, instituted 1850. By law of March 26, 1900, its constitution was modified, and its duration extended to January 1, 1929. In 1926 its privileges were prolonged for a further 25 years. Its capital and reserve amounted in 1927 to 264,063,000 francs. It is the cashier of the State, and is authorised to carry on the usual banking operations. Its position on February 16, 1928, was (in thousands of belgas):—

Gold and silver . . .	742,597	Notes in circulation . .	2,082,894
Foreign bills . . .	463,018	Treasury bills . . .	21,605
Loans to State . . .	338,000	Private bills . . .	540,225

There are joint-stock and private banks, also agricultural banks, credit unions, and popular banks.

The popular savings bank in Belgium is mainly concentrated in the Caisse Générale d'Epargne et de Retraite, at Brussels. The Caisse d'Epargne is a private company with legally regulated functions and operates under the supervision of the Minister of Finance. It co-operates with the Belgian postal service, thus obviating any need of a postal-savings system. On December 31, 1926, this institution had 4,226,753 accounts, with deposits amounting to 2,760,458,000 francs.

The weights and measures are those of the metric system.

BELGIAN CONGO

(CONGO BELGE.)

Constitution and Government.—The Congo Independent State was founded in 1885 by Leopold II., King of the Belgians, and the State was placed under his sovereignty.

The annexation of the State to Belgium was provided for by treaty of November 28, 1907, which was approved by the chambers of the Belgian Legislature in August and by the King on October 18, 1908. The Minister for the Colonies is appointed by the King, and is a member of the Council of Ministers. He is President of the Colonial Council, consisting of 15 members, 8 of whom are appointed by the King, and 3 chosen by the Senate and 3 by the Chamber of Representatives. One of those appointed by the King, and one chosen by the Legislative Chambers, retire annually, but may be re-appointed. The King is represented in the Colony by a Governor-General, assisted by several vice-Governors-General. The budget is presented to the Chambers, and voted by them; the financial accounts have to be verified by the Court of Accounts. An annual report on the Congo Administration has to be presented to the Chambers.

The Annexation has been recognised by all the Powers.

Governor-General.—Lieut.-General Tilkens (appointed December 27, 1927).

The precise boundaries of the Congo Colony were defined by the neutrality declarations of August, 1885, and December, 1894, and by treaties with Germany, Great Britain, France, and Portugal.

The territory is divided into twenty-one administrative districts:—Lower Congo, Urban district of Léopoldville, Kwango, Sankuru, Kasai, Lake Leopold II., Equator, Lulonga, Bangala, Ubangi, Lower Uele, Upper Uele, Ituri, Stanleyville, Aruwimi, Kivu, Maniema, Lomami, Tan ganyika—Moero, Lulua, and Upper Luapula. The last four districts form the Province of Katanga, with its capital at Elisabethville; the first five districts form the Province of Congo-Kasai, with Léopoldville as its capital; the five next districts form the Province of Equator, with its capital at Coquilhatville, and the remaining seven districts form the Eastern Province with its capital at Stanleyville. The capital of the Colony, formerly Boma, was, by royal decision (1923), changed to Leopoldville. At the head of each Province there is a governor, and at the head of each district a commissioner. Each district is divided into territories of which there are 178 in the whole country.

The districts of Ruanda and Urundi (formerly in German East Africa) have been ceded to Belgium as mandatory of the League of Nations. Area about 21,285 square miles. Both districts were united administratively with the Congo, under the direction of a Vice-Governor, by a law of August 21, 1925. Ruanda-Urundi is populated by two races—the Wa-tusi and the Wa-hutu. Both districts are rich in cattle. The frontier was formally ratified on December 31, 1923. Usumbura is the capital.

On September 11, 1927, a convention was signed between Belgium and Portugal by which the former ceded to the latter territory in the extreme south-west portion of the Belgian Congo, having an area of 3,500 square kilometres (480 square miles), in return for a cession by Portugal of an area in the estuary of the Congo, near Matadi, of three square kilometres. Belgium further undertook to commence the construction of a railway to link up with the Portuguese railway (the Lobito Bay-Katanga line).

Area and Population.—The area of Belgian Congo is estimated at 918,000 square miles. The population of Bantu origin according to the latest census was 8,500,000. The white population on January 1, 1927, numbered 18,169. Of these, 11,898 were Belgians, 844 English, 443 Americans, 1,368 Portuguese, 981 Italians, 128 Russians, 138 Swedish, 523 French, 317 Dutch, 229 Swiss, 476 Greeks, 137 Luxemburgers, 34 Danish, 31 Norwegians, 20 Spaniards, and 622 of other nationalities, such as Rhodesians and South Africans.

Kiswahili is the language spoken by the natives who have been under Arab influence. Bangala is the commercial language on the Upper Congo; Fiote is used on the Lower Congo.

Religion and Instruction.—The religion of the natives consists of a gross fetichism, but mission work is actively carried on. There are 247 mission stations, with 1,692 missionaries, of whom 1,076 are Catholic and 616 Protestant. In education they co-operate with the Government. The school statistics mention over 800,000 children who receive elementary education. Several educational bodies direct under control of the Government establishments for general and professional training, especially at Boma, Léopoldville, Moanda, Nouvelle Anvers, Lusambo, Kabiinda, Stanleyville, Buta, Elisabethville and Bunia. In 1927 the Government grant to the missionaries for general purposes amounted to 3,127,892 francs, while the total expenditure on education was 11,242,598 francs, while 1,818,725 francs were spent on extraordinary educational expenses (buildings and school furnitures).

Justice.—There are 8 courts of first instance, 21 district courts, 21 prosecutors' courts, 781 police courts, and 2 courts of appeal (one at Léopoldville and the other at Elisabethville).

Finance.—Estimates of ordinary revenue and expenditure for five years (in francs):—

—	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928
Revenue . . . . .	141,603,040	146,555,000	315,708,200	316,708,200	521,563,585

		Provincial Services . . . . .	199,571,164
		Colonisation, missions, etc. . . . .	10,184,744
		Debt . . . . .	122,222,151
Total . . . . .	521,563,585	Total . . . . .	521,241,955

Debt December 31, 1927, 1,893,050,983 francs, of which 1,770,411,383 francs were Consolidated Debt and 122,639,600 francs Floating Debt.

Defence.—The Colony possesses a force of native troops amounting to 193 European officers, 228 European non-commissioned officers and 16,000 natives. The force is recruited by voluntary enlistment. The term of service is seven years, and the recruits are trained in four camps of instruction before being drafted to their companies. The Territorial police number about 8,000 men.

Production.—The chief products in the order of their importance are palm-nuts and palm-oil, white copal, rubber and cacao. Ivory is very abundant. Coffee grows freely, and the cultivation of cacao is successful. Rice and cotton are grown in a great number of the native villages. Plantations of rubber, oil palm, cacao, and coffee have been established by the Government and by private enterprise. Cattle thrive satisfactorily in all districts where there is no tsetse fly, notably in the highlands of Katanga, Ituri and Kivu. Mining flourishes, the chief minerals being gold, diamonds, copper and tin. Other minerals are known to exist—coal, iron, and cobalt. The gold mines in 1926 produced 5,352 kilos. The most important mines in the Congo are the copper mines near Kambove in Haut Katanga, operated by the Union Minière. The total output in 1927 was 83,400 tons of copper. The Union Minière produces radium from the Chinkolobwe mines. The output in 1926 was 20 grammes. The output of diamonds in 1926 amounted to 1,076,113 carats.

Commerce and Shipping.—The value of the commerce for six years was as follows:—

Years	Imports	Exports	Years	Imports	Exports
1921	276,027,218	217,980,062	1924	459,645,238	477,004,348

According to the Board of Trade Returns the imports into the United Kingdom from the Belgian Congo in 1927 amounted to the value of £8,855,700; and the exports of British produce and manufactures to the Belgian Congo to £32,997,700.

At the port of Boma in 1926 there entered 165 sea-going vessels of 13,383 tons. In the coasting trade there entered 116 vessels, including sailing ships, of 17,415 tons, and cleared 114 ships of 16,904 tons. The two other ports are Banana and Matadi. In 1926, 524 steamships with tonnage of 1,519,343 entered, and 529 with tonnage of 1,433,273 cleared the three ports of Belgian Congo.

There are 12 steamers on the Lower Congo, and about 140 private steamers on the Upper Congo.

Internal Communications.—The Congo is navigable for 95 miles from its mouth to Matadi, and on this section 15 steamers belonging to the State ply. Above this, for over 249 miles, are numerous rapids, which render the river unnavigable as far as Stanley Pool (Léopoldville). Above the Pool there are about 1,068 miles of navigable water, as far as Stanley Falls, while several of the great tributaries are navigable over a considerable extent of their course. Above the Stanley Falls the Congo is called Lualaba and is navigable for 585 miles, from Ponthierville to Kindu and from Kongolo to Bukama (Katanga).

There were (January 1, 1927) 8,818 miles of road. The total length of railways on January 1, 1927, was 1,623 miles.

An important development in 1911 was the construction of a pipe line from Matadi to Léopoldville, 246 miles long, for the purpose of transporting crude oil for the use of river steamers. It has a diameter of 4 inches, with 8 pumping stations capable of delivering 50,000 tons of oil at Léopoldville, the terminus. The concession is for 50 years, at the expiration of which period all the pipe lines, with the material, except the vessels and stores of petroleum, will pass into the hands of the Congo Government.

From Léopoldville a river transport service as far as Stanleyville and the tributaries of the Congo is carried out by different companies, of which the chief are the Sonatra and the Citas Companies. The fleet of the various companies consists of more than one hundred steamers and barges.

There is a regular air service, once every three weeks, between Léopoldville and Luebo, with stages at Bandundu and Ilebo. The journey is accomplished in one day. Letters are carried by air without extra fee. This service is prolonged to Ngule in the province of Katanga.

In 1927 there were 70 post offices. There were in addition 38 special telegraph offices. In the internal service (1926) 1,558,700 letters, papers, &c., were transmitted; and in the external, 4,481,600 were handled. The Congo is included in the Postal Union. Total length of telegraph lines 2,167 miles. In 1926, 153,522 internal and 85,775 foreign telegrams were transmitted, besides 22,453 official telegrams. There are 17 stations of wireless telegraphy in the Belgian Congo. There were 812 telephone stations, 2,241 miles of telephone lines, and 2,726 miles of telephone wire. Number of calls in 1926, 898,000.

Seven banks are in existence, of which the two most important are the 'Banque du Congo Belge,' and the 'Banque Commerciale du Congo,' both with branches in all the commercial centres.

According to a Law of October 18, 1908, gold and silver money current in Belgium is also current in the Congo. These coins are gold pieces of 20 and 10 francs, and silver pieces of 5, 2, 1 and 0.50 francs. According to the decree of March 15, 1909, there are also current coins of 20, 10 and 5 centimes, and copper coins (perforated) of 2 and 1 centimes special to the colony. By Royal Decree of December 23, 1920, currency has been given to special moneys of inferior metal, in pieces of 1 franc and 50 centimes nominal value. By an arrangement of July 7, 1911, the Banque de Congo Belge was authorised to issue notes payable to bearer. The notes were of the nominal value of 20, 100 and 1,000 francs, and were put into circulation in 1912. In 1914 gold and silver disappeared from circulation, and the bank was compelled to issue notes of a nominal value of 1 to 5 francs.

The Metric System was introduced by law on August 17, 1910.

British Consul.—J. P. MacGregor (at Boma).

There are British Vice-Consuls at Elisabethville, Stanleyville and Léopoldville.

BHUTÁN.

A STATE in the Eastern Himálaya, between 26° 45' and 28° N. latitude, and between 89° and 92° E. longitude, bordered on the north and east by Tibet, on the west by the Tibetan district of Chumbi and by Sikkim, and on the south by British India. Extreme length from east to west 190 miles; extreme breadth 90 miles. Area about 20,000 square miles; population estimated at 250,000.

The original inhabitants of Bhután, the Tephús, were subjugated about two centuries ago by a band of military colonists from Tibet. In 1774 the East India Company concluded a treaty with the ruler of Bhután, but repeated outrages on British subjects committed by the Bhután hill men led from time to time to punitive measures, usually ending in the temporary or permanent annexation of various duars or submontane tracts with passes leading to the hills. In November 1864 the eleven western or Bengal duars were thus annexed. Under a treaty signed in November, 1865, the Bhután Government was granted a subsidy of Rs. 50,000 a year on condition of good behaviour. By an amending treaty concluded in January, 1910, the British Government undertook to exercise no interference in the internal administration of Bhután. On its part the Bhutanese Government agreed to be guided by the advice of the British Government in regard to its external relations. The treaty also provided for the increase of the subsidy to Rs. 1,00,000.

The form of Government in Bhután, which existed from the middle of the sixteenth century until 1907, consisted of a dual control by the clergy and the laity as represented by Dharma and Deb Rajás. In 1907 the Deb Rájá, who was also Dharma Rájá, resigned his position, and the Tongsa Penlop, Sir Ugyen Wangchuk, G.C.I.E., K.C.S.I., was elected as the first hereditary Maharaja of Bhután. He died on August 21, 1926, and was succeeded by Maharaja Jik-me Wang-chuk, C.I.E.

Chief fortresses or castles: Punakhá, a place of great natural strength; Tásichozong (Tashichödzong), Páro, Angduphorang (Wangduportang), Trongsa, and Byaka.

The people are nominally Buddhists, but their religious exercises consist chiefly in the propitiation of evil spirits and the recitation of sentences from the Tibetan Scriptures. Tásichozong (Tashichödzong), the chief monastery in Bhután, contains 300 priests.

Beyond the guards for the defence of the various castles, there is no standing army.

The chief productions are rice, Indian corn, millet, lac, wax, different kinds of cloth, musk, elephants, ponies, chowries, and silk. Extensive and valuable forests abound. Muzzle-loading guns and swords of highly-tempered steel are manufactured.

His Highness keeps an Agent at Kalimpong who is also Assistant to the Political Officer in Sikkim for Bhutanese affairs.

BOLIVIA.

(REPÚBLICA BOLIVIANA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Constitution of the Republic of Bolivia (so named in 1825) bears date October 28, 1880. By its provisions the executive power is vested in a President, elected for a term of four years by direct popular vote, and not eligible for re-election; there is a Congress of two chambers, called the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies. The suffrage is possessed by all males over 21 years of age who can read and write and have an 'assured income.' There are 16 Senators (2 for each Department) elected for six years, and 75 Deputies elected for four years. Both Senators and Deputies are elected by direct vote of the people. Of the Senators one-third retire every two years; of the Deputies one-half retire every two years. Senators receive a salary of 900 bolivianos (721.) per month during the sittings, which, as a rule, last for 60 days, but may be extended to 90 days, and Deputies receive the same. Extraordinary sessions may be held for special purposes. There are a President, one Vice-President and a ministry, divided into six departments—of Foreign Relations and Worship; Finance and Industry; Government and Justice; Public Works and Posts and Telegraphs; War and Colonisation; and Education and Agriculture.

President of the Republic.—Dr. Hernando Siles. Assumed office January 1, 1926, for the period 1926-1930.

The supreme political, administrative, and military authority in each department is vested in a prefect. The Republic is divided into 8 departments, 3 territories, 72 provinces, 681 cantons administered respectively by prefects, sub-prefects, and corregidores. Prefects and sub-prefects are appointed by the President of the Republic; corregidores and alcaldes are appointed annually by the prefects of the provinces. The capital of each department has its municipal council; the subdivisions have municipal boards, and the still smaller subdivisions have municipal agents. The territories in the north-west of the Republic and in the Chaco and Oriente are governed by three officials, called delegados nacionales.

The following table shows area and population of the different political divisions (the capitals of each are given in brackets):—

Departments and Territories	Area : square miles	Census 1900	Estimated 1915	Per square mile 1915
La Paz (La Paz)	40,686	445,616	726,857	9.60
Cochabamba (Cochabamba)	23,288	328,163	534,901	19.33
Potosí (Potosí)	45,081	325,615	530,748	7.70
Santa-Cruz (Santa-Cruz)	144,941	209,592	341,640	1.70
Chuquisaca (Sucre)	36,132	204,484	338,226	1.03
Tarija (Tarija)	81,567	102,887	164,704	1.68
Oruro (Oruro)	20,657	86,081	140,891	5.25
El Beni (Trinidad)	95,354	32,180	52,450	3.60
El Chaco (Villa Montes)	46,561	—	13,085	83.5
Colonial Territories (Ríberalta)	27,938	10,000	51,968	3.09
Total	514,155	1,744,568	2,889,970	3.38

The last census taken (1910) showed a total population of 1,766,451; the city of La Paz had 54,713. The latter had in 1926 an estimated population of 109,750.

In 1927 the total population was estimated at 3,464,945.

The Indian population in 1900 was 920,864, or 50.9 per cent. of the whole; the mixed was 486,018, or 26.7 per cent.; the white was 231,088, or 12.7 per cent.; the negro, 3,945, or 0.21 per cent.; and the unclassified, 170,936, or 9.4 per cent. Of the population not under 7 years of age, 564,000 were engaged in agriculture; 399,037 in the industries; 55,521 in commerce; 49,647 in the liberal professions; 36,285 in domestic service; 12,625 in mining, and 3,106 in artistic professions. The foreign population numbered 7,425, of whom 2,072 were Peruvian.

The language of the educated classes is Spanish, that of the natives Qüechüa and Aymará.

The estimated population (1924) of La Paz (the actual seat of Government) was 118,250; Cochabamba, 34,281; Potosí, 30,122; Sucre (the capital), 16,194; Tarija, 10,843; Oruro, 32,908; Santa Cruz, 18,315; Trinidad, 6,269.

Religion, Instruction, and Justice.

The Roman Catholic is the recognised religion of the State; the exercise of other forms of worship is permitted. The religious orders have 17 convents (9 for males and 8 for females); the male members number about 230, the female 280; there are about 567 secular clergy. In 1900 the non-Catholic population numbered 24,245. The Church is under an archbishop (resident in Sucre) and 6 bishops (La Paz, Cochabamba, Santa Cruz, Oruro, Potosí, and Tarija). The maintenance of the Church costs the State 121,108 bolivianos a year, 23,820 bolivianos being devoted to the propagation of the faith among the Indians. By a law of March 19, 1912, all marriages must be celebrated by the civil authorities.

Primary instruction, free and obligatory, is under the care of the municipalities and the State. In 1926 there were 1,598 elementary schools with 2,765 teachers and 79,973 pupils. For secondary instruction there were 27 colleges (17 national), 5 clerical institutions, and 5 private lycees with, in all, 403 teachers and 4,213 pupils. For special instruction there are 22 establishments with 177 professors and 1,913 students. At Sucre and La Paz are the only two universities which possess more than one faculty. The University at Sucre, known as the St. Francis Xavier University, is one of the oldest in America, having been founded in 1624. There are also a number of training colleges for teachers. There are eight institutions offering university instruction; they have 107 teachers and 802 students. In all departmental capitals there are public libraries; at La Paz there is a museum, and at La Paz, Oruro and Potosí are mineralogical museums.

The judicial power resides in the Supreme Court, in superior district courts, and in the courts of local justices. The Supreme Court sitting in the Capital of the Republic has 7 judges; the district courts have each 5 judges; local tribunals have judges of party, of instruction and parish alcaides. Public justice is directed by an Attorney-General and by district and local attorneys. The administration of justice is free.

Finance.

The revenue of Bolivia is derived mainly from customs duties, spirit duties, tin, silver, gold, wolfram, antimony, lead and other minerals, rubber export, patents, and stamps. The chief branches of expenditure are finance, war, and public works. The budget estimates of ordinary revenue and expenditure for 6 years were as follows:—

—	Revenue	Expenditure	—	Revenue	Expenditure
	Bolivianos	Bolivianos		Bolivianos	Bolivianos
1922	35,354,705	40,015,022	1925	44,636,352	44,636,352
1923	35,060,034	37,559,655	1926	44,482,183	44,482,183
1924	38,807,633	44,876,203	1927	49,135,126	49,307,125

In December, 1927, the Government decreed a forced loan of 12,000,000 bolivianos (£960,000) from the leading capitalists of the country.

The principal items of expenditure in the 1926 budget were (in bolivianos): public debt, 19,375,880; war ministry, 8,492,950; instruction, 3,892,246; interior, 3,466,082; communications, 2,171,844; justice, 2,006,361.

The public debt of Bolivia on June 30, 1927, amounted to 172,544,762 bolivianos.

On March 4, 1927, a surtax of 10 per cent. of duty on all imports into Bolivia (except foodstuffs and certain textiles) was made permanent; its purpose is to establish a fund for the celebration of the centenary of Bolivia's independence.

Defence.

The territory of the Republic is divided into 3 military districts, the Northern, the Central, and the Southern, and 3 'military commands' formed of the departments Santa Cruz, El Beni, Tarija, and the Territories.

The law of December 15, 1915, provides for a permanent force of 3,577 men. Military service is compulsory for all males from the 19th to the 50th year. The army is a militia, with a total service in the first line of 6 years, of which about 1 year is spent in the ranks. For the next 6 years (from the age of 25 to 30) the Bolivian soldier belongs to the 'ordinary reserve.' After this the men pass to the 'extraordinary reserve' for 10 years, and finally complete their service by 10 years in the Territorial Guard.

The permanent army consists of 6 infantry regiments, two of 500 men each, and four of 1,300 men; 3 cavalry regiments 300 strong; a mountain artillery regiment of 300 men; a field artillery regiment of the same strength, one with 4 batteries of the Schneider-Canet system; making a total of 8,000, including officers, officials and men.

In addition to the above troops there are small bodies of infantry of from 100 to 200 men (called columnas) at the chief towns of departments, which can be expanded to battalions, if necessary. There also exist other units, for garrisoning the North, the North West, the South West, and the East, consisting of 800 men each.

The infantry armament is the Mauser (Bolivian Model) rifle of 1898.

Production and Industry.

The extensive and undeveloped region of Bolivia lying east of the Andes comprises about three-quarters of the entire area. It is estimated that about 4,940,000 acres are under cultivation, but agriculture is in a backward condition. Irrigation by means of artesian wells is being attempted in some regions. Potatoes, cacao, coffee, barley, coca, highland rice, and rubber are the principal products. Bolivia ranks as the second rubber-exporting country of South America, coming next to Brazil. The public lands of the State have an area of about 245,000 square miles, of which 104,000 square miles are reserved for special colonisation. In 1925 there were 500,000 cattle, 1,000,000 sheep, 250,000 goats, 232,455 llamas, 55,699 alpacas, 91,683 donkeys, 92,355 pigs, 63,723 horses, and 17,169 mules.

Mining is practically the only important industry. The mineral wealth of Bolivia includes silver, copper, tin, lead, zinc, antimony, bismuth, wolfram, gold, and borate of lime. Bolivia produces one quarter of the total tin output of the world, standing next to the Malay Peninsula in the production of this metal. Practically all the tin ore is shipped to Great Britain where it is reduced to tin in pigs and reshipped to the United States which is the ultimate consumer of the bulk of Bolivian tin. Production of minerals in 1926 and 1925 was, in metric tons, as follows: Tin (metal equivalent), 32,741 and 30,543; silver, 181 and 160; lead, 18,463 and 21,042; copper, 8,130 and 7,235; zinc, 7,602 and 2,750; antimony (metal equivalent), 4,353 and 1,957; bismuth, 224 and 336; wolfram, 37 and 51; gold (in ounces), 332 and 354. Large deposits of common salt are found near Lake Poopó and in the South of Bolivia. In 1911 large tracts of land were taken up for the production of petroleum, especially in the South of the provinces of Tarija and Santa Cruz.

Commerce.

The value of imports and exports for five years are given as follows (12·5 bolivianos = 1l.):—

—	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926
Exports . . .	7,581,504	8,615,508	9,215,312	9,542,909	9,814,502

Bolivia having no seaport, imports and exports pass chiefly through Arica, Mollendo, Antofagasta, and the river-ports of Suarez on the Paraguay, Montes on the Iténez, Villa Bella on the Madeira, and Bahía or Cobija on the Upper Acre. The Argentine route through Salta is now little used; the route now runs from La Quiraca, traversing the province Ijujuy to Tucuman and Rosario. The chief imports are sugar, flour, coal, iron and steel products, mining machinery, rice, wines and spirits, cotton, textiles, woollen, linen and silk goods, and ready-made clothes. The chief exports are metals. There is scarcely any food export.

Export of metals in 1926:—tin, 53,639 metric tons; lead, 20,911 metric tons; copper, 19,476 metric tons; silver (ore), 11,820 metric tons; antimony, 7,409 metric tons; zinc, 17,561 metric tons; bismuth, 375 metric tons. The total mineral exportation in 1924 amounted to 123,989 metric tons; in 1925 to 127,144 metric tons; and in 1926 to 141,282 metric tons. Rubber exports (1926) were 3,105 tons against 3,393 tons (1925).

The chief import of the United Kingdom from Bolivia in 1926 was (according to Board of Trade returns) tin ore and concentrates, 6,486,162*l*. The chief exports from the United Kingdom to Bolivia were cotton piece goods, 169,722*l*., and woollen piece goods, 78,619*l*.

Total trade between U.K. and Bolivia (Board of Trade figures) for 5 years:—

—	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Bolivia to U.K. .	3,761,870	5,117,436	5,399,874	6,623,730	6,737,992
Exports to Bolivia from U.K. .	544,247	500,830	521,067	541,231	412,195

Communications.

In 1927 the total length of railway open in Bolivia was 1,302 miles, including the new line, opened in July, 1917, from Oruro to Cochabamba. The principal line is the Antofagasta and Bolivian Railway, from Antofagasta, on the Pacific coast (in Chile), to Ollague, thence to Oruro, thence to Viacha, thence to La Paz. Total length in Bolivia, 575 miles. Under the Bolivian-Chilian treaty of October 24, 1904, the Arica-La Paz line (276 miles, of which 151 miles are in Bolivia) was built from La Paz via Lluta with Taregra and to Corocoro. The Bolivian section was handed over to the Government of Bolivia on May 3, 1913. The Pan-American Railroad follows the shore line of Lake Titicaca to Guaqui, thence to Viacha, and thence to the Argentine border by way of Uyuni, Tupiza, and La Quiaca, a total distance in Bolivia of 529 miles. This line was joined to the Argentine section on July 26, 1925, making direct rail communication between La Paz and Buenos Aires possible in 3 days and 17 hours.

Traffic on Lake Titicaca and on the Bolivian rivers is carried on by steamers, which belong to the Peruvian Corporation.

There are about 6,843 miles of cart roads connecting the more important towns.

In Bolivia there were, in 1926, 470 post offices. Number of pieces of mail handled, 7,677,110; parcels, 139,145. The postal expenses amounted to 822,198 and the receipts to 548,259 bolivianos.

There are about 4,090 miles of telegraph lines. Length of telegraph line, 4,092 miles; of wire, 5,677 miles. Number of telegrams dispatched, 1926, 774,181; received, 831,764. There are wireless telegraphic stations at many points.

Banking, Money, Weights, and Measures.

The four banks in the country are: Banco de la Nacion Boliviana (in which a British bank has an interest), Banco Nacional de Bolivia, Banco Mercantil and Banco Aleman Transatlantico. The last-named German bank is the only foreign one. Foreign banks are taxed to the extent of 10 per cent. of their profits. A former note-issuing bank, the Banco Francisco Argandoña, has been absorbed by the Banco Nacional. On January 1, 1926, the first three banks had total capitals aggregating 5,537,500 bolivianos and total reserves of 12,957,850; their stocks of gold coin were: Banco de la Nacion Boliviana, 16,834,270 bolivianos; Banco Nacional de Bolivia, 2,610,585 bolivianos; and Banco Mercantil, 1,622,756 bolivianos.

On September 14, 1906, a monetary law was passed providing for the adoption of a gold standard. The unit of account is the gold peso of one-fifth of a pound sterling weighing 1.5976 grams, .916 fine, thus containing 1.464466 grams of fine gold. There are two gold coins struck, British and Peruvian pounds and half pounds; there is no Bolivian gold yet in circulation. Silver coins, .900 fine, are pieces of 50 and 20 centavos; nickel coins, pieces of 10 and 5 centavos. Gold is legal tender to any amount, and English and Peruvian gold coins of corresponding value have legal currency, the rate of exchange being fixed at 12.5 bolivianos = 1l. Silver is legal tender up to 10 pesos, and nickel up to 1 peso. Silver and nickel coins are being minted. Paper, however, is practically the only circulating medium. There are paper notes of 5, 10, 20, 50 and 100 Bolivianos, all issued by the Banco de la Nacion Boliviana. This bank may issue notes up to 150 per cent. of its capital.

The metric system of weights and measures is used by the administration and prescribed by law, but the old Spanish system is also employed. The quintal is equal to 101½ lbs.

BRAZIL.

(ESTADOS UNIDOS DO BRASIL.)

Constitution and Government.

BRAZIL was discovered on May 8, 1500, by the Portuguese Admiral Pedro Alvares Cabral, and thus became a Portuguese settlement. On the French invasion of Portugal, in 1807, the Portuguese Royal family fled to Brazil; on December 16, 1815, the colony was declared 'a kingdom.' The Portuguese Court having returned to Europe in 1821, a national congress assembled at Rio de Janeiro, and on May 13, 1822, Dom Pedro, eldest surviving son of King João VI. of Portugal, was chosen 'Perpetual Defender' of Brazil. He proclaimed the independence of the country on September 7, 1822, and was chosen 'Constitutional Emperor and Perpetual Defender' on October 12 following. In 1831 he abdicated the crown in favour of his only son, Dom Pedro II. (born 1825, died 1891), who reigned as Emperor until November 15, 1889, when by a revolution he was dethroned, and he and his family exiled, and Brazil declared a Republic under the title of the United States of Brazil. The decree of banishment against the ex-Imperial family was repealed on August 6, 1920.

According to the constitution adopted by the National Congress on February 24, 1891, the Brazilian nation is constituted as the United States of Brazil. At present the Union consists of twenty States, one National Territory (purchased in 1902), and one Federal District. Each of the old Provinces forms a State, administered at its own expense without interference from the Federal Government save for defence, for the maintenance of order, and for the execution of the Federal laws. Fiscal arrangements in such matters as import duties, stamps, rates of postage, and bank-note circulation belong to the Union; but export duties are the property of the various States.

The legislative authority is exercised by the National Congress with the sanction of the President of the Republic. Congress consists of the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate. It meets annually on the 3rd of May, without being convoked, unless another day be fixed by law, and sits four months, but may be prorogued or convoked extraordnarily. No member of Congress, after his election, can contract with the executive power or accept any commission or paid office, except such as are diplomatic or military or imposed by law. If, in ordinary circumstances, the acceptance of diplomatic or military office would cause the loss of the legislative services of a member, the permission of the Chamber is required. Nor can any member of Congress take part in the administration of any company which receives a subsidy from the Federal Government. Deputies and Senators are paid, and neither can be Ministers of State, and retain at the same time their seats in Congress. Deputies must have been Brazilian citizens for four years. Senators must be over thirty-five years of age and must have been citizens for six years.

The Chamber of Deputies consists of 212 members elected for three years by direct vote (providing for the representation of the minority), in a proportion not greater than one to every 70,000 of population as shown by a decennial census, but so that no State will have less than four representatives. It has the initiative in legislation relating to taxation, and in proceedings against the President of the Republic and Secretaries of State.

Senators, 63 in number, are chosen by direct vote, three for each State, and for the Federal district, for nine years, and the Senate is renewed to the extent of one-third every three years. The Vice-President of the Republic is President of the Senate.

The executive authority is exercised by the President of the Republic. He must be a Brazilian by birth, over thirty-five years of age. His term of office is four years, and he is not eligible for the succeeding term. The President and the Vice-President are elected by the people directly, by an absolute majority of votes. The election is held on the 1st of March in the last year of each presidential period in accordance with forms prescribed by law. No candidate must be related by blood or marriage, in the first or second degree, to the actual president or vice-president, or to either who has ceased to be so within six months.

The President appoints and dismisses ministers, is in supreme command of the army and navy, and, within certain limits, has the power to declare war and make peace. He (with the consent of the Senate) appoints the members of the Supreme Federal Tribunal and the diplomatic ministers. No minister can appear in Congress, but must communicate by letter, or in conference with commissions of the Chambers. Ministers are not responsible to Congress or the Courts for advice given to the President of the Republic.

The franchise extends to all citizens not under twenty-one years of age, duly enrolled, except beggars, 'illiterates,' soldiers actually serving, and members of monastic orders, &c., under vows of obedience.

President of the Republic.—Dr. Washington Luis Pereira de Souza, born in 1870, assumed office November 15, 1926.

Vice-President.—Dr. Mello Vianna.

There are 7 Secretaries of State at the head of the following Departments :—

1. Finance, 2. Justice, Interior and Public Instruction, 3. War, 4. Marine

5. Foreign Affairs, 6. Communications and Public Works, 7. Agriculture, Industry, and Commerce.

I. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Each State must be organised under the republican form of government, and must have its administrative, legislative, and judicial authorities distinct and independent. The governors and members of the legislatures must be elective; the magistrates must not be elective nor removable from office save by judicial sentence. The Federal executive cannot intervene directly in the local government of the States. Each State is governed by its own Constitution and laws which must agree with the constitutional principles of the Union. In cases of the infringement of the principles of the Federal constitution by the constitutions, laws or authorities of any State, the Federal Government, after due process of Federal law, has the power to interfere even by force of arms, if necessary. The Federal District is administered by a council elected by the citizens of the District, the municipal executive authority being exercised by a Prefect appointed by the President of the Republic.

Area and Population.

Following are the census returns of 1900 and September, 1920 (capitals of States in brackets):—

States	Area: sq. miles	Population
		1920 (Census)	1926 (Estimated)	Per sq. mile 1920
Alagoas (Maceió) . . .	11,028	978,748	1,117,045	88·7
Amazonas (Manáos) . . .	704,835	363,166	409,699	0·5

In 1927 the population was estimated at 39,870,000.

In 1920 the population consisted of 15,443,818 males and 15,191,787 females. Of these 1,565,961, or 5 per cent., were foreigners, viz., 558,405 Italians, 433,575 Portuguese, 219,142 Spaniards, 52,870 Germans, 50,251 from Asiatic Turkey, 33,621 Uruguayans, 27,976 Japanese, 26,354 Austrians, 22,117 Argentinians, and 141,650 other nationalities. Some 600,000 Indians are to be found in the Amazon area.

The Acre Territory has an area of 58,672 sq. miles. For this territory Brazil paid to Bolivia 2,000,000*l.* in 1902. In 1909 the Territory petitioned to be received into the Brazilian Union as a State.

In 1920 (census) the population of Rio de Janeiro was 1,157,873; São Paulo, 579,033; S. Salvador, 283,422; Recife, 238,843; Belem, 236,402; Porto Alegre, 179,263; Manáos, 75,704; Nictheroy, 86,238; Fortaleza, 78,586; Maceió, 74,166; São Luiz, 52,929; Parahyba, 52,990.

The site for the Federal Capital has been selected in the State of Goyaz, on a table-land between Pyrenopolis, Santa Luzia, and Formosa.

The number of immigrants between 1820 and 1925 was 3,918,349. In 1925 the number of immigrants was 84,883, against 98,125 in 1924.

A boundary treaty with Colombia was signed on April 24, 1907; with Peru on September 8, 1909; and with Uruguay on May 7, 1913.

Religion.

The connection between Church and State has been abolished, and absolute equality declared among all forms of religion. Eleven Evangelic sects, as also Judaism, Buddhism, Mahometanism, and Positivism have many followers. The Government left to the Church all religious buildings and their properties and income. All churches are perfectly free; religious orders are allowed and are prosperous. They maintain 6 seminaries.

There is a Cardinal whose seat is at Rio de Janeiro and who acts as an Archbishop, and there are besides 14 archbishops, 44 suffragan bishops, 7 prelates, and 3 apostolic prefects. For instruction of the secular clergy there are 20 seminaries. Evangelic sects maintain 10 seminaries.

Instruction.

Education is free but not compulsory, except in some States (e.g. Ceará, Maranhão, Alagoas, Matto Grosso, Minas Geraes, S. Paulo, Santa Catharina). The Union Government undertakes to provide, in part, for higher or university instruction within the Union, but there are institutions of this nature maintained, some by the States, and some by private associations; while primary schools are chiefly maintained and supervised, either by the States or by the municipalities and private initiative. Nevertheless the Union Government maintains also primary schools in the colonial zones of Paraná, Santa Catharina, and Rio Grande do Sul. There is one official university in Brazil, the University of Rio de Janeiro (Federal District), founded on September 7, 1920, and two private universities, at Manáos (Amazonas) and Curityba (Paraná); there are moreover 56 faculties which confer degrees. In Rio de Janeiro (Federal District) are also the military college, the general staff school, the military school, the veterinary school, the school of aviation, the improvement school for officers, the naval school of war, and the professional schools of the navy. In the State of Rio de Janeiro is the naval school. In Porto Alegre, Barbacena, and Fortaleza there are also preparatory military colleges. At the Capital are maintained by the Federal Government a school for the blind and another for deaf and dumb. The Federal Government maintains also a School of Fine Arts and a National Institute of Music in the Capital, there being similar private institutions in the Federal District and some States. There are engineering polytechnics at Rio de Janeiro (University), S. Paulo, Rio Grande do Sul, Bahia, Minas Geraes, and Pernambuco, and one mining school at Ouro Preto (Minas Geraes). There are, besides, 97 industrial schools, 41 agricultural, and 48 commercial institutions for tuition.

There were in 1920 in the various States, 21,748 primary schools with 1,249,449 pupils. Of the total number 447 were Federal Government schools, 9,612 State Government schools, 4,712 municipal schools, and 6,977 private schools. In the Territory of Acre were 41 schools with 1,280 pupils. There were also about 450 secondary schools with 48,000 pupils, and 367 professional schools with more than 37,000 pupils. For teachers' diplomas there were 76 colleges.

The National Library in Rio contains more than 400,000 books and manuscripts. There is also a National Museum and a Botanical Garden.

Justice and Crime.

There is a supreme Federal court of Justice at Rio de Janeiro; and Federal judges in each State. Justice is administered in the States in accordance with State law, by State courts, but in Rio de Janeiro Federal Justice is administered. Judges are appointed for life. There are also municipal magistrates and justices of the peace, who are elected for four years, and whose chief function is to settle cases up to a certain amount.

A new Civil Code came into force on January 1, 1917.

Finance.

Revenue and expenditure for 5 years as estimated in the annual budgets (actual receipts and expenditures in recent years have not been disclosed):—

—	Revenue		Expenditure
	(Gold) Milreis	(Paper) Milreis	(Gold) Milreis	(Paper) Milreis
1924	102,890,000	921,898,000	87,851,641	916,320,803
1925	101,296,000	890,841,000	84,412,953	1,044,599,321
1926	121,646,000	1,097,716,000	84,412,953	1,044,599,321
1927	140,605,000	1,155,786,000	100,023,000	1,288,519,000
1928	182,382,000	1,254,262,000	139,116,000	1,452,153,000

The consolidated foreign debt of Brazil on December 31, 1926, amounted to 102,430,820 $\frac{1}{2}$ ., 336,480,500 francs, and 120,383,834 dollars (United States: new debt contracted 1921, 1922 and 1923). The consolidated internal debt amounted (December 31, 1926) to 2,392,054 contos of reis, an increase of 254,630 contos of reis over 1925.

British investments in Brazil on September 30, 1927, totalled 263,814,414 $\frac{1}{2}$ ., of which 42.1 per cent. (111,057,696 $\frac{1}{2}$ .) were loans to Federal Government; 6 per cent. (15,742,884 $\frac{1}{2}$ .) to the State Governments; 4.5 per cent. (11,994,260 $\frac{1}{2}$ .) to municipalities; and 47.04 per cent. (125,019,574 $\frac{1}{2}$ .) to industrial enterprises.

On July 24, 1912, a bill was introduced into the Senate, making it necessary for the States to obtain the Federal authorisation before contracting any loans.

Defence.

Army.—Under the military law of 1923 military service is obligatory on every Brazilian from 21 years of age to 44. The terms of service are 9 years (from the 21st to the 30th years of age) in the army 'first line' (1 in the ranks, the rest in the reserve), and 14 years (from the 30th to the 44th years of age) in the army 'second line' (7 in the National Guard and 7 in the reserve of the same). The reservists are called up for training annually for 4 weeks, besides which there is rifle practice once a month. The men in the territorial army also have an annual training of 2 to 4 weeks. The total peace strength in December 1926 was 43,015 officers and men, organised in 4 divisions, 3 cavalry divisions, 1 mixed brigade, and 1 coast defence district, comprising:

Mobilisation would yield about 120,000. The gendarmerie is 26,000 strong, capable of expansion to 130,000. Infantry are armed with the Mauser rifle, the field and horse artillery with 75 mm. guns.

Navy.—The navy has been reorganised under a United States mission, naval armaments, materials and stores being supplied from the States.

Ships of the Brazilian navy are as follows:—

Laid down	Name	Displacement	Armour		Principal Armament	Torpedo Tubes	H.-P.	Nominal speed

There is 1 river monitor (Pernambuco), 2 river gunboats, 11 destroyers, 4 submarines (of which only one is of an ocean-going type), and a submarine depot and salvage vessel. The cruisers Bahia and Rio Grande do Sul were refitted in 1925-26, new engines and oil-fired boilers being installed.

There are three naval arsenals—at Rio de Janeiro, Pará, and Ladario de Matto Grosso (this latter a river arsenal). Work is in progress at the arsenal in the Ilha das Cobras at Rio.

Production and Industry.

Brazil is an agricultural country, though only a small fraction of its soil has been brought under culture. The cultivated area covers 6,200,000 hectares (23,938 square miles), of which 2,143,981 hectares (8,277 square miles) are in São Paulo, 1,168,808 hectares (4,513 square miles) in Rio Grande do Sul, 1,100,482 hectares (4,248 square miles) in Minas, and 1,787,000 hectares (6,900 square miles) in other States. The census returns in 1920 gave 650,000 proprietors of land, the value of which was estimated at 11,000,000,000 milreis. Coffee is the chief product cultivated, and after that maize, sugar, rice, tobacco, cotton, maté (Paraguay tea), india-rubber, timber, haricot beans, cocoa, and nuts. The four States of São Paulo, Rio de Janeiro, Espírito Santo, and Minas Geraes, the combined areas of which cover about one-eighth of the entire area of the Republic, are the principal districts for coffee growing. Four-fifths of the coffee of the world comes from these parts; more than half of the world's supply from São Paulo alone. The average annual crop of Brazil may be estimated at about 12 million sacks (1 sack=132 pounds). Indiarubber is another great natural product of the country, the principal rubber-growing districts being the Acre Territory and the States of Amazonas and Pará. The best rubber to be found on the world's markets, the 'fine hard Pará,' comes from Brazil. The area under cotton cultivation for 1924-5 was estimated at 1,573,400 acres, and the production at 131,118 metric tons. Cocoa is produced in many States, but chiefly in Bahia, where also the tobacco industry flourishes. The 1924 production of tobacco was 59,550 metric tons. The estimated sugar crop in 1924 was 799,931 tons, as against 761,353 tons in 1923. In 1924 rice was grown on 1,344,400 acres, and the production was 728,414 tons. In 1924-25 maize was grown on 6,177,700 acres; the production was 4,108,211 metric tons.

The census of cattle for 1920 showed that there were in Brazil 34,271,324 oxen; 16,168,549 swine; 7,933,437 sheep; 5,086,655 goats; 5,253,699 horses; 1,865,259 asses and mules.

Both the forests and mines of Brazil are important. There has been a lumber development in the last few years, and pine has become an important export. Coal deposits exist in Rio Grande do Sul, Santa Catharina, Paraná, and São Paulo, much of the coal being of inferior quality. Annual output, about 500,000 tons. Iron is found chiefly in Minas Geraes. Gold is also found; the production in 1923 was 140,276 ounces, valued at 605,881*l.*; 1924, 120,824 ounces, value 521,359*l.*; 1925, 120,378 ounces, value 602,746*l.* Diamond districts are Diamantina, Grão Mogol, Chapada Diamantina, Bagagem, Goyaz, Matto Grosso, and other States. Petroleum also exists in workable quantities. Manganese ores are worked in Minas Geraes. Exports in 1926, chiefly to the United States, 319,825 metric tons. A great part of the world's supply of monazite comes from Brazil, chiefly from Bahia and Espírito Santo.

The most important manufacturing industry in Brazil is cotton weaving. There were in 1926 329 cotton factories with 2,528,611 spindles and 124,619 workmen, having a capital invested in them of 537,598,000 milreis, and an output valued at 981,082,000 milreis. The manufacture of silk is also being encouraged; the Federal Government grants premiums to silk cocoon producers. There are 13 silk mills, 35 woollen mills, and 16 jute mills in Brazil.

There are 23 paper mills in Brazil, representing capital outlay of 76,860 contos of reis, engaged principally in the manufacture of wrapping paper. There are also over 2,000 tobacco factories, and approximately 200 sugar factories, with an annual average production of 480,000 tons. In Rio de Janeiro flour milling is important, wheat being imported chiefly from the Argentine and Uruguayan Republics, but the imports of wheat flour are very large, mostly from the Argentine Republic and the United States. Brewing, being protected, is prosperous. In 1922 there were 15 packing houses with a total combined capital of 187,000,000 milreis. According to the industrial census of 1920 there were 13,336 factories in Brazil, with a capital of 1,815,156,000 milreis, an annual output of nearly 3,000,000,000 milreis, and 275,512 employees.

In the southern States of Brazil there are prosperous German, Russian, and Italian colonies. The German Government estimated in 1927 that there are over 1,000,000 German settlers in Brazil. In 1924 the Italian colonists numbered 558,405, the Portuguese 433,577, and the Spanish 219,142. The colonies maintained by the Union are the nineteen following:—Affonso Penna (founded in 1908), in the State of Espírito Santo; Visconde de Mauá (1908) and Itatiaya (1908) in the State of Rio de Janeiro; João Pinheiro (1910) and Inconfidentes (1910) in that of Minas Geraes; Bandeirantes (1908) and Monção (1910) in that of S. Paulo; Ivahy (1907), Tayo (1908), Iraty (1908), Vera-Guarany (1909), Senador Correia (1907), Jesuino Marcondes (1907), Cruz Machado (1910), Apucarana (1912), and Yapo (1913), in Paraná; Annitapolis (1908), Senador Esteves Junior (1910) and Rio Branco (1913), in Santa Catharina. On December 31, 1921, the population of the Federal Colonies was 44,459 (23,566 men and 20,893 women), including 18,708 Brazilians, and 25,751 of other nationalities.

Shipping and Navigation.

In 1926 there entered the ports of Brazil 24,397 steam vessels of 35,924,754 tons (14,553,003 tons Brazilian, 7,088,842 tons British, and 3,898,327 tons German), and cleared 24,515 steam vessels of 36,600,871 tons (14,537,592 tons Brazilian, 7,153,486 tons British, and 3,957,988 tons German).

Inland waterways, mostly rivers, are open to navigation over some 40,300 miles. By means of its waterways Brazil is connected with the neighbouring States. All coasting and river vessels must be Brazilian. The coast has a length of 4,060 miles.

Internal Communications.

Railway history in Brazil begins in 1854 with 89 miles. On December 31, 1925, the total length of railways was 19,026 miles. Of this total 11,152 miles were the property of the Union; 3,298 miles were privately owned; and 4,576 miles belonged to the States. The Central Brazil Railway (1,563 miles) is the principal railway in Brazil, and is owned by the State. The entire system joins up the railways of Brazil with those of Uruguay, Argentina and Paraguay. The Paulista railway is electrified from Jundiahy to Tatú. The total length of highways in 1926 was 32,438 miles, of which 4,089 miles were first-class roads, and 28,349 miles second-class roads.

The telegraph system of the country is largely the work of the Army; about half of the system, including all inter-State lines, is under control of the Government. In 1924 there were 54,526 miles of line, including 26,100 miles of Government property, 17,159 miles of railway property and 11,267 miles of submarine cables. In 1926 there were 4,592 telegraph offices, with 102,197 miles of wire, handling 15,162,739 messages.

About 40 wireless stations, including one very powerful one, have been established.

Three submarine cables connect Brazil with Europe, 2 with the United States, 2 with the River Plate and 1 with Liberia.

Brazilian Post-office during 1926 had a income of 33,120,604 milreis, expenditures 39,281,545 milreis, resulting deficit, 6,160,941. Pieces of mail handled, 1,647,592,396, as compared with 1,548,719,157 in 1925; in addition 222,458,491 pieces were handled in transit. International parcel-post packages, 126,136, against 107,630 in 1925. Post-office maintained in 1926 2,652 postal routes covering 103,080 miles, served by 3,193 carriers and by 28 employes aboard ships. Total expenditures for carrier service, 5,800,000 milreis, or annual average of 51.41 milreis per mile. Mail sacks received, 877,172,821; sent, 700,210,935; handled in transit, 11,054,337.

A decree was issued in 1913 adopting the standard time and longitude of Greenwich (instead of that of Rio de Janeiro) as from January 1, 1914.

Banking and Credit.

Before the War Brazil's currency was a complicated paper system consisting of inconvertible notes issued by the Treasury and convertible notes issued against gold by the Government Conversion Office (Caixa de Conversão) founded in 1906. The latter was authorized to issue notes in exchange for gold until 20,000,000% of gold was accumulated. In 1911 the gold limit was raised to 60,000,000% with corresponding increase of the paper currency. The milreis, which had a par value of 27*d.* was, on the whole, kept fairly stable at from 16*d.* to 18*d.* But internal troubles which compelled the Government to issue great quantities of Treasury notes brought the milreis down to 4*½d.* in 1923. Energetic measurements were adopted; issuance of Treasury notes was handed over to the Bank of Brazil and the output severely curtailed. Vast quantities of notes were called in; by August 30, 1924, the gold in the Caixa de Conversão had been reduced to 10,554,833*l.*, with corresponding reduction of the paper currency outstanding. But the Government, recognizing the harmfulness of deflation indefinitely pursued, decided in 1926 to erect a new currency system based on gold.

This project, which became law on December 18, 1926, stabilized the milreis at, practically, the prevailing rate of 5 $\frac{1}{4}$ d. with the volume of currency under the control of a Government bureau to be known as the Caixa de Estabilização; the new bureau, which began operations in April, 1927, buys gold in exchange for legal tender notes at the rate of 5 $\frac{1}{4}$ d. per milreis. On November 5, 1927, its volume of gold amounted to 1,911,573 $\frac{1}{2}$  sterling, 12,244,627 dollars (U.S.) and bar gold to the value of 1 $\frac{1}{4}$  million sterling, in all Rs. 230'931:119\$000. The new value of the milreis is based on a new (and as yet theoretical) unit called the cruzeiro, a gold coin containing 2 grammes of gold .900 fine, to be exchangeable for four paper milreis. Actual coinage of the cruzeiro is deferred to a date (to be announced six months in advance) when the Government's gold reserves—from gold on hand, from budget surpluses and from the proceeds of loans—make it possible to place the currency on the gold standard.

The Bank of Brazil with an authorised capital of 70,000 contos of reis (increased in June, 1921, to 100,000 contos of reis) had, in 1927, 70 branches throughout the Republic.

At the end of December, 1926, the assets of the banks of Brazil totalled 16,584,872 contos of reis. They had 2,937,903 contos of reis in deposits, 362,831 contos of reis in reserves, and an aggregate paid up capital of 758,989 contos of reis. The balance to the credit of depositors in the Federal Savings Banks on Dec. 31, 1924, was 153,635 contos of reis (150,127 contos on Dec. 31, 1923).

Money, Weights, and Measures.

MONEY.

Up to the end of 1926 the unit was the real (pl. reis); bronze coins, 20 and 40 reis; nickel coins, 100, 200, and 400 reis; silver, 500, 1,000, and 2,000 reis. The paper currency is of the following denominations: 1,000 reis, 2,000 reis, 5,000 reis, 10,000 reis, 20,000 reis, 50,000 reis, 100,000 reis, 200,000 reis, 500,000 reis, and 1,000,000 reis.

The unit in common use is the Milreis (1,000 reis) which is indicated as 1$000 though sometimes the three ciphers are omitted. For example, 673 milreis may be written as 673$000 or merely 673$. Values under one milreis, such as 527 reis, are inscribed to the right of the $ sign, e.g. $527. If the figure contains no tens or hundreds, their absence is indicated by noughts. For example, 7 reis would be: $007; 65 reis would be: $065. Figures between 1 milreis and 999 milreis are placed to the left of the $ sign. For example, 865 milreis and 546 reis would be: 865$546. In dealing with thousands of milreis, invariable called 'contos of milreis,' the Brazilians introduce another symbol (: ) which is the conto sign and (.) which is the thousand conto sign. For example, 627 contos of milreis would be 627:000$000. Thousands of contos, such as 5 thousand contos, would be shown as 5.000:000$000, though, as remarked, the last three ciphers might be dropped. To illustrate all these points,—five hundred and twenty-nine thousand six hundred and twenty-two contos, three hundred and seven milreis, seventeen reis would be: Rs. 529.622:307$017.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

The metric system has been in use in all official departments since 1862,

It was made compulsory in 1872, but the ancient measures are still partly employed in certain rural districts of the interior. They are :—

The Libra	.	.	.	=	1.012 lbs. avoirdupois.
„ Arroba	.	.	.	=	32.38 „ „
„ Quintal	.	.	.	=	129.54 „ „
„ Alqueire (of Rio)	.	.	.	=	1 imperial bushel.
„ Oitava	.	.	.	=	55.84 grains.

BULGARIA.

(BLGARIYA.)

Reigning King (Czar)

Boris III, eldest son of Ferdinand of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, and the late Marie Louise (died January 31, 1899), eldest daughter of Duke Robert of Parma, born January 30, 1894, succeeded to the throne on the abdication of his father, October 3, 1918.

Brother and Sisters of the King.—(1) Prince Cyril, born November 17, 1895; (2) Princess Eudoxia, born January 17, 1898; and (3) Princess Nadejda, born January 30, 1899.

According to the Constitution the Sovereign must profess the Orthodox religion, and must reside permanently in the country. The royal title is hereditary.

According to the budget of 1927-28, the civil list is fixed at 3,000,000 leva, besides 23,550,000 leva for the maintenance of palaces, &c.

Constitution and Government.

The Principality of Bulgaria was created by the Treaty of Berlin, signed July 13, 1878. On October 5, 1908, Bulgaria declared her independence, and the Powers recognised Bulgarian independence, and the title of 'King of the Bulgarians' assumed by Prince Ferdinand. On September 18, 1885, the province of Eastern Rumelia was united with Bulgaria.

On September 30, 1912, Bulgaria allied with Serbia, Greece and Montenegro commenced war on Turkey (First Balkan War), which was ended by the Treaty of London on May 30, 1913, by which Turkey ceded to the Allies all its European territory west of a line drawn from Midia on the Black Sea to Enos on the Aegean, and also Crete.

The Balkan League broke up almost immediately after the signing of the Treaty of London, owing to disagreements among the allies as to the division of the territory ceded to them, and on June 29, 1913, war broke out among the allies (Second Balkan War). On July 10, 1913, Rumania intervened to impose peace on the allies and to exact for herself from Bulgaria an extension of her frontier. Peace came finally on August 10 (July 26 old style), 1913, by the Treaty of Bukarest, between Bulgaria on the one hand, and Rumania, Serbia, Greece and Montenegro on the other.

By the Constitution of 1879, amended May, 1893, and June, 1911, the legislative authority was vested in a single Chamber, called the Sobranie or National Assembly, composed of 227 members. The members of it are elected by universal manhood suffrage at the rate of one member to every 20,000 of the population. On April 13, 1927, the Sobranie agreed to adopt the principle of proportional representation. Every member receives 400 levas a day (including Sundays and holidays) during the session. All over 30 years of age who can read and write (except the clergy, soldiers on active service, persons deprived of civil rights, &c.) are eligible as representatives. The duration of the Assembly is four years, but it may be dissolved at any time by the King, when new elections must take place within two months. Laws passed by the Sobranie require the assent of the King. Questions concerning the acquisition or cession of territory, changes in the constitution, a vacancy on the throne, or the appointment of a regent have to be decided by a Grand Sobranie, elected for the special purpose in a manner similar to that in which the ordinary Sobranie is elected, but with double the number of members.

Parties in the Sobranye (elected May 29, 1927):—Government Coalition, 168; Agrarians 48; Macedonian Independents, 11; National Liberals, 14; Democrats, 12; Radicals, 2; Social Democrats, 10; others, 8. Total, 278.

The executive power is vested in a Council of Ministers nominated by the King. The cabinet (appointed January 1, 1926) is composed as follows:—

Premier and Minister of Interior.—Audré Liaptcheff.

Minister of Education.—Nicholas Naidenoff.

Minister of Justice.—Dr Theodore Kuleff.

Minister of Commerce.—M. Tzvetco Bobotchevsky.

Minister of Finance.—Vladimir Molloff.

Minister of Public Works.—Slaveiko Vassileff.

Minister of Posts and Railways.—N. Naidenoff.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Athanase Buroff.

Minister of Agriculture.—Dimitri Christoff.

Minister of War.—General Ivan Volkoff.

For local administration the country is divided into a number of Departments, each under a Prefect assisted by a Departmental Council and aided by several sub-prefects. Each community has its Kmet or mayor and its Council.

Area and Population.

The area of Bulgaria is 103,146 square kilometres, or 39,814 English square miles, and the census population on December 31, 1926, was 5,483,125 (2,748,060 males and 2,735,065 females), as against 4,846,971 (2,420,784 males and 2,426,187 females) in the census of 1920. Population per square mile was 137·7 in 1926.

By the Peace Treaty of Neuilly, signed on November 27, 1919, Bulgaria ceded Thrace to the Allied and Associated Powers and the Strumnitza line and a strip of territory on the north-west frontier to Serbia. Bulgaria was deprived of its Aegean littoral, but an efficient economic outlet to the same sea was provided to her by the Treaty.

Population of districts, according to census of December 31, 1926:—

District	Area in sq. miles	Population	Per sq. mile	District	Area in sq. miles	Population	Per sq. mile
Bourgas . .	5,257	484,028	92·1	Sofia . .	3,567	642,066	180·0
Choumen . .	2,813	360,199	155·2	Stara Zagora	2,861	326,503	127·4
Kustendil . .	1,532	243,577	158·9	Tirnovó . .	3,010	505,892	168·0
Mastanly . .	1,523	183,793	120·6	Varna . .	1,472	280,400	156·6
Pachmakly . .	1,067	6,814	64·5	Vidin . .	1,635	278,123	170·1
Pétritch . .	3,624	186,167	70·9	Vratza . .	2,661	392,410	147·2

Plovdiv . .	3,823	562,158	147·1
Roussé . .	1,905	341,959	179·5	Total . .	39,814	5,483,125	137·7

Of the total population in 1920, 3,947,687 or 81·44 per cent. were of Bulgarian origin, and 103,200 or 2·13 per cent. belonged to other slavic races. Of the non-slavs 520,339 or 10·74 per cent. of the total population were of Turkish origin, and 43,209 or 0·89 per cent. were Jews. There were 38,130 foreigners in the kingdom in 1920. In 1926, 20·7 per cent. of the population was urban and 79·3 per cent. rural.

The capital is the city of Sofia, with a population (census, 1926) of 218,162. The other principal towns, with population in 1926, are Philippopolis (Plovdiv), 85,188; Varna, 60,787; Ruschuk, 45,672; Slivno (Sliven), 29,335; Plevna (Pleven), 29,063; Stara Zagora, 28,929; Choumen, 25,316; Burgas, 31,428; Jambol, 23,133; Hascovo, 26,366; Pazardjik, 21,630; Vidin, 19,115; Vratza, 15,509; Kustendil, 15,403.

The movement of population in four years has been:—

Years	Marriages	Living Births	Still-births	Deaths	Surplus of Births
1922	58,980	202,602	1,137	106,063	+ 96,530
1923	52,597	191,438	1,056	107,149	+ 84,289
1924	55,425	207,117	1,069	107,818	+ 99,299

Religion and Instruction.

The national faith is that of the Orthodox Greek Church, though, in 1870, in consequence of its demand for and acceptance of religious autonomy, the Bulgarian Church was declared by the Patriarch of Constantinople to be outside the Orthodox Communion. The Church is governed by the Synod of Bishops. There are 11 Dioceses, viz., Sofia, Plovdiv, Stara Zagora, Sliven, Varna, Rousse, Tirnovo, Vratza, Lovetch, Vidin and Névrokop, in addition to 4 in Macedonia and 1 in Thrace (suspended at present). The clergy, both Orthodox and of other religious bodies, are paid by the State and also receive fees for services at burials, marriages, &c. There were, according to the last census of 1920, 4,061,829 members of the Orthodox Greek Church, 690,734 Mohammedans and 34,072 Catholics.

Elementary education is obligatory and free for children between the ages of 7 and 14.

The following are statistics of various classes of State and private schools in Bulgaria for 1925-26.

There is a State university at Sofia, with (1925-26) 298 professors and teachers (27 women) and 3,062 students (2,275 men and 787 women). There is also a free (private) university, with 44 teachers (1 woman) and 2,029 students (1,826 men and 203 women).

There is also a national military academy; 2 agricultural schools; 1 school of commerce.

Justice.

The lowest Court is that of the Justices of the Peace, who possess jurisdiction in minor civil and criminal cases. The Departmental Court, or Court of First Instance, is competent to pronounce sentence of death and penal servitude, and also acts as a Court of Appeal. Above these are three Courts of Appeal, sitting at Sofia, Philippopolis and Ruschuk. The highest tribunal is the Court of Cassation, sitting at Sofia, and composed of 12 judges.

Finance.

Defence.

The pre-war peace strength of the Bulgarian army was about 3,900 officers and 56,000 other ranks. Its war strength was approximately 500,000 men.

Under the terms of the Treaty of Neuilly of November 27, 1919, the total military forces of Bulgaria must not in the future exceed 20,000 men, enrolled by voluntary system. The obligatory military service is abolished. All measures of mobilisation are prohibited and, in order to prevent the formation of a reserve, service in the ranks is to be for a minimum period of 12 years. Officers serving at the time when the treaty was signed must undertake to serve at least till the age of 40 and newly appointed officers serve for at least 20 years.

A frontier guard of 3,000 men voluntarily enlisted is permitted, and in addition the number of armed gendarmes, police, customs officials and forest guards must not exceed 10,000.

The maximum authorised armaments and munition supplies are :—

	Per 1000 men.	Munitions per arm.
Rifles or carbines . . . . .	1,150	500 rounds
Machine guns . . . . .	15	10,000 "
Trench mortars, light . . . . .	2	1,000 "
" " heavy . . . . .	2	500 "
Guns or howitzers . . . . .	3	1,000 "

No military or naval aircraft is permitted.

The manufacture of arms, munitions and war material is only to be carried out at one factory under State control. The importation and exportation of arms and munitions is prohibited.

Owing to exceptional circumstances a slight increase in the treaty establishment has been authorised, and on January 1, 1927, the strength was :—

The military budget for 1927-28 amounted to 1,182,381,000 levas.

Under the terms of the treaty Bulgaria has surrendered all warships and submarines, but is permitted to maintain on the Danube and along the coast 4 torpedo boats and 6 motor boats, now of little value, all without torpedoes and torpedo apparatus, for police and fishery protection duties.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture is the chief occupation of the people. Land is held in absolute freehold by the owners and there is a land tax. The communes hold pasture-land and wood-land in perpetuity and pay no rent, and over such lands the members of the communes have grazing and wood-cutting rights.

About two-thirds of the population are engaged in agriculture, most of them being small proprietors holding from one to six acres. The methods of cultivation are primitive, but machinery is being gradually introduced.

The total area of Bulgaria is 10,814,620 hectares, or 25,786,550 acres; of this the cultivated area is 3,716,070 hectares, or 9,182,409 acres, and the forest area 2,881,264 hectares, or 7,203,160 acres (841,100 hectares belonging to the State and 1,516,162 hectares to the municipalities).

The area and yield of cereals for 2 years is given as follows:—

Fruit grows in abundance, especially in the neighbourhood of Kustendil. Wine production, 1922, 12,320,000 gallons; 1923, 15,620,000 gallons; 1924, 16,720,000 gallons. Cotton in 1927 yielded 25,000 quintals, and there is also considerable silkworm culture. Sugar production in 1922-3 was 16,438 metric tons, and in 1923-4, 26,411 tons; 12,112 acres were under rose cultivation in 1925, producing 1,400 kilos of essence. Tobacco area in 1924 was 122,587 acres, yield, 48,803,679 kilos; 1925, area, 124,901 acres, yield (estimated), 30,000,000 kilos; 1926 yield (estimated) 25,950,000 kilos.

According to the census of December 31, 1920, there were in Bulgaria 8,922,604 sheep, 1,331,853 goats, 398,237 horses, 1,089,699 swine and 1,877,108 other cattle.

Industry is not much developed, though the State encourages industrial enterprise. Mining development has been slow. The country is rich in coal; there are three State mines (at Pernik, Bobovdovl and Maritza), and several privately owned mines. Total coal production in 1926, 1,204,904 metric tons, of which 1,050,999 tons came from State mines and 153,905 tons from privately owned mines. Iron is found in large quantities; gold, silver, lead (11,082 tons in 1926), manganese (490 tons in 1926), and copper (35,536 tons in 1926) also exist in the country.

Shipping and Communications.

The number of vessels entered at the Black Sea ports of Bulgaria in 1925 was 2,792 of 1,639,937 tons; number of vessels cleared, 2,793 of 1,542,719 tons. At the Danube ports there entered, in 1925, 6,874 vessels of 1,433,500 tons; and cleared, 6,834 vessels of 1,426,673 tons.

In 1926, there were in Bulgaria 4,426 miles of State roads, and 3,868 miles of communal roads; total: 8,294 miles of road.

In 1927, Bulgaria had 1,419 miles of railway of ordinary gauge and 232 miles of narrow gauge; total, 1,651 miles. All the lines belong to the State, which works them. Railways connect Sofia with the general European system. In 1926, there were 26 miles of electric tramways.

There were, in 1926, 574 post offices. Total correspondence handled, 51,786,231 letters and postcards, 849,593 parcels; postal revenue (1924), 16,139,995 leva; expenditure, 26,873,819 leva. Length of telegraph line in 1926, 3,739 miles; number of offices, 578; number of messages, 4,308,418. In 1925 there were 505 telephone stations; length of line, 5,174 miles, number of conversations, 17,202,314.

Money and Credit.

There is a National Bank of Bulgaria, with headquarters at Sofia and branches in the different towns of Bulgaria; its capital is 100,000,000 leva, provided by the State, and it has authority to issue both gold notes and silver notes. On February 7, 1928, it had in hand 1,453,727,748 leva in gold and silver, and deposits of 1,221,214,741 leva. The note circulation on the same date was 3,586,839,903 leva. There is a State Agricultural Bank for making advances on personal security. A law passed by the Bulgarian National Assembly on December 28, 1921, authorises the establishment of a Bulgarian International Bank for facilitating and encouraging international trade. The original capital of this bank is to be 75,000,000 leva, of which 30,000,000 leva are to be apportioned to the Bulgarian National Bank and the Bulgarian Agricultural Bank, and the remainder to foreign banks and organisations.

Deposits in the 508 Postal Savings Banks of Bulgaria during 1927 amounted to 364,651,631 leva, and withdrawals to 238,437,952 leva. There were 762,067 depositors (1925). The balance in hand at end of 1927 was 508,306,855 leva.

There are a few Bulgarian gold coins, of the value of 100, 20, and 10 leva (francs), but the gold circulation is supplied by foreign 10 and 20 franc pieces. There are silver coins of  $\frac{1}{2}$  lev, and 1 lev, 2, and 5 leva (francs); nickel coins of 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ , 5, 10, and 20 stotinki (centimes); the notes of the National Bank circulate at par.

The metric system is in general use. On April 1, 1916, the Gregorian Calendar came into force in Bulgaria.

CHILE.

(REPÚBLICA DE CHILE.)

Constitution and Government

THE Republic of Chile threw off allegiance to the Crown of Spain by the declaration of independence of September 18, 1810, finally freeing itself from Spanish rule in 1818. By the Constitution which came into force on October 18, 1925, legislative power is vested in the National Congress, consisting of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies, both of which are elected by direct popular vote. The Senate consists of 45 members, who represent 9 provincial groups. Each group elects five senators. It is renewable every four years, but each Senator holds his seat for eight years. The Chamber of Deputies consists of 132 members elected by departments or groups of departments, one member for every 30,000 inhabitants or fraction of not less than 15,000. Electors are all registered citizens of 21 years of age or over, who are able to read and write. All voting is by ballot. Congress is to be in ordinary session from May 21 to September 18. The executive is exercised by the President of the Republic elected for a term of six years, also by direct popular vote. A retiring President is not re-eligible. In legislation the President has a modified veto; a bill returned to the Chambers with the President's objections may, by a two-thirds vote of the members present (a majority of the members being present), be sustained and become law. The validity of all elections of President, Deputies and Senators is determined by a special body called Tribunal Calificador, consisting of five members chosen by lot from among the following: One each from past-presidents or vice-presidents of the Chamber and Senate; two from Ministers of the Supreme Court; and one from Ministers of the Court of Appeal of the city where Congress meets.

The salary of the President is fixed at 120,000 pesos, with 30,000 pesos for expenses.

The President is assisted by a number of Ministers of State, one for each department, who constitute a Cabinet and who are responsible to him. Ministers may speak in Congress but do not vote.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For the purposes of local government the Republic is divided into Provinces, presided over by Intendentes; and the Provinces into Departments, with Gobernadores as chief officers. The Departments constitute one or more municipal districts each with a council or municipality of 5 to 15 members, inhabitants popularly elected for three years. The police of Santiago and of the capitals of departments is organised and regulated by the President of the Republic at the charge of the national treasury.

Area and Population.

The Republic is divided into 23 provinces, subdivided into 82 departments, and 1 territory (Magallanes). Departments and territories are subdivided into 909 sub-delegations and 3,233 districts.

For local administration purposes, the Republic is divided into 329 townships; for registry offices of births, marriages, and deaths purposes, into 377 circumscriptions; and, for ecclesiastical purposes, into 351 parishes and 95 vice-parishes.

In 1884 the provinces of Tarapacá and Tacna were ceded to Chile by Peru. The cession of Tacna was originally for ten years, at the end of which period a plebiscite of the province would decide to which country it should belong. As the plebiscite has not yet (March 1928) been taken, the provinces are still occupied by Chile; early in 1927 a proposal was put forward in Washington that Tacna-Arica should be ceded to Bolivia, who should repay to Chile all the mon-ys expended upon it for improvements, but Peru promptly rejected the proposal.

Area and population of the provinces on January 1, 1920 (census figures) :—

Many islands to the north, west, and south belong to Chile. The coast-line is about 2,485 miles in length.

In 1885 the population numbered 2,527,320; in 1895, 2,712,145; in 1907, 3,249,279; in 1920 (last census), 3,753,799 (1,865,827 males and 1,887,972 females). Estimated population October 1, 1927, 4,004,014.

The population of the principal towns in 1920 (census figures) was :— Santiago, 507,296; Valparaíso, 182,422; Concepción, 64,074; Iquique, 37,421; Talca, 36,079; Chillan, 30,881; Antofagasta, 51,581; Vina del Mar, 35,441; Curicó, 15,879; Temuco, 28,546; Serena, 15,240; Talcaguano, 22,084; Valdivia, 26,854. Of the total population 46.60 per cent. were urban. The great majority of the population is of European origin. The indigenous inhabitants are of three branches, the Fuegians, mostly nomadic, living in or near Tierra del Fuego; the Araucans (101,118) in the valleys or on the western slopes of the Andes; the Chamcos, who inhabit the northern coast region and work as labourers. The total number of foreigners included in the census of 1920 was 120,436, as against 134,524 in 1907.

Births, marriages, and deaths, exclusive of still-births :—

Year	Total Births	Illegitimate Births	Marriages	Deaths	Surplus of Births
1922	147,205	53,198	25,023	108,756	38,549
1923	151,805	55,276	25,912	126,877	24,928
1924	155,100	54,955	28,273	114,172	40,928
1925	156,225	55,119	28,726	108,787	47,438
1926	159,540	—	30,314	108,223	51,317

Illegitimate births in 1925 were 360, and legitimate births 640 per thousand of the population. Immigration is small, but is encouraged by the Government.

Religion.

The Roman Catholic religion was maintained by the State, but in 1925 the church was disestablished. There is one archbishop (Santiago), 11 bishops, and four vicars apostolic. There were in 1924, 351 parishes and 95 sub-parishes in the Republic, 610 churches, and 808 chapels.

Instruction.

Education is gratuitous and at the cost of the State, and since August 26, 1920, compulsory. Professional and secondary instruction is provided in the Universities (one belonging to the State, The University of Chile, the other The Catholic University) and the National Institute of Santiago, and in the lyceums and colleges established in the capitals of provinces, and in some departments. In 1924, in the State University there were 4,688 matriculated students. In 1924, the Catholic University had 1417 students. An Industrial University was opened at Valparaiso (Universidad Industrial de Valparaiso), and another at Concepcion (University of Concepcion) in 1920. There were in 1924, 3,357 public primary schools with 438,781 pupils, and 9,414 teachers; and 459 private primary schools with 1,430 teachers and 62,099 pupils; 15 public normal schools with 2,507 pupils and 453 teachers; 96 public and 102 private secondary schools with 40,084 and 20,536 pupils with 2,038 and 1247 teachers respectively; 11 public commercial schools with 181 teachers and 3,133 pupils. There are besides agricultural schools, schools of mines, and professional schools. Other educational institutions are the Paedagogic Institute, the National Conservatory of Music, the National Observatory School of Arts and Trades, Institute for Deaf Mutes, School for the Blind, and public museums. The cost of maintaining the public primary schools in 1924 was 48,676.289 paper pesos, that of the secondary schools 8,294,620 paper pesos, that of the national normal schools, 4,383,909 paper pesos. The National Library in 1924 contained 327,881 volumes.

There were in 1924, 627 newspapers and journals published in Chile, including 90 dailies and 176 weeklies.

Justice, Crime, Pauperism.

There are, in addition to a High Court of Justice in the capital, eight Courts of Appeal distributed over the Republic, Tribunals of First Instance in the departmental capitals, and second class judges in the subdelegations. In 1925, 171,653 persons were committed to prison, on December 31, 1925, there were 65,459 inmates in the prisons.

The police force (1924) was composed as follows:—Fiscal, 9,225 men; communal, 1,260 men; and country police, 3,964 men, a total of 14,449, including officers and troop.

Finance.

In recent years the revenue and expenditure were as follows (40 pesos = £1):—

Defence.

ARMY.

The Chilean Army is a national militia in which all able-bodied citizens are obliged to serve. Liability extends from the 20th to the 50th year, inclusive. Recruits are called up in their 20th year, and are trained for one and a half years. Afterwards they serve for 12 years in the reserve of the active army, after which they belong till the completion of their 50th year to the second reserve. The latter is organised as a second-line army.

Chile is divided into 4 zones or military districts, each of which furnishes a complete division on mobilisation. The army consists of the following corps: 16 regiments and 3 infantry battalions, 8 cavalry regiments, 5 regiments and 6 artillery groups, 1 engineering regiment and 5 engineering battalions, 5 battalions of railway troops and 2 aviation groups. The total strength of the active army in 1925 was 1,513 officers and 14,735 other ranks.

The infantry are armed with the Chilean Mauser rifle (1895), calibre 7 mm., and the cavalry with a carbine of similar pattern and lance. The field artillery are armed with Q.F. Krupp guns.

In December, 1918, an Air Force was formed under British instruction, with a nucleus of 14 seaplanes and 80 aeroplanes purchased in Great Britain.

NAVY.

The principal vessels of the Chilean fleet are as follows :—

Name	Launched	Displacement, Tons	Extreme Armouring, Inches	Main Armament	Torpedo Tubes	Indicated Horse-Power	Nominal Speed
Battleship :
Almirante Latorre . . . .	1913	23,000	9	10 14-in.; 14 6-in.; 23-in.	4	37,000	23

Chacabuco . . . . .	1898	4,500	—	2 6-in.; 10 4·7-in.	5	15,500	24·0

The Almirante Latorre served in the British Fleet during the war as the Canada. The O'Higgins has been fitted to carry a couple of seaplanes, and the Capitan Prat is being converted into a submarine depot ship. There are 5 large destroyers (the 3 most powerful of which were taken over as flotilla leaders by the British Navy for the period 1914–19), 6 submarines, and various training and auxiliary vessels. Six new destroyers are under construction in England, and the ordering of a number of submarines is believed to be in contemplation. The general efficiency of the personnel of the Navy appears to be high.

Five British naval officers are at present lent to the Chilean Navy in connexion with the re-organisation of training in certain branches.

Agriculture and Industry.

There are three zones in Chile—the arid zone in the north, the agricultural zone in the centre, and the forest zone in the south. Agriculture and mining are the principal occupations. Total area of agricultural land is 62,826,272 acres; of forest land, 12,082,886 acres; of fruit trees, 238,794 acres; of meadows, 35,282,685 acres. Number of farms in 1925, 109,853. Chile produces annually large quantities of cereals, besides excellent wine, fruit, and vegetables. The principal crops of the harvest for 3 years are shown as follows :—

On December 31, 1925, the live stock of Chile comprised 323,581 horses, 27,864 asses 40,187 mules, 1,918,433 cattle, 4,093,872 sheep, 357,033 goats, and 246,636 pigs.

Dairy farms and the production of butter and cheese are on the increase. In 1924, there were 87,212 bee-hives, producing 504,500 kilos of honey and 63,700 kilos of wax. In Patagonia and Tierra del Fuego large tracts of country are devoted to sheep-farming. Extensive natural forests are found, the largest being found in the provinces of Valdivia (1,729,215 acres), Llanquihue (1,998,515 acres), and Chiloé (183,605 acres). The wealth of the country, however, consists chiefly in its minerals, especially in the northern provinces of Atacama and Tarapacá.

The metals obtained were gold, silver, copper (Chile is the world's second largest producer of copper), cobalt, and manganese; the non-metallic substances being coal, nitrate, borate, salt, sulphur, and guano. Production of gold in 1924 was 3,483,971 grammes; of silver, 94,346,040 grammes; of copper (1926), 183,802,000 kilos. Iron-ore deposits are found in the provinces of Atacama and of Coquimbo, estimated at over 1,000,000,000 tons. All the coal mines of Chile are situated south of Valparaíso. Production in 1926, 1,464,224 tons.

Nitrate of soda, or 'salitre,' is not only Chile's most important article of export but the chief source of governmental revenue derived from export taxes. It is found in the section of the desert of Atacama, known locally as the 'pampa salitrera,' a territory comprising an area of some 500 miles in length, lying between latitude 15° and 26° south, and situated at an elevation above sea level of from 2,000 to 6,000 feet. This zone is divided into districts known as the pampas of Tarapacá, Tocopilla, Antofagasta, Aguas Blancas, and Taltal respectively. Production and exportation of nitrate in recent years are stated as follows:—

Years	Production	Exported	Years	Production	Exported
	Metric tons	Metric tons		Metric tons	Metric tons
1910	2,465,415	2,335,941	1924	2,406,041	2,333,440
1915	1,755,291	2,023,294	1925	2,510,965	2,244,106
1923	1,908,524	2,242,990	1926	2,016,429	1,452,685

More than half the world's supply of iodine comes from Chile as a by-product of the nitrate trade; exports in 1927 exceeded 1,000 tons.

In 1925 Chile had 7,681 manufacturing establishments, using raw materials to the value of 753,451,265 paper pesos, which were manufactured into merchandise to the value of 1,351,254,634 paper pesos. The number of employees and operators was 90,641, and their wages and salaries 197,081,424 pesos. These establishments represented a capital value of 1,676,731,190 paper pesos.

Shipping and Navigation.

The commercial navy of Chile consisted, in 1924, of 121 steamers of 88,226 tons net and 15 sailing vessels of 19,624 tons net. The shipping entered and cleared at the ports of Chile in foreign trade in 1926 was as follows: Entered, 1,100 vessels of 3,206,465 tons; cleared, 1,044 vessels of 3,001,892 tons.

Communications.

In 1926, there were in Chile 13,514 miles of first-class road (3,030 ft for motor traffic), and 10,286 miles of second-class road; also 851 miles of navigable river, and 497 miles of navigable lakes.

The length of State Railway lines amounted in 1924 to 3,380 miles; private railway lines to 2,057 miles, making a total of 5,437 miles. State Railway lines are: - Arica-La Paz Railway, 128 miles; North Longitudinal Railway, 442 miles; Central North Line, 729 miles; Central South Line, 1704 miles; and Puente Alto-Valcan Railway, 37 miles, making a total of 3,380 miles. Electrification of the railways was commenced in 1921 on the line between Valparaiso and Santiago, a distance of 115 miles.

The 979 post-offices dispatched in 1924 117,495,832 postal pieces of which 4,958,116 were sent abroad. These included 2,947,713 letters for abroad, and 43,786,872 home letters.

The length of telegraph lines at the end of 1924 was 16,183 miles (10,207 miles Government and 5,976 miles private). There were 31,656 miles of wire (19,291 miles Government telegraphs and 12,365 miles private). In 1924, there were 408 Government offices, which sent 5,615,000 messages, and 247 private offices, which sent 2,893,331 messages. The length of telephone line was 53,784 miles, and of wire 109,676 miles (1924). Number of subscribers, 28,876 (1924).

Work has progressed on the several wireless stations now under construction along this coast, which with those now completed will form a chain composed of Arica, Antofagasta, Coquimbo, Valparaiso, Talcahuano, Valdivia, Puerto Montt, and Punta Arenas. A wireless station is also being erected on the Juan Fernandez Islands, about 400 miles west and south of Valparaiso. Total number of stations in 1919, 32.

Banking and Credit.

In August, 1925, the Government authorised the opening of a Central Bank with 150,000,000 pesos capital, which should have the right of issuing a new peso, value 6d., to be the basis of a new national currency. The Central Bank commenced operations on January 11, 1926, and gold payments were re-established. The Central Bank's gold reserves amounted in December 23, 1927, to 478,372,000 pesos and Bank notes in circulation to 314,966,000 pesos.

There are a number of joint-stock banks of issue with agencies in Chile. Their joint paid-up capital and reserve funds amounted on December 31, 1924, to 10,500,000 in pesos, gold and 371,628,092 pesos paper. The largest of the banks is the Bank of Chile with a paid-up capital of 100,000,000 pesos. The banks are required to guarantee their note issue by depositing gold, Government notes, or securities in the Treasury. There are also land banks which issue scrip payable to bearer and bearing interest, and lend money secured as a first charge on landed property and repayable at fixed periods. The two institutions which specialised in savings accounts, the National Savings Bank of Chile, and the Savings Bank of Santiago, were amalgamated in 1927, under the name of the former institution. At the National Savings Bank of Chile (Caja Nacional de Ahorros) during 1924, the deposits amounted to 1,396,734,605 paper pesos. The total number of depositors in Chilean savings banks on December 31, 1924, was 1,332,216.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The monetary unit is the Peso. Formerly it had a more or less fictitious parity of 18*d.* to the Peso; but on October 14, 1925, a Government decree established at 6*d.* the parity of the Chilean peso. This will contain 183057 grammes fine; and £1 sterling = 40 pesos. Only gold coins of 20, 50 and 100 pesos will be minted. The currency, since the establishment of the Central Bank, will be on a gold basis. This law also provided for silver coins of, 5, 2, 1 and 1/2 pesos, and nickel coins of 0.20, 0.10 and 0.05 pesos. Actually the currency in circulation is chiefly paper issued by the Government in lieu of gold, in denominations of 1,000, 500, 50, 20, 10, 5, 2 and 1 peso; Vales del Tesoro (Treasury Notes) in 1,000, 500 and 50 pesos also circulate. Coins in circulation are, 1 peso in silver, and 20, 10 and 5 centavos in nickel.

The metric system has been legally established in Chile since 1865, but the old Spanish weights and measures are still in use to some extent.

On August 31, 1918, Greenwich time was adopted in Chile in place of Chilean time.

CHINA.

(CHUNG-HUA MIN-KUO, i. e. REPUBLIC OF CHINA.)

Government.

On February 12, 1912, China, one of the oldest of Monarchies, became a Republic.

The Chinese Imperial family was of Manchu origin, dating from 1644, and was styled Ta Ch'ing Ch'ao ('Great Pure Dynasty'). The last Emperor, P'u-yi, was the tenth of the line; but the official genealogy is carried back six generations earlier than the real founder, and P'u-yi's will be the sixteenth name in the canonised series of Ta Ch'ing Emperors. He was born on February 11, 1906, succeeded his uncle the Emperor Kuang-Hsü on November 14, 1908, and abdicated on February 12, 1912. On December 1, 1923, he was married. He retained the title of Emperor of the Manchu Imperial House up to November 5, 1924 (when it was abolished), together with other rights of preferential treatment secured under the Abdication Agreement, making P'u-yi an ordinary citizen of the republic. For account of the Revolution of 1911, see STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1912, pp. 699-701, and for later developments, see STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1919, pp. 740-41.

A constitution was promulgated on October 10, 1923, to replace the provisional constitution of March 11, 1912. On October 23, 1924, a coup d'état was carried out by Marshal Feng Yü-hsiang, and on November 24 a provisional administration with autocratic powers was formed by Marshal Tuan Chi-jui. Marshal Tuan left Peking on April 20, 1926, leaving control in the hands of anti-Feng Yü-hsiang war lords, who appointed Dr. W. W. Yen temporary Premier of a so called Regency Cabinet, which was succeeded by other Regency Cabinets until June 18, 1927, when Marshal Chang Tso-lin ended the makeshift régime by assuming office as Ta Yuan Swai (Generalissimo) of a military Government. All powers are vested in the Generalissimo, who is assisted by a Cabinet of his own appointment, as follows:—

Premier.—P'an Fu.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Wang Yin-t'ai.

Minister of Military and Naval Affairs.—Gen. Ho Feng-lin.

Minister of the Interior.—Shen Jui-lin.

Minister of Finance.—Yen Tse-p'u.

Minister of Justice.—Yao Chen.

Minister of Education.—Liu Chieh.

Minister of Industry.—Chang Ching-hui.

Minister of Agriculture and Labour.—Mo Teh-hui.

Minister of Communications.—P'an Fu.

The above-named Government might properly be termed the Peking Government, since China is in the throes of a revolution causing political disintegration. A second Government, a so-called Nationalist Government, has its seat at Nanking. The authority of these two Governments is exercised over very limited and constantly varying radiuses. The rest of China has to submit to personal military authority, wielded according to the fluctuations of local conflicts, inter-Nationalist strife, and the North and South war.

The Nationalist Government at Nanking is a Committee Government, composed of Tan Yin-Kai (Chairman), Wang Ching-wei, Hu Han-min, Tsai Yuan-pei, and Li Lieh-chun. It was appointed on September 19, 1927, by the Central Executive Committee of the Kuomintang, the Nationalist party. Its programme is revolutionary, being based on its founder's, Dr. Sun Yat-Sen's Three Principles, Nationalism, Democracy, State Socialism. It demands revision of all treaties on a basis of international equality. It advocates the reconstruction of domestic administration on the basis of a centralised national government subject to a certain degree of delegated authority to the provinces. It lays down the principle that all government offices must be held by members of the Kuomintang. The controlling committee is helped in the executive work of government by seven ministers and two councils, education and military.

Several Foreign Advisers have been appointed to the Government. There are also several foreigners employed in the various Government Departments.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Under the 1923 constitution, commonly referred to as the Tsao K'un Constitution, local areas were divided into two grades, the Province (Sheng) and the District (Hsien). The provinces enact laws for provincial self-government, such as education, public works, provincial debts, police affairs, etc. Both the provinces and districts have local single-chamber assemblies elected directly by the citizens.

Area and Population.

The following table gives a statement of the area and population of the Chinese Republic according to figures published in the Government Gazette, February 27, 1911. In 1912, Mr. W. W. Rockhill, formerly American Minister at Peking—a recognised authority—after careful inquiry, came to the conclusion that 'this document, though showing complete ignorance of the methods now nearly universally followed in vital statistical reports, throws considerable light on the question of China's population, and seems entitled to more confidence than the enumerations which have heretofore appeared.' He believed that the population of China, Manchuria and Chinese Turkestan, i.e., the Chinese Republic exclusive of Tibet and Mongolia, appeared to be in round numbers 325,000,000, new information having confirmed the opinion reached by him in former studies of the same subject that the population of China 'is much smaller than we have been led to believe, and that in the last century it has been increasing very slowly if at all.' Wide disparity exists between the estimates of other independent investigators. These vary between 289,510,000 and 544,760,000.

The Island of Formosa was ceded to Japan in accordance with the terms of the Treaty of Shimonoseki ratified and exchanged at Chefoo on the 8th of May, 1895. The formal transfer of the Island was effected on the 2nd of June, 1895.

Tsingtao, in Kiaochow Bay in Shantung, first seized by Germany in 1898 and subsequently captured by the Japanese in 1914, was returned to China on November 1922, in accordance with the Washington Pact (for a history of the question, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1922, pp. 761-2).

By agreement with the Chinese Government, dated March 27, 1898, Russia took possession of Port Arthur and Talienwan (called Dalny by Russia and Dairen by Japan) and their adjacent territories and waters, on lease for the term of 25 years, with option of extension by mutual agreement. In 1900, in consequence of the 'Boxer' uprising, Russia occupied Manchuria. Japan, after long and unsuccessful efforts to induce Russia to withdraw, broke off diplomatic relations, and on February 8, 1904, commenced hostilities. The war, in the course of which Japan proved victorious both on land and at sea, was brought to an end by the Treaty of Portsmouth signed September 5, 1905. Under this Treaty Russia and Japan agreed to evacuate Manchuria, except the territory affected by the lease of Kwantung (or the Liao-tung Peninsula), where Japan succeeds to the leasehold and other rights of Russia. The exclusive administration of Manchuria (with the exception mentioned) was to be restored to China. By treaty of December 22, 1905, China agreed to the transfer to Japan from Russia of the lease of the Liao-tung Peninsula and the control of the railway from Port Arthur to Ch'ang-chun (Kwan-ch'engtzu), and conceded to Japan the right to construct a railway from Antung to Mukden, and agreed to open 16 Manchurian ports and cities to foreign commerce.

In July, 1910, a convention was signed between Russia and Japan agreeing to co-operate to maintain the 'status quo' in Manchuria in accordance with the treaties and conventions already made. For such period as Russia should hold Port Arthur, Great Britain was, by agreement with China, April 2, 1898, to hold Wei-Hai-Wei in the province of Shantung. For defensive purposes Great Britain on June 9, 1898, obtained a 99 years' lease of territory on the mainland opposite the island of Hong Kong.

The Chinese Government granted to the French in April, 1898, a 99 years' lease of the Bay of Kwang-Chou-Wan, on the coast of the peninsula, between Hong Kong and the Island of Hainan, and in November, 1899, the possession of the two islands commanding the entrance of the bay. This territory has been placed under the authority of the Governor-General of French Indo-China.

Peking, the capital of China, has a population of 811,138 according to the 1926 census of the Municipal Bureau. According to the Census of the Metropolitan Police Administration, taken in 1927, the population of Peking and its suburbs is close on 1,297,718. The population of the treaty ports is given as follows for 1926 by the Chinese Maritime Customs: Aigun, 41,100; Harbin, 164,900; Hunchun, 64,100; Lungchingsun, 3,000; Antung, 73,900; Dairen, 203,900; Newchwang, 65,600; Chinwangtao, 5,000; Tientsin, 800,000; Lungkow, 8,200; Chefoo, 94,700; Tsingtao, 269,900 (including neighbouring districts); Chungking, 622,000; Wanhhsien, 82,600; Changsha, 535,800; Yochow, 5,000; Ichang, 60,000; Shasi, 190,500; Hankow, 1,583,900 (including Wuchang and Hanyang); Kiukiang, 54,500; Wuhu, 117,100; Nanking, 395,900; Chinkiang, 141,700; Shanghai, 1,500,000; Soochow, 500,000; Hangchow, 1,000,000; Ningpo, 284,300; Wenchow, 202,500; Santuao, 9,000; Foochow, 314,900; Amoy, 300,000; Swatow, 93,000; Canton, 900,000; Kongmoon, 70,000; Samshui, 7,500; Kiungchow, 59,000; Pakhoi, 35,000; Wuchow, 80,000; Nanning, 65,800; Lungchow, 20,000; Mengtsz, 10,000; Szemao, 10,000; Tengyueh, 18,000. In addition, there are also a number of other places open to international trade; these are called commercial ports or marts, and were opened at the instance of the Chinese Government.

According to the estimate of the Customs authorities, in 1926 the total number of foreigners resident in China was 346,883, made up as follows:—

American . . . . .	9,401	Finnish . . . . .	44	Russian . . . . .	74,089
Austrian . . . . .	178	French . . . . .	2,370	Spanish . . . . .	712
Belgian . . . . .	689	German . . . . .	2,963	Swedish . . . . .	147
Brazilian . . . . .	6	Italian . . . . .	629	Swiss . . . . .	283
British . . . . .	14,670	Japanese . . . . .	235,339	Non-Treaty Powers . . . . .	48
Czecho-slovak . . . . .	658	Mexican . . . . .	5
Danish . . . . .	646	Norwegian . . . . .	404	Total . . . . .	346,883
Dutch . . . . .	407	Portuguese . . . . .	3,296

There are now 21 Treaty Powers in China, as follows: Russia (1689), Great Britain (1842), United States (1844), France (1844), Norway and Sweden (1847), Denmark (1863), Netherlands (1863), Spain (1864), Belgium (1865), Italy (1866), Peru (1874), Brazil (1881), Portugal (1887), Japan (1895), Mexico (1899), Chile (1915), Switzerland (1918), Bolivia (1919), Persia (1920), and Germany (1921). Of these powers, Germany, Bolivia, Persia and Chile have renounced the privilege of consular jurisdiction. Normal relations were re-established with the Russian Soviet Government by an Agreement dated May 31, 1924, in which Russia also agreed to relinquish consular jurisdiction, and Mexico, in an Exchange of Notes dated September 26, 1921, expressed her intention of renouncing the same privileges in the expected definitive and formal amendment to the Treaty of 1899. The Sino-Russian Conference to give effect to the 1924 Agreement was inaugurated on August 27, 1925, but is now in suspense. The Peking Government, spurred by the revolutionary programme of the Nationalists, in February, 1926, laid down a policy of denouncing all treaties conferring such unilateral rights as consular jurisdiction when extension dates permitted. On April 16, 1926, Belgium was asked to negotiate a new treaty to replace the 1865 treaty.

At the Washington Conference the nine participating powers (the United States of America, Belgium, the British Empire, China, France, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands and Portugal) adopted 'a policy designed to stabilise conditions in the Far East, to safeguard the rights and interests of China, and to promote intercourse between China and the other powers upon the basis of equality of opportunity.' The so-called nine-power treaty was signed to give effect to the above principles.

Religion.

Three religions are acknowledged by the Chinese as indigenous and adopted, viz. Confucianism, Buddhism, and Taoism.

With the exception of the practice of ancestral worship, which is everywhere observed throughout the Republic, and was fully commended by Confucius, Confucianism has little outward ceremonial.

Buddhism and Taoism present a very gorgeous and elaborate ritual in China, Taoism — originally a pure philosophy—having abjectly copied Buddhist ceremonial on the arrival of Buddhism 1,800 years ago. Most Chinese (not Mohammedans or Christians) profess and practise all three religions. The bulk of the people, however, are Buddhist.

Mohammedans are found in every province of China, being most numerous in Kansu, Sinkiang, Shansi, Shensi, Chihli, and Yunnan. There are 30,000 in Peking, with 30 mosques. Estimates for all China vary widely, from 3,000,000 to 80,000,000; 20,000,000, however, is generally favoured.

Roman Catholicism has had a footing in China for more than three centuries. In 1923 it counted 2,208,800 native Christians. Protestant Missions date from 1807. In 1920, native Christians numbered 618,601 (345,854 communicants). Attached to Protestant Missions in 1920 were 27 colleges of university standing, 256 middle schools, and 581 higher elementary schools. Under Christian instruction were 189,794 pupils. The Russian Orthodox Mission dates from 1685. In 1923, the Church counted 5,000 baptised Chinese adherents.

Most of the aboriginal hill-tribes are still nature-worshippers, and ethnically are distinct from the prevailing Mongoloid population. There is also a colony of Chinese Jews in K'ai-fêng, capital of Honan.

Instruction.

Since September 3, 1905, an enormous impetus has been given to the new educational movement, schools for the teaching of 'western learning' springing up in every town throughout large portions of the Republic. Provision is made for normal schools for the training of teachers, middle schools, primary schools, and industrial schools; universities, technical schools, and the enrolment of students to study in foreign countries; and public libraries, museums and popular lecture halls, for the special benefit of those who are either illiterate or unable to attend ordinary schools.

There are two kinds of primary schools: the higher and the lower. The former are established by district governments, and are intended as intermediaries between the lower primary schools and the middle schools. The total for the whole country in 1923 was 10,236, with 582,579 pupils. The latter—also called Citizen Schools—are established by local government boards, although in recent years a good number have been founded with private funds. The total number was 167,076, with 5,814,375 pupils in 1923.

The Government Universities are the National University at Peking; Wuchang Normal University; Chung Chow University, Kai-feng; National South-Eastern University at Nanking; North-Western University at Sianfu, in Shensi Province; North-Eastern University at Mukden; Tung Luh University in Yunnan Province; Peking Normal University; and Hangchow University. In addition to the above there are several Universities supported by private funds. The Chiaotung (Communications) University, under the aegis of the Ministry of Communications, was opened on July 21, 1921. It is now divided into three Colleges, each with a university status; Nanyang, Shanghai; Tangshan, Chihli Province; Communications, Peking. The National University of Peking was established in 1898, and completely reorganised in 1917. In February, 1920, five women students were admitted for the first time.

The Peking Union Medical College was founded early in 1906 for the training of Chinese medical students. On July 1, 1915, the China Medical Board of the Rockefeller Foundation assumed the full support of the Union Medical College.

There are numerous Protestant and Catholic mission schools, colleges and universities at Shanghai and other ports, where the English and French languages and lower branches of Western science are taught. These institutions have an enrolment of about half a million students.

The engagement of America to return to China the surplus of her indemnity of 1900, amounting to 1,756,900 $\frac{1}{2}$ %, produced an undertaking from China to spend this amount in preparing and sending students to the United States to receive their education. A special institution, Tsing Hua College, has been established near Peking to train students for this purpose. The United States Congress remitted the balance of the American Indemnity, amounting to 13,655,473 gold dollars in May, 1924. A Board of Trustees, composed of Chinese and Americans, was appointed on September 18, 1924. Other powers have agreed to like steps, but the details have still to be worked out.

A modern university for Chinese with British professors has been successfully established in Hongkong, and attracts students from many parts of China.

Wherever possible, the Nanking Government is reorganising the educational system on the French model. According to their plans, all academic and administrative work is to be centralised direct in national and local educational institutions. The country is divided into university districts, with one or two provinces constituting a district. In each university district there is to be one government university, which, being the highest educational unit of the district, will take over administration. Above these district universities there will be a national university, the highest educational organisation for the whole country. The functions of a Ministry of Education will be vested in the National University.

Justice.

A provisional Criminal Code was drawn up in the closing year of the Tsing dynasty, and proclaimed on March 10, 1912, the first year of the Republic. The code was framed after the Continental system, and adopts the most modern legislation in regard to conditional release and postponement of punishments. There are special provisions for the treatment of youthful offenders and insane persons. As regards the power of inflicting penalties, the arbitrary use of power by the court is guarded against by fixing a maximum and minimum sentence for each case. A second draft of this code, which awaits the formal sanction of Parliament, was completed in 1919. Texts in both English and French have also been published. Altogether, three codes have been drawn up and revised—the Code of Civil Procedure, the Commercial Code, and the Code of Criminal Procedure. The Civil Code, the Commercial Code, and the Bills and Notes Law are in process of revision, and therefore in these respects the decisions of the Courts derive their sources from the Unwritten Law (custom and precedents), the Written Law (the rudimentary and fragmentary Civil law in the old Manchu code) and special laws enforced since the establishment of the Republic, such as the Mining Ordinance, the Copyright Ordinance, the Commercial Association Ordinance, the Traders' Ordinance, the Trade Mark Law, the Stock Exchange Law, the Law Relating to Commodity Exchanges, the Law of Nationality, the Afforestation Law, and various laws relating to properties), and the legal principles of other countries. The work of drawing up and revising the new Codes is undertaken by the Law Codification and Compilation Commission, which is also engaged in the drafting of commercial laws. The Nanking Government has allowed it to be understood that they will uphold at least one of these laws, the Trade Mark Law.

There are at present 276 courts and procuratorates, with the Supreme Court and the Procuratorate-General at the head of all. The Supreme Court of China may be likened to the House of Lords or the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council of Great Britain. As its name implies, it is the highest tribunal in the land. It was reorganised in 1912 into two divisions—Criminal and Civil—since increased to seven, five Civil divisions and two Criminal divisions. In each division there is a presiding Judge with four other judges. The cases handled by the Supreme Court in 1926 were: Civil, 5,430; Criminal, 1,953.

Great Britain and the United States have special courts in China, the one, His Majesty's Supreme Court for China at Shanghai (established 1865), and the other, the United States Court for China (established 1906).

The collection of the revenue on the Chinese foreign trade and the administration of the lights on the coast of China are under the management of the Chinese Maritime Customs, an institution, founded by Sir Robert Hart, which has a large staff of Foreign and Chinese subordinates. By agreement, dated February 13, 1898, China undertook that the post of Inspector-General must be held by a British subject so long as British Foreign Trade predominates. By Decree of May 9, 1906, the customs service, hitherto supervised by the Board of Foreign Affairs, was placed under the control of two Chinese high officials, forming a new department known as the Shui Wu Ch'u, or Revenue Council. Since November, 1901, the Native Customs at the Treaty Ports, hypothecated for the service of the Boxer indemnity, have been under the Maritime Customs.

All Customs Revenue is paid into Foreign Banks designated for the purpose by the Bankers' Commission, who allot therefrom the payments for the service of Foreign loans secured on the Customs Revenue and the Boxer Indemnity, which is also secured on the Customs.

On November 22 1912, an Audit Bureau was established, charged with auditing the expenditures and revenues of the Central and Provincial Governments. The Maritime Customs and the Salt Gabelle are the only two sources of revenue for which exact figures are so far available. By the terms of the Re-organisation Loan Agreement of 1913, the Chinese Government agreed to take immediate steps for the re-organisation, with the assistance of foreigners, of the system of collection of the salt revenues. A Central Salt Administration was established in Peking under the control of the Minister of Finance, with a Chief Inspectorate under a Chinese Chief Inspector and a foreign Associate Chief Inspector, who exercise the chief authority for the superintendence of the issue of licence and the compilation of reports and returns of revenue.

The Salt Revenue for three years was:—1925, 73,634,425 dollars; 1926, 64,287,617 dollars; 1927, 57,907,000 dollars. Most of the revenue is now retained by the provinces.

The customs receipts for 4 years were (in Haikwan taels):—

Defence.

ARMY.

The task of creating an army on modern lines was undertaken during the Sino-Japanese War in 1894, when Judge Hu Yün-mei, a provincial treasurer, was instructed to raise a combatant force. This force was taken over and renamed the New Imperial Army in 1895 by Yuan Shih-kai, who came from Korea, where he was Chinese Resident, to act as Director-General of the force. There were 8,000 men—infantry, cavalry, artillery, and pioneers—in this army in the early days of its existence, and they were trained under German instructors at Hsiaochan, which lies between Tientsin and Taku, and which was the old camping-place of the troops that Li Hung-chang brought up in the '60's after fighting the Taiping rebels. The new army was concentrated at Hsiaochan till 1899, when Yuan Shih-kai was made Governor of Shantung. He took the troops with him to his new province and they remained there till their Director-General was made Viceroy of Chihli in 1902. By 1904, the force had grown to 6 divisions of 12,000 men each, with headquarters at Paotingfu.

Added to the regular divisions of the army list are numerous bodies of irregulars, and these are directly controlled by independent Tupans and commanders, who, however, look to the Government for the payment of their forces.

According to the 1923 Constitution, the organisation of the national army was based on a system of compulsory citizen service. Service is normally voluntary for three years with the active army and three years in the reserve. Recruits must be between the ages of 20 and 25. The army is at present composed of approximately 1,300,000 men, but the vast majority owe allegiance only to independent and semi-independent commanders.

Civil war in China has caused the disruption of the national army. Authorities estimate that there are between 5,000,000 and 10,000,000 men under arms in China at present (1928).

NAVY.

The weakening of the central power has almost destroyed the Navy. In the incessant civil warfare which has troubled the country for some years past, warships and their complements have changed their allegiance frequently from one leader to another as their fortunes have fluctuated.

The largest vessel is the cruiser Hai Chi, of 4,300 tons displacement and 24 knots, carrying a main armament of 2 8-in. guns, 10 4·7-in. guns and 5 above-water torpedo tubes. The Ying Swei and the Chao Ho were built in England (1911), mainly for training purposes, each having a displacement of about 2,600 tons and a contract speed of 20 knots. The main armaments consist of 2 6-in. and 4 4-in. guns. There are also three 3,000-ton cruisers, Hai Yung, Hai Shew, and Hai Chen, each of 19·5 knots speed, carrying armaments of 3 6-in. and 8 4·1-in. guns, together with 3 torpedo tubes. All these 3 vessels were acquired during the years 1897 and 1898. In addition were 17 steel gunboats of over 500 tons, 20 smaller river and other gunboats, 3 destroyers, 8 torpedo-boats, and various other vessels, many of which, as the result of neglect, are believed to be without fighting value.

There are no naval bases of any importance. Existing dockyards are Foochow, Taku, Kiangnan (Shanghai), and Whampoa (Canton).

Production and Industry.

Agriculture.—China is essentially an agricultural country, and the land is all freehold held by families on the payment of an annual tax. Total arable land in China is estimated at about 192,060 square miles. The holdings are in general small; the implements used are primitive; irrigation is common. Chinese agriculture is intensive rather than extensive. Rotation of crops is practised. Horticulture is a favourite pursuit, and fruit trees are grown in great variety. Indeed the Chinese are gardeners rather than farmers. Vegetable culture has reached a high state of perfection. Wheat, barley, maize, and millet and other cereals, with peas and beans, are chiefly cultivated in the north, rice, sugar, and indigo in the south.

Treaties forbid the export of grain with the exception of wheat, soya beans, kaoliang, indian corn, buckwheat, and barley from Manchuria. An embargo may be applied in case of a famine in China. China's fibre crops are also important: chief are abutilon, hemp, jute and ramie.

Cotton is grown widely even as far north as the northern part of Chihli, the chief area of production being the Yangtse valley. In 1926, the estimated yield throughout China was 5,680,000 piculs. Tea is cultivated exclusively in the west and south; silk culture is one of the most successful industries of China; about 25 per cent. of the world's supply of raw silk is from China.

Pigs are raised everywhere in China, and pig's bristles have become an important article of export. China abounds in wild game.

Manufacture.—An important feature in the development of the Chinese industries is the erection of cotton and wool mills, and of silk filatures in Shanghai, Canton and elsewhere, while native looms are found in most dwellings. The estimated production of cotton yarn in China during the year ended June 1, 1927, totalled 1,954,000 piculs, of which 676,000 piculs were produced in Japanese, 1,116,000 in Chinese, and 162,000 in British-owned mills. The estimated production of cotton piece goods for the year amounted to 11,165,000 pieces, of which 5,658,000 pieces were manufactured in Japanese, 4,409,000 in Chinese, and 1,098,000 in British mills. In December, 1927, 118 cotton mills in China had 3,726,584 spindles and 24,382 looms distributed as follows: 42 Japanese-owned mills, 1,302,676 spindles and 9,625 looms; 72 Chinese-owned, 2,218,588 spindles and 12,409 looms; 4 British-owned, 205,320 spindles and 2,348 looms. At the large centres flour and rice mills are beginning to supersede native methods of treating wheat and rice. Flour milling is making rapid strides in China. In 1925 there were about 150 modern mills. Manchuria possesses about 50 flour mills. At Hanyang, near Hankow, are large Chinese iron-works, supplied with ore from mines at Tayeh, about 60 miles distant. There are also 400 glass factories.

Mining.—Most of the 18 provinces and the 3 provinces of Manchuria contain coal, and China may be regarded as one of the first coal countries of the world. The coal-fields cover an area of 133,513 acres and the average annual coal output is estimated at 16,000,000 tons, nearly 8,000,000 of which are from modern mines. Iron ores are abundant in the anthracite field of Shansi, where the iron industry is the oldest in the world, in Chihli, in Shantung and other provinces, and iron (found in conjunction with coal) is worked in Manchuria. Three hundred million tons of ore are estimated to be in Shansi; the reserve of other deposits amounts to about 300 million tons. The annual production of iron ore is about 1,500,000 tons. The Tayeh iron deposits, near Hankow, are among the richest in the world. They have an ore reserve of 35,000,000 tons. On the Upper Yangtse and in Shensi province petroleum is being worked; there are 91 wells in the country. Oil is also being extracted from shale beds in South Manchuria and Shansi Province. Copper ore is plentiful in Yunnan where the copper-mining industry has long existed. Tin is the most important mineral export; about 10,000 tons are produced annually. It is mined extensively in Yunnan, and through Mengtze it reaches Hong Kong, whence it is shipped to foreign countries. In antimony China occupies a unique position; since 1908 the country has produced more than 60 per cent. of the world's total production. More than 90 per cent. comes from Hunan; the annual output is about 25,000 tons. The last-recorded annual output of gold was 71,582 ounces; of silver, 107,155 ounces; of lead, 13,527 tons; of copper, 1,342 tons. Mining for wolfram is being carried on at Swatow, and in the north-western part of Chihli Province; molybdenum ore has been found at Yungtai-hsien, in Fukien; bismuth has also been worked.

In addition to her overseas trade China has an extensive coast and river trade, in which under 'Inland Waters Steam Navigation Regulations,' steamers under foreign flag are allowed to participate. In 1926, 2,754 vessels were on the register, of which 784 were foreign, and 1,970 Chinese; in 1925, 2,554 vessels, of which 839 were foreign, and 1,715 Chinese.

In recent years the quantities and value of the imports of tea into the United Kingdom from China, including Hong Kong and Macao, were (according to the Board of Trade returns):—

Year	Quantities	Value	Year	Quantities	Value
	lbs.	£		lbs.	£
1921	4,646,074	246,570	1924	24,251,784	1,535,918

Shipping and Navigation.

During 1926, 158,996 vessels of 134,659,606 tons entered and cleared Chinese ports. Of these 5,338 of 6,496,351 tons, were American; 36,474 of 47,645,090 tons, British; 2,262 of 2,321,632 tons, French; 813 of 2,995,127 tons, German; 1,045 of 731,499 tons, Italian; 29,654 of 38,948,844 tons, Japanese; 2,407 of 3,301,874 tons, Norwegian; 1,444 of 447,094 tons, Portuguese. Of the total tonnage, 117,319 were steamers with a tonnage of 132.2 million tons, and 41,677 were sailing vessels (all Chinese junks), with a tonnage of 2.41 million tons.

The nationality of the vessels (direct foreign trade) was mainly as follows:—

Internal Communications.

China is traversed in all directions by numerous roads, and, though few are paved or metalled, and most are badly kept, a vast internal trade is carried on partly over them, but chiefly by means of numerous canals and navigable rivers.

Chinese railway history began in 1876 when the Woosung line, built by foreign enterprise, was opened. At the end of 1923, there were over 7,513 miles of railway in China (excluding 1,857 miles in Manchuria), of which about 1,300 miles have been constructed by British enterprise and British capital. Practically all construction work has been suspended owing to lack of funds. The total revenue of the Chinese Government railways for the year 1923 was 119,405,638 dollars; net commercial revenue, 109,928,669 dollars.

The principal railways in China are:—(1) South Manchuria Railway, from Changchun to Dairen, 693 miles [see also under Manchuria]; (2) Peking-Mukden line, from Mukden to Peking, 837 miles; (3) Peking-Suiyuan Railway, from Peking to Kalgan, Tatung Fu, Fengchen, Suiyuan, and Paotowchen, 597 miles; (4) Peking-Hankow Railway, Peking to Hankow, 1,069 miles; (5) Lung Hai Railway, from Haichou to Shenchow in Honan province, 441 miles; (6) Shanghai-Nanking Railway, from Shanghai to Nanking, 253 miles; (7) Tientsin-Pukow Railway, from Tientsin to Pukow, on the Yangtze river, opposite Nanking, 899 miles; (8) Shanghai-Hangchow-Ningpo Railway, from Shanghai to Hangchow, 219 miles; (9) Hupeh-Hunan Railway, from Wuchang to Yochow, 288 miles; (10) Kiaochou-Tsinan Railway, from Tsingtao to Tsinan, both in Shantung province, 373 miles; (11) Yunnan Railway, from the Tonkin border to Yunnanfu, 290 miles; and (12) the Chinese Eastern Railway running eastward from Manchuli through Northern Manchuria to Suifeñho (Russian name, Pogranichnaya), the last station in Chinese territory, where it joins the Ussuri Railway, and then runs due east to Vladivostok, and southerly from Harbin to Changchun, joining the South Manchuria Railway. This line was built by the Russians, and under agreements dated October 2, 1920, and May 31, 1924, is operated by Russians and Chinese. It runs for 1,100 miles in Chinese territory. The gauge is the Russian standard of 5 feet, whilst that of all the other railways is 4 feet 8½ inches, with the exception of the Yunnan Railway, which has a gauge of 1 metre.

The 1923 Report of the Government railways showed that 7,426 kilometres of line were operated by the Government, also that the provincial and private railways were 1,229 kilometres in length, giving the total length subject to the control of the Ministry of Communications at 8,655 kilometres. There are 3,355 kilometres of concessioned railways, making a grand total of 12,020 kilometres. To this total may be added Government railway under construction, amounting to 387 kilometres, and making a grand total of 12,408 kilometres, or 7,755 miles.

China has a fairly well developed telegraph service. Telegraphs connect all the principal cities in the country, and there are lines to all the neighbouring countries. The telegraph lines have a length of 52,050 miles. Number of telegrams transmitted by the Post-office in 1925, 30,251. The administration is now completely under Government control. Wireless Telegraph Stations have been installed at many centres.

Telephones are in use in the main cities of China, and long distance telephone communication has been introduced along the railways and in the trade areas. Wireless telephone services have also been established.

The postal work of China, formerly carried on by the Government Courier service and the native posting agencies, was gradually taken in hand by the Chinese Imperial Post Office, begun in 1897 under the management of the Maritime Customs. By Edict of November 6, 1906, the control of the Postal Service was transferred to the Ministry of Communications, and the transfer was actually effected in July, 1911. The work of the Post Office extends over the 18 Provinces of China proper, the New Dominion and Manchuria, which have been divided into postal districts, or sub-districts (42,518 at the end of 1924). The Postal Service with Tibet has been suspended. In 1925, there were 12,007 post offices open, and the number of letters posted was 364,811,817; of postcards 40,891,072; of newspapers, 47,633,719; of printed matter, 44,802,948; of commercial papers, 2,314,387; of samples of merchandise, 863,402; of trade circulars, 3,658,414; grand total of 565,007,763. The number of parcels posted in 1925 was 6,540,968. The revenue of the post office in 1925 was 25,304,671 dollars, and the expenditure 24,551,737 dollars. On December 31, 1925, the postal staff numbered 122 foreigners and 36,756 Chinese. China in 1914 joined the postal union.

Banking and Credit.

Banking on modern lines dates from the close of the Tai-ping rebellion in the 'sixties, when the rapid expansion of trade in Shanghai created a demand for credit facilities. In 1902, the Board of Finance established the Ta Ching Bank, with a capital of 4,000,000 Kuping Taels, which was soon raised to 10,000,000 Kuping Taels. Prompted by the success of the Ta Ching Bank, the Board of Posts, Railways, and Telegraphs launched in 1905 a scheme to organise a bank for the control of the finances of the Railways, Telegraphs, Posts and Navigations, and the management of an issue of national loan bonds for the redemption of the Peking-Hankow Railways, and this scheme finally culminated in the establishment of the Bank of Communications in 1906. The year 1905 marked also the beginning of commercial banks in China. The Chekiang Railway Company, which was then a private company, founded the National Commercial Bank in Hangchow, with a capital of 1,000,000 dollars, half of which was subscribed by the Railway itself, and the other half by its stockholders. In the same year was formed the Commercial Bank of China, in the following year, the Ningpo Commercial Bank, and in 1910, the Commercial Guarantee Bank of Chihli. In 1911, the Manchu régime collapsed, and with it the Ta Ching Bank. However, it was speedily reorganised as the Bank of China. From 1914 onwards the establishment of new banks proceeded at a rapid pace, and there are now about 150 banks with over 400 branch offices. The total capitalisation of Chinese banks approximates 400,000,000 dollars, but not more than 150,000,000 dollars have been paid up. Total reserve funds amount to about 20,000,000 dollars.

Of these banks, the Bank of China is the largest, having about 100 branches and sub-branches, and an authorised capital of 60,000,000 dollars, and a paid-up capital of 19,760,200 dollars. Next in order comes the Bank of Communications, whose capital has reached 20,000,000 dollars, 7,713,500 dollars of which are paid-up. It has about 40 branches. The Chinese Government's share in the Bank of China and the Bank of Communications has been wiped out. The Bank of China declared a net profit in 1925 of 1,347,076 dollars; the Bank of Communications, 597,548 dollars.

Other prominent banks are: National Industrial Bank of China, capital 20,000,000 dollars (1919); the Frontier Bank, capital 20,000,000 dollars (1920); China and South Sea Bank, capital 20,000,000 dollars (1924); Yieh Yih Commercial Bank, capital 10,000,000 dollars (1915); Bank of East Asia, capital 10,000,000 dollars (1919); Bank of Agriculture and Commerce, capital 10,000,000 dollars (1920); Commercial Guarantee Bank of Chihli, capital 6,000,000 dollars (1910); Commercial Bank of China, capital 7,500,000 dollars (1896); Kincheng Commercial Bank, capital 10,000,000 dollars (1917); Bank of Canton, capital 1,200,000. (1912).

Siño-foreign banking institutions are numerous, having grown rapidly during 1921. In 1918, the Exchange Bank of China was established with Siño-Japanese capital. It has a subscribed capital of 10,000,000 yen. The Italian Bank of China, the Siño-French Bank, the Siño-Scandinavian Bank, and numerous Siño-Japanese institutions were inaugurated in 1921. The Chinese American Bank of Commerce was established by American and Chinese capitalists, with equal interests, under a special charter issued on April 12, 1920, by the Chinese Government. This bank has an authorised capital of 10,000,000 dollars, of which 7,500,000 dollars are paid-up. It obtained a note-issuing power on August 1, 1921.

On July 1, 1924, the Manchurian Official Bank, Fengtien Industrial Bank, and the Bank of the Three Eastern Provinces were amalgamated under the name of the Government Bank of the Three Eastern Provinces, with a capital of 20,000,000 dollars.

Government ordinances governing savings banks in China were first promulgated in 1908. About May in that year a savings department was organised by the Ta Ching Bank, now Bank of China. This was followed later by the establishment of special savings banks in various provinces and other savings departments attached to commercial banks in recent years. In 1925, there were 20 such institutions with total savings deposits amounting to 33,017,942 dollars.

Post Office savings banks at 11 district head offices were opened on July 1, 1919. By the end of 1925, there were 340 savings banks, with 42,222 depositors, and total deposits amounting to 6,465,148 dollars in big dollar account, and 9,343 depositors with 1,602,472 dollars in small coin currency.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

MONEY.

The currency of China is on a silver basis, and consists of taels, dollars, copper cash, and bank notes. The tael is really a weight of silver (about an ounce) of a certain degree of fineness. Theoretically it is divided into 10 mace; 1 mace = 10 candareens. The denominations of the dollar are: 1 dollar = 100 coppers; 1 copper = 10 cash. The tael varies in different parts of the country, the principal taels being (1) the haikwan or customs tael, weighing 583.3 grains (in 1926 it was equal in value to 3s. 1½d.), (2) the K'up'ing tael, weighing 575.8 grains, (3) the Tsaoping tael, weighing 565.65 grains.

These are all called treasury taels. The principal local taels are: (1) Peking or Kungfah tael; (2) Tientsin or Hang Ping Hua Pao tael; (3) Canton tael; (4) Newchwang tael (nominal); (5) Shanghai tael. Different taels, about 170 altogether, are in use in every province in the country.

There is unparalleled currency confusion. Although a dollar should be equal to 100 coppers, in fact it is worth almost 350 coppers in some parts of the country, varying from day to day. In the treaty of September 5, 1902, China agreed with Great Britain to take the necessary steps to provide a uniform national coinage which should be legal tender for all purposes throughout the Empire, and an Imperial Decree was issued in October, 1908, commanding the introduction of a uniform tael currency, of which the unit must be a silver tael coin of .98 touch weighing 1 K'up'ing or Treasury-scale tael or ounce. This decree was cancelled by a further decree of May 25, 1910, establishing the silver dollar (yuan) of .90 touch and weighing .72 Treasury-weight tael as the unit of currency. The touch and weight of the silver subsidiary coins (50c., 25c., 20c., and 10c.) were also definitely specified, while provision was made for further subsidiary coins (5c. nickel, 2c., 1c.,  $\frac{1}{2}$ c., and  $\frac{1}{10}$ c. copper) of touch and weight to be laid down later. The minting of these silver coins has begun, but as they are at a discount in every province other than the one in which they are minted, confusion has been rendered more confounded. There are ten different varieties of dollars in circulation. Although the law of May, 1910, was intended to bring the provincial mints under the control of the Central Government, the Governors have effected a serious depreciation of silver and copper money by their indiscriminate minting of subsidiary coins.

The K'up'ing tael weighs 575.8 grains, somewhat less than the Haikwan tael, which weighs 583.3 grains. The Tsaoping tael weighs 565.65 grains. The Shanghai (local) tael is a money of account, 100 of which were formerly equivalent to 98 taels of the actual sycee representing the old Tsaoping tael. Its weight in grains is 565.65.

Several efforts have been made to standardise the dollar. The Peking Bankers' Association, which might be regarded as the unofficial fiduciary adviser to the Government, loaned the Government 2,500,000 dollars on March 3, 1921, with the object of erecting and equipping an independent mint to coin a standard dollar. The establishment of the mint is in the hands of the Chinese bankers until such time as the Government redeems the notes it issued as security for the loan. The Shanghai mint was intended to foreshadow the entire abolition of the tael as a unit of currency and the substitution of a uniform Chinese silver dollar which will be currency throughout China. It was also designed to force the provincial mints to raise the standard of coinage. At the annual conference of the National Bankers' Association, held in Peking on April 15, 1924, the member banks offered to underwrite a further loan of 3,000,000 dollars for the purpose of completing the Mint, on condition that they be given full powers of management. This the Ministry of Finance promised to do, but owing to political conditions, an attempt to raise the second loan failed, and, the available funds having been exhausted in preliminary work, the Government declared a suspension of the scheme on August 18, 1924.

Standardised banking terms were adopted for the first time throughout the country on July 1, 1924.

5 Tou . . .	= 1 Hu .
2 Hu . . .	= 1 Tan . Commodities, even liquids, such as oil, spirits, &c., are commonly bought and sold by weight.

LENGTH.

10 Fen . . .	= 1 Ts'un (inch).
10 Ts'un . . .	= 1 Ch'ih (foot) = .32 metres.
10 Ch'ih . . .	= 1 Chang = 3.2 metres.
180 Chang . . .	= 1 Li = 576 metres.

By treaty between Great Britain and China, the Ch'ih of 14 $\frac{1}{16}$  English inches has been adopted as the standard. The standards of weight and length vary all over the Republic, the Ch'ih, for example, ranging from 9 to 16 English inches, and the Chang (= 10 Ch'ih) in proportion; according to treaty, also, the Tael, Catty, and Picul have been fixed at 1 $\frac{1}{2}$  oz., 1 $\frac{1}{2}$  lb., 133 $\frac{1}{2}$  lb. avoirdupois respectively. 1 Mow =  $\frac{1}{6}$  of an acre. Except for customs purposes, however, there is just as much confusion in weights and measures throughout the country as there is in currency. For a long time the Government has been trying to induce the provinces to adopt standardised weights and measures, but only Shansi has so far adopted the system.

Chinese Outer Territories.

Manchuria.

Manchuria, lying between the province of Chihli and the Amur river, and extending from the Hingan mountains eastwards to Korea and the Ussuri river, has an area of about 363,610 square miles and a population, according to the latest investigation, of 24,520,661 at July 31, 1927. Immigration from the densely crowded parts of Central China is increasing the population by almost a million yearly. Manchuria consists of 3 provinces, Sheng-King or Feng-tien (area, 56,000 sq. miles; pop. 15,000,000), capital Mukden; Kirin (105,000 sq. miles; pop. 7,500,000), capital Kirin; and Heilung-chiang or the Amur province (203,000 sq. miles: pop. 2,500,000) with Tsitsihar (Heilung Hsien) (population 30,000) for its capital. The chief towns are Mukden, the capital, with about 250,000 inhabitants; Newchwang (65,600) standing about 30 miles up the Liao river, at the mouth of which is the port of Ying-k'ou, often called Newchwang. Besides Newchwang, Mukden, An-tung (72,500), Tatung-kou, Tiehling, Tung-chiangtzu, and Fakumen are open to commerce. Other important towns are Hsin-min-fu, Liao-yang, Feng-hwang-cheng, and Taonanfu, a town rapidly risen to importance, on the border of Eastern Mongolia. In Kirin province is the town of Chang-chun (Kwangchengtze), with 80,000 inhabitants.

There is no longer a Manchu population in Manchuria. A few scattered communities alone remain. Owing to the enormous development of the soya-bean industry and the improved railway facilities, Manchuria has grown more rapidly in wealth than any other part of China. Manchuria is primarily an agricultural country, its soil is one of the richest in the world. Beans, millet, wheat and rice are the principal crops. The area under cultivation in Manchuria totals 81,718,945 acres, of which beans occupy 19,193,756 acres, and wheat 7,241,087 acres. Formerly the whole of the wheat yield was exported, but of late years the flour industry has been growing with the increase in the wheat production. There are now some 40 mills in Manchuria, which turn out about 15,000,000 sacks annually. Tobacco production in 1926 totalled 53,126,000 catties. Extensive forests also abound; their estimated extent is 28,756,000 acres. The soil of certain districts—especially in the vicinity of Mukden and Harbin—is suitable for beet and flax growing, and the industry is slowly developing. The raw silk crop in Manchuria in 1925 amounted to 800,000 piculs, yielding 40,000 piculs tussah. Manchuria is rich in minerals, such as coal, iron, gold, silver, lead and asbestos.

The Russian lease of Port Arthur and Talien-wan (called Dalny by the Russians and Dairen by the Japanese), and the southern extremity of the Liao-tung peninsula and the South Manchuria Railway were transferred to Japan by the Portsmouth Peace Conference, September 5, 1905. On December 22, 1905, China gave official recognition to this transfer and granted Japan the right to extend the railway from Mukden to Antung at the mouth of the Yalu river, where it connects with the Korean railway. In 1912 a branch line (78 miles) from Changchun, the northern terminus of the Japanese South Manchuria Railway to Kirin, constructed by joint Japanese and Chinese enterprise, and operated under special convention by the South Manchuria Railway, was opened to traffic. The total length of the South Manchuria Railway is 693 miles (Dairen to Changchun, main line 438 miles; branch to Port Arthur, 29 miles; branch to Newchwang, 14 miles; Fushun coal mines, 31 miles; branch to Yentai, 10 miles; and Mukden to Antung, 171 miles). On August 1, 1917, the whole of the railway system of Korea (some 1000 miles in length) passed under the management of the South Manchuria Railway, giving the latter a through line under its own management from Fusan, the Korean port nearest Japan, to Changchun, where connection with the railway system to Harbin and thence to Leningrad is effected. The total capital of the company is 440,000,000 yen, and the operating revenue in 1926, 107,924,000 yen; net profit, 61,972,000 yen. Besides the South Manchuria Railway, Manchuria is traversed by the Chinese Eastern Railway and the Chinese Government Railways. The operating revenue of the Chinese Eastern Railway in 1927 was 63,000,000 gold roubles; net profit, 10,000,000 gold roubles. Railway construction had a fillip in 1924, and work is now in progress on lines from Mukden to Kirin, 270 miles; Taonanfu to Angkangki, near Tsitsihar, 144 miles; Kirin to Tunghua, 130 miles; Hulan (near Harbin) to Hailun, 110 miles; Tahushan to Payantala (Tungliao), 150 miles. There are 265 post offices and 550 postal agencies.

Tibet.

Tibet, extending from the Pamir region eastwards between the Himalaya and Kwen-lun mountains to the frontiers of China, has an area of 463,200 square miles with a population estimated at between 1,500,000 and 6,000,000. Probably 2,000,000 is near the mark. The only census ever taken was by the Chinese in 1737 and showed a population of 316,800 lamas (monks) and 635,950 laity. Lhasa, the capital, has from 15,000 to 20,000 inhabitants. The country being bleak and mountainous and strangers having been jealously excluded, wide regions are still unexplored.

Chinese authority was in the past represented by two Ambans who had charge, respectively, of foreign and military affairs. There were three Chinese commandants of troops at Lhasa, Shigatse, and Dingri where the permanent military force of about 4,600, provided by China, were mostly quartered. There were a few other Chinese officials, but the civil and religious administration of the country was left almost entirely to Tibetans. The head of the government is the Dalai Lama, who resides at the Po-ta-la (or palace) near Lhasa. He acts through a minister or regent appointed from among the chief Tibetan Lamas and assisted by five ministers. Early in 1908 the territory of Western Szechuen and the adjoining territory of Eastern Tibet were united into a new 'special administrative area,' Sikañg, or Szechwan Marches, with Batang, re-named Baanfu, as capital.

The prevailing religion is Lamaism, a corrupt form of Buddhism, but along with it there exists the Bon, or Shamanistic, faith. In some places agriculture is carried on, barley and other cereals as well as pulse and vegetables being grown. In some favoured regions fruits, including peaches and even grapes, are produced. In other places the pursuits are pastoral, the domestic animals being sheep and yak (often crossed with Indian cattle), while in some regions there are buffaloes, pigs, and camels. Wool-spinning, weaving, and knitting are common, and there are many hands skilful in making images and other decorations for religious edifices. The chief minerals worked are gold, borax, and salt. There is a large trade with China and considerable traffic across the Indian frontier. A telegraph line, 144 miles long, connects Lhasa with Gyantse.

The trade between India and Tibet has to be carried through lofty passes between 14,000 and 18,000 feet high, most of which are practically impassable during seasons of heavy rain and snow. Sheep and also crosses between yaks and ordinary cattle are used as beasts of burden. The most important route into Tibet from India is from Siliguri, near Darjeeling in northern Bengal, and across the small Frontier State of Sikkim to Gyantse and Yatung in Tibet, the two leading trade marts authorised by the existing Convention. The other chief means of access to Tibet are from Almora in the northern part of the United Provinces, and from Simla over the Simla-Tibet road to Gartok in western Tibet, which is at about 14,200 feet elevation above the sea. From Almora to Gartok the direction is almost due north, and from Simla to Gartok is almost due east.

For the removal of hindrances to the Indian trade a treaty was made with China in 1890, supplemented by a second treaty in 1893, but the hindrances still remained. Consequently, in 1904, the Indian Government sent a mission with an escort to arrange matters directly with the Tibetan Government. The mission met with a good deal of armed opposition, but at length, on September 7, a convention was executed at Lhasa. The convention provides for the re-erection of boundary stones (alluding to former pastoral disputes) on the Sikkim frontier; for marts at Yatung, Gyantze, and Gartok for Tibetan and British merchants; for the demolition of forts on the trade routes; for a Tibetan commissioner to confer with British officials for the alteration of the objectionable features of the treaty of 1893; for the settlement of an equitable customs tariff; for the repair of the passes and the appointment of Tibetan and British officials at the trade marts. China paid an indemnity of 2,500,000 rupees (166,666*l.*), and the evacuation of the Chumbi valley by the British began in February, 1908. Further, no Tibetan territory may be sold, leased or mortgaged to any foreign Power, nor may Tibetan affairs, or Tibetan public works, be subject to foreign management or interference without the consent of the British. The adhesion of China to this convention was secured by an agreement signed at Peking on April 27, 1906. Under the Convention of August 31, 1907, Great Britain and Russia agree not to enter into negotiation with Tibet except through the Chinese Government, nor to send representatives to Lhasa. But this engagement does not affect the provisions of the British-Tibetan convention of September 7, 1904, ratified by China in 1906. Negotiations were begun at Simla in Sept. 1907, for the conclusion of Trade Regulations between India and Tibet, and were brought to a satisfactory conclusion in April, 1908.

Sin-Kiang, or the New Dominion, consists of Chinese Turkestan, Kulja, and Kashgaria, and comprises all Chinese dependencies lying between Mongolia on the north and Tibet on the south. It is now regarded as a separate province, its Governor residing at Urumchi, or Tihwafu, the capital. Its area is estimated at about 550,840 square miles and population at about 1,200,000. The inhabitants are of various races, known as Turki (Kashgari, Kalnuk, Khirghiz, Taranchi, etc.), mostly Mohammedan and Chinese, who have of recent years greatly increased in numbers. The chief towns are Ili, Kashgar, Yarkand, Khotan, and Aksu. The country is administered under Chinese officials, residing at Urumchi, the sub-ordinates being usually natives of the country. In regions about the Kashgar and Yarkand rivers the soil is fertile, irrigation is practised, and cereals, fruits and vegetables are grown. Other productions of the country are wool, cotton, and silk. Jade is worked, and in some districts gold is found. The whole territory is yearly increasing in population and prosperity. A trade agreement with Soviet Russia was signed in 1924.

Mongolia.

The vast and indefinite tract of country called Mongolia stretches from the Khinghan mountains on the east to the Tarbagatai mountains on the west, being intersected towards its western end by the Altai mountains and the Irtysh river. On the north it is bounded by Siberia and on the south by the outer Kan-su and other regions which are united into Sin-Kiang. The area of Mongolia is about 1,875,000 square miles, and its population about 750,000. A wide tract in the heart of this region is occupied by the Desert of Gobi which extends south-westwards into Chinese Turkestan. The inhabitants are nomadic Mongols and Kalmucks who range the desert with camels, horses, and sheep. Even in fertile districts they are little given to agriculture. But of recent years there has been a great extension of Chinese immigration, and a large area of what was known as Mongolia, extending from China proper and Manchuria to the Gobi Desert, is now indistinguishable from Chinese territory, and has in fact been absorbed within Chinese administration in Manchuria. Chinese settlers are gradually invading the Gobi Desert. Irrigation alone is needed. Inner Mongolia and portions of the adjacent provinces in China proper have been divided into three special districts or administrative areas, Jehol, Chahar, and Suiyuan, each of which is governed by a Tartar-General (Tu'tun) appointed by the Chinese Government. The chief town or centre of population is Urga, 170 miles due south of Kiakhta, a frontier emporium for the caravan trade carried on with China across the Gobi Desert. Kiakhta is a Siberian frontier town, and stands about 100 miles from the south end of Lake Baikal. Chief exports are wool, skins and hides, furs, horns, &c. During the summer months motor-car services crosses the Gobi desert, the journey between Kalgan and Urga occupying three days. It was inaugurated in 1917.

Many gold mines are found in Outer Mongolia, but few are worked. There are also deposits of copper, silver, iron, and tin.

For a history of political events in Mongolia from 1912 to 1923, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1923, p. 794.

Since March, 1915, Mongolia has had a legal currency of its own, but recent political troubles have delayed the passing of the system of barter in business transactions.

Buddhist Lamaism is the prevalent form of religion, the Lamas having their residence at Urga and other centres.

COLOMBIA.

(LA REPÚBLICA DE COLOMBIA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Colombia, which in colonial days was called 'Vice-royalty of New Granada,' gained its independence of Spain in 1819, and was officially constituted December 27, 1819. Soon after it formed with Venezuela and Ecuador the State of 'Greater Colombia,' which continued for about ten years. It then split up into Venezuela, Ecuador, and the Republic of New Granada, on February 29, 1832. The Constitution of April 1, 1858, changed New Granada into a confederation of eight States, under the name of Confederation Granadina. On September 20, 1861, the convention of Bogotá brought out the confederation under the new name of United States of New Granada, with nine States. On May 8, 1863, an improved Constitution was formed, and the States took the name of the United States of Colombia. The revolution of 1885 brought about another change, and the National Council of Bogotá, composed of two delegates from each State, promulgated the Constitution of August 4, 1886. The sovereignty of the States was abolished, and they became simple departments, with governors appointed by the President of the Republic, though they have retained some of their old rights, such as the management of their own finances. At present there are 14 departments, 3 "Intendencias," and 6 commissaries.

The legislative power rests with a Congress of two Houses, called the Senate and the House of Representatives. The Senate contains 34 Senators elected indirectly by electors specially chosen for the purpose. The House of Representatives consists of 92 members elected by the people in 17 electoral circumscriptions (one for every 50,000 of population). Senators are elected for 4 years, Representatives for 2 years.

The President is elected by direct vote of the people for a term of 4 years, and is not eligible for re-election until 4 years afterwards; his salary is 18,000 gold dollars per annum. Congress elects, for a term of one year, two substitutes, one of whom, failing the President during a presidential term, fills the vacancy.

President of the Republic.—Dr. Miguel Abadía Méndez. Elected February 14, 1926. Holds office from August 7, 1926, to August 7, 1930. Born 1867.

The ministries are those of the Interior, Foreign Affairs, Finance, War, Public Instruction, Industries, Public Works, and Post and Telegraphs.

Area and Population.

The area of the Republic is estimated at about 440,846 square miles. It has a coastline of about 1,109 miles, of which 641 miles are on the Caribbean Sea and 468 miles on the Pacific Ocean. The area and population of the 14 departments, 3 intendencias and 6 commissaries were, according to the census of 1918 (October 14), as follows (the capitals in brackets).

In 1923 there were 27,651 marriages, 176,055 births, and 90,184 deaths.

Estimated population in 1923, 6,617,833.

On November 3, 1903, Panama asserted its independence and was formed into a separate Republic. On April 6, 1914, Colombia signed a treaty with the United States, at Bogotá, agreeing to recognise the independence of Panama and receiving as indemnity for the Panama Canal zone 25 million dollars (5 millions sterling) and certain rights in the zone. This Treaty was ratified by the United States Senate on April 20, 1921, and by the Colombian Congress on December 24, 1921. (See Introduction of THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1915.) Most of the boundary line with Brazil is still undefined, and there are frontier difficulties with Peru. With Ecuador a boundary treaty was signed in 1917. The old frontier difference with Venezuela was settled by the Swiss Federal Council in 1922.

The capital, Bogotá (census population on July 15, 1918, 143,994; estimated population on October 14, 1923, 166,148), lies 8,600 feet above the sea. The chief commercial towns are Barranquilla (81,330), connected with the coast at Puerto Colombia by 17 miles of railway; Manizales (52,000); Cartagena (68,119); Medellín (86,641), a mining centre; Cali (68,777); Bucaramanga (30,266); Cúcuta (40,151), the last two being coffee centres. On July 4, 1925, the city of Manizales was completely destroyed by fire.

Religion and Instruction.

The religion of the nation is Roman Catholicism. There are 4 Catholic archbishops, viz. of Bogotá, Cartagena, Medellín, and Popayán, the first having 4 suffragans and the other three 2 each. One of the suffragan sees is Panamá, belonging to ecclesiastical province of Cartagena, and now also to the Republic of Panamá. Other forms of religion being permitted, so long as their exercise is 'not contrary to Christian morals nor to the law.'

There is a Ministry of Public Instruction which has the supreme direction of education throughout the Republic. In 1924 there were 6,674 primary schools with 395,541 pupils; 302 secondary schools with 6,569 pupils; 25 industrial schools with 1,392 children; and 6 art schools with 399 pupils. There were in 1924, 17 normal schools with 911 pupils. The oldest University is that of Bogotá (founded 1572). This and the School of Mines at Medellín are national institutions. The other Universities are departmental. They are the Universities of Antioquia at Medellín (founded 1822), with 1,007 students in 1926, of Cartagena, of Cauca at Popayan (founded in 1827), and of Pasto. Primary education is gratuitous but not compulsory.

The Republic possesses a national library, museum, and observatory at Bogotá.

Finance.

Revenue and expenditure for 6 years in gold pesos:—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
1922	23,903,580	28,211,822	1925	46,158,551	43,330,656
1923	33,535,104	30,501,787	1926	55,648,914	47,644,104
1924	33,380,856	38,923,988	1927	44,896,434	44,896,434

The main items of estimated expenditure in 1927 were: Treasury, 8,797,997 pesos; Public Works, 15,881,182 pesos; War, 3,631,091 pesos; Posts and Telegraphs, 4,217,967 pesos; and Public Health and Instruction, 3,862,677 pesos. The main items of estimated revenue in 1927 were:—National Properties, 8,243,398 pesos; Posts and Telegraphs, 1,594,076 pesos; Customs, 30,469,130 pesos.

The external debt on June 30, 1927, amounted to 12,406,653 pesos, equal to 2,481,330%, made up mainly as follows:—Consolidated external debt of 1896, 983,200%; five per cent. Government bonds of 1906, specially secured on the Bogotá-Sabana Railway, 169,000%, six per cent. external gold loan of 1911, 213,840%, six per cent. external debt of 1913, 1,144,562%, and Puerto Wilches Railway Bonds, 399,920%.

The internal debt on June 30, 1927, was 8,921,849 pesos. In addition the Departments have debts totalling 30,000,000 pesos, and the municipalities, 15,500,000 pesos.

Defence.

Military service is compulsory, from 1 to 1½ years. The permanent army consists of 3 divisions of 2 brigades of 2 regiments of infantry; total 12 infantry regiments; 1 cavalry regiment of 4 squadrons; 1 artillery regiment; 1 engineer battalion; 1 transport battalion of 3 companies. The peace effective in 1925 was 371 officers and 6,015 other ranks. In war time every fit Colombian is compelled to serve, and the war effective is about 50,000. The infantry are armed with rifles of the improved Remington pattern, with the French Gras rifle, and with the 88 pattern Mauser.

Colombia has 1 seagoing gunboat, 3 coastguard patrol vessels built in 1925, 2 river gunboats, and several motor launches for customs services.

Production and Industry.

Only a small section of the country is under cultivation. Much of the soil is fertile, but of no present value, from want of means of communication and transport. Coffee is the staple product; amount exported 1926, 2,454,242 bags (147,255 metric tons). Tobacco is also grown; cotton is produced in Magdalena, Bolivar, Antioquia and Santander, and is beginning to be cultivated in Boyaca, Tolima, and Cundinamarca. Cotton area in 1923, was approximately 112,500 acres, and the production was estimated at 7,300,000 lbs. Cocoa, sugar, vegetable ivory, tagua (or vegetable ivory nut), and dyewoods are produced, besides wheat, maize, plantains, &c. Banana cultivation is extending, and near Santa Marta a large amount of capital is invested in this industry. The rubber tree grows wild, and its cultivation has begun. Tolu balsam is cultivated, and copaiba trees are tapped but are not cultivated. Dye and cedar woods are abundant on the Magdalena River, but little or no wood of any sort is exported. The exports of Panama hats in 1926 amounted to 67,966 kilos, valued at 572,608 dollars. The principal manufacturing centres are Bogotá, Medellín, Barranquilla, and Cartagena.

Colombia is rich in minerals, and gold is found in all the departments. The mines are in Antioquia, Cauca, Caldas, Tolima, and Narino. Other minerals, more or less worked, are copper, lead, mercury, cinnabar, manganese, emeralds, and platinum (first discovered in Colombia in 1735), which is found in abundance in the alluvial deposits of the Choco River and in the basins of the San Juan and Condoto Rivers. The working of the emerald mines is a Government monopoly. The chief mines are those of Muzo and Chivor. No statistics of their output are published, but they are said to yield 1,000,000 pesos worth of stones per annum. Nearly all the emeralds mined to-day come from Colombia. The Pradera iron works north-east of Bogotá have a capacity of 30 tons of pig iron daily. In the immediate neighbourhood of the works are coal, iron, limestone, sand, manganese, and fireclay deposits, which render the locality highly favourable for the development of metallurgical industries. The extraction of salt from the mines and the evaporation at the numerous natural salt pans along the coast are a Government monopoly. Rock salt is found chiefly in the Department of Cundinamarca and the Meta Intendencia. The most important mines are situated at Zipaquirá, north of Bogotá. In several of the departments there are extensive deposits of coal, the largest producing mines being those near Amaga, which supplies the needs of the Amaga and Antioquia railroads. Petroleum is also found (6,444,000 barrels in 1926), while deposits of asphalt, lime, ceramic clay, mica, asbestos, graphite and other minerals are known to exist, but have not yet been given extensive development. On the coasts there are valuable pearl fisheries which the Government has under exploitation at present. The richest beds are on the north coast of the Goajira Peninsula, from Cabo de la Vela to Castilletes.

Shipping and Communications.

Owing to the mountainous character of the country, the construction of arterial roads and railways is both costly and difficult. The roads are generally simple mule tracks, though some progress has been made by the Government in the construction of main roads, especially in the case of the road from Bogotá to Villavicencio over the Eastern Cordillera. Total length of motor roads in use, 1,389 miles.

In Colombia there are 15 lines of railway (11 national, and 4 British companies), with a total length (1926) of 1,300 miles. Of the total, 614 miles have a gauge of 3 ft.; the rest a metre gauge. A new railway to serve the western section of the Republic, the Bolombolo-Canafistula Railway, 521 miles in length, is under construction.

Much of the inland traffic is by river, and the work of clearing and canalising the lower and upper Magdalena is being carried on. That river is navigable for 900 miles; steamers ascend to La Dorada, 592 miles from Barranquilla. Tributaries supply 215 miles more of navigable water, and on these rivers 72 steamers, with a total tonnage of 14,567, regularly plied in 1923.

In 1926, the post-office handled 17,869,101 letters and post-cards and 11,808,015 packets of printed matter, samples, and business papers. Parcels (1926), 245,000. Number of offices, 1,075. A British river-transport company has contracted with the Government to convey mails and passengers to and from the interior every three days. Other companies, British, German, and native, ply on the rivers.

There were 20,460 miles of Government telegraph lines in August, 1927; number of offices, 877; 10,996,012 telegrams were despatched in 1926.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

Under the Law of June 12, 1907, the monetary unit is a gold dollar equal to one-fifth of a pound sterling and of proportionate weight, the fineness being the same. Gold coins are 2½, 5, and 10 dollars. Silver coins are (900 fine) the half-dollar, and 20 and 10 centavos. Nickel coins for 1, 2, and 5 centavos are legal tender. There are also notes representing gold dollars of 1, 2, 5, and 10 dollars respectively. In December, 1916, a law was promulgated authorising the Government to coin gold pieces in the mints of Bogotá and Medellín free of charge. On June 30, 1927, the total currency of Colombia was given as follows:—gold coinage, 15,671,954 pesos; paper money (gold certificates and old issues), 9,215,708 pesos; silver coinage, 11,778,533 pesos (silver and nickel); and notes of the Banco de la República, 42,272,397 pesos. Besides this sum in legal tender, there were also in circulation on June 30, 1927:—Treasury certificates, 43,717 pesos; bank certificates, 285,223 pesos; bank bonds, 16,834 pesos; making a total of 86,833,988 pesos, against 75,814,117 pesos on June 30, 1926.

There are 23 native commercial banks with total paid-up capital and reserves (February 28, 1927) of 21,922,489 pesos; 4 foreign commercial banks, 4,274,053 pesos; and 2 native mortgage banks, 4,095,444 pesos; total, 30,291,986 pesos. This does not include the Banca de la República.

On March 20, 1926, the bank deposits amounted to 58,346,416 pesos gold; bank loans amounted to 76,661,535 pesos gold.

On July 23, 1923, the Central or Government bank, under the name of Banco de la República, and with a capital of 10,000,000 pesos, was opened to the public. It has the exclusive privilege until 1943 of issuing bank-notes in Colombia. Its deposits and note issues must be covered by a gold reserve of 60 per cent. of their value.

In 1925 the Agricultural Mortgage Bank of Bogotá was formed by the consolidation of the mortgage departments of 5 principal banks; authorized capital is 5 million pesos subscribed by Government, Departments, and Municipalities.

The metric system was introduced into the Republic in 1857. In custom-house business the kilogramme, equal to 2·204 avoirdupois pounds, is the standard. In ordinary commerce the arroba, of 27·5 pounds, or 12½ kilos; the quintal, of 4 arrobas, or 50 kilos; and the carga, of 2½ quintals, or 125 kilos, are generally used. The Colombian libra is equal to 1·102 pound avoirdupois. The Colombian vara, or 80 cm., is still in some cases the measure of length used for retailing purposes, but in liquid measure the French litre is the legal standard.

COSTA RICA.

(REPÚBLICA DE COSTA RICA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Costa Rica, an independent State since the year 1821, and forming part from 1824 to 1829 of the Confederation of Central America, is governed under a Constitution promulgated on December 7, 1871, and modified very frequently since that date. Practically there was no constitution, but only dictatorships, between 1870 and 1882. The legislative power is vested in a Chamber of Representatives called the Constitutional Congress, and made up of 43 deputies, being one representative to every 8,000 inhabitants. By the Election Law of August 18, 1913, universal suffrage was adopted for all male citizens who are of age and able to support themselves, except those deprived of civil rights, criminals, bankrupts and the insane. Voting for President, Deputies and Municipal Councillors is, by the Law of July 26, 1925, secret, direct and free. The members of the Chamber are elected for the term of four years, one-half retiring every two years. The executive authority is in the hands of a President, elected for the term of four years.

President of the Republic.—Don Ricardo Jiménez, elected on December 7, 1923; assumed office May 8, 1924, for a period of 4 years, under the Constitution of 1871.

The administration normally is carried on by seven Secretaries of State, who are appointed by, and responsible to, the President. They are the Secretaries respectively of the Interior and Police; of Foreign Affairs, Justice, and Public Worship; of Education; of Public Security; of Finance and Commerce; of Public Works and of Hygiene and Public Health.

Area and Population.

The area of the Republic is estimated at 23,000 English square miles, divided into seven provinces, San José, Alajuela, Heredia, Cartago, Guanacaste, Puntarenas, and Limón. The last Census was taken in May, 1927; it showed a population of 471,525, made up as follows:—

Province	Population	Province	Population
San José . . .	153,183	Guanacaste . .	51,142
Alajuela . . .	97,577	Puntarenas . .	28,739
Heredia . . .	38,407	Limón . . .	32,278

The vital statistics for three years were as follows :—

	Marriages	Births	Deaths	Increase	Immigration	Emigration
1924	2,979	19,672	11,344	8,328	5,186	4,756
1925	—	19,000	12,544	7,416	5,983	5,818
1926	3,705	21,889	10,813	11,076	6,402	5,894

The population of European descent, many of them pure Spanish blood, dwell mostly around the capital, the city of San José (population, 1927, 44,187, with suburbs, 50,580), and in the towns of Alajuela (8,496), Cartago (14,833), Heredia (7,631), Liberia (3,161), Puntarenas (7,790), and Limon (15,624). There are some 18,000 coloured British West Indians, mostly in Limon Province, on the banana farms.

Religion and Instruction.

The Roman Catholic is the religion of the State, but there is entire religious liberty under the Constitution. The Archbishop of Costa Rica was consecrated in August, 1921, and he has under him the Bishop of Alajuela.

Elementary instruction is compulsory and free. Elementary schools are provided and maintained by local school councils, while the national government pays the teachers, besides making subventions in aid of local funds. In 1926, there were open 468 elementary schools; the teachers numbered 1,437, and the enrolled pupils 42,031 (average attendance 38,099). For secondary instruction there are at San José a lyceum for boys with 500 pupils in 1926, and a college for girls with 472 pupils. A normal school established in 1915 at Heredia has 343 pupils. The towns of Cartago and Alajuela have each a college. On September 15, 1926, the foundation stone was laid of the St. Thomas University at San José.

Expenditure on education, 1926, 3,308,889 colones.

Spanish is the universal language of the country.

Justice.

Justice is administered by the Supreme Court of Justice, two Appeal Courts, and the Court of Cassation. There are also subordinate courts in the separate provinces, and local justices throughout the Republic. Capital punishment cannot be inflicted. In 1926 there were 11,301 convictions of misdemeanour, drink convictions, 6,499, and 1,826 of crime, and 3,401 civil cases.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure for five years have been as follows :—

	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue . . .	990,809	1,297,038	1,324,151	1,408,154	1,344,655

The revenue is chiefly derived from customs, liquor, railway, direct taxes (land), post and telegraphs. The largest items of expenditure are finance, public instruction, and internal development.

The foreign debt of the Republic outstanding on December 31, 1926, was made up of gold refunding bonds, 1911, 1,742,460%, and the French Loan of 1911, 8,410,500 francs. There was also a debt of 120,051% due to an English construction company. The internal debt on December 31, 1926, amounted to 87,584,517 colones (1,930,258%).

Defence.

Costa Rica has an army, including reserve and national guard, of 150,485 officers and men. The standing and active army is limited to 1,000 by a convention reached in 1923 by the States of Central America. Its strength in 1925 was 325. The Republic has also 1 motor launch on the Atlantic side and 1 on the Pacific side for Revenue purposes.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture is the principal industry. There are thousands of square miles of public lands in Costa Rica that have never been cleared, on which can be found quantities of virgin rosewood, cedar, mahogany, and other cabinet woods. The principal agricultural products are coffee (18,249 metric tons in 1926), valued at 2,182,634%, and bananas (8,560,910 stems valued at 1,319,065% in 1926). Coffee and bananas account for nine-tenths of the exports. The cacao crop is also of importance. In 1926, 5,331 metric tons of cacao were exported valued at 169,881%. Bee-keeping is carried on successfully; it is estimated that there are 3,000 hives in the Republic. The second industry of importance is that of gold and silver mining on the Pacific slope. Deposits of manganese ore have been discovered in the Pacific province of Guanacaste. There are also deposits of quartz, alabaster, granite, oil, alum, slate, onyx, and mercury; and sulphur and copper also exist, but mining in the Republic is not very fully developed. Maize, sugar-cane, cacao, rice, and potatoes are commonly cultivated. In 1922, 3219 acres were under tobacco. The distillation of spirits is a government monopoly. The live-stock, in 1925, consisted of 433,468 cattle, 104,037 horses, 70,625 pigs, 9,857 mules, 355 sheep, and 1,734 goats.

There are officially enumerated 3,296 factories and industries in the Republic, all small, including 71 cigar-making factories, 135 cheese-making establishments, 69 hydraulic sawmills, 22 candle-making factories and many coffee-drying establishments, starch, broom and wood-work factories. The most important industries are shoes, soap, and candles. Electricity, derived from water power in the highlands, is widely used as motive power.

Commerce.

The value of imports into and exports from Costa Rica in 5 years (including coin and bullion) was as follows (in sterling 1 colon = 22.9d.) :—

	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports . . .	1,716,840	2,013,353	2,679,244	2,859,999	2,840,408
Exports . . .	2,926,583	2,640,321	3,697,596	3,397,019	3,895,683

The value of the chief imports and exports for 2 years was as follows:—

Imports	1924	1925	Exports	1925	1926
	£	£		£	£
Cotton . . .	495,098	772,463	Coffee . . .	1,738,475	2,182,634
Silk . . .	56,420	181,909	Bananas . . .	1,295,754	1,819,065
Wool . . .	52,661	188,385	Gold and silver .	125,626	106,938
Flour . . .	169,057	386,368	Cacao . . .	124,045	169,881

Paper . . .	78,219	74,972	Mahogany . .	11,734	8,295

Of the import value in 1926, 55·73 per cent. was from the United States, 14·40 per cent. from the United Kingdom, 6·29 per cent. from Central and South America, 12·33 per cent. from Germany. Of the value exported, 40·31 per cent. went to the United States, 45·58 per cent. to the United Kingdom, 8·73 to Germany, and 3·01 per cent. to Latin America.

Total trade between the United Kingdom and Costa Rica (Board of Trade Returns) for 5 years:—

—	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Costa Rica into U. K.	1,633,504	2,340,592	2,578,294	2,507,682	2,732,154
Exports to Costa Rica from U. K.	250,258	484,769	886,150	806,235	408,702

Shipping and Communications.

No official figures are available as regards Costa Rican shipping. On the Atlantic coast there are several small sailing vessels and power launches, and on the Pacific coast some motor launches.

In 1926, there entered the ports of the Republic 679 ships of 1,304,313 tons, and cleared, 676 ships of 1,303,231 tons. Nearly all the steamers of the United Fruit Company are under the British flag.

The railway system connects San José with the Atlantic port, and has been extended to connect the capital with the Pacific port. The length of railway is 413 miles—the Costa Rica Railway, 189 miles (main line and branches; San José to Limón, 103 miles); the Pacific Railway (state owned), 81 miles (San José to Punta Arenas, 73 miles), the Northern Railway, 75 miles, and the United Fruit Co. Railway, 67 miles. When the Railway system is completed, through rail communication will be established between Port Limón and the new port of Almirante in Panama. At San José there is an electric tramway of 9 miles. In 1916 a road for motor traffic was completed between San José and Heredia, a distance of 7 miles. There is also a motor road between San José and Cartago, a distance of 13 miles. About 130 miles of motoring roads are now open.

In 1926 there were 336 post offices. The number of postal packets despatched and received was 4,721,691.

There were (1926) 2,516 miles of telegraph lines, with 147 telegraph offices. The number of messages in 1926 was 907,528. On December 31, 1920, there were 1,584 telephones; the telephone lines had a length of about 1,387 miles. Wireless telegraphy is working from Limón to Bocas del Toro (Panama) 60 miles, and to Bluefields, in Nicaragua, and to Colón, in Republic of Panama. Limón has a radius of 300 miles. The Government has a large wireless station at San José, and a small one at Colorado (mouth of R. San Juan, near Nicaraguan border). There is an international wireless station at Paraiso of high power; it is open for public service.

Banking and Credit.

In October, 1914, the Banco Internacional de Costa Rica was established as a Government Bank of Issue. It is authorised to issue up to 19,000,000 colones in notes to bearer (guaranteed by Government 6 per cent. Bonds, un-issued balance of Costa Rica Gold Refunding Bonds of 1911, and other Government securities). The Exchange Control Department, founded in November 1922, is authorised to purchase and sell New York Bank drafts at a fixed rate of 400 per cent. (4 to 1), and to issue and to receive in exchange for such drafts its own notes. On December 31, 1926, the Department had balances at New York bankers or in hand of 1,092,978 U.S. dollars gold. The total circulation of the country on that date was: Banco Internacional de Costa Rica, 16,242,600 colones; Exchange Control Department, 4,371,892 colones; silver certificates, 1,350,000 colones; copper, 510,000 colones. Total, 22,474,492 colones.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

On October 26, 1896, an Act was passed for the adoption of a gold standard, the monetary unit to be the gold colón, weighing 778 grammes, .900 fine (value about 22·9*d.*). Gold coins have, however, practically disappeared from circulation. Silver coins are: 1 colón, 50 centimos, 25 centimos. There are copper coins of 10 centimos, 5 centimos, 1 centimo, and a nickel coin of 2 centimos.

The metric system is now in use; the following are the old weights and measures:—

The Libra	. . . .	= 1·014 lb. avoirdupois.
„ Quintal	. . . .	= 101·40 „
„ Arroba	. . . .	= 25·35 „
„ Fanega	. . . .	= 11 bushels (imperial bushel).

The old weights and measures of Spain are in use in the country districts but the introduction of the French metric system is legally established and in general use.

On January 15, 1921, the Republic adopted as its standard time that of the meridian 90 degrees west of Greenwich.

CUBA.

Constitution and Government.

CUBA, except for a brief period of British occupancy in 1762-63, remained a Spanish possession from the date of its discovery by Columbus until December 10, 1898, when the sovereignty was relinquished under the terms of the Treaty of Paris which ended the armed intervention of the United States in the struggle of the Cubans against Spanish rule. Cuba thus became an independent State. A convention which assembled on November 5, 1900, drew up a constitution which was adopted February 21, 1901, under which the Island assumed a republican form of government, with a President, Vice-President, a Senate and a House of Representatives. A law was passed in Washington authorising the President of the United States to hand over the government to the Cuban people upon the undertaking that they should conclude no treaty with a foreign power that would endanger the independence of Cuba, that no debts should be contracted for which the current revenue would not suffice, that the United States should have certain rights of intervention, and be granted the use of Naval Stations. On June 12, 1901, these conditions were accepted. On February 24, 1902, the election of the President and Vice-President took place, and the control of the Island was formally transferred to the national government on May 20. The coaling stations of Guantanamo Bay and Bahía Honda were leased to the United States for 2,000 dollars annually, on July 2, 1903. A reciprocal commercial treaty, December 27, 1903, further strengthened the ties between Cuba and the United States. After political disturbances, an American Commission formed a provisional government in August, 1906, which was continued until January 28, 1909, when the national government was resumed after the institution of electoral reforms. A constitutional convention will convene March, 1928, to consider various changes in the constitution including a proposal to increase the Presidents' term to 6 years.

President.—General Gerardo Machado y Morales. Inaugurated May 20, 1925 ; term expires May 20, 1929.

Vice-President.—Senor Carlos de la Rosa.

There is a Cabinet consisting of the Secretaries of State, of Justice, of War and Marine, of the Interior, of Finance, of Agriculture, Commerce, and Labour, of Public Instruction, of Public Works, Sanitation and Charity, and of Telegraph and Posts (created in 1925).

The National Congress is made up of a Senate (24 members, 4 for each province) and a House of Representatives (118 members, 1 for every 25,000 of the inhabitants).

The country is divided into six provinces (Provincias) and 119 municipalities (Municipios). The province is ruled by a Governor elected indirectly by the people and a Council ; and the Municipality by an Alcalde (Mayor), and by a municipal council (ayuntamiento) elected by the people of the town.

Area and Population.

Cuba has an area of 44,164 square miles (41,634 square miles for the island of Cuba, 1,180 square miles for the Isle of Pines, and 2,350 square miles for the other islands), with a population, on December 31, 1927, of 3,568,552. The area, population, and density of population of each of the six provinces, on Dec. 31, 1927, were as follows :—

Province	Area	Population (Dec. 31, 1927)	Pop. per sq. mile
	Square miles
Havana . . . . .	8,170	1,028,502 <sup>1</sup>	318·66
Pinar del Rio . . . . .	5,206	800,115	55·10
Matanzas . . . . .	3,256	846,909	103·65
Santa Clara . . . . .	8,257	752,670	85·14
Camagüey . . . . .	10,064	257,624	24·70
Oriente . . . . .	14,211	882,552	60·41

The number of whites classified in 1925 was 2,315,928 against 2,294,115 in 1924, and of coloured, 829,201 against 830,791 in 1924. The number of immigrants in the year ending Dec. 31, 1927, was 79,990, against 85,288 in the preceding year.

The chief towns are Havana, 562,968; Cienfuegos, 73,480 ; Camagüey, 93,145 ; Santiago de Cuba, 141,455 ; Guantánamo, 53,004 ; Santa Clara, 71,362 ; Manzanillo, 63,560 ; Pinar del Río, 50,315 ; Sancti Spiritus, 87,620 ; Trinidad, 45,930 ; Cárdenas, 36,280.

Instruction.

Education is compulsory and free. In the interior regular circuits for special teachers who conduct classes in the higher subjects, travelling from school to school in succession, maintain a high standard of instruction in the rural districts. In the year ending June 30, 1927, 321,821 children were enrolled in the 3,702 elementary schools, which had 7,110 teachers. There were also 70 travelling teachers who taught 3,435 children; 82 night schools for working people with 3,679 pupils. There were also 467 private schools with 1,545 teachers and 30,293 pupils. In each province the Government maintains a special Institute for advanced education. Annexed to these Institutes are the normal schools for training teachers. Near Havana there is a special school with a staff drawn from English public schools, on which the school is modelled.

University instruction is given at the University of Havana (founded on September 12, 1721). In 1926-27, it had 5,473 students.

Finance.

Revenue and expenditure (budget estimates) for 5 years:—

	1923-24	1924-25	1925-26	1926-27	1927-28
	£	£	£	£	£
Expenditure . .	12,334,434	13,691,535	17,489,975	17,737,752	16,860,320

The principal items of estimated income in 1927-28 are:—Customs Revenue, 41,148,000 dollars, and land duties, 24,371,000 dollars; the principal items of estimated expenditure are: Debt redemption and interest, 9,535,225 dollars; War and Marine, 12,324,768 dollars; Instruction, 15,112,245 dollars.

The debt of the Republic of Cuba on September 30, 1927, amounted to 95,918,700 dollars, made up as follows:—Foreign debt, 85,304,500 dollars, and internal debt, 10,614,200 dollars.

Defence.

The army is composed of 773 officers and 11,786 men, organized in 6 cavalry regiments, 4 battalions and 3 batteries with auxiliary services. The navy consists of 2 cruisers, 5 gunboats, an armed transport, and about a dozen coastguard vessels of small size. Some of these vessels were wrecked or damaged in a hurricane in October 1926. The strength of the navy is 807 men, 144 officers and 25 cadets. The air force (1926) consisted of 116 men.

Production and Industry.

The staple products of Cuba are tobacco and sugar, but coffee, cocoa, cereals, and potatoes are grown, and a considerable trade is done in fruits and minerals. Cuba is the largest producer of sugar in the world. The sugar crop was in 1924-25, 5,151,486 tons; in 1925-26, 5,292,714 tons; and in 1926-27, 4,508,270 tons. The total area of the sugar plantations is nearly 1,600,000 acres. Production each crop year is limited by presidential decree. In July, 1927, there were 177 sugar mills. Tobacco exports in 1926-27:—cigars, 91,032,529 (10,458,985 dollars); boxes of cigarettes, 2,770,573 (129,466 dollars); leaf tobacco, 27,629,207 lbs. (11,574,610 dollars). The principal fruits exported were pineapples, bananas, citrus fruit, and coconuts. The production of molasses in 1924-25 amounted to 294,414,231 gallons.

Cuba's production of brandy in 1925-26 was 38,093,027 litres, of which 4,567,747 litres were exported, and of alcohol, 20,988,575 litres, of which 1,603,082 litres were exported.

On June 30, 1927, the live stock in the island consisted of 4,785,921 head of cattle, 759,267 horses, 73,454 mules, and 3,464 asses.

Cuba has forest lands, many of which are in private ownership, but the forests belonging to the State have an area of about 1,250,000 acres. These forests contain valuable cabinet woods, such as mahogany and cedar, besides dye-woods, fibres, gums, resins, and oils. Cedar is used locally for cigar-boxes, and mahogany is exported. Many other hard woods are used for railway sleepers, carts, ploughs and other local purposes.

Iron ore abounds; total exports 1925, 481,093 tons; 1926, 541,055 tons. Copper, manganese and gold are also worked.

Commerce.

The value of the imports and exports (including bullion and specie) for 5 years were as follows :—

—	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports . . .	41,278,695	60,824,318	58,074,576	59,008,025	53,778,600

Shipping and Communications.

In 1926, 7,408 vessels of 24,421,972 tons net entered and 7,244 vessels of 23,893,754 tons net cleared the ports of the Republic in the foreign trade. In the coastwise trade 11,094 vessels of 2,062,664 tons net entered, and 11,035 vessels of 2,062,646 tons net cleared.

In Cuba there were in 1925, 3,800 miles of railway—the United Railways of Havana, 374 miles; Cuba Railway, 647 miles; Cuban Central Railway, 360 miles, and Western Railway of Havana, 147 miles, being the greatest systems. The lines now connect the principal towns and seaports from Pinar del Rio in the west, to Santiago de Cuba in the east. The larger sugar estates have private lines extending to 2,790 miles, connecting them with the main lines. Several important railway extensions are projected. There were 1,646 miles of cart roads open to traffic on May 20, 1925. A central highway extending over 631 miles and traversing the different provinces is under construction. There are (1926) 792 post and telegraph offices, and nine wireless stations operated by the Government. There were 838 miles of telegraph wires in 1925. Direct telephone connection with American cities has been maintained since 1921.

Currency and Banking.

On November 7, 1914, a law was published authorising a new coinage issue in Cuba with a gold peso (equal to the U.S. gold dollar) of 1·6718 grammes (1·5046 grammes fine) as the monetary unit. The gold coins are the 20, 10, 5, 4, 2 and 1 peso pieces; the 20, 10 and 5 pesos pieces are of the same weight and value as the corresponding United States gold coins. Silver is coined in pieces of 1 peso, 40 cents, 20 cents, and 10 cents, while nickel coins of 5, 2, and 1 cent pieces are also issued.

The coinage of gold is unlimited, but silver must not be minted to the value of more than 12,000,000 pesos. The extent of the nickel coinage is to be determined by the National Executive. The United States coinage will still remain legal tender.

The total amount of currency on June 30, 1927, was as follows:—gold, 23,786,750 dollars; silver, 8,413,140 dollars; nickel, 1,449,560 dollars; American bank notes, 228,572,002 dollars.

Banking is in the hands of the Royal Bank of Canada, the National City Bank of New York, the Canadian Bank of Commerce, and the Bank of Nova Scotia.

The metric system of weights and measures is in use.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA.

(ČESKOSLOVENSKÁ REPUBLIKA.)

THE term Czechoslovaks comprises two branches of the same Slav nation: the Czechs (pronounced Tchechs) of Bohemia, Moravia, and Silesia, and the Slovaks of Slovakia.

The Czechoslovak State came into existence on October 28, 1918. On that day the Národní Výbor (National Council) took over the government of the Czechoslovak countries, including Bohemia, Moravia, Silesia, and Slovakia, which had hitherto belonged to the former Austro-Hungarian Monarchy. On November 14, 1918, the Czechoslovak National Assembly met in Prague, and formally declared the Czechoslovak State to be a Republic, with Professor T. G. Masaryk as its first President.

By the Treaty of Peace of September 10, 1919 (the Treaty of St. Germain), the Allied and Associated Powers formally recognized the Czechoslovak Republic, declaring that 'the peoples of Bohemia, of Moravia, and of part of Silesia, as well as the peoples of Slovakia, have decided of their own free will to unite . . . for the purpose of forming a single sovereign independent state under the title of the Czecho-Slovak Republic.' For the sake of brevity the Czecho-Slovak Republic is designated Czechoslovakia.

Constitution and Government.—The Constitution of the Czechoslovak Republic was passed by the National Assembly on February 29, 1920.

According to the terms of the Constitution, the Czechoslovak State is a democratic Republic having an elected President at its head. The territory of the Republic forms a single and indivisible unity. The region of Carpathian Ruthenia will receive autonomy. The National Parliament, which constitutes the only legislative body for the whole of the Republic, is composed of a Chamber of Deputies elected for a period of six years and containing 300 members, and of a Senate comprising 150 members to be renewed every eight years. The two Chambers in joint congress elect the President of the Republic for seven years. The President, as head of the State, is supreme commander of the armed forces, and can declare war with the consent of Parliament. He appoints the higher officers and officials, exercises the right of reprieve, and is himself amenable to the laws only on a charge of high treason. He also appoints and recalls Ministers. The Constitution guarantees freedom of the press and of speech, and safeguards racial minorities, to whom it assures the maintenance of their schools. Privileges derived from sex, birth or calling are not recognised. Marriage, the family and motherhood are placed under the special protection of the law. All these guarantees and rights are protected by the Supreme Administrative Court, which sees to the legality of public administration.

In principle the two Chambers are equal in so far that they both enjoy the right of initiative, and that even Government Bills may be first introduced in either house. Only in the case of the Budget and Army bills must the measures first pass through the Chamber of Deputies. It is also the Chamber of Deputies alone that by a vote of non-confidence can compel the resignation of the Government. A measure passed by the Chamber of Deputies becomes law, despite an adverse decision of the Senate, if the Chamber of Deputies adheres to its first decision by an absolute majority of all its members.

The franchise for the Chamber of Deputies is open to all citizens, without distinction of sex, who are over 21, while all citizens over 30 are eligible for election. The franchise for the Senate is open to all citizens who are over 26; and all citizens over 45 are eligible for election. The electoral system is based on proportional representation.

The Constitution regulates the parliamentary elections on a 'closed scrutiny' basis, the votes being in favour of parties, not of candidates. The allocation of electoral areas is as follows:—Bohemia, 9 (for Chamber of Deputies), 5 (for Senate); Moravia and Silesia, 6 and 3; Slovakia, 7 and 4; Carpathian Ruthenia, 1 and 1.

In 1925 the political parties in Parliament (elected on November 15, 1925) were as follows:—

Senate (150 members):—Czechoslovak Coalition, 80 (Agrarians, 23; Clericals, 16; Social Democrats, 14; Czechoslovak Socialists, 14; National Democrats, 7; Middle Class Party, 6); Slovakian Clericals, 12; German and Magyar Agrarians, 14; Social Democrats, 9; Christian Socialists, 7; Nationalists, 5; National Socialists, 3; Communists, 20.

Chamber of Deputies (300 members):—Czechoslovak Coalition, 159 (Agrarians, 45; Clericals, 31; Social Democrats, 29; Czechoslovak Socialists, 28; National Democrats, 13; Middle Class Party, 13); Slovakian Clericals, 23; German and Magyar Agrarians, 28; Social Democrats, 17; Christian Socialists, 13; Nationalists, 10; National Socialists, 7; Poles, 1; Ruthene Antonomist, 1; Communists, 41.

President.—Thomas Garrigue Masaryk (born in 1850 in Hodonín, in Moravia). Elected May 28, 1920; re-elected May 27, 1927, for a period of 7 years

According to the Constitution, no one may be elected for more than two successive terms, but an exception has been made in the case of President Masaryk.

The Czechoslovak Government, appointed on October 12, 1926, consists of the following Ministers:—

Prime Minister.—M. Antonín Švehla.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Dr. Eduard Beneš.

Minister of Finance.—Dr. Karel Engliš.

Minister of the Interior.—J. Černý.

Minister of Commerce.—F. Pervoutka.

Minister of Public Works.—Dr. Franz Spina.

Minister of Railways.—Josef Najman.

Minister of Social Welfare.—Jan Šrámek.

Minister of Justice.—Dr. Robert Mayr-Harting.

Minister of Agriculture.—Dr. Otakar Srdínko.

Minister of Education.—Dr. Milan Hořák.

Minister of National Defence.—František Udržal.

Minister of Posts and Telegraphs.—Dr. František Nosek.

Minister of Health.—Dean Tiso (Jan. 1927).

Minister for the Unification of Laws.—M. Gažík.

Area and Population.—The Czechoslovak Republic consists of Bohemia, Moravia, Slovakia, Silesia, and Ruthenia (Sub-Carpathian Russia). Its frontiers have been defined by the Peace Treaties with Germany, Austria and Hungary. The area and population of the various provinces, according to the census of 1921, and the official estimate at December 31, 1926, are as follows:—

—	Area in square kilometres	Area in English sq. miles	Population Feb. 15, 1921	Population per square mile, 1921	Estimated Population Dec. 31, 1926	Population per square mile, 1926

Čstí n/L . . . . .	30,830	Pardubice . . . . .	25,162

Religion.—The majority of the population is Catholic. In 1921 the division of the population according to religion was :—Roman Catholics, 10,384,833; Greek and Armenian Catholics, 535,543; Protestants, 990,319; Greek Orthodox, 73,097; Jews, 354,342; Old Catholics, 20,255; other faiths, 4,943; and without any religion, 724,507.

In January, 1920, the reformed clergy of Czechoslovakia decided to withdraw from the jurisdiction of the Pope and to found a Czechoslovak Church, which had, according to the Census of 1921, 525,333 adherents.

Instruction.—Instruction is compulsory between the age of 6 and 14. The schools may be divided as follows (1) National Schools (Elementary and Advanced Public Schools); (2) Secondary Latin and Technical Schools (Gymnasias and Real-Schools); (3) Universities and Higher Technical Schools; and (4) Trade and Arts, Commercial, Mining and Agricultural, and other special schools. There are practically no illiterates except in Slovakia.

The following table contains the data for elementary and advanced schools (public and private) in Czechoslovakia as at October 31, 1926.

	Elementary Schools (public and private)			Higher Grade Schools (public and private)
	No. of Schools	No. of Pupils (boys)	No. of Pupils (girls)	No. of Schools	No. of Pupils (boys)	No. of Pupils (girls)

Of the 14,158 elementary schools, 9,419 (66·6 per cent.) were Czechoslovak; 3,287 (23·2 per cent.) German; 484 (3·4 per cent.) Ruthenian; 794 (5·6 per cent.) Magyar; 87 (0·6 per cent.) Polish, and 87 (0·6 per cent.) other and miscellaneous schools. Of the 1,736 higher grade schools, 1,256 (72·4 per cent.) were Czechoslovak; 433 (24·9 per cent.) German; 11 (0·6 per cent.) Ruthenian; 17 (1·0 per cent.) Magyar; 8 (0·5 per cent.) Polish, and 11 (0·6 per cent.) miscellaneous schools.

During the school-year 1925-26 there were in Czechoslovakia 354 secondary Latin and technical schools (gymnasias and real-schools) with 108,760 pupils. Of these 245 were Czech or Slovak, 93 German, 4 Magyar, 10 Ruthenian, and 2 other. The public, or state-aided, schools of commerce numbered, during the school-year 1925-26, 167, with 31,839 pupils.

There are 4 universities in Czechoslovakia, and 4 technical high schools with students as follows (winter term 1925-26):—

Universities	Number of Students		Technical High Schools	Number of Students
	Total	Females		Total	Females
Prague, Czech (1848)	8,176	1,615	Prague, Czech .	5,922	209

Bratislava, Slovak (1919)	1,809	118	Brno, German .	1,704	25
	14,810	2,352		11,206	321

There are, moreover, 2 faculties not comprised in the University Association (in Prague and Olomouc); a Russian academy of law; a Ukrainian University at Prague; and a Ukrainian agricultural academy in Poděbrady; a higher veterinary academy (312 students); a mining academy (493 students); a higher agricultural college (465 students); an academy of arts (201 students); and a high commercial school (in Prague).

Justice.—The courts of the Republic are :—The Supreme Court of Justice and Court of Cassation sitting in Brno; 4 High Courts of Justice (Prague, Brno, Bratislava, Košice); 36 County Courts (besides the Commercial Court and the Penal Tribunal in Prague); and 421 District Courts, besides 4 special district courts.

There are also special courts for commercial, industrial, revenue and other matters.

A special Administrative High Court decides matters in dispute affecting the administration, e. g., appeals against illegal decisions and regulations made by State authorities; in cases of conflict between the central State authorities and the organs of the provincial local government; in cases of claims made against the State or the local administration which have been vetoed by the administrative authorities.

Finance.—Budget estimates for four years in thousands of crowns :—

Year	Ordinary Revenue	Extra-ordinary Revenue	Total	Ordinary Expenditure	Extra-ordinary Expenditure	Total
1924	15,987,448	408,846	16,391,294	12,290,977	4,703,000	16,993,977

1927	9,360,662	368,252	9,728,914	8,289,496	1,414,009	9,703,505

According to the budget for 1927, the national debt is as follows (in million crowns) :—

	Million Crowns
Internal debt . . . . .	24,049
Foreign debt . . . . .	6,496
Debts resulting from the Peace Treaties . . . . .	4,400
Total . . . . .	34,945

This amount does not include the debt of 5,933 million crowns occasioned by the reorganisation of the Czechoslovak currency, which is to be paid out of the revenue derived from the levy on capital.

A Board of Audit and Control was constituted by an enactment of March 20, 1919. It is charged with the superintendence of State economy, the State property and the national debt. This Board has an equal standing with the Ministries and is independent of them. Its president is nominated, at the request of the Government, by the President of the Republic.

Defence.—Service in the army is regulated by the law of March 19, 1920. Liability to service lasts from the ages of 17 to 60, but begins normally at the age of 20. Service in the active army is for 14 months, after which the soldier passes to the first reserve until he attains the age of 40, when he passes to the second reserve, where he remains until 50. By the law of July 2, 1924, the peace strength of the active army during the period of 3 years beginning with October 1, 1924, has been fixed as follows: between October 1 and March 31 in each year, at 150,000; and between April 1 and September 30, at 90,000. The maximum effective in 1927 numbered 10,629 officers and 113,874 other ranks.

In the 1927 budget, 1,370 million crowns were allocated for the army.

There is a small defensive force consisting of 6 patrol vessels and armed tugs for river service.

Production and Industry.—The Czechoslovak territory is one of the richest in Europe, both as regards natural resources and industrial development. Agriculture is highly developed and intensive farming is carried on.

For the years 1925 and 1926, the area and the yield of the crops were as follows:—

Crops	Area (in acres)		Yield (in metric tons)
	1925	1926	1925	1926
Wheat . . . .	1,526,774	1,551,750	995,371	928,889

Maize . . . . .	887,335	891,793	273,812	265,502

In 1925–26, there were 166 sugar factories in the country, which produced 1,507,344 metric tons of sugar. Hops of excellent quality are also grown, both for export and beer production (Pilsener). In 1926, Czechoslovakia produced 9,669 metric tons of hops. The agricultural industries include also flourishing beer, spirit, malt and foodstuffs industries. In 1926, the Republic had 525 breweries producing 9,712,625 hectolitres of beer. In 1925–26, there were 892 distilleries with an output of 580,010 hectolitres of spirits.

The number of live-stock was in January 1, 1927: Cattle, 4,691,320; horses, 740,202; pigs, 2,539,201; sheep, 861,128, and goats, 1,244,701.

In 1926, the fruit crop yielded 157,045 tons of apples, 109,149 tons of pears, and 348,766 tons of stone fruit.

Czechoslovakia ranks among the most richly wooded countries in Europe. The forests comprise 33 per cent. of the whole area (about 11,496,864 acres).

The mineral production of the Czechoslovak Republic comprises both soft and hard coal (chief coalfields Most, Chomutov, Teplice, and Falknov), iron, graphite, garnets. Gold (annual production from 230 to 350 kilogrammes from the mine at Roudny), silver, copper and lead are found in the Carpathians, and rock-salt in Eastern Slovakia and Ruthenia.

Coal production in 1926, 18,789,098 tons of lignite and 14,507,596 tons of hard coal. Exports in 1926 were 2,801,219 tons of hard coal, 489,000 tons of coke 2,848,992 tons of lignite, compared with 1,420,865, 422,000 and 2,674,450 respectively in 1925. On January 1, 1925, there were 332 coal mines, employing 118,288 persons.

The number of factories in 1925 was 11,619. Of these, 2,035 were textile mills, 2,083 glass works and stone factories, 1,881 for food production, 1,356 for furniture and bent wood manufacture, 849 machine factories, 867 for metal manufacture, 366 paper mills, 649 chemical factories.

Communications.—On January 1, 1926, there were 13,715 kilometres or 8,522 miles of railway line in the Republic, of which 6,849 miles are owned by the State and the remaining 1,592 miles privately owned, 12 miles owned by foreign States and 69 miles owned by foreign railways. Of the State railways 989 miles are double-tracked, and of the privately owned lines 64 miles.

The Peace Treaty vested the Czechoslovak State with the right to use certain wharves in the ports of Hamburg and Stettin. Of the waterways of the country, the Danube is the most important; its chief port is Bratislava (Pressburg). On the Labe (Elbe) the two main ports are Ústí (Aussig) and Děčín (Teschén). On the Vltava and Elbe in 1926, 1,643,050 tons were loaded to be transported abroad, and 554,167 tons were unloaded from abroad. The inland traffic amounted to 737,579 tons. By way of the Danube 446,085 tons were loaded to be transported abroad, and 303,126 tons were unloaded from abroad. The inland traffic amounted to 57,493 tons.

In 1926 there were 5 air routes operating in the international service, and 4 in the national service. The former connect Prague with Paris, Warsaw, Constantinople, Vienna and Berlin. In 1926, the number of passengers on the State lines was 1,688, while 11.2 tons of freight and 2.8 tons of mail matter were also carried.

In 1926, there were 4,542 post offices and 3,643 telegraph offices, and 79,208 miles of telegraph wire; 15,241,558 telegrams were despatched and received. Number of letters handled, 908,120,145. In 1926, there were 114,943 telephone stations and 249,193 miles of telephone wire.

Banking and Currency.—In 1925 there were 32 joint-stock banks in Bohemia, Moravia, and Silesia with a total paid-up share capital of 1,858,900,000 crowns and with reserve funds of 1,072,900,000 crowns; 6 Land-banks issuing their own bonds, which at the beginning of 1925 amounted to 2,617,579,000 crowns. In 1925, there were 132 small joint-stock banks in Slovakia and Podkarpatská Rus with a share capital of 412,817,000 crowns and reserve funds of 155,202,000 crowns. In 1925, there were 370 savings banks with 12,488,714,000 crowns of deposits. In 1925, there were in Bohemia, Moravia and Silesia 4,006 Reiffeisen banks with deposits amounting to 3,644,715,000 crowns. On December 31, 1926, the deposits in the Czechoslovak banks amounted to 39,165,400,000 crowns.

In accordance with the law of April 14, 1920 (as amended in April 1924), the Czechoslovak National Bank was set up in 1926. Its capital is 12,000,000 dollars, of which one-third has been subscribed by the State and the remainder raised by subscription in Czechoslovakia. The notes of the Bank will be covered by gold to the extent of 20 per cent. The bank is to continue the policy of the Banking Office of stabilising the Czechoslovak crown on the basis of the American dollar, and this stabilisation is to be effected with a 5 per cent. fluctuation on a rate of 290–303 cents equivalent to Kč 100.

The note circulation on June 30, 1927, amounted to 7,118,400,000 crowns; the metallic reserve was 1,053,500,000 crowns.

DANZIG.

(DIE FREIE STADT DANZIG.)

By Article 102 of the Treaty of Versailles, the Principal Allied and Associated Powers undertook to establish the Town of Danzig with the surrounding territory as a Free City, to be placed under the protection of the League of Nations. The League of Nations also appoints a High Commissioner.

High Commissioner.—Dr. van Hamel. Appointed December 12, 1925, and assumed duties on February 22, 1926.

The proclamation of the Freedom of the City and adjacent territory, as well as the coming into force of the Danzig-Polish Treaty, in accordance with Article 104 of the Treaty of Versailles, took place on November 9, 1920. According to this Treaty Danzig and Poland form a single customs territory. A further Treaty between Danzig and Poland was signed on October 24, 1921, providing for joint economic administration. Since January 1, 1922, the Polish-German customs frontier extends to the sea, i. e., Danzig is a unit in the Polish customs administration.

The Constitution (approved by the League of Nations on May 11, 1922) provides for a Volkstag or Diet of 120 members elected for 4 years, and a Senate. This consists of a President, as Chairman, a Vice-President, and 20 Senators, the President and 7 Senators in main office being elected by the Volkstag for 4 years, the Vice-President and the other 13 Senators for the duration of the Volkstag. Election is by majority of votes. Any citizen over 25 years of age is eligible. Senators in main office may not accept any other public or professional appointment. They are also not allowed to become directors of any trading concern. The President of the Senate directs and supervises the whole routine of the Administration. The Senate is the highest State authority, and its meetings are not public. Plebiscites take place if demanded by a tenth of the voters. Any alteration of the Constitution by the Volkstag can only be effected by a two-thirds majority, with at least two-thirds of the Deputies present.

Elections are universal, direct, equal, and secret on the basis of proportional representation, suffrage being granted to all men and women belonging to the State of Danzig who have attained 20 years of age. The elections for the Legislative Assembly held on November 13, 1927, resulted in the return of the following parties: Social Democrats, 42; German Nationalists, 25; Centre, 18; National Liberals, 5; Communists, 8; German-Danzig People's Party, 5; German Liberals, 4; Poles, 3; smaller parties, 10; total, 120.

Area and Population.—The area of the Free City of Danzig is about 754 square miles, and population 384,000 on August 31, 1924, of which 4·4 per cent. voted for the Polish party at the last election for the Legislative Assembly.

The territory contains a total of 318 localities, of which 251 are rural communes, 63 estate districts, and 4 cities. In addition to the municipality of Danzig, whose administrative district had a population in July, 1927, of 230,000 (the district of Oliva having been incorporated with it on July 1, 1925), the following localities are cities:—Zoppot, 27,500 inhabitants; Neuteich, 2,860; and Tiegenhof, 3,100. Several centres classed as rural communes or otherwise are considerably larger than most of the 'cities,' as appears from the following list:—Ohra, 12,450; Praust, 3,350; Emaus, 2,340; Bürgerwiesen, 2,250; Stutthof, 2,500; Brentau, Hohenstein, Pasewark, Kalthof, Steegen, Lichtenau, Liessau, and Schöneberg, between 1,000 and 2,000. The number of households in the territory is 87,729 (August 31, 1924).

Instruction.—In May, 1927, Danzig had the following schools:—9 high schools for boys, 8 for girls and 1 for boys and girls together; 11 middle schools and 293 elementary schools. In the high schools there were 6,346 pupils (3,017 girls); in the middle schools, 3,594 pupils (1,453 girls); in the elementary schools, 41,237 pupils (20,111 girls). Teachers in high schools, 329, and middle schools, 139; in elementary schools, 1,001.

The Technical Institute had in the summer term of 1927, 65 teachers and 1,548 students.

Finance.—For 1923, the Budget of the Free City of Danzig balanced at 45,705,143,000 marks; for 1924, at 81,132,000 gulden; for 1925 at 114,900,000 gulden; for 1926 at 117,857,180 gulden; and for 1927 at 113,209,220 gulden.

Commerce and Shipping.—The total registered gross tonnage on December 1, 1925, was 128,673, comprising 44 steamships, 6 motor sailing-ships, 2 oil-tank ships, and 10 sea lighters of over 250 tons burden each, and 5 motor sailing-boats.

Shipping in 1926: entered, 5,967 vessels of 3,432,480 tons, and cleared 5,963 vessels of 3,395,840 tons, German shipping predominating, followed by Danish, Swedish and English.

In accordance with Article 19 of the Polish-Danzig Convention of November 9, 1920, a Danzig Port and Waterways Board, composed of 5 Polish and 5 Danzig Commissioners with a President of Swiss Nationality, has been formed to administer and exploit the Port of Danzig.

For centuries Danzig has been a well-known grain and timber market and shipping point. Its advantageous geographical situation at the mouth of the Vistula, its vicinity to the great German, Polish, and Russian grain districts, and its foreign shipping connections have placed it at times in the first rank. For lumber Great Britain is Danzig's best customer. Exports in 1926 were as follows: lumber 1,391,000 tons (901,916 tons in 1925); grain, 272,000 tons (187,000 tons in 1925); sugar, 185,000 tons (121,340 tons in 1925); coal, 3,405,000 tons.

Communications.—Danzig is connected with Germany by three main lines:—Danzig to Königsberg, 122 miles; Danzig (via Kreuz-Schneidemühl) to Berlin, 312 miles; Danzig to Stettin, 285 miles. Danzig is connected with Poland by three main lines:—Danzig to Warsaw, 204 miles; Danzig to Łódź, 263 miles; and Danzig to Posen, 192 miles. Besides these railway-lines there are regular connections by aeroplanes to Berlin (3 hours), to Königsberg (1 hour), to Warsaw (3 hours), to Marienburg (25 minutes). A regular passenger-steamer service is carried on between Danzig (Zoppot) and Swinemünde and Pillau. Other shipping-lines have arranged a regular passenger-service to Memel-Libau (weekly), to London-Hull (weekly), to to Reval-Leningrad (weekly), to Riga and Helsingfors (weekly), to America and Canada (every third week), to Stockholm (every tenth day), to Copenhagen (every tenth day).

The metric system is the sole legal system of weights and measures in Danzig.

Banking and Currency.—On October 22, 1923, a new gulden currency was issued by the Danziger Zentralkasse, the provisional bank of issue. According to this arrangement the pound sterling becomes current in the Free City, being equivalent to 25 gulden of 100 pfennige each. The introduction of the Danzig currency was effected through the Bank of Danzig, which was founded in January, 1924. Bank of Danzig Return, dated June 30, 1927, in Danzig gulden:—Assets: Coin and bullion 2,667,282 (of which gold coin 7,739, Danzig subsidiary coin 2,659,543), balances with the Bank of England inclusive notes 13,523,000, bills of exchange 21,167,185, balances at notice, 12,130,569. Liabilities: Capital paid up 7,500,000, reserves 2,849,542, notes in circulation 35,481,840, deposits on demand 2,735,616 ((a) public deposits including Savings Banks 649,669, (b) foreign public deposits including Banks of Issue 198,239, private deposits 1,420,248), other liabilities 8,539,716.

- VI. Princess Dagmar, born May 23, 1890; married November 23, 1922, to Lieutenant Jørgen Castenskiöld.

The crown of Denmark was elective from the earliest times. In 1448 after the death of the last male scion of the Princely House of Svend Estridsen the Danish Diet elected to the throne Christian I., Count of Oldenburg, in whose family the royal dignity remained for more than four centuries, although the crown was not rendered hereditary by right till the year 1660. The direct male line of the House of Oldenburg became extinct with the sixteenth king, Frederik VII., on November 15, 1863. In view of the death of the king without direct heirs, the Great Powers of Europe, 'taking into consideration that the maintenance of the integrity of the Danish Monarchy, as connected with the general interests of the balance of power in Europe, is of high importance to the preservation of peace,' signed a treaty at London on May 8, 1852, by the terms of which the succession to the crown of Denmark was made over to Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glücksburg, and to the direct male descendants of his union with the Princess Louise of Hesse Cassel, niece of King Christian VIII. of Denmark. In accordance with this treaty, a law concerning the succession to the Danish crown was adopted by the Diet, and obtained the royal sanction July 31, 1853.

King Christian X. has a civil list of 1,000,000 kroner. Annuities to other members of the royal house amount to 72,000 kroner.

Subjoined is a list of the Kings of Denmark, with the dates of their accession, from the time of election of Christian I. of Oldenburg:—

Constitution and Government.

The present Constitution of Denmark is founded upon the 'Grundlov' (charter) of June 5, 1915, as amended on September 10, 1920. This may in many respects be said to be a further development along the lines laid down in the 'Grundlov' of June 5, 1849, the charter which introduced the Constitution in Denmark. The amendments of September 10, 1920, are mostly of a formal character, necessitated by the incorporation of parts of Slesvig in 1920.

According to the present 'Grundlov,' the legislative power lies with the King and the 'Rigsdag' (Diet) jointly. The executive power is vested in the King, who exercises his authority through the ministers. The judicial power is with the courts. The King must be a member of the Evangelical-Lutheran Church, the official Church of the State. The King has not the right of declaring war or signing peace without the consent of the 'Rigsdag.' The 'Rigsdag' is composed of two bodies: the 'Folketing' (House of Commons) and the 'Landsting' (Senate). All men and women 25 years of age and with a fixed place of abode possess the franchise and are eligible for election. The 'Folketing' is at present composed of 149 members; 117 members are elected by the method of proportional representation in 23 districts. In order to attain an equal representation of the different parties, 31 'Tillægsmandater' (additional seats) are divided among such parties not having obtained sufficient returns at the district elections. One member is elected for the Faroe Islands by simple majority. The term of the Legislature is four years, but the King has power to dissolve the 'Folketing' before the end of the four years. The members of the 'Landsting' are elected indirectly by the 'Folketing's' voters of 35 years of age in the following way. In every 'Folketing's' district electors in a number corresponding to the population are elected by the method of Proportional Representation. The whole country is divided into six 'Landsting's' districts. In each of these the electors elect a number of members of the 'Landsting,' between 10-12. In this way 56 members are elected; one is elected in the Faroe Islands. Moreover, there are 19 members elected by the former 'Landsting,' according to the system of Proportional Representation. The members of the 'Landsting' sit for a term of eight years. There are elections every fourth year for the half of those elected by the electors, while those elected by the 'Landsting' go out all at once after an eight years' term.

The members of the 'Rigsdag' receive 5,600 kr. or 7,200 kr. a year, according to whether their homes are in or outside the capital.

The Rigsdag must meet every year on the first Tuesday in October. To the Folketing all money bills must in the first instance be submitted by the Government. The Landsting, besides its legislative functions, has the duty of appointing from its midst every four years judges who, together with the ordinary members of the Høiesteret, form the Rigsret, a tribunal who can alone try parliamentary impeachments. The ministers have free access to both of the legislative assemblies, but can only vote in the chamber of which they are members.

The executive (appointed December 14, 1926), acting under the king as president, and called the State Council—Statsraadet—consists of the following departments:—

The Presidency of the Council and Ministry of Agriculture.—Th. Madsen Mygdal.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs.—L. J. Moltesen.

Ministry of the Interior.—Oluf C. Kragh.

Ministry of Health.—V. Rubov.

Ministry of Justice.—Svenning Rytter.

Ministry of Defence.—S. Brorsen.

Ministry of Public Instruction.—J. Byskov.

Ministry of Ecclesiastical Affairs.—F. Bruun-Rasmussen.

Ministry of Public Works.—J. P. Stensballe.

Ministry of Finance.—N. Neergaard.

Ministry of Industry, Commerce and Navigation.—M. Slesbager.

The ministers are individually and collectively responsible for their acts, and if impeached, and found guilty, cannot be pardoned without the consent of the Folketing.

State of parties in the Landsting, after the election of September, 1924 :—
31 Liberals, 25 Socialists, 12 Conservatives, and 8 Radicals.

Folketing, elected December, 1926 :—47 Liberals, 16 Radicals, 53 Socialists, 30 Conservatives, 1 Slesvig (German Party), and 2 Georgistic Party.

In the year 1920 there were incorporated into Denmark parts of Slesvig which voted for Denmark at the plebiscite held in accordance with the Versailles Treaty of June 28, 1919 (made effective Jan. 10, 1920). The Northern Zone voted on Feb. 10, 1920, and 75,431 votes were cast for Denmark, and 25,329 votes for Germany. The Southern Zone voted on March 14, 1920, and 12,800 votes were given for Denmark, and 51,724 votes for Germany. The new Slesvig territories were incorporated on July 9, 1920, being officially named 'Sønderjydske Landsdele' (South Jutland Provinces).

For administrative purposes Denmark is divided into 22 counties (Amt), each of which is administered by a Governor (Amtmand). Moreover, the county is a municipal division with a county council superintending the rural municipalities (about 1,300). There are 88 urban municipalities with a mayor and a town council. Rural as well as urban municipal councils are elected direct by universal suffrage and Proportional Representation. Copenhagen forms a district by itself, and has its own form of administration.

Area and Population.

According to the census held on November 5, 1925, the area of Denmark is 16,568 square miles (42,927 square kilometres), and the population 3,434,555, including North Slesvig with 1,502 square miles (3,891 square kilometres) and 176,433 inhabitants.

The following table gives the area and population of Denmark in 1925:—

Divisions	Area 1925 English sq. m.	Population 1925	Population 1925 per sq. m.
City of Copenhagen (Kjøbenhavn) } without suburbs . . . . }	28	587,150	20,969
Islands in the Baltic . . . .	5,133	1,271,872	248
Peninsula of Jutland . . . .	11,408	1,575,533	138
Total . . . . .	16,568	3,434,555	207

The area of the Faeroe Islands is 540 square miles, and the population in 1925 was 22,835.

The population (excluding the Faeroes) consisted of 1,591,628 males and 1,676,203 females in 1921. The total population at the census of 1921 was 3,267,831, showing an increase during 1921–25 of 1·05 per cent. per annum (excluding North Slesvig). In Denmark (excluding North Slesvig) the town population has increased from 1,344,210 in 1921 to 1,482,297 in 1925; while the rural population has increased from 1,759,999 in 1921 to 1,952,258 in 1925. The population is almost entirely Scandinavian; in 1921, of the inhabitants of Denmark proper, 96·57 per cent. were born in Denmark, 0·09 per cent. were born in the Colonies, 0·17 per cent. in Norway, 1·11 per cent. in Sweden, 1·18 per cent. in Germany, and 0·88 per cent. in other foreign countries. The foreign-born population was thus 3·34 per cent. of the whole.

The population of the capital, Copenhagen (Kjøbenhavn), in 1925 was 587,150, or with suburbs, 731,496; Aarhus, 76,226; Odense, 52,376; Aalborg, 42,819; Horsens, 28,135; Randers, 26,856.

The following table gives the total number of births, deaths, and marriages with the surplus of births over deaths, for three years:—

Years	Total Births (living)	Still Births	Marriages	Deaths	Surplus of Births over Deaths
1924	73,834	1,803	26,471	38,107	35,727
1925	71,897	1,737	25,786	37,083	34,814
1926	70,734	1,643	25,733	38,093	32,641

Of the births in 1924, 10·30 per cent. were illegitimate; in 1925, 10·44; in 1926, 10·73. In 1924, there were 1,710 divorces; in 1925, 1,895.

Emigrants, chiefly to the United States and Canada, in 1924, 6,319; in 1925, 4,578; in 1926, 5,804.

Religion.

The established religion of Denmark is the Lutheran, which was introduced as early as 1536. The affairs of the National Church are under the superintendence of seven bishops, who have no political character. Complete religious toleration is extended to every sect, and no civil disabilities attach to Dissenters.

According to the census of 1921 there were 3,221,843 Protestants, 22,187 Roman Catholics (under a Vicar Apostolic resident in Copenhagen), 535 Greek Catholics, 5,947 Jews, 17,349 other or of no confession.

Instruction.

Elementary education has been widely diffused in Denmark since the beginning of the last century, and in 1814 it was made compulsory. The school age is from 7 to 14. In 1926 Denmark had 4,493 lower schools; of these 34 were maintained by the Government, 3,852 by the local communities and 607 were private institutions. The instruction in the public schools is mostly gratuitous. The number of pupils in the 4,493 schools was on January 1, 1926: 493,237. In 1926, 1,421 pupils were admitted to the university; of these 400 were girls. For higher instruction there are furthermore (1926): a veterinary and agricultural college at Copenhagen with 70 professors and teachers and 560 pupils; 267 technical schools with about 26,000 pupils; 21 training colleges for teachers with 1,600 pupils; 93 commercial schools with 13,700 pupils; 22 agricultural or horticultural schools and 59 folkehøjskoler or popular high schools (adult schools with about 9,600 pupils); a college of pharmacy (founded 1892) with 10 teachers and about 80 students; a school for dentists with 18 teachers and 140 pupils; a Royal academy of arts (founded 1754) with 22 teachers and about 300 pupils; a Polytechnic Institution (founded 1829) with 100 professors and teachers and about 1,000 students. The folkehøjskoler are all private, but to them and the agricultural schools the State annually makes a grant of about 1,465,000 kroner. The University of Copenhagen, founded in 1479, has 5 faculties, to all of which women are admitted on equal terms with men. It has about 120 professors and teachers, and about 4,400 students.

Pauperism and Old Age Pensions.

Ordinary poor relief is regulated by the poor relief law of April 9, 1891 (and its amendments) under which in the financial year 1925-26, 82,621 (2.4 per cent. of the population) were relieved at a cost of approximately 34 million kroner.

A law of August 7, 1922, entering into force on April 1, 1923, and replacing the old age pensions law of April 9, 1891, grants an annual sum of money as old age pension (Aldersrente) to any person being 65 years of age and fulfilling certain conditions. The old age pension, which does not involve the loss of civil rights, is granted according to the principle of fixed rates, the law stating the sums which have to be paid under the various circumstances. The pension varies according as the commune of domicile is a town commune or a rural one, and certain deductions are made for self-earned incomes. In Copenhagen, for example, the old age pension of a married couple, both 65 years of age, without any earned income, is 1008 kroner per annum. The subvention is paid by the commune of domicile and seven-twelfths of it is refunded by the State. For the financial year ending March 31, 1926, 105,000 persons were relieved. The total expenditure was 73 million kroner.

According to a law of 1913, assistance without the loss of civil rights is granted to children living with their widowed mothers. The expenditure (divided between the municipalities and the State) amounted in the financial year 1925-26 to 2,321,000 kroner.

Justice and Crime.

The lowest courts of justice in Denmark are organized in 99 tribunals where cases of only small consequence are dealt with by a single judge. Cases of greater consequence are dealt with by the superior courts (Landsretterne); these courts are also courts of appeal for the above-named minor cases. Of superior courts there are three: Ostre Landsret in Copenhagen with 17 judges, Vestre Landsret in Viborg with 12 judges, and Søndre Landsret in Sønderborg with 4 judges. From this an appeal lies to the supreme court (Højesteret) in Copenhagen, composed of 13 judges. Judges under 65 years of age can be removed only by judicial sentence.

In 1925, 3,925 men and 559 women were convicted of crimes and delicts. On March 31, 1926, 1,199 men and 65 women were in the penitentiaries of Denmark.

Finance.

By the terms of the Constitution of Denmark the annual financial budget called the 'Finanslovsforslag,' must be laid on the table of the Folketing at the beginning of each session, i.e. at the beginning of October. As to the annual financial accounts called 'Statsregnskab,' the Constitutional Charter prescribes them to be examined by four paid revisers, two of whom are elected by the Folketing and two by the Landsting. Their report is submitted to both Chambers which, after due consideration, pass their resolution generally to the effect that they have no remarks to make on the balance-sheet.

The following shows the actual revenue and expenditure for three years ending March 31 and the estimates for two years :—

Year ending March 31	Revenue		Expenditure

The public debt of Denmark has been incurred in part by large annual deficits in former years, before the establishment of parliamentary government, and in part by railway undertakings and the construction of harbours, lighthouses, and other works of public importance. The following table gives the national liabilities for six years :—

Year ending March 31	Capital of Debt	Year ending March 31	Capital of Debt
1922	66,213,000	1925	66,733,000
1923	66,182,000	1926	64,979,000
1924	67,585,000	1927	64,049,000

The debt is divided into an internal and a foreign. The total foreign debt amounted in 1927 to 29,116,700%. The debt is at 3, 3½, 4, 4½, 5, 5½ and 6 per cent.

The investments of the State on March 31, 1926, including the reserve fund, the State railways, and the domains, amounted to 1,549,966,000 kroner.

The revenue and expenditure and the property and debt of Copenhagen and of the provincial towns and places, rural communes and county communes were as follows in kroner (year ending March 31) :—

Defence.

The Danish army is a national militia, resembling in some respects the Swiss army. Every able-bodied Danish subject is liable to serve in the army or navy, except the inhabitants of the Faroe Islands. Exemptions in Denmark are few, even clergymen having to serve.

Service commences at the age of 20 and lasts for 16 years. For the first 8 the men belong to the active army, and for the second 8 years to the reserve. At the time of joining, the recruits are continuously trained for 150 days in the infantry, 215 days in the field artillery, 245 days in the coast artillery, and 425 days in the cavalry. The engineers have 200 days, and the train 60 days' continuous training. In the case of about one-fourth of the men, their initial training is prolonged by periods ranging from 2½ to 8½ months, according to the arm of the service to which they belong. Subsequent training for all arms only takes place twice in the remaining eight years of army service, and then only for 23 days on each occasion.

The country is organised in one territorial command, comprising:—

Infantry and mounted troops are armed with the Krag-Jorgensen 8 mm. rifle or carbine and the Madsen machine gun, field artillery with a Krupp gun, firing a 14·88-pound shell.

In 1927, there were 8,625 recruits called up for training, which with the permanent establishment made up a strength (exclusive of armed police) of 10,892 all ranks. The military expenditure for 1926-27 was 37,746,039 kroner.

The naval forces have been reconstructed pursuant to the law of National Defence of August 8, 1922. The Navy, as well as the Army, is under the direction of the Minister of Defence.

The fleet is for purposes of coast-defence. It now includes three coast defence ironclads of 3,650-3,800 tons, Peder Skram, Olfert Fischer, Herluf Trolle, each carrying a pair of 9·4-inch and four 6-inch guns; one of 4,800 tons, Niels Juel, with ten 6-inch guns; one of 2,200 tons, Skjold, with one 9·4 and three 4·7-inch guns; 2 old cruisers, Hejmdal and Gejser, used for training purposes, 5 sea-going mine-layers, one sloop Fylla (ex-British Asphodel), 3 fishery inspection ships (Islands Falk, Beskytteren and Diana), 23 torpedo boats; 16 submarines. The Navy is now paying chief attention to submarines and aircraft, and a new parent ship for the former is under construction. It is also proposed to build 3 new torpedo boats. Expenditure of the Ministry of Marine in 1926-27, 24,171,707 kroner.

Production and Industry.

The soil of Denmark is greatly subdivided, owing partly to the state of the law, which interdicts the union of small farms into larger estates, but encourages, in various ways, the parcelling out of landed property, and leaves the tenant entire control of his land so long as the rent is paid.

Of the total area of Denmark 80 per cent. is productive ; about one sixth of the unproductive area is peat bogs. According to the census of July 15, 1927, the extent of the cultivated area in Denmark was as follows (in thousand acres):—grain areas, 3,198 ; root crop, 1,225 ; other crop, 76 ; green fodder and grass, 2,192 ; fallow land, 207 ; total cultivated area, 6,838. The acreage and production of the chief crops for two years were as follows :—

Crops	Area		Production
	1925	1926	1925	1926
	Acres	Acres	Tons	Tons
Wheat . . . .	197,806	251,554	265,290	238,598

Potatoes . . .	186,091	189,283	1,310,900	811,700

On July 15, 1927, there were in Denmark 523,785 horses, 2,911,949 head of cattle, 3,728,623 swine, and 18,524,000 hens.

According to statistics collected on July 15, 1925, there were 89,175 industrial factories and shops in Denmark, employing altogether 392,000 persons, of whom 270,000 were actual labourers. Of the total establishments 26,300 factories used mechanical power. In 1926, there were in Denmark 5 distilleries whose output of brandy reduced to 100° amounted to 6,478,000 litres. In 1926, there were produced 1,431,000 litres of strong beer, and 827,000 litres small beer. In the same year 151,119 tons of beet-sugar were produced at 9 sugar factories, and 69,616 tons of margarine were manufactured at 134 factories.

In the Danish fisheries the total value of the fish caught was, 1922, 1,494,444*l.* ; 1923, 1,879,200*l.* ; 1924, 2,463,000*l.* ; 1925, 2,441,000*l.* ; 1926, 1,973,000*l.* The fleet in 1926 consisted of 15,590 boats.

Commerce.

The following table shows the value, according to official returns, of the imports and general exports (excluding precious metal) for six years (18.16 kroner = l.) :—

Year	Imports	Exports	Year	Imports	Exports

Shipping and Navigation.

On December 31, 1926, Denmark (without colonies) possessed 1870 vessels (above 20 registered tons gross) of 1,108,300 registered tons gross (674,600 registered tons net) in her mercantile marine, of which 638 of 311,400 tons gross (477,800 tons net) were steamers, and 980 motor ships of 259,700 tons gross (164,400 tons net). In 1926, 33,073 vessels of 10,431,000 tons cargo entered the Danish ports from foreign countries, and 34,649 vessels of 10,608,000 tons cleared.

Internal Communications.

Denmark proper (exclusive of Copenhagen) has (March 31, 1927) 7,607 kilometres or 4,721 miles of road, besides 23,740 miles of by-ways. There are (1926) railways of a total length of 3,154 English miles open for traffic in the kingdom. Of this total, 1,519 English miles belong to the State. The total value of the State railways (road, buildings, cars, etc.) up to March 31, 1927, was 432,550,000 kroner. The railways have a gauge of 4 ft. 8½ inches, except 128 miles of which the gauge is 3 ft. 3½ inches.

The Post Office in the year 1926-27 carried 253,848,000 letters and post-cards, and 186,450,000 samples and printed matter. There are 1,394 post-offices. The State telegraphs in 1926-27 carried 4,589,000 messages, of which 1,147,000 were internal. The length of State telegraph lines (March 31, 1927) was 9,017 English miles; number of offices 507. At the same date the railway telegraphs had 446 offices. On March 31, 1927, the length of telephonic wires of the State and the private companies was 817,196 English miles. In the year 1926-27 there were 474,051,000 telephonic conversations.

Money and Credit.

On December 31, 1927, the accounts of the National Bank balanced at 513,336,000 kroner. The assets included 182,016,000 kroner in bullion and specie. The liabilities included 354,178,000 kroner note issue, 27,000,000 kroner of capital, and 11,340,000 kroner reserve fund. In Denmark there are 185 other banks for commercial, agricultural, industrial, and other purposes. On March 31, 1926, there were 528 savings banks, with 1,762,150 depositors, and deposits amounting to 1 913,000,000 kroner, or about 1,086 kroner to each account.

The nominal value of the coin minted (including recoinage of worn pieces) in Denmark since 1873 is given as follows :—

Years ending March 31	Gold	Silver, nickel, aluminium-bronze, bronze and iron	Total
1873-1926 . . . .	Kroner 149,246,056	Kroner 75,465,344	Kroner 224,711,394
1927 . . . . .	7,157,780	6,055,100	13,212,880
Total (1873-1927) . .	156,403,830	81,520,444	237,924,274

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The monetary unit, the Krone of 100 öre, is of the value of 1s. 1½d., or about 18 kroner to the pound sterling.

Gold coins are 20 and 10-kroner pieces. The 20-kroner piece weighs 8·870 grammes .900 fine, and thus contains 8·0645 grammes of fine gold. Small change: 2 kroner, 1 kroner and ½ kroner pieces of aluminium-bronze; 25 öre and 10 öre pieces of nickel, and 5 öre, 2 öre and 1 öre pieces of iron and of bronze.

The standard of value is gold.

The use of the metric system of weights and measures, under the law of May 4, 1907, became obligatory in Denmark in public offices on April 1, 1910, and generally on April 1, 1912.

ICELAND.

(ISLAND.)

Reigning King.

Iceland is united with Denmark by a personal bond of union under the government of King Christian X. (see Denmark).

The first settlers came to Iceland in 874. Between 980 and 1264 Iceland was an independent republic, but by the 'Old Treaty' of 1263 the country recognised the rule of the King of Norway. In 1381, Iceland, together with Norway, came under the rule of the Danish Kings, but when Norway was separated from Denmark in 1814, Iceland remained under the rule of Denmark. Since December 1, 1918, it has been acknowledged as a sovereign State, and is united with Denmark only through the identity of the Sovereign.

King Christian X. has as King of Iceland a civil list of 60,000 kroner.

Constitution and Government.—By the Act of Union of November 30, 1918, Iceland is temporarily united with Denmark in certain affairs beyond the King's person.

According to the Act of Union, Denmark and Iceland are free, sovereign States, united by one King and by the agreement comprised in the Union Act. The order of succession is not to be altered without the assent of both States. In Iceland, Danish citizens enjoy the same rights as Icelandic citizens, and in Denmark the latter enjoy the same rights as Danish citizens. But citizens of either of the States are exempt from military service in the other. Danish goods and products in Iceland and Icelandic goods and products in Denmark are treated no less favourably than those of any other country. Denmark takes charge of the foreign affairs of Iceland, and if Iceland so desires it, special Icelandic attachés or experts on Icelandic conditions may be appointed to Danish embassies and consulates, the expenses arising out of such appointments to be borne by Iceland. Denmark has a minister at Reykjavík, and Iceland a minister at Copenhagen.

An advisory Danish-Icelandic committee of eight members has been appointed to review Bills of importance to both States, and also to prepare Bills aiming at co-operation between the two States. After December 31, 1940, the Danish Parliament and the Icelandic Legislature may demand negotiations to be opened concerning the revision of the Union Act.

Denmark has informed the Powers that, in conformity with the Union Act, she recognises Iceland as a sovereign State.

The present constitution of Iceland is embodied in the Charter of May 18, 1920. By the terms of this Charter the executive power belongs to the King, and is exercised by him through responsible ministers, while the legislative power rests conjointly with the King and the Parliament, which is called Althing. The Althing is composed of 42 members, of whom 36 are elected for the term of 4 years by universal suffrage in constituencies, each electing one or two representatives by simple majority, except the capital, where 4 members are elected by Proportional Representation. The remaining 6 members are elected for the term of 8 years by Proportional Representation for the whole country. The franchise is enjoyed by all Icelandic citizens (men and women) of good reputation (unless they are indebted for poor-relief) who are over 25 years of age and have resided in the country during the previous 5 years. All voters are eligible as candidates, save only the superior judges.

The Althing is divided into two Houses, the Upper House and the Lower House. The former is composed of 14 members, viz. the 6 members elected by Proportional Representation for the whole country, together with 8 members elected by the whole Althing in common sitting out of the members elected by universal suffrage. The remaining 28 members form the Lower House. The members of the Althing receive payment for their services besides travelling expenses; members residing in the capital are allowed 8 krónur (8s. 11d.) per day, and members residing outside the capital 10 krónur (11s. 1d.) per day. This payment has temporarily been raised by 40 per cent.

The Althing must meet on February 15 in every year, unless it is convoked by the King at an earlier date. The Budget Bills must first be laid by the Government before the Lower House, but all other Bills can be introduced in either of the Houses. If the Houses do not agree they assemble in a common sitting, and the final decision is given by a majority of two-thirds of the voters, with the exception of Budget Bills, where a simple majority is sufficient. The ministers have free access to both Houses, but can only vote in the House of which they are members.

The executive power is exercised under the King by a ministry divided into 3 departments. The ministry, appointed August 28, 1927, is as follows:—

President of the Council and Minister of Trade and Communications—Tryggvi Thorhallsson.

Minister of Justice and of Ecclesiastical Affairs—Jonas Jonsson.

Minister of Finance—Magnus J. Kristjánsson.

The ministers are responsible for their acts. They can be impeached by the Althing, and in that case their cause will be decided by the Landsdómur, a special tribunal, which can only try parliamentary impeachments.

For administrative purposes Iceland is divided into 16 provinces (sýslur), each governed by a chief executive functionary (sýslumaður). Each province forms one or two municipal districts with a council superintending the rural municipalities (about 200). There are also 7 urban municipalities with a town council, independent of the provinces, and forming by themselves administrative districts co-ordinate with the provinces. The municipal councils are elected direct by universal suffrage (men and women over 25 years of age), in urban municipalities by Proportional Representation, but in rural municipalities by simple majority.

Area and Population.—The following table gives the area and population of Iceland according to the census in 1920.—

Divisions.	Area, English sq. m.	Population, 1920.	Population, 1920, Per sq. m.
The South-West . . . .	4,125	34,425	8·3
The Western peninsula . . . .	2,658	13,897	3·7
The North . . . . .	13,695	22,900	1·7
The East . . . . .	5,954	10,214	1·7
The South . . . . .	12,277	13,754	1·1
Total . . . . .	39,709	94,690	2·4

At the end of 1926, the population was estimated at 101,764.

The growth of the population has been as follows :—

Year.	Population.	Increase per cent. annually	Year.	Population.	Increase per cent. annually.
1880	72,445	—	1910	85,188	0·91
1890	70,927	0·21	1920	94,690	1·07

In 1920, there were 46,172 males and 48,518 females. The conjugal condition was as follows :—

	Unmarried.	Married.	Widowed.	Divorced.
Males . . . . .	30,497	13,776	1,681	218
Females . . . . .	30,663	13,694	3,898	263

In 1920, 54,245 were domiciled in rural districts, and 40,445 in towns and villages (of over 300 inhabitants). The population is almost entirely Icelandic. In 1920, the foreign-born population numbered only 710, or 0·7 per cent. of the whole ; 352 were born in Denmark, 155 in Norway, and 203 in other countries.

The capital of Iceland, Reykjavík, had in 1926 a population of 23,224 ; other towns are Vestmannaeyjar, 3,331, Hafnarfjörður, 3,085, Akureyri, 3,050, Ísafjörður, 2,227, Siglufjörður, 1,580, Seydisfjörður, 977.

The following table gives the total number of births, deaths, and marriages, with the surplus of births over deaths, for three years :—

Years.	Marriages.	Total living Births.	Stillborn.	Deaths.	Surplus of Births over Deaths.
1924	557	2,500	67	1,462	1,038
1925	623	2,543	67	1,239	1,314
1926	623	2,659	71	1,134	1,525

Of the births in 1926, 13·6 per cent. were illegitimate (14·3 per cent. in 1925).

Religion.—The national Church, and the only one endowed by the State, is Evangelical Lutheran. But there is complete religious liberty, and no civil disabilities are attached to those not of the national religion. The affairs of the national Church are under the superintendence of one bishop. At the census of 1920 only 463 were returned as Dissenters.

Instruction.—There is a University in Reykjavík, comprising 4 faculties (Theology, Medicine, Jurisprudence, and Philosophy). There is one grammar school, 3 public high schools, besides 2 ladies' schools, a school for elementary-school teachers, 2 schools of agriculture, a school of navigation, a commercial high school, and several other special schools. The elementary instruction is compulsory for a period of 5 years, the school age being from 10 to 14 years. Before the age of 10 the children are usually privately educated, at any rate in the country. In 1919–20, there were 209 elementary schools, with 318 teachers and 6,485 pupils. There are also several continuation schools for young people.

Pauperism and Old-Age Pensions.—Ordinary poor-relief is regulated by the law of November 10, 1905. Each community constitutes a poor district. In 1925, the expenditure amounted to 56,800*l*.

There is in every community one Old-Age Pension Fund, to which all men and women from 18 to 60 years of age, to whom pensions are not otherwise secured, are bound to contribute, unless they are considered too poor to do so. In addition the funds receive a subvention from the State. Grants are made to infirm poor persons over 60 years of age who for the preceding 5 years have not received poor-relief. In 1921 there were granted subvention from the funds to an amount of 4,182*l*., and at the end of that year the total property of the funds amounted to 34,595*l*.

Justice and Crime.—The lower courts of justice in Iceland are those of the provincial magistrates (sýslunenn) and town judges (þæjarfógetar). From these there is an appeal to the Supreme Court (hæstirjettur) in Reykjavík, which has 3 judges.

In 1923, 38 men and 2 women were convicted of crime.

The State possesses a comparatively large reserve fund invested in different loans. On December 31, 1926, it amounted to 2,026,588 krónur (about 112,000*l.*)

The public debt of Iceland has been incurred partly by the establishment of telegraph lines and other important public works, partly by increasing the means of the National Bank, but mainly owing to the extraordinary expenses caused by the European War (buying of ships and providing of commodities). The public debt was on December 31, 1926, 10,501,373 krónur. It is in a great measure a foreign debt, due mainly to Danish creditors. The foreign debt amounted to 7,481,468 krónur, and the internal debt 4,019,905 krónur.

Defence.—Iceland possesses neither an army nor a navy, nor any fortifications, and according to the Act of Union of 1918 its permanent neutrality is established.

Production.—Of the total area of Iceland, about six-sevenths is unproductive, but only about one-quarter per cent. is under cultivation, which is confined to hay, potatoes, and turnips. In 1926 the total hay crop from cultivated and uncultivated land was about 3,458,000 cwt., the crop of potatoes 66,000 cwt., and of turnips 23,000 cwt. In the spring of 1926 the live stock was as follows:—Horses 52,800, head of cattle 27,900, sheep 590,000, goats 2,800.

The total value of the fisheries in 1925 was estimated at 46,791,000 krónur (about 2,577,000*l.*), whereof the cod fishery was valued at 43,378,000 krónur, and the herring fishery at 3,413,000.

Shipping and Navigation.—The mercantile marine of Iceland (above 12 gross tons) was, in 1927, 81 steam vessels of 23,788 gross tons, 215 motor vessels of 5,472 gross tons, and 20 sailing vessels of 558 gross tons: total, 316 vessels of 29,818 gross tons.

Internal Communications.—There are no railways in Iceland. At the end of 1924 there were completed about 611 km. (379 miles) of carriage roads outside the towns.

There are 428 post offices.

The length of the telegraph and telephone lines at the end of 1926 was 1,947 miles. The wires had a length of 5,460 miles. There were 222 telegraph and telephone offices. Number of dispatches sent in the year 1926 was 245,837, of which 135,359 were internal. Number of telephone conversations was 455,277. The total receipts amounted to 1,398,226 krónur, and the total expenditure to 1,127,457 krónur, leaving a surplus of 270,769 krónur.

Money and Credit.—There are two banks in Iceland, Landsbankinn (The National Bank), a note-issuing bank which belongs entirely to the State, and Íslands banki (Bank of Iceland), a private joint-stock bank, which has a limited right of issuing notes. On December 31, 1926, the accounts of the National Bank balanced at 51,038,834 krónur. The liabilities included 2,464,000 krónur note issue. A special department for loans on mortgage is connected with the National Bank. The accounts of the Bank of Iceland balanced 43,884,477 krónur at the end of 1926. The assets included 1,926,550 krónur in bullion and specie. The liabilities included 4,800,000 krónur note issue, and 4,500,000 krónur of capital.

At the end of 1926 there were 50 savings banks with 22,000 depositors, and deposits amounting to 7,533,000 krónur, or about 342 krónur to each account.

Money, Weights and Measures.—The Icelandic name of the monetary unit is króna, pl. krónur. The króna, which is divided in 100 aurar, is of the value of 1s. 1½d. or about 18 krónur, to the pound sterling.

The metric system of weights and measures is obligatory.

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC.

(REPÚBLICA DOMINICANA.)

Columbus is said to have discovered the island of Santo Domingo which he called Hispaniola (1492), and the city of Santo Domingo was for long the centre of Spanish power in America.

Constitution and Government.—The Dominican Republic, founded in 1844, is governed under a Constitution bearing date November 18, 1844, re-proclaimed, with changes, at various dates down to 1924. The Constituent Assembly passed a new Revised Constitution on June 13, 1924, the principal changes in which were the creation of the office of Vice-President, that a President may not seek re-election for a second successive period of office, abolition of the death penalty, and election of senators, deputies, governors of provinces and certain provincial officials by direct popular vote. Each province is represented in the legislature by one senator and (in practice) by two deputies. Senators and deputies are elected for four years, and receive 300 dollars per month, or 3,600 dollars per year.

The executive of the Republic is vested in a Cabinet composed of the President and seven Ministers, who are the heads of the departments of the Interior and Police, Finance and Commerce, Justice and Public Instruction, Health and Welfare, Agriculture and Immigration, Foreign Affairs, and Public Works and Communications.

President of the Republic.—Horacio Vasquez. (Assumed office on July 12, 1924.)

Vice-President.—Frederico Velazquez.

Area and Population.—The area of the Dominican Republic, which embraces the eastern portion of the island of Hayti, Quisqueya or Santo Domingo—the western division forming the Republic of Haiti—is estimated at 19,332 square miles, with 1,017 miles of coast line and 193 miles of frontier line with Haiti, and a population, according to the census of 1921, of 897,405. The population of each of the 12 provinces was as follows: Santo Domingo, 146,446; San Pedro de Macoris, 43,612; Seybo, 58,408; Azua, 100,577; Barahona, 43,180; Samaná, 16,915; La Vega, 105,820; Pacificador, 77,620; Espailat, 50,956; Santiago de los Caballeros, 122,773; Puerto Plata, 59,025; and Monte Cristi, 67,073.

The population contains some creoles of Spanish descent, but is mainly composed of a mixed race of European, African and Indian blood; there are, however, many Turks and Syrians, especially in Santo Domingo City, where the dry goods trade is mainly in their hands. The language used by the populace is Spanish, but on the Samaná Peninsula there are a few hundred farmers, descended from American negro immigrants of 1828, who speak corrupt English. The Haitian patois is spoken to a considerable extent along the frontier.

The capital, Santo Domingo, on the left bank of the river Ozama, founded 1496 by Bartolomeo Columbus, brother of Christopher, was destroyed in 1502 by a hurricane, and subsequently rebuilt on the right bank of the same river. According to the census of 1921, the City of Santo Domingo had 30,957 inhabitants and the City of Puerto Plata 7,807; Santiago de Los Caballeros 17,052; San Pedro de Macoris, 13,802; La Vega, 6,564; Samaná, 1,656; Sanchez, 3,075; Azua, 4,707; Monte Cristy, 2,580; Pacificador (San Francisco de Macoris), 5,188; and Espaillat (Moca), 3,994.

Religion and Instruction.—The religion of the State is Roman Catholic; other forms of religion are permitted. There is a Catholic Archbishopric with one suffragan see, viz., Porto Rico, now belonging to the United States. The Archbishop has been appointed Apostolic Delegate to both these countries (Santo Domingo and Porto Rico) and to Cuba.

Primary instruction is gratuitous and obligatory, being supported by the communes and by central aid. The public or State schools are primary, secondary, technical schools, and normal schools. The Professional Institute was formed into a University by Presidential decree on November 29, 1914. In 1920 there were 972 public schools in the Republic (6 being secondary) with 105,000 pupils (51,585 in 1918), and 1,544 teachers.

Justice.—The chief judicial power resides in the Supreme Court of Justice, which consists of a president and 6 justices chosen by Congress, and 1 (Procurador General de la Republica) appointed by the executive; all these appointments are only for 4 years, but may be prolonged indefinitely. The territory of the Republic is divided into 12 judicial districts, each having its own civil and criminal tribunal and court of first instance, and these districts are subdivided into 60 communes, each with a local justice (alcalde), a secretary and bailiff (alguacil). There are three appeal courts, at Santiago de los Caballeros, at Santo Domingo City, and at La Vega.

Finance.—The receipts and disbursements for 6 years were, in United States dollars :—

—	Revenue	Expenditure	—	Revenue	Expenditure
	Dollars	Dollars		Dollars	Dollars
1922 . .	12,164,142	11,353,686	1925 . .	10,702,091	10,689,313
1923 . .	6,171,292	7,241,988	1926 . .	14,279,375	13,481,619
1924 . .	3,708,919	7,951,722	1927 . .	11,700,250	11,700,250

In accordance with the American-Dominican Convention of 1907, an American Receiver-General of Customs supervises customs collections and controls the payment of interest and amortization of the three Dominican Bond issues. This arrangement has at present nearly 20 more years to run providing there are no further loans.

Customs collections for the calendar year 1924 amounted to 4,283,750 dollars; for 1925, 4,915,003 dollars; for 1926, 4,668,800 dollars. Income from the national lottery, 1926, was 2,235,690 dollars.

The bonded debt of the Republic as at December 31, 1926, was as follows:—1908 loan, 2,262,790 dollars; 1922 loan, 10,000,000 dollars; and 1926 loan, 5,000,000 dollars; total, 17,262,790 dollars.

Defence.—The National Military Force consists of a native constabulary known as the 'Policia Nacional.' This body comprises 3,000 officers and men.

The Republic has no navy.

Production and Industry.—Agriculture is the chief source of wealth, sugar cultivation being the principal industry. Of the total area, about 12,500 square miles is cultivable, and about 3,000,000 acres suitable for grazing. The largest sugar estates are in the southern part of the Republic; tobacco, cacao and coffee being grown in the central, northern, and eastern portions; production of sugar in 1925, 345,492 short tons; 1926, 394,033 short tons. There are 21 sugar 'centrals,' mostly owned and operated by American companies, although very little of the sugar is sold to the United States. Cacao yield in 1927, 26,000,000 kilos. Tobacco production in 1927, 35,000,000 pounds; coffee production in 1925, 2,666,313 pounds. The forest area of the Republic is 9,500,000 acres.

The live-stock census taken on May 15, 1921, showed 360,155 cows, 87,876 oxen, 199,127 calves, 162,800 horses, 64,860 mules, 674,232 pigs, 705,000 goats and 2,949,053 fowls.

Minerals of almost every kind are found at various places in the Republic, principal among which are gold and copper. Iron is found in the form of black magnetic oxide of iron, and petroleum has been found in the Azua region. Coal of the lignite variety of little commercial value is found in considerable quantities, as well as some anthracite coal. Silver, platinum, and traces of quicksilver have been found, and rock salt near Neiba is found in inexhaustible quantities, there being several hills of native salt covered with only a thin layer of soil. For building purposes there is a large variety of limestone and sandstone.

Commerce.—The total imports into and exports from the Dominican Republic for 5 years were valued as follows in pounds sterling (£1 = 5 dollars):—

—	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926

Shipping and Communications.—The merchant marine of the Republic consists of 1 steamer of 263 tons, 8 schooners between 73 and 193 tons, and 20 schooners of less than 50 tons. These vessels are principally engaged in the coastwise trade.

In 1926, 1,959 vessels of 2,357,444 tons entered the ports of the Republic, and 1,585 vessels of 1,959,901 tons, cleared.

A trunk highway from the capital on the south coast to Monte Cristy on the north coast, with a total length of 182 miles, was completed and opened to traffic in May 1922. The highway from Santo Domingo to San Pedro de Macoris was opened in April 1923; it has since been extended to Seybo, viâ Hato Mayor, and is being continued to Higüey. Another road running west to San Cristóbal, Bani and Azua was opened in July, 1923. This road is being continued to Comendador on the Haytian frontier, where it will join a Haytian road to Port-au-Prince. The journey between the Haytian and Dominican capitals is now possible by motor in 12 hours.

There are two railway lines in the Republic: (1) Samaná-Santiago line, belonging to an English company, runs from Sanchez on the Bay of Samaná to La Vega (73 miles); it has two branch lines (under the same management, but different ownership) from La Jina to San Francisco de Macoris (8½ miles), and from Las Cabullas to Salcedo (8 miles); this last has been extended to Moca (7 miles) in order to join the other system; (2) a Government line, the Dominican Central railway, runs from Puerto Plata to Santiago and Moca (60 miles). Total length of line (1919) 153 miles. There are, besides, about 255 miles of private lines on the large estates.

On January 1, 1919, the postal and telegraphic services were united. The number of offices handling both services is 62; number of post offices, 87.

The telegraph, in the hands of a French company, is in operation between Santo Domingo, Cotui, La Vega, Moca, Santiago and Puerto Plata; from Santiago to Monte Cristy and from Santo Domingo to San Pedro de Macoris, with a total length of about 310 miles. Submarine cables belonging to the same company and to the All-America Cables, Incorporated, connect in the north Puerto Plata with New York and Puerto Rico, and in the south Santo Domingo with Puerto Rico and Curaçao. A concession was obtained by the All America Cables, Inc., which commenced operations in August, 1924, when their existing cable from Porto Rico to Cuba was lengthened and brought into Santo Domingo City.

There is a telephone system owned and operated by the Dominican Government with a total length of 1,034 miles. This telephone system connects this Republic with Haiti. There are two wireless stations in the Republic: one in Santo Domingo City and the other in La Romana (a new port in the province of Seybo, declared open to foreign traffic in August 1912). The number of radiograms sent (1921-1922) was 5,442; received, 7,251. In addition, Government wireless stations are now also to be found at Santiago de los Caballeros and San Pedro de Macoris, but are not yet available for public service.

Money, Weights, and Measures.—On July 1st, 1897, the United States gold dollar was adopted as the standard of value. A small amount of debased silver coin circulates as small change at the ratio of 5 to 1, viz., 1 peso = 20 cents United States currency. There are no Dominican gold coins or paper money in circulation.

The metric system was adopted on August, 1, 1913, but English and Spanish units are quite common in ordinary commercial transactions.

Diplomatic and Consular Representatives.

ECUADOR.

(REPÚBLICA DEL ECUADOR.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Ecuador, which is situated in the north-west of South America, approximately between latitude 1°40' north and 6° south, and between 69°20' east longitude and 90° west, was constituted May 11, 1830, in consequence of a civil war which separated the members of the original Republic of Colombia, founded by Simon Bolivar, by uniting the Presidency of Quito to the Vice-Royalty of New Grenada, and the Captaincy-General of Venezuela, when they threw off the Spanish yoke. Under the present Constitution, promulgated December 28, 1906, the executive is vested in a President, elected for the term of four years, while the legislative power is given to a Congress of two Houses; the first consisting of thirty-two senators, two for each province (chosen for four years), and the second of 48 deputies, on the basis of one deputy for every 30,000 inhabitants, chosen for two years; both elected by adults who can read and write. The Congress meets on the 10th of August of every year at Quito, the capital, without being summoned by the Government. The election of the President takes place in a direct manner by the people. Under the present constitution there is no election for Vice-President. In case of death, or other cause of vacancy in the office of President, he is replaced (1) by the President of the Senate of the Last Congress, and (2) if he should also fail, by the President of the Chamber of Deputies.

Since the military coup d'état which took place on July 9, 1925, the political situation of Ecuador has been very uncertain, and continual changes have taken place in the form of administration. The Junta of Provisional Government, composed of seven men, proved impossible and was dissolved on April 1, 1926, by the Military Board, who appointed Dr. Isidro Ayora Provisional President of the Republic with full powers to administer the country. The political situation since that date appears to have improved considerably, especially in view of the fact that the Military Board has practically dissociated itself from politics. It is proposed to summon a National Assembly at a later date in order to nominate, in a constitutional form, the chief magistrate.

By the terms of the Constitution privileges of rank and race are not allowed to exist within the Republic. Until October 20, 1918, most of the Indians were virtually in bondage, and peonage and debt servitude existed in their worst forms on the landed estates. But by a Legislative decree of that date peonage was abolished. By an edict of 1896 the Indians are exempted from paying tribute, and are admitted to citizenship, provided they can read and write.

The Provinces are administered by Governors, appointed by the Government; their subdivisions, or cantons, by political chiefs; and the parishes by political lieutenants. The Galapagos Archipelago is under the administration of a Territorial Chief, whose functions are the same as those of a Provincial Governor.

Area and Population.

Since the frontiers of Ecuador have not been settled, no definite figure of the area of the country can be given. Ecuador is said to have more boundaries than any other country, and there are maps of the Republic showing six different frontiers according to six different authorities. Taking the boundaries arranged with Brazil in 1904, with Colombia per Treaty of July 15, 1916, and those for Peru according to the Royal Decree of 1740, the area of Ecuador is 571,250 square kilometres (220,502 square miles). Taking its Peruvian boundary in accordance with the Protocol Pedemonte-Mosquera of 1830, its area is 443,750 square kilometres (171,287 square miles). According to an estimate made in 1926, the total area is 284,860 square kilometres, or 109,978 square miles. The area of the Archipelago of Colon (Galapagos Islands) adds 7,430 square kilometres (2,868 square miles). The country is divided into 17 provinces and one territory—the Archipelago of Galapagos—officially called 'Colon,' situated in the Pacific Ocean about 600 miles to the west of Ecuador.

So far no exact census has been taken, but the population may be estimated at from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000. Inhabitants of pure European blood number approximately 601,219; those of mixed blood are estimated at about 291,050; Indians at 462,400; negroes at 7,831; savages in the oriental region at 200,000. The foreign community is composed of about 10,000 persons.

The estimated population of the Republic (1926) was distributed as follows among the provinces (capitals in brackets);—

Provinces	Area in Square Miles	Population	Population per Square Mile
Esmeraldas (Esmeraldas) . . . .	5,465	20,000	3·6
Manabi (Puertoviejo) . . . . .	7,892	100,000	12·7
Los Rios (Babahoyo) . . . . .	2,296	40,000	17·4
Guayas (Guayaquil) . . . . .	8,381	150,000	18·0
El Oro (Machala) . . . . .	2,339	35,000	14·9
Carchi (Tulcan) . . . . .	1,495	36,000	24·0
Imbabura (Ibarra) . . . . .	2,415	70,000	28·9
Pichincha (Quito) . . . . .	6,218	200,000	32·1
Leon (Latacunga) . . . . .	2,595	110,000	42·3
Tungurahua (Ambato) . . . . .	1,686	107,000	63·4
Chimborazo (Riobamba) . . . . .	2,989	125,000	41·9
Bolivar (Guaresda) . . . . .	1,159	45,000	38·8
Cañar (Azogues) . . . . .	1,521	74,000	42·0
Azuai (Cuenca) . . . . .	3,874	150,000	38·8
Loja (Loja) . . . . .	3,706	100,000	26·8
Napo-Pastaza and Santiago-Zamora <sup>1</sup> .	53,129	200,000	3·7
Galapagos Islands (San Cristobal) .	2,868	500	0·1
Totals . . . . .	109,978	1,562,500	14·2

The chief towns are the capital, Quito (80,702), Guayaquil (100,000), Cuenca (30,000), Riobamba (12,000), Ambato, Loja, and Latacunga (each about 10,000), Bahia (5,000), Esmeraldas (4,000).

In 1923 there were 82,222 births, 11,590 marriages and 46,149 deaths. Increase of births over deaths, 36,078.

Religion and Instruction.

According to the Constitution the State recognises no religion, but grants freedom of worship to all. The Catholic Church has one archbishop (Quito) and six suffragan bishops. Since 1895 all State appropriations for the benefit of the Church have ceased. All members of the Episcopate are required to be Ecuadorian citizens. Civil marriages are obligatory in accordance with regulations prescribed by law of December, 1902.

Primary education is gratuitous and obligatory. Higher education is carried on in the Central University at Quito (founded in the eighteenth century by the Dominicans); at the Guayas University, in Guayaquil, and at the Azuay University, in Cuenca. Total expenditure on the Universities in 1925, 587,625 sucres. Number of students at the Central University (1924-25), 303. There is also a law college at Loja. During the school-year 1922-23 there were 1,488 schools in operation in the Republic, 1,170 of which were Government schools, 127 municipal, and 191 private schools. The total attendance at these schools in 1922-23 was 101,378, and they had 1,838 teachers. There are 3 training colleges—2 at Quito and 1 at Guayaquil.

Justice and Crime.

The appellate courts are the Supreme Court in Quito, which is the highest tribunal and consists of 5 justices elected by Congress for a term of 6 years. The eight superior courts are located at Quito, Guayaquil, Cuenca, Riobamba, Ibarra, Ambato, Loja and Portoviejo. The first two are composed of 6 judges, the remainder of 3 judges each, all elected by Congress for 6 years. The Court of Accounts is empowered to audit and investigate all public accounts. In the Republics there are 496 parochial justices.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure for recent years are given as follows in sterling (for 1922, 1923 and 1924, at the old rate, 10 sucres = £1; for 1925 and 1926, at the new rate, 24·3 sucres = £1).

—	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926
	£	£	£	£	£
Expenditure . . .	2,879,553	3,390,026	3,852,581	1,818,278	1,814,447

The public debt as at December 31, 1924, was:—Foreign debt (calculated at 4 sucres per dollar), 77,178,814 sucres; internal debt, 39,834,541 sucres; total, 117,013,356 sucres. During the year 1926 the internal debt, which by December 31, 1925, stood at 49,355,427 sucres, was drastically reduced to 19,189,969 sucres by (1) cash payments of 11,725,526 sucres, (2) adjustments with creditors netting 4,428,315 sucres and (3) by profits accruing from the revaluation of the gold reserves as applied to the debt, 14,011,615 sucres.

In October, 1926, there arrived in Ecuador a Financial Mission appointed by the Government for the purpose of placing the finances and currency of Ecuador on a more stable basis. The Mission was headed by Dr. E. W. Kemmerer, Professor of Economics at Princeton University, one-time adviser to the Dawes Commission, who had served on similar missions for the Governments of South Africa, Poland, Chile and Colombia. The recommendations of the Mission were accepted by the Government, which in order to safeguard their operations appointed 4 American experts, to serve for 3 years.

Defence.

The Ecuadorian regular army has an establishment of 636 officers and 7,579 men. This force is composed of 3 regiments of artillery, 15 battalions of infantry, 3 regiments of cavalry, and 3 battalions of sappers, which form the native army. Military service was made compulsory on May 24, 1921, but is not enforced. The regular infantry have the Mauser rifle; the artillery have Vickers Maxim, old-fashioned Krupps and new Ehrards. The country is divided into 7 military districts. A military school is established at Quito. An Italian Military Mission contracted by the Government of Ecuador is at present instructing the Ecuadorean army. The mission is composed of 5 members and is headed by General Pirzio Biroli.

The Government has established at Duran an aviation school with Italian personnel. Several machines have been purchased by the Government, and some, including a hydroplane, presented by the foreign colonies resident in Ecuador.

The Navy consists of the gunboats Libertador Bolivar (1896), 750 tons, and Cotopaxi (1884), 300 tons.

Production and Industry.

Ecuador is divided into two agricultural zones: the coast regions and the lower river valleys, where tropical farming is carried on; and the hill country, the foothills, and the high mountain valleys, adapted to grazing, dairying, and the production of cereals, potatoes, and the fruits and vegetables suitable to temperate climes. The staple produce of Ecuador is cocoa. It is estimated that the cocoa plantations in Ecuador embrace 150,000 hectares (about 375,000 acres), divided into 6,000 properties, with approximately 80 million cocoa plants. The production of cocoa was, in 1922, 743,560 cwts.; in 1923, 546,948 cwts.; in 1924, 564,840 cwts.; in 1925, 13,160 cwts.; and in 1926, 4,276,220 cwts. Coffee is also grown. Rubber plantations have been formed in the Balzar and Tenguel districts and in Manabí and Esmeraldas, with more than a million trees. But rubber is rapidly declining on account of the destructive methods employed in its collection. Mangrove bark (for tanning), alligator skins, and kapok (silk cotton tree fibre, Bombax ceiba) are exported in small quantities. Considerable attention is being paid to the cultivation of cotton, especially in the province of Manabí; and ivory nuts are produced and exported in large quantities.

Ecuador is auriferous. At Pillzhum in Cañar rich silver ore is found, but is not now worked. Petroleum is found; the estimated annual production in the Republic is about 40,000 barrels. In 1926, 22,206,677 kilos of petroleum were exported. The country is known to be also rich in copper, iron, lead and coal; and sulphur exists in great quantities in the Chimborazo district and in the Galapagos Islands. In 1926, 8,956 kilos of gold, valued at 2,620,946 sucres, were exported from Ecuador.

Excepting the inter-Andean plateau and a few arid spots on the Pacific coast, Ecuador is a vast forest. Roughly estimated, 10,000 square miles on the Pacific slope extending from the sea to an altitude of 5,000 feet on the Andes, and the Amazon Basin below the same level containing 80,000 square miles, nearly all virgin forest, are rich in dyewoods, cinchona trees, and other valuable timber. Of the total surface of the Republic only 4,700,000 hectares are actually cultivated, rendering an annual gross production of 416,000,000 sucres.

Panama hats, made of Toquilla straw, are made almost exclusively in Ecuador, the principal centres being Monticristi, Jipijapa and Cuenca. Exportation of Panama hats in 1926 amounted to 235,052 kilos, valued at 5,552,597 sucres. The Government of Ecuador attempted to monopolise the hat business for its own people by placing a heavy export duty on 'paja toquilla,' but large quantities of the material still go to Peru; and Payta, Peru, where little 'toquilla' is grown, is a strong competitor of Ecuador; in the manufacture of Panama hats. There are flour mills, 18 sugar works, breweries, chocolate factories, and 15 textile factories, one of which produces cotton prints of good quality. This industry is rapidly progressing and produces several kinds of cotton and woollen cloths which are consumed locally and exported to Colombia.

Commerce.

The value of imports and exports for five years is given as follows in sterling (for 1922-1924 at the old rate, 10 sucres = £1; for 1925 and 1926 at the new rate 24·3 sucres = £1) :—

A new Customs Tariff, prepared by the Kemmerer Financial Mission, came into force on July 1, 1927. It is roughly estimated that the new tariff represents about 32 per cent. of the value of the imported goods, excluding the value of goods exempt from duty. It is expected to produce a revenue of 12,000,000 sucres per annum, an increase of almost 100 per cent. over that of the previous tariff.

Shipping and Internal Communications.

Guayaquil is visited by the steamers of nine European lines passing through Magellan's Straits, as well as by steamers plying only on the Pacific coast.

The roads of the country are mostly bridle-roads only, and often impassable for half the year. The one highway is from Quito towards Guayaquil, for a distance of 115 miles, but the work of thus connecting the capital and the port has long been discontinued. There is river communication throughout the principal agricultural districts on the low grounds to the west of the Cordillera by the rivers Guayas, Daule, and Vinces (navigable for 200 miles by river steamers in the rainy season), and other small affluents thereof.

A railway is open from Duran (opposite Guayaquil) to Quito (280 miles). The total length of Ecuadorean railways actually in operation is about 500 miles. The journey from Guayaquil to Quito takes two days, with a stop at Riobamba, where the passengers spend the night; 12 hours trip first day and 9 hours second day. Railways for the development of local trade have been undertaken by several local authorities.

Quito is connected by telegraph with Guayaquil and the coast, with the Republics of Colombia and Peru, and by cable with the rest of the world. Wireless telegraphy has been installed. At present there are only in operation three stations: one in Quito, one in Guayaquil, and one in Esmeraldas. Further stations are projected at Manabí, Tulcán, Cuenca, Loja, San Cristobal (Galapagos Islands), and Oriental Region.

On January 1st, 1922, there were 217 post offices in the country.

Banking and Credit.

Ecuador having no mint, the coin of the country is minted in England and the United States.

On March 4, 1927, a decree was issued establishing at Quito the 'Central Bank of Ecuador,' the only body authorised to issue currency. It is organised to protect the country's gold reserves and to assist member banks in times of emergency by rediscounting operations, etc. Its general functions resemble those of the Federal Reserve Banks of the United States. It is obliged to maintain a normal 'Gold Reserve' equivalent to not less than 50 per cent. of its bank-notes outstanding, plus its deposits; this reserve stood on January 1, 1928, at 66 per cent. All bank-notes now outstanding and those to be issued by the Central Bank are convertible on demand into gold or into sight drafts on New York or London. Class A shares are owned exclusively by the commercial banks of the country, which have subscribed to the shares of the Central Bank, to an amount equivalent to 15 per cent. of their respective paid-up capitals and surpluses; Class B shares are owned by the public. The new Central Bank was officially opened August 10, 1927, with an authorised share capital of 10 million sucres; the member banks affiliated with it number 21, with an aggregate capital and reserves of over 33 million sucres.

A new General Banking Law has also been enacted, creating the office of Superintendent of Banks to supervise local banks. In addition, all commercial banks are required to have cash reserves equivalent to at least 25 per cent. of their demand deposits and to 10 per cent. of their time deposits.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

A new Monetary Law, prepared by the Kemmerer Mission Exchange, was decreed on March 4, 1927. Under this law Ecuador returns to the gold standard with its currency stabilized at the rate of 24·3 sucres to the £ or 5 sucres per American dollar, the previous legal par value of the sucre having been 10 sucrés = £1 or 1 sucré = 48·665 cents U.S. The new gold sucré is to contain 0·300933 grammes of pure gold, instead of the previous weight of 0·73224. It is divided into 100 centavos. Gold coins known as 'condors' (25 sucrés), and 'double condors' (50 sucrés), 900 fine, are minted. Also silver 2 sucré, 1 sucré and  $\frac{1}{2}$  sucré pieces, as well as 10 centavos, 5 centavos, 2½ centavos and 1 centavo in nickel and copper.

By a law of December 6, 1856, the metric system of weights and measures was made the legal standard of the Republic; but it is not adopted by commerce, the Spanish measures being more general. The quintal is equivalent to 101·47 pounds.

The meridian of Quito has been adopted as the official time.

EGYPT.

(MISR.)

EGYPT was originally part of the Turkish Empire. On December 18, 1914, a British Protectorate over Egypt was declared, and the next day a Proclamation was issued deposing 'Abbas Hilmi, lately Khedive of Egypt, and conferring the title of Sultan of Egypt upon Hussein Kamil, eldest living prince of the family of Muhammad Ali. The British Protectorate was recognised by France, Russia, Belgium, Serbia, Greece, Portugal, and the United States of America. Sultan Hussein Kamil died in 1917, and was succeeded by his brother. The Protectorate terminated on February 28, 1922, and the Sultan was proclaimed King on March 15, 1922.

King.

Fuad I. Ahmed Fuad Pasha, G.C.B., was born on March 26, 1868, son of the Khedive Ismail Pasha; became Sultan on October 9, 1917; married Princess Nazli on May 24, 1919; offspring, Prince Faruk, heir to the throne, born February 11, 1920; Princess Fawzieh, born November 5, 1921, and Princess Faiza, born November 8, 1923; and Princess Faika, born June 8, 1926.

According to Article 161 of the Constitution, the King's Civil List is fixed at £E150,000, and the Royal Family's at £E111,512.

The present sovereign of Egypt is the ninth ruler of the dynasty of Muhammad Ali, appointed Governor of Egypt in 1805, who made himself, in 1811, absolute master of the country by force of arms. On April 13, 1922, the King issued a Rescript fixing the order of succession to the Kingdom of Egypt and declaring the Throne hereditary in the dynasty of Muhammad Ali. The Rescript confirms the Sultan's son, Prince Faruk, as Heir Apparent, and establishes the succession of Kings in the direct male line by primogeniture. Failing such direct line, it provides that the Throne shall pass first to the King's brothers and their direct descendants by right of age, whom failing to the King's uncles and their direct descendants by right of age, it being laid down that each new King establishes a new house and that the succession is vested in his direct line. The ex-Khedive 'Abbâs Hilmi is expressly excluded, but without prejudice to whatever rights to the succession under the new law his direct and lawful male descendants may acquire.

Female members of the house and their descendants are excluded, also anyone who is not in possession of full mental powers, who is not a Moslem, or who is not the son of Moslem parents. The King's majority is fixed at 18 years, and in the event of his being a minor when he succeeds a Regency Council will be appointed either by his predecessor under a secret seal to be opened after his death and ratified by Parliament, or in default by Parliament. This Council will consist of three members chosen from Princes, ex-premiers, ministers and ex-ministers, and Presidents and ex-Presidents of whatever Houses of Parliament may exist.

The predecessors of the present ruler of Egypt were—

Constitution and Government.

For an account of the government before 1922, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1924, p. 834-5.

The draft Constitution, which was promulgated on April 19, 1923, declares Egypt to be a Sovereign State, its monarchy hereditary, and its government representative. Egyptians have equal legal, civil and political rights, irrespective of race language, or religion. Liberty of the individual and of religious belief is guaranteed, and compulsory elementary education is established for both sexes free in Government schools. All powers emanate from the nation. The King exercises legislative powers concurrently with the Senate and Chamber of Deputies. Each House has the right to initiate laws, but the King and Chamber of Deputies alone can deal with taxes. No measure can become law unless it is voted by Parliament and sanctioned by the King. The Throne is hereditary in the family of Muhammad Ali, and the succession in accordance with the existing rescript (see above). The King can dissolve the Chamber of Deputies, to which the Ministers jointly and separately are responsible. He is also commander-in-chief of the army and navy. But no war of offence may be declared without the consent of Parliament. All powers shall be exercised through the intermediary of the Ministers. No one who is not an Egyptian, and no member of the reigning dynasty, can be a Minister. The King appoints and dismisses Ministers and, on the proposal of the Foreign Minister, diplomatists. The Parliament consists of a Senate and Chamber of Deputies. The King nominates two-fifths of the Senate and the remaining three-fifths shall be elected by universal suffrage, one Senator to 180,000 inhabitants, for a period of ten years. One half of the Senate is to be renewed every five years. The King nominates the President of the Senate. The Deputies shall be elected by universal suffrage, one Deputy to 60,000 inhabitants, with a mandate for five years. Members of Parliament receive an annual allowance of £E600. Taxes can only be imposed, reduced, or abolished by law, and no public loan, or undertaking committing the Treasury, may be contracted, and no concession or monopoly can be accorded without the consent of Parliament. The Budget must be presented to Parliament three months before the beginning of the financial year, and must first be discussed and voted in the Chamber of Deputies. The existing financial obligations incurred through the Public Debt or other international engagement cannot be modified. The strength and organisation of the army will be fixed by law.

Islam is the State religion and Arabic the official language. Cairo is the capital of Egypt. The King may exercise his powers in regard to religious establishments and pious foundations and the nomination of religious chiefs according to the laws of the country. The Constitution does not affect Egypt's obligations to Foreign States or the rights of foreigners acquired in Egypt by virtue of recognised treaties and customs. The provisions relative to the representative Parliamentary régime, the succession to the throne, or the principles of liberty and equality cannot be revised. The Constitution is applicable to the Kingdom of Egypt without prejudice to the rights which Egypt has in the Sudan. The King's title will be established after the status of the Sudan has been definitely fixed by negotiation.

The present Chamber of Deputies was elected in May 1926, and the new session began on November 18, 1926. State of parties:—Zaghlulists, 142; Constitutional Liberals, 28; Nationalists, 5; Independents, 18; and Unionists, 7.

The present Ministry was formed on March 16, 1928, as follows :—

Prime Minister and Minister of Interior.—Mustapha Nahas Pasha.

Foreign Affairs.—Wassif Ghaly Pasha.

Justice.—Ahmed Khashaba Pasha.

Agriculture.—Mohammed Safwat Pasha.

Finance.—Mohammed Mahmoud Pasha.

Wakfs.—Mohammied Naguib El Gharably Pasha.

Education.—Aly El Chamsy Pasha.

War.—Gaafar Wali Pasha.

Communications.—William Makram Ebeid Bey.

Public Works.—Ibrahim Fahmy Bey.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The Provincial Councils were endowed in 1909 with the powers of applying bye-laws, authorising public-markets, fixing the number and pay of ghafirs (village watchmen), and authorising the creation of ezbas (hamlets). They are the local authorities in connection with elementary vernacular education and trade schools. They consist of two elected representatives from each Markaz. The Mudir is the ex-officio President of the Council.

Egypt Proper is administratively divided into 5 governorships (muhâfzas) of principal towns, and 14 mudirias or provinces, subdivided into districts or Markazes.

In fourteen towns (Alexandria, Mansûra, Medînet el-Fayûm, Tanta, Zagazig, Damanhûr, Beni-Suêf, Mahalla el-Kubra, Minya, Mit Ghamr, Zifta, Kafr el-Zayât, Benha, and Port Said), Mixed Commissions composed of both Europeans and Egyptians in equal numbers have been formed to govern locally the towns and look after their interests.

With the exception of Alexandria, all Mixed Commissions have the power to impose taxes on all residents in the town alike, but in case of non-Egyptian residents taxes can only be obtained from those who have already given their express consent to be taxed for municipal purposes.

The Municipal Commission of Alexandria obtained in 1890 from European Powers full power to impose local taxation on all residents in the town.

In 56 other towns, another form of local commission exists with four elected members only. Foreign members, not to exceed two in number, can be nominated at the discretion of the Central Government.

These local commissions have practically the same taxing powers as the Mixed Commissions mentioned above.

A third form of local commissions was formed in 1918 under the name of Village Council and exists now in 39 towns in Egypt. This is composed of four elected members only, but without any power of nomination of Foreign members. It has more or less the same taxing power as the Mixed Commissions.

The Central Government has complete power of Veto on all decisions of every form of Commission in Egypt.

Area and Population.

The total area of Egypt proper, including the Libyan Desert, the region between the Nile and the Red Sea, and the Sinai Peninsula is about 383,000 square miles ; but the cultivated and settled area, that is, the Nile Valley, Delta and Oases covers only about 13,600 square miles. Canals, roads, date plantations, &c., cover 1,900 square miles ; 2,850 square miles are comprised in the surface of the Nile, marshes, and lakes. Egypt is divided into two great districts—'Masr-el-Bahri,' or Lower Egypt, and 'El-Said,' or Upper Egypt.

The following table gives the area of the settled land surface, and the results of the census taken in 1917 and on February 18, 1927 :—

In 1925, Egypt ceded to Italian Cyrenaica the oasis of Jarabub. (For the new frontier between Egypt and Cyrenaica, see map in the 1927 edition of the STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK.

The growth of the general population of the country is exhibited by the following figures :—

1846 (Census) . . . . .	4,476,440	1907 (Census) . . . . .	11,287,359
1882 (Census) . . . . .	6,831,131	1917 (Census) . . . . .	12,750,918
1897 (Census) . . . . .	9,734,405	1927 (Census) . . . . .	14,168,756

The annual rate of increase from 1846 to 1882 was 1.18 per cent. ; from 1882 to 1897, 2.39 per cent. ; 1897-1907, 1.49 per cent. ; 1907-1917, 1.23 per cent. ; 1917-1927, 1.06 per cent.

Births registered, 1926, 623,825 ; deaths, 377,461 ; 1925, births, 607,564 ; deaths, 369,885 ; 1924, births, 604,568 ; deaths, 343,864.

The principal towns, with their populations, according to the preliminary result of the census of 1927, are:—Cairo, 1,059,824; Alexandria, 570,814; Port Said, 103,228; Tanta, 89,712; Mansura, 62,815; Asyût, 57,086; Faiyûm, 52,372; Zagazig, 52,351; Damanhûr, 51,720; Mehall el Kubra, 45,355; Minya, 43,978; Beni Suêf, 39,478; Suez, 35,547; Damietta, 34,812; Benha, 28,412; Qena, 27,523; Shibîn el-Kôm, 27,335; Giza, 26,773; Sohâg, 24,991; Rosetta, 22,758; Aswân, 16,366.

Religion and Instruction.

In 1917, the population (excluding 32,663 Nomads) consisted of 11,628,753 Moslems; 856,670 Orthodox; 47,465 Protestants; 107,531 Roman Catholics; 14,441 other Christians; 59,581 Jews; 8,814 others and unknown. Thus Moslems formed 91·40 per cent. of the population; Christians, 8·06 per cent.; Jews, 0·47 per cent.; others, 0·07 per cent. The principal seat of Koranic learning is the Mosque and University of El-Azhar at Cairo, founded in the year 361 of the Hegira, being 972 of the Christian era. Other centres of higher learning are the Mosque of El-Ahmadi at Tanta, the Mosque of Damietta, the Mosque of Dessûqi (Tanta), and the Meshiakhat Olama of Alexandria. All these institutions are under the supervision of the Council of the University of El-Azhar.

There are in Egypt large numbers of native Christians connected with the various Oriental churches; of these, the largest and most influential are the Copts, the descendants of the ancient Egyptians; their creed is Orthodox (Jacobite), and was adopted in the first century of the Christian era. Its head is the Patriarch of Alexandria as the successor of St. Mark. There are three metropolitans and twelve bishops in Egypt, one metropolitan and two bishops in Abyssinia, and one bishop for Khartum; there are also arch-priests, priests, deacons, and monks. Priests must be married before ordination, but celibacy is imposed on monks and high dignitaries. The Copts use the Diocletian (or Martyrs') calendar, which differs by 284 years from the Gregorian calendar.

Scattered throughout the country there have existed from time immemorial a number of indigenous schools called 'Maktabs.' In 1897, the Ministry of Education endeavoured to bring these independent 'Maktabs' voluntarily under Departmental supervision by means of a system of inspection and reward. Government aid was made dependent upon daily instruction being given in reading, writing, and arithmetic, apart from any religious teaching, and upon the school reaching a satisfactory level of efficiency. The extent to which the scheme has developed is shown in the following table:

Year	Maktabs awarded grants-in-aid and under inspection					Grant-in-aid £E
	Number of Maktabs	Teachers	Attendance
			Boys	Girls	Total
1920-21	3,001	5,882	182,628	28,372	210,995	22,028

Justice.

Before 1883 the only native tribunals in the country were the Mehkemas, presided over by the Qadis. At the present time, they retain jurisdiction only in matters of personal law (marriage, succession, &c.), and wakfs—the latter being either charitable foundations, or family settlements with an ultimate remainder in favour of a charitable foundation—and also in certain non-religious cases (e.g. succession) between non-Moslem natives. In matters of personal law other than intestate succession, non-Mussulmans are, however, in general subject to their own Patriarchate, or other religious authority. In other matters, natives are justiciable before the so-called Native Tribunals established in 1883. These now consist of 91 Summary Tribunals and of three Judicial Delegations, each presided over by a single judge, with civil jurisdiction in matters up to £E250 in value, and criminal jurisdiction in offences punishable by fine or by imprisonment up to three years, that is, police offences and misdemeanours; eight Central Tribunals, each of the Chambers of which consists of three judges; and two Courts of Appeal, one at Cairo and the other at Assiut. Under a law of 1904, there are also weekly sittings in the Governorate Qisms (to the number of 27) for the disposal of petty offences, the judge having powers up to three months' imprisonment or fine of £E10, and the prosecution being conducted by the police. Civil cases not within the competence of the Summary Tribunals are heard in first instance by the Central Tribunals, with an appeal to one of the Courts of Appeal. The Central Tribunals also hear civil and criminal appeals from the Summary Tribunals. Since 1905 serious crimes (and, under a law of 1910, all press offences) are tried at the Central Tribunals by three judges of the Court of Appeal sitting as an Assize Court, assizes being held monthly. There is a recourse on points of law, in criminal matters, to five judges of the Court of Appeal sitting in Cairo as a Court of Cassation. The prosecution before Summary Tribunals and Assize Courts is entrusted to the Parquet, which is directed by a Procureur Général; the investigation of crime is ordinarily conducted by the Parquet, or by the police under the direction of the Parquet: cases going before an Assize Court are further submitted to a special committing judge. Offences against irrigation laws, &c., are tried by special administrative tribunals.

The so-called 'Cantonal Courts,' created by a law of June, 1912, are composed of village notables, and have general civil jurisdiction in suits up to £E5 in value, besides an extended jurisdiction in special matters, and a petty criminal jurisdiction with penalties up to 24 hours' imprisonment or PT25 fine. The jurisdiction of each court extends to a group of villages. The courts are now 240 in number.

Owing to the Capitulations, which still apply to Egypt, foreigners who are nationals of Powers possessing capitulatory rights are exempted from the jurisdiction of the local tribunals. Mixed tribunals were instituted in 1875, consisting partly of native and partly of foreign judges, with jurisdiction, in civil matters, between natives and foreigners and between foreigners of different nationalities, or even between foreigners of the same nationality if the dispute relates to land in Egypt. These Tribunals have, also, a limited penal jurisdiction, notably in cases of police offences, offences against the bankruptcy laws, and misappropriation of property seized by order of the tribunal. There are three Mixed Tribunals of First Instance, with a Court of Appeal sitting at Alexandria.

The foreign debt of Egypt began in 1862, when loans amounting to 3,292,800*l.* were issued for the purpose of extinguishing the floating debt. Other issues followed in rapid succession. The dual control by England and France began in 1879. In January, 1880, the two Controllers-General reported that Egypt could not possibly meet her engagements in full, and in July the Liquidation Law, in accordance with the recommendation of an International Commission of the Great Powers, was promulgated. By this law the Unified Debt was reduced to 4 per cent. interest; further conversions were made, and the Unified Debt thus increased to 57,776,340*l.*; certain unconsolidated liabilities were added to the Preference debt, which thus rose to 22,589,800*l.*; and the Daira Sania debt was increased to 9,512,900*l.*, the interest being reduced to 4 per cent. In 1885 and subsequent years further loans and conversions were entered into.

The Daira Sania and the Domains loans were paid off on October 15, 1905, and June 1, 1913, respectively. The amount and the charge of the various debts in April, 1927, were as follows:—

—	Debt	Charge
	£	£E
Guaranteed Loan, 3 per cent. . . . .	4,665,100	807,125
Privileged Debt, 3½ per cent. . . . .	30,683,980	1,045,334
Unified Debt, 4 per cent. . . . .	55,971,960	2,182,906
Total . . . . .	91,271,040	3,535,415

The charges on account of debts of all kinds (including tribute), as shown in the estimates for 1927-28, amount to £E4,798,183.

In 1888 and 1890, reserve funds were established, the balances of which, in virtue of the Anglo-French Convention of April 4, 1904, were placed at the disposal of the Egyptian Government in 1905, less certain sums remaining in the hands of the Caisse de la Dette Publique for the service of the debt. The amount received by the Egyptian Government was carried to a General Reserve Fund. In this Fund on April 30, 1927, there was a balance of £E33,787,370.

Defence.

EGYPTIAN ARMY.

Under the constitution granted to Egypt defence is for the present reserved and remains under British control. Service in the army is compulsory, but, owing to the small contingent required, only a fraction (approximately 4 per cent.) of the men who are liable actually serve. Service is for five years with the colours and five years in the reserve. In the Sudanese battalions service is voluntary and extended. The army consists of 2 squadrons of cavalry, 4 batteries and 2 garrison companies of artillery, 11 battalions of infantry, and various departments. A few of the higher posts are held by British officers. The strength of the army is about 12,500 officers and other ranks, excluding His Majesty's Body-guard. The strength of the latter is approximately 40 officers and 1,100 other ranks.

ARMY OF OCCUPATION.

In 1927, the normal British garrison consisted of 3 regiments of cavalry, 3 batteries R.H.A., 3 batteries Light Brigade R.A., 2 companies of engineers and 8 battalions of infantry, and one armoured car company (as well as companies of medical, ordnance, Pay, Service, Signal, and Veterinary departments), the establishment being 11,200. Egypt is also the Headquarters of the Middle East Air Command, and contains four squadrons of aeroplanes and a number of air depôts.

Production and Industry.

The cultivable area of Egypt Proper was reckoned in 1926-27 at 8,276,788 feddâns (1 feddân = 1.038 acre), and of this 680,366 were taken up for public utility purposes and 2,052,061 were uncultivated for want of reclamation. The corvée, or forced labour, has been abolished, but the inhabitants are still called out to guard or repair the Nile banks in flood time. The agricultural population (Fellahîn) forms about 62 per cent. of the whole. A large proportion of them are small landholders with under 51 feddâns, while others, almost or altogether landless, are labourers, the relation between the employers and the employed being mostly hereditary. The following table shows, in March 1927, the number of landholders and the distribution of the land among foreigners and natives :—

Extent of holding in feddâns	Foreigners		Natives		Total of area		Total of Landowners

Extensive reservoir works, consisting of a dam at Aswân, a barrage at Esna, a barrage at Asyût, and a barrage at Zifta, have been completed. The original storage capacity of the reservoir was 1,065,000,000 cubic metres. The level of the dam has been raised by 6 metres and the capacity of the reservoir increased to 2,423,000,000 cubic metres. The barrage at Esna ensures adequate irrigation to a large area of basin land even in a year of low Nile. North of Deirût an area of approximately half a million acres has been converted from basin to perennial irrigation in the last ten years. The area and production of cotton in six years were :—

Season	Area, Feddâns	Crop, Qantârs	Season	Area, Feddâns	Crop, Qantârs

In 1925, the area and yield of wheat were 1,421,372 acres and 996,676 tons ; barley, 308,955 acres and 216,371 tons ; beans, 398,867 acres and 244,638 tons ; lentils, 61,097 acres and 37,439 tons ; onions, 35,070 acres and 227,557 tons ; maize, 2,009,092 acres and 2,014,749 tons ; millet, 262,559 acres and 329,690 tons ; rice, 220,255 acres and 290,833 tons ; sugar-cane, 50,155 acres and 1,620,040 tons.

In 1926, there were in Egypt 36,467 horses, 738,662 donkeys, 22,858 mules, 721,738 cattle, 763,134 buffaloes, 1,143,554 sheep, 529,972 goats, and 171,093 camels.

The principal mineral products in 1926 were (in metric tons) : Phosphate rock, 232,008 ; petroleum, 172,952 ; manganese iron ore, 121,868. The production of gold in 1926 was 20.5 kilos. Other products are : Nitrate shale, carbonates and sulphate of soda, ochres, sulphate of magnesia, talc, building stones, clay, gypsum, natron, nitrate of soda, salt, and turquoise. The following minerals are also known to exist, namely, alum, copper ore, beryl, granite, ornamental stones, and sulphur.

The number of passengers (civil and military) who went through the canal was, in 1921, 295,199 ; 1922, 275,031 ; 1923, 246,331 ; 1924, 263,869 ; 1925, 269,522 ; 1926, 286,432.

The Suez Canal is 103 miles long (including 4 miles of approach channels for the harbours), connecting the Mediterranean with the Red Sea. It was opened for navigation November 17, 1869. The concession to the Suez Canal Company expires on November 17, 1968.

Internal Communications.

On April 30, 1927, there were (exclusive of sidings) 2,272 miles of rails (double and single) belonging to and worked by the State, and 854 miles of rails of agricultural light railways owned by private companies. 1,183 miles of State and 756 miles of companies' rails are in the Delta, and 1,089 miles of State and 98 miles of light railways are in Upper Egypt. The State railways have a gauge of 4 ft. 8½ in. inside rails (the line, 124 miles in length, from Luxor to Assuan being opened on wide gauge in Dec. 1926), except that to the Western Oases, which is 2 ft. 5½ in.

The length of line of the State Railways in 1926 was 1,988 miles ; the number of passengers carried in 1926-27 (thirteen months : 1st April to 30th April), 32,560,000 : weight of goods carried, excluding service transports, 5,439,000 tons ; and the net receipts, £E2,249,583.

The working expenses, £E5,397,701 in 1926-27, represent an average of 70·6 per cent. of the gross receipts, which were £E7,647,284.

The telephones have belonged to the Egyptian Government since April 1918. On March 31, 1927, the telegraphs and telephones had a total length of 149,045 miles, the length of the wire being 179,329 miles. The Eastern Telegraph Company, by concessions, have telegraph lines across Egypt from Alexandria via Cairo to Suez, and from Port Said to Suez, connecting their cables to England and India. The number of telegrams in 1926-27 (thirteen months) was 3,179,929, as against 2,988,337 in 1925-26 (12 months), not including railway service telegrams (3,090,121), and those sent (561,649) and received (486,752) by the Eastern Telegraph. The Abu Zabal wireless station commenced working in April, 1922.

There were, in 1926, 3,504 post offices and stations. In the internal service (1926) there passed through the post-office 62,567,000 letters and post-cards, and 21,567,000 newspapers, &c., and samples ; in the external service, 30,971,000 letters and post-cards, and 14,750,000 newspapers, &c., and samples. Official correspondence, not here included, amounted in 1926 to 8,908,000 articles. Receipts £E789,403 ; expenses £E689,787.

There is a regular fortnightly air mail service via Palestine between Cairo and Mesopotamia, and a similar service in the reverse direction.

Banks and Credit.

The National Bank has a capital of 3,000,000*l.* with reserve funds amounting to 2,675,000*l.* The Agricultural Bank has a capital of 3,740,000*l.* It has Government guarantee of interest at 3½ per cent., and it lends money to the Fellahin at interest ranging from seven to nine per cent.

There are, including the two banks just referred to, six mortgage banks and seven ordinary banks working chiefly in Egypt with a total paid up capital of £E52,280,703, i.e., £E47,032,903 for the former, including Debentures to the amount of £E37,056,598, and £E5,247,800 for the latter. The reserve funds of these two groups of banks amount to £E6,280,918 and £E3,189,666 respectively.

In 1901, a Post-Office Savings Bank was opened, and on December 31 of that year, it had 6,740 depositors with balances amounting to £E47,492. On December 31, 1926, the depositors numbered 155,963, and their balances amounted to £E1,867,015.

In April, 1912, a rural savings bank service was inaugurated. At the end of that year the balance of deposits in the new branch amounted to £E25,413, and the number of accounts to 127,927. On December 31, 1926, the balance amounted to £E7,059, and the number of accounts to 776. The balance of deposits in the savings banks of the foreign banks on the same date amounted to £E1,085,966 and the number of depositors to 14,433.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

MONEY.

By decree of October 18, 1916 (20 Zi-l-Higga 1334), the monetary unit of Egypt is the gold Egyptian pound of 100 piastres. It weighs 8·5 grammes ·875 fine, and therefore contains 7·4375 grammes of fine gold. Its value in sterling is £1 0*s.* 6½*d.* A new coinage was introduced at the same time. It replaces the monogram of the Sultan of Turkey by that of the Sultan of Egypt.

The 10-piastre silver piece weighs 14 grammes ·833 fine, and therefore contains 11·67 grammes of fine silver. The piastre is worth 2·46*d.* in English money. It is subdivided into tenths (ushr el girsh or millièmes).

Coins in circulation are the Egyptian pound (100 piastres) and half pound in gold; 20, 10, 5, and 2 piastre pieces in silver; 1, ½, ¼, ⅓ piastre pieces in nickel, and ⅓ piece in bronze. Silver coin is legal tender only up to £E2, and nickel or bronze coins up to 10 piastres. For some years gold coins have not been issued, and the gold circulating in Egypt and the Sudan is almost exclusively English sovereigns, which are legal tender at the rate of 97½ piastres. The gold pieces of the Latin Monetary Union equivalent to the French 20 franc piece are permitted to circulate at a uniform rate of £E0·7715.

Bank notes are issued by the National Bank in various denominations from £E0·25 to £E100. They are in principle not legal tender, but since the war they have been made legal tender and inconvertible. The amount in circulation at the end of August, 1927, was £E25,800,000. In 1918 the Government issued currency notes of 10 piastres and 5 piastres, but these have now been withdrawn, and the amount of currency notes in circulation has shrunk from £E1,715,000 in September, 1920, to £E51,000 at the end of August, 1927.

The principal units of Egyptian weights and measures are defined in terms of the metre of the 'Commission Internationale du mètre' by the Law No. 10 of September 26, 1914. The equivalents remain the same as were defined by the Decree of April 28, 1891.

Measures of length: Diraa baladi	= 0 metre 58 centimetres.
„ weight: Dirhem	= 3 grams 12 centigrams.
„ capacity: Ardeb	= 198 litres.

MEASURE OF CAPACITY.

The Ardeb is equal to 43·555 gallons, or 5·44439 bushels.

The approximate weight of the ardeb is as follows:—Wheat, 334 rotls; beans, 345 rotls; barley, 267 rotls; maize, 312 rotls; cotton seed, 270 rotls.

WEIGHTS.

Okieh	. . . . .	= 1·3207 ounce.
Rotl	. . . . .	= 99049 lb.
Oke	. . . . .	= 2·7513 lbs.
Qamtâr	{ or 100 Rotls or } 36 Okes	= 99·0493 lbs.

LENGTH MEASURES.

	Inches
Diraa Baladi (town)	= 22·8347
Diraa Mimari for building, &c.	= 29·5276
Qassabah = 3·8823 yards	= 139·7639

MEASURES OF SURFACE.

Feddan, the unit of measure for land, = 7,468·148 sq. pics = 1·03805 acres.
1 sq. pic = 6·0547 sq. ft. = 0·5625 sq. metre.

ESTONIA.

(EESTI VABARIIK.)

The Estonian Republic is situated on the Eastern shore of the Baltic Sea, South of the Gulf of Finland between 57° 27' and 59° 42' North Latitude and 21° 46' and 28° 21' Longitude (Greenwich), and includes the Baltic Islands Saaremaa (Oesel), Hiiumaa (Dagö), and Muhumaa (Moon). The Eastern border towards Russia is formed by Lake Peipsi and the Southern by the Republic of Latvia.

In 1721, the country, which had belonged to Sweden since the early part of the seventeenth century, was handed over by Sweden to Russia, and remained under the rule of the latter until 1917. In 1917, after the outbreak of the Russian Revolution, Estonia regained her independence, which was declared on February 24, 1918. By the Treaty of Tartu, of February 2, 1920, Soviet Russia recognised the independence of Estonia. On January 26, 1921, the Supreme Council accorded the Republic de jure recognition.

Constitution and Government.—The Constitution of the Estonian Republic was passed by the Constituent Assembly on June 15, 1920, and has been in force since December 20, 1920.

The power of the State is in the hands of the people. The sovereign power is assured to the people by means of the elections to the Legislative Assembly (Riigikogu, State Assembly), the referendum, and the right of initiating legislation.

The State Assembly is composed of 100 members, elected for three years on the basis of proportional representation, and by universal, direct, equal, and secret suffrage. The Assembly forms the Government, and accepts its resignation, promulgates the laws, passes the budget, decides the financial policy generally, ratifies treaties, the mobilisation decree, and state of siege, &c.

The signatures of 25,000 citizens are necessary in demanding a referendum, proposing a new law, or amending the existing laws. The budget and measures affecting war, peace and foreign treaties cannot be submitted to a referendum.

The executive power consists of the State Head (Riigivanem, State Elder), and ministers, who form the Government. The Government directs the foreign and home policy of the Republic, appoints officials (except where special laws exist), and introduces legislation. It is chosen by the State Assembly, and is responsible to that body. The Government collectively and individually must possess the confidence of the Assembly, and must resign if a vote of no confidence is passed. The Government is the Commander-in-Chief of the Republican defence forces in peace time.

The members of local organs of self-government are elected on a basis similar to that on which rests the elections to the State Assembly. If the law has not created special offices, the executive power of the Government is exercised through the local government institutions.

The national flag of Estonia is blue, black and white in horizontal stripes.

The elections for the Estonian State Assembly were held on May 15-17, 1926, and resulted in the return of the following parties:—Agrarians, 25; Socialists, 24; Settlers, 14; Reformist Labour [Tööerakond], 13; Populists, 8; Workers' Party, 6; Christian Party, 5; Minority Nationals, 5.

The cabinet formed on December 9, 1927, was as follows:—M. Toennisson, Prime Minister and President of the State; M. Rebane, Foreign Minister; M. Tetso, Finance; M. Reek, War; and M. Hinderson, Interior.

The Prime Minister is called the State Head.

State Head (Riigivanem).—M. Toennisson.

Area and Population.—The boundary line between Estonia and Russia is defined by the Peace Treaty of February 2, 1920. The boundaries between Estonia and Latvia were settled on November 1, 1923. The total area is about 47,558 square kilometres, or 18,362 square miles.

The population of 1,117,270 (January 1, 1926) is composed as to 87·7 per cent. of Estonians, 1·7 per cent. of Germans (Balts), and 10·6 per cent. of Russians and other nationalities.

The Republic is divided into eleven districts, as follows (the capitals are given in brackets, and when two are given the second mentioned is the German name):—Harju (Tallinn-Reval), Viru (Rakvere-Vesenberg), Jarva (Paide-Weissenstein), Laane (Haapsalu), Tartu (Tartu-Dorpat), Voru (Voru), Viljandi (Fellin), Parnu (Parnu), Saaremaa-Oesel (Kuresaare-Arensburg), Petseri (Petseri), and Valga (Valk). The capital, Tallinn (Reval), was founded in 1219 at the mouth of the Gulf of Finland, and in 1926 had 127,000 inhabitants. The university town of Tartu (Dorpat) had 59,000 inhabitants. The population of the port of Parnu, on the Gulf of Riga, was 21,000, and that of the manufacturing town of Narva 27,000.

Religion and Instruction.—There is no State religion in Estonia. Five-sixths of the population are Lutherans, the rest Greek Orthodox, Catholics, &c.

Elementary education is obligatory and gratuitous. In 1925-26, there were 1,356 elementary schools in the Estonian Republic. Of this number 1,304 were supported by local authorities and 52 were private schools. The number of middle schools for general education, gymnasiums, and so on, was 81, of which number 28 were private schools (mostly supported by the Government).

For special or professional education there are 5 teachers' seminaries, 3 navigation schools, commercial schools with an eight years' course, agricultural schools with a four years' course, mercantile schools with a four years' course, and industrial and art schools with a six years' course.

The minority nationals (Germans, Russians, Swedes, Jews, and Letts) receive education in their mother tongue.

For higher education there are the Dorpat University (founded in 1632), which on December 1, 1919, was re-opened as an Estonian seat of learning maintained by the Government; number of students (1926), 4,651 (3,342 men and 1,309 women); and the Technical Institute at Tallinn, with 484 students.

Justice.—The supreme judicial power is invested in the State Court of Justice, which is elected by the State Assembly and sits in Tartu (Dorpat).

The laws are being gradually revised by the State Assembly.

Finance.—Revenue and expenditure for five years were as follows (in thousand Estonian marks):—

	1923	1924	1925	1926-7	1927-8 <sup>1</sup>
Revenue ...	7,181,550	7,839,789	7,750,652	8,571,000	8,022,053
Expenditure ...	6,794,049	7,272,072	7,417,196	8,307,000	8,020,540

The foreign debt of Estonia (January 1, 1927), was as follows:—15,477,927 dollars to the United States, 1,289,643*l.* to United Kingdom, and 986,399 kroner to Sweden.

In connection with the financial reform of Estonia of 1927, the Estonian Government raised under the auspices of the League of Nations in June 1927 an international loan of 1,350,000*l.*, placed in London, Amsterdam and New York.

Defence.—Military service is compulsory. The period of service in the active army is 1½ years. The army is organised in 4 divisions. The peace strength in 1927 was 1,500 officers and 1,5840 other ranks, and the mobilizable strength 90,000. The military budget for 1926-7 was 1,539,900,000 Estonian marks.

The naval forces consist of two destroyers (1,800 and 2,000 tons, 4-in. guns), a gunboat of 1,100 tons, carrying two 4·7-in. guns, one torpedo boat and half a dozen smaller craft.

Production.—Agriculture and dairy farming are the chief occupations. There are 126,561 allotments on which about 70 per cent. of the total population is engaged. The total area is about 10,851,648 acres, divided as follows: forest land, 2,220,002 acres (20·1 per cent.); fields, 2,532,799 acres (22·9 per cent.); meadows, 2,602,274 acres (24·46 per cent.); pastures, 1,836,402 acres (17·48 per cent.); untillable land, 1,632,206 acres; (15·04 per cent.), including a peat bog of 496,112 acres.

The principal crops, with acreage and yield, are shown as follows:—

	Acreage		Yield in tons.
	1925	1926	1925	1926
Rye . . . . .	382,489	386,340	185,531	114,055
Wheat . . . . .	50,730	59,104	21,880	23,919

Oats . . . . .	371,899	361,999	128,670	132,106

In 1927, Estonia had 628,880 head of cattle, 665,510 sheep, 348,100 pigs, 224,820 horses, and 809,670 poultry.

In 1926, there were in Estonia 399 dairy factories, of which 81 per cent. were co-operative. Butter is the chief article of export and already represents 25 per cent of the total exports. In 1926, Estonia exported 8,691 tons of butter to the value of 2,377·1 million marks.

In 1925, Estonia had 3,738 industrial establishments with 35,579 workmen. Over 10 per cent. of the total population of Estonia finds occupation in the various industries of the country, the most important of which are: textile, paper, cement and oil shale industries, forestry, timber, match, flax and leather industries. Shale oil output, 1926, 340,000 metric tons, showing a net profit for the State of 13,777,562 marks.

Commerce.—Trade for 4 years is shown as follows in Estonian kroons:—

	1924	1925	1926	1927
Exports . . . . .	75,657,905	96,646,175	96,375,730	105,775,720

Principal imports in 1926 (thousand Estonian marks) were: grain and flour, 1,938,080; cotton, flax, and other textile materials, 1,107,612; food-stuffs, 1,106,377; textile products, 930,455; machinery, 731,279. Principal exports in 1926 (thousand Estonian marks), dairy produce, 2,778,968; timber, 1,832,765; textile products, 1,433,258.

Total trade between the United Kingdom and Estonia for 5 years (according to Board of Trade returns).—

	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
Imports from Estonia into United Kingdom	£ 1,827,529	£ 2,461,701	£ 1,813,045	£ 2,233,226	£ 2,249,763
Exports to Estonia from United Kingdom.	920,710	628,372	603,729	551,612	671,834

Shipping and Communications.—During 1926, 2,498 vessels of 724,168 tons entered and 2,453 vessels of 725,442 tons cleared the ports of Estonia. The principal port is Reval. In 1926, the merchant marine consisted of 63 steamers of 28,468 tons, and 305 sailing vessels of 26,393 tons, with a total tonnage of 61,415.

Estonia had a total railway mileage in 1925 of 1,770 kilometres, or 1,099 miles.

Currency.—On April 29, 1927, the Estonian Government passed a series of laws which came into operation on January 1, 1928, providing for the creation of a new currency unit, for the termination of the privilege of note issue by the State, for the unification of the currency, and for the reorganization of the bank of issue. The Eesti bank will in future be the sole emission agency. The Treasury notes will be withdrawn and in future there will be only Eesti bank notes.

The actual currency is to be altered. The unit will be a coin called a Kroon, which is the same as a Swedish gold krona, and will have a gold content of 0.403226 grammes of pure gold. This will be subdivided into 100 sents, each sent being equivalent to one of the present Estonian marks, which have been stable for almost three years at the ratio of 100 to 1 Swedish krona. Abbreviation for internal use Kr. for 'Kroon,' for international use Ekr. for 'Estonian Kroon,' and for internal and international use s for 'sent.'

On September 1, 1927, there were in circulation 1,584,438,254 marks of Treasury (currency) notes and 1,966,405,800 marks in Eesti bank notes. The denominations of the currency are: paper notes, 5,000, 1,000, 500, 100 and 25 marks; nickel coins, 10, 5, 2 and 1 marks pieces.

FINLAND.

(SUOMEN TASAVALTA.)

Constitution and Government.

CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

Finland is a Republic according to the Constitutional Law of July 17, 1919.

From 1809 Finland was united to the Russian Empire as an autonomous Grand-Duchy. On December 6, 1917, the House of Representatives unanimously proclaimed Finland an independent and sovereign State, and she has been recognised as such by the Powers. According to the Constitutional Law of 1906, the House of Representatives consists of one Chamber of 200 members chosen by direct and proportional election, in which all who are entitled to vote have an equal vote. The suffrage is possessed, with the usual exceptions, by every Finnish citizen (man or woman) who has reached his or her 24th year. There are 16 electoral districts with a representation proportioned to the population, a rearrangement being required every 10 years. Each district is divided into voting circuits. The voting system, devised with a view to proportional representation, provides for the formation of voters' associations which prepare 4 lists of candidates, the votes for whom are in a falling scale according to the order in which the voter has placed them. There may, within limits, be compacts between associations, and joint candidates may be entered in competing lists, while any voter may either support an association list or vote for any candidate he pleases. Every citizen entitled to vote is eligible to the House of Representatives, which is elected for 3 years.

The President is elected for 6 years by the votes of the citizens. He receives a salary of 700,000 marks and 200,000 marks for allowances. The Council of State (Ministry), appointed by the President, must enjoy the confidence of the House of representatives.

At the elections held in July, 1927, the following parties were returned : Social-Democrats, 60 ; Agrarians, 52 ; Finnish Coalition Party, 34 ; Socialist Labour Party, 20 ; Swedish Party, 24 ; Finnish Progressive Party, 10.

President of Finland.—Dr. Lauri Relander (born 1888 ; elected February 16, 1925).

The Council of State, appointed on December 17, 1927, is composed as follows (all but two Agrarians).—

Prime Minister.—Dr. Juho Sunila.

Minister for Foreign Affairs.—Hj. J. Procopé.

Minister of Finance.—Juho Niukkanen.

Minister of the Interior.—Antti Aura.

Minister of Defence.—Jalo Lahdensuo.

Minister of Justice.—Torsten H. Malinen.

Minister of Education.—The Rev. Antti Kukkonen.

Minister of Agriculture.—Karl S. Mattson.

Minister of Communications.—Dr. Emil Hynninen.

Minister of Commerce and Industries.—Pekka V. Heikkinen.

Minister of Social Affairs.—Kalle A. Lohi.

Minister without Portfolio.—Dr. Kalle T. Jutila.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For administrative purposes Finland is divided into nine departments. The provincial administration is entrusted in each of the departments to a prefect, who is appointed by the President. The unit of local government is the commune. Each rural parish and each town forms a commune in which all men and all women of 21 years of age who have paid the local taxes for the preceding two years are voters. In all communes a communal council is elected to decide questions of administration and local economy. The executive power is vested in rural communes in a college formed by the head of the commune and four or more aldermen elected by the council. In towns the executive authority is the magistrates with the burgomaster as president and other members elected by the council. There were, in 1926, 38 towns, 16 boroughs, and 531 rural communes in Finland. As executive officers of the Prefect there are 54 bailiffs and 333 sub-bailiffs.

The department of Åland has a county council (landsting) consisting of one chamber which is elected on the basis of the same suffrage as the Parliament. The county council settles the internal affairs of the government. The executive authority is with an executive council, of which the lantråd is president.

Area and Population.

The area and population of Finland, according to the census taken on December 31, 1920, and that estimated on December 31, 1926, are as follows :—

Departments	Area <sup>1</sup> sq. miles	Population Dec. 31, 1920	Population <sup>2</sup> Dec. 31, 1926	Population per sq. mile, 1926
Uusimaa (Nyland)	4,388	446,329	478,852	109.1
Turku-Pori (Åbo-Björneborg)	8,397	495,661	514,042	61.3
Åland (Åhvenanmaa)	551	26,911	27,234	49.4
Häme (Tavastehus)	6,737	360,528	379,887	56.4
Viipuri (Viborg)	12,072	558,202	598,466	49.6
Mikkeli (St.-Michel)	6,414	204,425	210,061	32.8

Oulu (Uleåborg)	65,263	360,095	404,261	6.2

Of the total on December 31, 1920, 1,660,230 were males and 1,704,577 females. In 1920, 2,754,228 spoke Finnish, 340,963 Swedish, 4,806 Russian, 2,378 German, 1,603 Laponic.

The growth of the population is shown as follows:—

Years	In Towns	In Country	Total	Percentage in towns
1800	46,604	786,055	832,659	5.60
1900	339,613	2,372,949	2,712,562	12.52
1920	543,046	2,821,761	3,364,807	16.14
1924	587,309	2,907,877	3,495,186	16.80
1925	599,371	2,927,088	3,526,359	16.99
1926	609,207	2,948,852	3,558,059	17.12

According to the census of December 31, 1920, the population was divided according to occupations as follows: agriculture, 2,020,021 (65 per cent.); industry, 459,751 (15 per cent.); communications, 104,142 (3 per cent.); commerce, 106,276 (3 per cent.); public administration, 52,250 (2 per cent.); professions, 49,587 (2 per cent.); others, 313,076 (10 per cent.).

The movement of the population for four years was as follows:—

Year	Living Births	Of which illegitimate	Stillborn	Marriages	Deaths (exclusive of stillborn)	Excess of Births
1923	81,961	7,197	2,348	23,634	47,556	34,405
1924	78,457	6,776	2,101	22,048	53,412	24,615
1925	78,260	6,354	2,094	22,103	47,493	30,767
1926	76,875	6,244	2,203	22,695	47,526	29,349

Emigration: 1920, 5,595; 1921, 3,557; 1922, 5,715; 1923, 13,835; 1924, 5,429; 1925, 2,490; 1926, 6,043.

The principal towns, with the number of their inhabitants at end of 1926, are: Helsinki (Helsingfors), 215,829; Turku (Åbo), 61,664; Tampere (Tammerfors), 52,394; Viipuri (Viborg), 48,990; Vaasa (Vasa), 24,218; Oulu (Uleåborg), 23,020; Kuopio, 22,716; Pori (Björneborg), 17,576; and Kotka, 14,768.

Religion and Instruction.

The National Church is Evangelical Lutheran religion, but entire liberty of conscience is guaranteed to the members of all religions and confessions. Ecclesiastically Finland is divided into 5 bishoprics (Turku being the archiepiscopal see), 52 provostships, and 585 parishes.

Of the total population there were at end of 1926: Lutherans, 3,452,933; Greek-Catholics and Kaskolnics, 60,089; Roman Catholics, 655; Baptists, etc., 8,358; Jews, 1,715; Mohammedans, 159; belonging to the civil-register, 34,311. The Greek-Catholics are under an archbishop, resident at Viipuri.

Finland has 3 universities: at Helsinki (founded in 1640 at Turku, and removed to Helsinki after having been burned down in 1827), with (1927) 308 teachers and 3,646 students (1,153 women); at Turku (Swedish, opened 1919), with 39 teachers and 172 students (32 women); and at Turku (Finnish, opened 1922), with 25 teachers and 302 students (138 women). In 1926, there were also 1 technical school at Helsinki, with 87 teachers and 705 students (16 women), and 2 commercial schools, one Finnish with 18 teachers and 156 students (16 women), and the other Swedish with 13 teachers and 66 students (8 women).

For secondary education there were, in 1926, 116 lyceums, leading to university, 2,304 teachers and 35,437 pupils (17,365 girls); 65 middle schools (with a curriculum of 5 years), with 622 teachers and 9,206 pupils. There were 8 training colleges for elementary school teachers, with 114 teachers and 1,614 students; and 6 for infant school teachers, with 418 students. There were also 51 high schools for the people, with 352 teachers and 2,745 pupils (1,963 females). For elementary education (1926) there were in the country 4,548 elementary schools, with 220,274 pupils (108,176 girls); 2,552 lower elementary schools, with 64,052 pupils; and (1925) 867 infant schools under the superintendence of the Church, with 96,035 pupils. In the towns there were (1926) 1,310 classes of higher elementary schools, with 40,091 pupils (19,446 girls). There were besides 5 navigation schools, with 130 pupils; 40 commercial schools, with 3,294 pupils; 10 industrial schools, with 647 pupils; 2 technical schools, with 117 pupils; 146 schools for arts and crafts, with 7,650 pupils; 45 agricultural schools, with 1,629 pupils; 4 dairy schools, with 88 pupils; 38 cattle-management schools, with 1,234 pupils; 39 household schools, with 1,651 pupils; 6 horticultural schools, with 89 pupils; and 6 forestry schools, with 206 pupils. The school age in primary schools is from 7 to 15 years.

In 1920, only 0.7 per cent. of persons who have completed their 15th year could neither read nor write.

In 1926, there were published 370 newspapers and reviews in Finnish, 91 in Swedish, 50 in Finnish and Swedish, and 5 in other languages.

Justice and Crime.

The administration of justice is independent of the Government. The lowest courts of justice in Finland are those of the District. In towns these district courts are held by the burgomaster and his assessors; in the country by a judge and 12 jurors—peasant proprietors, the judge alone deciding, unless the jurors unanimously differ from him, when their decision prevails. From these courts an appeal lies to the Superior Court (Hovioikeus) in Turku, Vaasa and Viipuri. The Supreme Court of Judicature (Korkein oikeus) sits in Helsinki. Judges can be removed only by judicial sentence.

Two functionaries, the Oikeuskansleri or the Chancellor of Justice, and the Oikeusasiamies, or the Attorney-General, exercise control over the administration of justice. The former acts also as counsel and public prosecutor for the Government; while the latter, who is appointed by the Parliament, has to extend a general supervision over all the courts of law.

At the end of 1926, the prison population numbered 6,278 men and 664 women, while the number of sentences pronounced in 1925 was 96,487 for crimes and 33,822 in civil cases.

Pauperism.

The number of paupers in 1925 supported by the towns and the village communities was 108,749 (8·1 per cent. of the population); and the total cost was 213,761,808 marks.

Defence.

ARMY.

The military forces of Finland consist of: (1) the army, air force and coast defence, recruited on the principle of universal service, (2) the Civic Protective Guards Organisation, recruited from the voluntarily enrolled citizens.

The President of the Republic is Commander-in-Chief of the Finnish military forces, but during war he may invest a general with that authority. In peace time the Minister of Defence appointed by the President is responsible for the military administration and the Chief of the Army is in command. The Chief of the Army, assisted by the Chief of the General Staff and his Staff, directs the affairs of the General Staff of the Navy.

Every citizen is liable to serve from the age of 17 to the age of 52. The conscripts are divided into troops of the line and the "landwehr."

The troops of the line consist of the standing army and the reserve. All young men who have reached the age of 21 years are summoned to active service. The period of service is generally 12 months—in the cavalry, air force, technical troops, navy, and field and coast artillery 15 months. The term of service is the same for those who are appointed to be trained to officers of the reserve or non-commissioned officers. In the reserve to which the conscript belongs after service with the colours, the period of service is 7 years.

The "landwehr" is divided into three classes; to the first class belong the conscripts who after their service in the reserve are relegated to the "landwehr" (men of 29–52 years); to the second, the conscripts who are considered as incapable for active service (men of 21–52 years), and the third, young men who cannot on account of their youth yet be enrolled as conscripts (17–21 years).

The effectives in 1927 amounted to 2,080 officers and officials and 26,205 other ranks, organised as follows:—

	Divisions	Regiments	Battalions	Squadrons	Artillery Groups	Batteries	Companies	Machine Gun Companies
Infantry . . .	3	10	30				63	35
Tanks . . .			1
Cavalry . . .		2		10				2

The Civic Protective Guards Organisation is an essential part of the plan of defence. Concerning the administration the Commander-in-Chief of the Protective Guards appointed by the President is subordinated to the Minister of Defence, and directly responsible to the President with regard to his command. The number of the Protective Guards is about 100,000.

The military ordinary and extraordinary budget for 1926 amounted to 526,913,700 Finnish marks. Among the miscellaneous expenses in the total budget of the Republic there is a subsidy for the Protective Guards, which in 1926 amounted to 30,000,000 Finnish marks.

NAVY.

The naval forces consist of 4 patrol-boats, 2 torpedo-boats, 4 minelayers, 2 minesweepers and a number of motor launches. Some additional vessels are projected, and 3 submarines are under construction at Abo.

The coast defence is organised under the Minister of Defence in two sections, viz., the mobile defences, under the Commander-in-Chief of the Fleet; and the fixed defences, under the Inspector of Coast Defence.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture is the chief occupation of the people in Finland, although the cultivated area only covers 6·1 per cent. of the land. The land was divided in 1920 into 250,749 farms, and the landed property was distributed as follows:—Less than 3 hectares cultivated, number of farms, 96,474; 3–10 hectares, farms 98,258; 10–25 hectares, farms 41,119; 25–100 hectares, farms 13,961; over 100 hectares, farms 937.

The principal crops of 1926 were as follows:—rye, 565,283 acres, yielding 302,490 tons; barley, 272,103 acres, yielding 156,100 tons; oats, 1,090,209 acres, yielding 592,726 tons; potatoes, 171,139 acres, yielding 851,008 tons; hay, 2,460,126 acres. Total land under cultivation, 1926, 5,293,723 acres. Butter production in 1926 was 20,062 tons.

Domestic animals in 1926:—Horses, 399,998; horned cattle, 1,860,479; sheep, 1,413,697; goats, 11,076; pigs, 390,536.

The total forest land amounts to 62,429,000 acres, of which 24,835,000 acres belong to the State. The productive forest land covers 49,764,000 acres, of which 17,570,000 acres belong to the State. In 1924, there were 455 saw mills with 77 water motors, 484 steam, 21 oil and gas, 1,591 electric motors.

Finland had, in 1926, 3,526 large factories, employing an aggregate of 149,367 workers, and yielding an aggregate product of 10,935 million marks. The chief were:—

On the air lines Helsinki-Stockholm and Helsinki-Reval, 3,213 passengers and 52,661 kg. goods and mail were transported in 1926.

Internal Communications.

For internal communications Finland has a remarkable system of lakes connected with each other and with the Gulf of Finland by canals. The number of vessels which passed along the canals in 1925 was 54,449, and the number of timber-rafts 13,807; the receipts from vessels, 11,586,800 marks; and expenditure, 6,322,100 marks.

On December 31, 1924, there were 15,677 miles of high roads and (in 1922) 15,827 miles of secondary roads.

Railway history in Finland begins in 1860, when the State built a line 66 miles long between Helsinki and Hämeenlinna. On December 31, 1926, there were 2,886 miles of railways, all but 165 miles belonging to the State. The gauge is 1·524 metres (4·9 feet). The traffic upon the State railways in 1926 was 22 million passengers and 10·2 million tons of goods. The total cost of the State railways to the end of 1926 was 5,318 million marks. The total revenue in 1926 was 786,523,000 marks, and the total expenditure 656,650,000 marks.

Finland had 2,811 post-offices in 1926, and revenue and expenditure were respectively 107,211,000, and 62,952,000 marks. The number of letters and postcards was 69,785,000; samples and printed packets, 15,459,000; newspapers, 141,217,000; money-orders, 1,775,000; total, 228,236,000.

There were in 1926 14,170 miles of telegraph and 5,264 miles of telephone wires belonging to the State in Finland. The number of telegraph messages sent in the year 1926 was 1,460,131. The telegraph system and part of the telephone system is State property.

Banking, Money, Weights, &c.

The Bank of Finland (founded in 1811) is the State Bank and the only bank of issue. The Bank is under the guarantee of the House of Representatives; its capital and reserves are fixed by its constitution, and its note circulation is limited by the value of its metallic stock and foreign correspondents, and the additional right of issue 1,200 million marks. The paper currency of the Bank of Finland on October 31, 1927, was 1,483 million marks, against which the bank held a stock of gold of 319 million marks, and the foreign correspondents 1,325 million marks. Finland had in 1926, besides the State bank, 19 joint stock banks with 513 offices. The deposits of all private banks on December 31, 1926, were 6,101.4 million marks.

The number of ordinary savings banks at the end of 1926 was 470; number of depositors over 600,000, who had to their credit 2,508 million marks; in the Post Office savings banks over 133,000 depositors had 184.4 million marks; and on Consumers' Co-operative Societies' Savings Account 254.4 million marks were deposited.

The markka of 100 penni is stabilized at the current rate of exchange for the dollar of 39.70, and is of the value of 1.24d.

According to the new monetary law gold coin is to be struck of the value of 100 and 200 marks. The former will contain 315/19 grammes and the latter 711/19 grammes of fine gold. Nickel coins are 1,  $\frac{1}{2}$ , and  $\frac{1}{4}$  markka pieces. Copper coins 10 and 5 penni pieces.

The metric system of weights and measures is officially and universally employed in Finland.

FRANCE.

Constitution and Government.

CENTRAL.

SINCE the overthrow of Napoleon III. on September 4, 1870, France has been under a Republican form of government, confirmed on February 25, and July 16, 1875, by a constitutional law, which has been partially modified in June, 1879, August, 1884, June, 1885, and July, 1889. It vests the legislative power in the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate, and the executive in the President of the Republic and the Ministry.

The President is elected for seven years, by an absolute majority of votes, by the Senate and Chamber of Deputies united in a National Assembly, or Congress. He promulgates the laws voted by both Chambers, and ensures their execution. He selects a Ministry from the two Chambers, but may, and sometimes does, choose ministers who are not members of either Chamber (e.g. a general as Minister for War, an admiral as Minister of Marine, a civilian as Minister for Foreign Affairs); he appoints to all civil and military posts, has the right of individual pardon, and is responsible only in case of high treason. The President concludes treaties with foreign Powers, but treaties which affect the area of France or of French colonies must be approved by the Legislature, and he cannot declare war without the previous assent of both Chambers. Every act of the President has to be countersigned by a Minister. With the consent of the Senate he can dissolve the Chamber of Deputies. In case of vacancy, the two Chambers united immediately elect a new President.

President of the Republic.—Gaston Doumergue; born August 1, 1863; elected June 13, 1924.

The Ministers or Secretaries of State, the number of whom varies, are usually, but not necessarily, members of the Senate or Chamber of Deputies. The President of the Council (Premier) chooses his colleagues in concert with the President of the Republic. Each Minister has the direction of one of the great administrative departments and each is responsible to the Chambers for his acts, while the Ministry as a whole is responsible for the general policy of the Government.

The Ministry consists of the following members, appointed July 24, 1926:—

Prime Minister and Minister of Finance.—M. Raymond Poincaré (Senator).

Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Justice.—M. Louis Barthou (Senator).

Minister of the Interior.—M. Albert Sarraut (Senator).

Minister of War.—M. Paul Painlevé (Deputy).

Minister of Marine.—M. Georges Leygues (Deputy).

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—M. Aristide Briand (Deputy).

Minister of Colonies.—M. Léon Perrier (Senator).

Minister of Public Instruction and of Fine Arts.—M. Edouard Herriot (Deputy).

Minister of Public Works.—M. André Tardieu (Deputy).

Minister of Commerce.—M. Maurice Bokanowski (Deputy).

Minister of Agriculture.—M. Henri Queuille (Deputy).

Minister of Labour, Hygiene, Assistance, and Social Prevision.—M. André Fallières (Deputy).

Minister of Pensions.—M. Louis Marin (Deputy).

The Chamber of Deputies is elected for four years, by manhood suffrage, and each citizen 21 years old, not actually in military service, who can prove 'a six months' residence in any one town or commune, and not otherwise disqualified, has the right of vote. Deputies must be citizens and not under 25 years of age. The manner of election of Deputies has been modified several times since 1871. The scrutin de liste, under which each elector votes for as many Deputies as the entire department has to elect, was introduced in 1871. In 1876 it was replaced by the scrutin d'arrondissement, under which each department is divided into a number of arrondissements, each elector voting for one Deputy only; in 1885 there was a return to the scrutin de liste, in 1889 the universal vote was reintroduced; in 1919 the scrutin de liste, with proportional representation, was again adopted; but in 1927 (July 12) the old system of scrutin d'arrondissement was once more introduced. The Chamber verifies the powers of its members. In each constituency the votes are cast up and the Deputy proclaimed elected by a commission of Councillors-General appointed by the prefect of the department. The Chamber is now composed of 587 Deputies.

Chamber of Deputies, elected May 11, 1924: Communists, 26; Democrats, 14; Left Radicals, 41; Left Republican Democrats, 45; Socialists, 105; Radicals and Radical Socialists, 140; Republican Socialists and French Socialists, 42; Republicans of the Left, 36; Democratic Republican Union, 103; Independents, 30.

The Senate is composed of 314 members, elected for nine years from citizens 40 years old, one-third retiring every three years. The election of the Senators is indirect, and is made by an electoral body composed (1) of delegates chosen by the Municipal Council of each commune in proportion to the population; and (2) of the Deputies, Councillors-General, and District Councillors of the department. Besides the 225 Departmental Senators elected in this way, there were, according to the law of 1875, 75 Senators elected for life by the united two Chambers; but by the Senate Bill of 1884 it was enacted that vacancies arising among the Life Senatorships would be filled by the election of ordinary nine-years Senators, the department which should have the right to the vacant seat to be determined by lot. The Princes of deposed dynasties are precluded from sitting in either House.

Senate, elected on January 11, 1924: Gauche Démocratique, 157; Union Républicaine, 88; Gauche Républicaine, 30; Right, 10; Union Démocratique et Radicale, 23; Independents, 6.

The Senate and Chamber of Deputies assemble every year on the second Tuesday in January, unless a previous summons is made by the President of the Republic, and they must remain in session at least five months out of the twelve. The President is bound to convoke them if the demand is made by one-half of the number of members composing each Chamber. The President can adjourn the Chambers, but the adjournment cannot exceed the term of a month, nor occur more than twice in the same session.

Bills may be presented either in the Chamber or Senate by the Government, or on the initiative of private members. In the first case they are remitted to the bureaux for examination; in the second, they are first submitted to a commission of parliamentary initiative. Financial laws must be first presented to and voted by the Chamber of Deputies.

The Senate, constituted as a High Court of Justice, tries cases of attempt against the safety of the State or of plotting to change the form of government.

Senators and Deputies are paid 45,000 francs a year and the Presidents of the two Chambers receive allowances for the expense of entertainment. Members of both Chambers travel free on all railways by means of a small annual payment. The dotation of the President of the Republic is 1,200,000 francs, with a further allowance of 1,200,000 francs for his expenses. On January 1, 1905, a fund was instituted for pensions to ex-Deputies, or their widows and orphans. It is supported by contributions from Deputies (deducted from their pay) as well as by gifts and legacies.

France has, besides, a special institution under the name of Conseil d'Etat, which was introduced by Napoleon I., and has been maintained since. It is presided over by the Minister of Justice or (in his absence) by a vice-president, and is composed of Councillors, Masters of Requests (Maitres des Requêtes), and Auditors, all appointed by the President of the Republic. Its duty is to give opinion upon such questions, chiefly those connected with administration, as may be submitted to it by the Government. It is judge in the last resort in administrative suits, and it prepares the rules for the public administration.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For administrative purposes France is divided into 90 departments including the 'territory of Belfort' (remnant of the department of Haut-Rhin). Since 1881, the three departments of Algeria are also treated for most purposes, as part of France proper. The department has representatives of all the Ministries, and is placed under a Prefect, nominated by Government, and having wide and undefined functions. He is assisted by a Prefecture Council, an administrative body, whose advice he may take without being bound to follow it. The Prefect is a representative of the Executive, and, as such, supervises the execution of the laws, issues police regulations, supplies information on matters which concern the department, nominates subordinate officials, and has under his control all officials of the State. There is a Sub-Prefect in every arrondissement, except in those containing the capitals of departments and the department of the Seine.

The unit of local government is the commune, the size and population of which vary very much. There were, in 1926, in the 90 departments into which France was divided, 37,981 communes. Most of them (33,914) had less than 1,500 inhabitants, and 22,151 have even less than 500; while 159 communes only have more than 20,000 inhabitants. The local affairs of the commune are under a Municipal Council, composed of from 10 to 36 members, elected by universal suffrage, and by the scrutin de liste for 4 years by Frenchmen after 21 years and 6 months' residence; but each act of the Council must receive the approval of the Prefect, while many must be submitted to the Council General or even to the President of the Republic, before becoming lawful. Even the commune's quota of direct taxation is settled by persons (répartiteurs) chosen by the Prefect from among the lists of candidates drawn up by the Municipal Council.

Each Municipal Council elects a Mayor, who is both the representative of the commune and the agent of the central government. He is the head of the local police and, with his assistants, acts under the orders of the Prefect.

In Paris the Municipal Council is composed of 80 members; each of the 20 arrondissements into which the city is subdivided has its own Mayor. The place of the Mayor of Paris is taken by the Prefect of the Seine, and, in part, by the Prefect of Police. Lyons has an elected Mayor, but the control of the police is vested in the Prefect of the department of the Rhone.

The next unit is the canton (3,019), which is composed of an average of 12 communes, although some of the largest communes are, on the contrary, divided into several cantons. It is a seat of a justice of the peace (juge de paix), but is not an administrative unit.

The district, or arrondissement (279), has an elected conseil d'arrondissement, with as many members as there are cantons, its chief function being to allot among the communes their respective parts in the direct taxes assigned to each arrondissement by the Council General. That body stands under the control of the Sub-Prefect. A varying number of arrondissements form a department, which has its conseil général renewed by universal suffrage to the extent of one-half every three years (one Councillor for each canton). These conseils deliberate upon all economical affairs of the department, the repartition of the direct taxes among the arrondissements, the roads, normal schools, and undertakings for the relief of the poor. Their decisions are controlled by the Prefect, and may be annulled by the President of the Republic.

According to the Peace Treaty with Germany (June 28, 1919) Alsace-Lorraine has been transferred to France, to date from the Armistice of November 11, 1918. The districts of Lower Alsace, Upper Alsace and Lorraine have become the departments of Bas-Rhin (1,848 square miles and population 651,686); Haut-Rhin (1,354 square miles, population 468,943), and Moselle (2,403 square miles, population 589,120).

Total area added to France is 5,605 square miles, population (1921) 1,709,749. Thus the total area of France is 212,659 square miles and population 39,209,518.

According to the Treaty of Versailles (article 45), France obtained from Germany as a compensation for the destruction of the coal mines in the North of France, the exclusive rights of exploitation of the coal mines situated in the Saar Basin. The area of this district is about 751 square miles, and the population 657,870. For the next 15 years the Saar Basin will be governed by a Commission of Five, chosen by the League of Nations. At the end of 15 years the population will decide by vote one of three alternatives, viz., the maintenance of the rule set up by the Treaty, union with France, or union with Germany.

Between the years 1811 and 1820, the average annual surplus of births over deaths was 5·7 per thousand of population; between 1881 and 1890, it was 1·8; between 1901 and 1910 it was 1·2; and between 1921 and 1924 it was 2·25. The average number of births per marriage was (1881-85) about 3; in 1891 it was 2·1.

In the following table, the third, fourth, and fifth columns give [in brackets] for the first five censuses the population, its density, and its average annual increase of France, excluding Alsace-Lorraine, and are thus comparable with the data for the censuses posterior to the loss of Alsace and Lorraine (1872-1911).

For fiscal and electoral purposes the population of each commune is divided into agglomerated, scattered, and separated (comptée à part); the first two constitute the municipal population, and the third consists of garrison, college, prison, and hospital population. Different from this is the distinction between urban and rural population, a commune being urban where the agglomerated population is over 2,000, and rural where under 2,000.

Religion.

No religion is recognised by the State.

Under the law promulgated on December 9, 1905, the Churches were separated from the State, the adherents of all creeds were authorised to form associations for public worship (associations cultuelles). As transitory measures, ecclesiastics over 45 years of age and of over 25 years of service remunerated by the State were entitled to a pension, and all other ecclesiastics were to receive a grant during a period of from four to eight years. All buildings actually used for public worship and as dwellings in that connection were to be made over, after an inventory was taken, to the associations for public worship: the places of worship for the total period of the existence of these associations, the ecclesiastical dwellings for a time.

The law of January 2, 1907, provides (among other things) that, failing associations cultuelles, the buildings for public worship, together with their furniture, will continue at the disposition of the ministers of religion and the worshippers for the exercise of their religion ; but, in each case, there is required an administrative act drawn up by the préfet as regards buildings belonging to the State or the Departments, and by the maire as regards buildings belonging to the Communes. Forms of the documents necessary under the new law have been supplied by the Government.

There are 17 archbishops and 68 bishops of the Roman Catholic Church in France, not including Alsace and Lorraine, Algeria or the colonies, in addition to 51,000 clergy of various grades. The Protestants of the Augsburg Confession are, in their religious affairs, governed by a General Consistory, while the Reformed Church is under a Council of Administration, the seat of which is at Paris. There are about a million Protestants in France.

The Associations law, passed July 1, 1901, requires religious communities to be authorised by the State, and no monastic association can be authorised without a special law in each particular case. Before the passing of that law there were 910 recognised associations, and 753 not recognised ; the establishments, mostly not recognised, numbered 19,514, and their members 159,628 (30,136 men and 129,492 women). After the passing of the law, of the 753 associations not recognised, 305 dissolved themselves and 448 asked for authorisation, which was refused by the Chambers to the majority of them.

Instruction.

The public schools constitute the University of France and are divided into three classes, primary, secondary, and superior. The Superior Council of 52 members has deliberative, administrative, and judiciary functions, and a Consultative Committee advises respecting the working of the school system, but the inspectors-general are in direct communication with the Minister. For local educational administration France is divided into 17 circumscriptions, called Academies, each of which has an Academic Council whose members comprise a certain number elected by the professors or teachers. The Academic Councils deal with all grades of instruction. Each is under a Rector, and each is provided with academy inspectors, one for each department except Nord which has two (one being for primary instruction), and Seine which has eight (one being director of primary instruction), besides primary inspectors of schools, usually one for each arrondissement, 20 inspectors (male or female) for the department of the Seine. Each department has a council for primary educational matters, the prefect being president, and this body has large powers with respect to the inspection, management and maintenance of schools and the opening of free schools.

The law of August 9, 1879, rendered obligatory for each department the maintenance of two primary normal schools, one for school-masters, the other for school-mistresses ; there are two higher normal schools of primary instruction: one at Fontenay-aux-Roses for professors for normal schools for school-mistresses, the other at St. Cloud for professors for normal schools for school-masters. The law of June 16, 1881, made instruction absolutely free in all primary public schools ; that of March 28, 1882, rendered it obligatory for all children from 6 completed to 13 years of age. The law of October 30, 1886, is the organic law of primary instruction now in force : it established that teachers should be lay ; for infant schools it substituted écoles maternelles instead of salles d'asile ; it fixed the programmes of instruction, and established freedom of private schools under the supervision of the school authorities.

The following table shows the condition of primary instruction in 1923-24 and 1924-25 :—

On November 15, 1926, there were 282 higher elementary schools for boys and 209 for girls. The number of pupils was on November 15, 1926, 37,900 boys and 36,680 girls, compared with 37,556 boys and 33,907 girls on November 15, 1924.

Courses of instruction for adults are conducted in the evening by teachers in their schools.

In 1924, 8·9 per cent. of the conscripts could neither read nor write.

The number of primary normal schools (exclusive of Fontenay and St. Cloud) is 86 for school-masters, and 85 for school-mistresses. The number of pupil-teachers in primary normal schools in 1925-26 was 5,394 men and 6,239 women.

Secondary Instruction : Boys.—Secondary instruction is supplied in two types of schools—by the State in the lycées, and by the communes in the colleges, by associations and by private individuals in free establishments (écoles libres). The course of study extends over 7 years.

The number of public secondary schools for boys and the number of pupils for 3 years were as follows :—

Higher Instruction is supplied by the State in the universities and in special schools, and by private individuals in the private faculties and schools. The freedom of higher instruction was established by the law of July 12, 1875, modified by that of March 18, 1880, which reserved to the State faculties the exclusive right to confer degrees. A decree of December 28, 1885, created a general council of the faculties, and the creation of universities, each consisting of several faculties, was accomplished in 1897, in virtue of the law of July 10, 1896.

There are 17 Universities in France. The following table shows the year of foundation and the total number of students on July 31, 1925 :—

There are free faculties : at Paris (the Catholic Institute of Paris comprising theology, law and advanced scientific and literary studies); Angers (theology, law, sciences, letters, agriculture); Lille (theology, law, medicine and pharmacy, sciences, letters, social sciences and politics); Lyon (theology, law, sciences, letters) ; Marseille (law) ; Toulouse (the Catholic Institute with theological, literary, and scientific instruction). There is, besides, in Paris a large institution for free higher instruction in political science, the École libre des Sciences Politiques, and also one for the study of international law, the Institut des Hautes Études Internationales.

The State faculties confer the degrees of bachelor, of licentiate, and of doctor. Yearly competitive examinations in the various branches of teaching (agrégations) are open to holders of the degree of licentiate, or doctor in the case of law and medicine, and lead to the title of professeur agrégé in secondary and higher (law and medicine) instruction.

The other higher institutions dependent on the Ministry of Public Instruction are the Collège de France (founded by Francis I. in 1530), which has courses of study bearing on various subjects, literature and language, archaeology, mathematical, natural, mental and social science (political economy, &c.); the Museum of Natural History giving instruction in the sciences and nature; the École Pratique des Hautes Études (history and philology, mathematical and physico-chemical sciences, and the sciences of nature and of religion), having its seat at the Sorbonne; the École Normale Supérieure, which prepares teachers for secondary instruction and, since 1904, follows the curricula of the Sorbonne without special teachers of its own; the École des Chartes, which trains the archivist paleographers; the École des Langues Orientales vivantes; the École du Louvre, devoted to art and archaeology; the École des Beaux-Arts, and the Bureau des Longitudes, the Central Meteorological Bureau; the Observatoire of Paris; and the French Schools at Athens, Rome, Cairo and Indo-China, besides a school for Morocco.

Outside Paris there are eight observatories (Meudon, Besançon, Bordeaux, &c.). The observatory at Nice is dependent on the Academy of Sciences.

Professional and Technical Instruction.—The principal institutions of higher or technical instruction dependent on other ministries are: the Conservatoire des Arts et Métiers at Paris (with 20 evening courses on the applied sciences and social economy), the École Centrale des Arts et Manufactures, the École des Hautes Études Commerciales, 15 higher schools of commerce with 3,161 pupils (1924), dependent on the Ministry of Public Instruction; the National Agronomic Institute at Paris, the Veterinary school at Alfort, a school of forestry at Nancy, the higher national school of colonial agriculture, national agricultural schools at Grignon, Rennes, Montpellier, 46 practical schools of Agriculture, &c., dependent on the Ministry of Agriculture; the École Supérieure de Guerre, the École Polytechnique, the military school at St. Cyr, the École d'Artillerie at Fontainebleau, the École de Cavalerie at Saumur, and other schools dependent on the Ministry of War; the Naval School at Brest dependent on the Ministry of Marine; the School of Mines at Paris, the School of Bridges and Roads at Paris, the School of Mines at St. Etienne, and the Schools of Miners at Alais and Douai; with other schools dependent on the Ministry of Public Works; the École Coloniale at Paris, dependent on the Ministry of the Colonies. The École des Beaux Arts, the École Nationale des Arts Décoratifs, and the Conservatoire de Musique et de Déclamation depend on the department of Fine Arts, which is attached to the Ministry of Public Instruction. The municipal school of Industrial Physics and Chemistry is dependent on the City of Paris. In the provinces there are National schools of fine arts, and schools of music, and also several municipal schools as well as free subventioned schools, etc.

Technical schools of a somewhat lower grade (dependent on the Ministry of Public Instruction are very numerous, comprising (in 1924—the latest available figures) six national schools of arts and trades (Aix, Angers, Chalons, Cluny, Lille, Paris), two schools of horology, six national professional schools, 87 practical schools of commerce and industry (of which 18 are for girls), 20 practical schools of industry; there are also 85 schools of industries, with 5,550 pupils; 13 municipal professional schools in Paris, with 1,385 pupils, and about 370 private schools, with 92,000 pupils.

Justice and Crime.

The Courts of lowest jurisdiction in France are those of the Justices of Peace (juges de paix, one in each canton) who try small civil cases and act also as judges of Police Courts, where all petty offences (contraventions) are disposed of. The Correctional Courts pronounce upon all graver offences (délits), including cases involving imprisonment up to 5 years. They have no jury, and consist of 3 judges belonging to the civil tribunals of first instance. In all cases of a délit or a crime the preliminary inquiry is made in secrecy by an examining magistrate (juge d'instruction), who may either dismiss the case or send it for trial before a court where a public prosecutor (Procureur) endeavours to prove the charge. The Court of Assizes is assisted by 12 jurors, who decide by simple majority on the fact with respect to offences amounting to crimes. The highest courts are the 26 Courts of Appeal, composed each of one President and a variable number of members, for all criminal cases which have been tried without a jury; and one Court of Cassation which sits at Paris, for all criminal cases tried by jury, so far as regards matters of law.

Formerly there was a tribunal of first instance in each arrondissement for civil cases, wherein the amount in dispute is between 200 and 1,500 francs, but since the decree of September 3, 1926, such a tribunal exists only in each department. Where the department is an important one, this tribunal may be divided into several sections which sit in the towns other than the capital of the department. Above these are the Appeal Courts and the Court of Cassation. For commercial cases there are, in 226 towns, Tribunals of Commerce and Councils of experts (prud'hommes). In the towns are police courts.

All Judges are nominated by the President of the Republic. They can be removed only by a decision of the Court of Cassation constituted as the Conseil Supérieur of the magistracy.

The French penal institutions consist, first, of Houses of Arrest (3,315 chambres de sûreté and dépôts de sûreté at the end of 1921). Next come Departmental Prisons (69 in 1921), also styled maisons d'arrêt, de justice and de correction, where both persons awaiting trial and those condemned to less than one year's imprisonment are kept, as also a number of boys and girls transferred from, or going to be transferred to, reformatories. The reformatories are 14 for boys and 7 for girls, 10 for boys and 3 for girls being public, and 4 for boys and 4 for girls being private. The Central Prisons (maisons de force et de correction), where all prisoners condemned to more than one year's imprisonment are kept, provided with large industrial establishments for the work of prisoners, are 9 for men and 2 for women.

All persons condemned to hard labour and many condemned to 'reclusion' are sent to Guiana (military and récidivistes); the dépôt de forçats of St. Martin-de-Ré is a dépôt for transferred hard-labour convicts.

Pauperism and Relief of Old Age.

In France the poor are assisted partly through public 'bureaux de bien-faisance' and partly by private and ecclesiastical charity. They are partly under the care of the communes and partly of the departments, both of which contribute, and ultimately under the supervision of Government. The funds of the 'bureaux de bienfaisance' are partly derived from endowments, partly from communal contributions, and partly from public and private charity. In 1924, the bureaux expended 117,941,600 francs and assisted 756,536 persons. Public assistance is rendered to poor or destitute children. At the end of 1924 the institutions for this purpose contained 178,709 children; the expenditure during the year amounted to 109,041,800 francs. In 1924 the hospitals for the sick, infirm, aged, or infants, numbered 1,886; and at the end of the year had 72,843 patients, besides 73,191 aged and infirm inmates; their expenditure for 1924 amounted to 778,932,000 francs. In the same year 714,588 persons received gratuitous medical assistance at home and 181,231 in hospitals, the expenditure for such purposes amounting to 120,836,000 francs. At the end of 1924 the asylums for imbeciles, national, departmental, and private, had 75,580 patients.

An Act was passed in 1905, for the relief of the aged poor, age limit, 70, the infirm, and the permanently incurable. The Act of 1905 provided that the cost of the scheme should be borne by the communes, the departments, and the State. The number of persons registered for relief on December 31, 1924, was 546,969. The cost to the State for 1924, was 269,035,000 francs. The Old-Age Pensions Law of April 5, 1910, as amended on February 27, 1912, provides for all wage-earners old-age pensions towards which both employers and workers contribute. Contributions are to be paid up to the 60th year of the worker's life, and the State will contribute 100 francs. This sum will be increased by one-tenth for every insured worker who has brought up 3 children of the age of 16. On December 31, 1924, 7,735,000 persons were registered under the scheme.

A law of March 24, 1873, provides protection for new-born infants. In 1923, 69,713 infants came within the scope of the law. In 1913, two further laws were introduced: that of June 17 to give relief, varying from 0.50 to 1.50 francs or more per day, to women in confinement, and that of July 14, to give relief to families with numerous children. The rate is a minimum of 120 francs per year for every child beyond the third. In 1924, the number of women so aided was 316,390, and the amount of relief 20,257,000 francs. Supplementary relief to nursing mothers, under the law of October 24, 1914, amounted in 1924 to 37,743,000 francs. In 1924, the number of families assisted was 190,759, at an expense of 24,404,300 francs, of which 12,812,500 francs were contributed by the State. Since 1922 it has been customary, in accordance with the law of June 29, 1918, to award prizes for large families. In 1924, in 144 departments, 54,096 prizes were awarded to the value of 16,771,200 francs. By law of July 22, 1923, and July 13, 1925, 120 francs per annum is granted to every French family which has more than 3 children living for every child beyond the third under 13.

The total foreign debt in francs (calculated at 150 francs to the £) is given at 219,777,858,000 francs. The annual charge on the foreign debt on December 31, 1926, amounted to 1,390,956,000 francs.

II. LOCAL FINANCE.

For 1923, the revenue of the departments of France amounted to 2,312,883,080 francs. The departmental debt stood at 2,378,852,524 francs.

For the year 1928, the budget of the City of Paris was balanced at 3,062,800,000 francs (24,700,000%). On March 31, 1924, the debt of the City of Paris was 6,476,014,549 francs.

Defence.

I. LAND DEFENCES.

France has a coastline of 1,760 miles, 1,304 on the Atlantic and 456 on the Mediterranean. Its land frontier extends over 1,665 miles, of which 1,246 miles are along the Belgian, German, Swiss, and Italian frontiers, and 419 along the Spanish frontier.

The permanent land defences of France now include the former German fortresses of Strassburg, Metz and Thionville, the former being in Alsace and the two latter in Lorraine. West of these lies the former first line of French permanent defences, namely the first-class fortresses of Verdun, Toul, Epinal and Belfort. The experiences of the Great War, which brought to light the power of mobile heavy artillery, the fire of which could be observed and directed from aeroplanes against permanent defences, will affect profoundly the principles of permanent fortification, and it is doubtful if many even of the first-class fortresses will in future be maintained, while those of the second and third classes will almost certainly disappear in so far as they have been designed to meet land attack. On the other hand coast defences will probably be maintained. On the coast Toulon, Rochefort, Lorient, Brest, and Cherbourg are naval harbours surrounded by forts.

II. ARMY.

The French Army is divided into the Metropolitan and the Colonial Armies, both are under the War Minister, but the estimates for Colonial troops other than those maintained in Algeria, Tunis, and Morocco are :

included in the budget of the Minister for the Colonies. The Metropolitan Army is divided into the Active Army, the Reserve Troops and the Territorial Army. The Army, with the exception of the Armies of Occupation is localised and territorialised in the military government of Paris, 20 Army Corps areas and the territories of Alsace and Lorraine. The normal composition of a French Army Corps is 2 infantry divisions, 1 regiment of cavalry, 1 artillery brigade of three regiments, 1 battalion of engineers, 1 group and 1 company of observation balloons, and administrative services.

The infantry division consists of 3 regiments of infantry each of 3 battalions, and 1 regiment of artillery of 3 groups each of 3 batteries. The cavalry division consists of 3 cavalry brigades each of 2 regiments, 1 group of horse artillery, and 1 group of cyclist chasseurs.

The peace establishment of the French Army provides for 5 Cavalry divisions and 32 divisions of the Active Metropolitan Army, of which 6 are divisions mixtes, composed partly of native, partly of white troops, 3 divisions of the Colonial Army quartered in France, 3 Algerian divisions, 1 Tunisian division, 3 Moroccan divisions, of which a considerable part are quartered in France and on the Rhine, 4 Aviation brigades, 3 brigades of Tanks, and 39 regiments of Heavy Artillery not allotted to Army Corps. The establishment of the Active Metropolitan Army, exclusive of the North African troops, by units was at the end of 1927 as follows:—

	Divisions	Regiments	Battalions	Independent Battalions	Squadrons	Independent Squadrons	Groups	Independent Groups	Special Cos or Batteries	Flights	Balloon Battalions

The total number of aeroplanes in army service was 1,429.

The peace establishment of the Active Metropolitan Army in 1927, was 438,187, included in this is the Air Force establishment of 32,886. Enlistment for the Metropolitan Army is regulated by the law of April 1, 1923, and is on a compulsory basis, but liberal exemptions are allowed. Service in the active army is for 1½ years, and from 1927, is to begin at the age of 21. At the end of this service the soldier remains on furlough (en disponibilité) for 2 years, he then serves in the first reserve for 16½ years, and in the second reserve for 8 years. A plan has been approved in principle for reducing service in the active army to 1 year. It is proposed to bring the new term of service into application in 1930.

The Reserve Troops form divisions corresponding to those in the Active Army on mobilisation, in the same districts as those to which the Active divisions belong. The Territorial Army forms a second line and is similarly organised in divisions on mobilisation. The Customs Corps is organised in battalions as are the Chasseurs Forestiers, these are both recruited from men who have passed into the Territorial Army.

The Gendarmerie is a police force recruited from the Army but performing civil duties in time of peace. There is a legion in each military district.

The strength of the Gendarmerie is 22,996 (including the Garde Républicaine), of whom about half are mounted.

The Garde Républicaine is also a police force and performs duties in Paris similar to those performed by the Gendarmerie in the districts. Its strength is 6,300.

The Colonial Army is distinct from the Metropolitan, and consists partly of white troops and partly of native troops. In 1927, the white troops of the Colonial establishment numbered 59,000, the Foreign Legion numbered 10,000, and the coloured troops 180,000, making with the Metropolitan Army and Gendarmerie a total peace establishment of 717,488. The Colonial white troops are recruited either by voluntary enlistment, or by voluntary transfer from the Metropolitan Army.

The organisation of the Colonial Army and North African troops by units is as follows:—

Infantry (white)		Infantry (white, colonial and native)		Cavalry		Artillery
Regiments (3 battalions) . . .	16	Zouaves Regts. .	6	Chassuers Regts. (d'Afrique) . .	6	Field Regts.	10

The administration of the French Army consists of a General Staff and of a number of departments, all under the War Minister. In questions of strategy and of higher military policy the War Minister is assisted by a Council called the Conseil Supérieur de la Guerre, consisting of himself as President, the Marshals of France and twelve selected generals, of whom one must be Chief of the General Staff.

In September, 1919, it was decided that the uniform of the Army should be the horizon-blue dress with kepi. The Chasseurs or Light Infantry battalions were, however, permitted to keep their distinctive dark blue uniform. Khaki was adopted for Colonial and North African troops, and navy blue for the Air Force.

The French infantry is armed with the Lebel magazine rifle: calibre .315. The French field gun is the 7.5 cm. (2.95 in.) Q.F., shielded gun. The French howitzer is the 10.5 cm. (3.35 in.) howitzer, and as the result of the war the French Army possesses a large variety of heavy guns of all calibres.

NAVY.

Under the Washington Treaty, whose provisions affect her very slightly, France was allowed to retain ten capital ships, but the France was lost in Quiberon Bay on August 25, 1922, and the nine remaining displace 197,670 metric tons, while her replacement tonnage is 177,800 metric tons (175,000 tons). She is not called upon to scrap any ship until 1930, though she may begin to build earlier if she wishes. In replacement tonnage she is established as the equal of Italy. The current shipbuilding programme (to be completed by 1929) comprises 6 cruisers of 10,000 tons (of which one is completed), 3 cruisers of 7,880 tons (completed), 21 flotilla leaders (of which 6 are completed), 36 destroyers (16 completed), and 52 submarines, of three distinct types. The whole tendency is thus to devote attention to cruisers and the flotillas. The air service, which is an integral part of the Navy, is to be developed, and the ex-battleship Béarn (discontinued in 1920) has been completed as an aircraft-carrier. The coast defences are now under the control of the Navy, and have been reorganized in four coast 'naval frontier' districts, in relation to 4 divisions of aircraft (40 flotillas), while a fifth division (10 flotillas) is attached to the active fleet. The inclusion of ex-enemy light cruisers, destroyers, and submarines in the Fleet strengthened it where it was weakest, but these vessels will soon need replacement. The naval frontier districts include considerable forces of destroyers, submarines, and mine-layers. The chief stations are Dunkirk, Cherbourg, Brest, Rochefort, Toulon, Corsica, Bizerta, Oran, Algiers, and Bona.

The total naval expenditure in 1927-28, amounted to 1,837,778,819 francs, as compared with 1,781,419,386 francs in 1926-27.

The Navy is under the supreme direction of the Minister of Marine, assisted by a Chief of the Staff. The latter has charge of all that concerns preparation for war, and is commander-in-chief designate. There are two sub-chiefs of the staff, of whom one is in charge of various sections, and the other of the work of the Military Cabinet. The central administration embraces the directorates of personnel, matériel, and artillery, the works section, the finance department, the services of submarine defences, hydrography, and a central flying service. In addition to these are the Superior Council of the Navy, which advises the Minister on high policy, and several special committees. For purposes of administration the French coasts are divided into five maritime arrondissements, having their headquarters at the naval ports of Cherbourg, Brest, Lorient, Rochefort, and Toulon, each under a vice-admiral, but Lorient and Rochefort are being reduced. Two flag-officers are inspectors-general and commanders-in-chief designate in the Channel and Mediterranean.

The French navy is manned partly by conscription and partly by voluntary enlistment. By the channel of the 'Inscription Maritime,' which was introduced by Colbert, and on the lists of which are the names of all male individuals of the 'maritime population,' France was formerly provided with a reserve of 114,000 men, of whom about 25,500 were usually serving with the fleet; now large numbers are taken from the shore for engine-room and other duties.

Certain ex-enemy vessels allotted to France are included in the following summary—4 cruisers, one flotilla leader, 12 destroyers, and 10 submarines. In addition to the units enumerated below, the aircraft carrier Béarn was placed in commission during 1927.

The four older cruisers are all ex-German except the Thionville, which was Austrian. Three cruisers of 10,000 tons, armed with 8 8in. guns, named Tourville, Suffren, and Colbert are under construction. During and since the war over 50 sloops and despatch vessels have been built.

Production and Industry

I. AGRICULTURE.

Of the total area of France, including Alsace and Lorraine (136,101,760 acres) 24,710,440 acres were under forests in 1924, 11,786,200 acres were returned as moor and uncultivated land, and 84,053,175 acres, of which 56,495,000 acres were arable, were returned as under crops, fallow and grass. Of the forest area (24,710,439 acres), 17,297,308 acres belong to private owners, 4,942,088 acres to communes, and 2,471,043 acres to the government.

The following tables show the area under the leading crops and the production (1 metric ton = 2205 lbs.) for three years:—

Crop	Area (1,000 acres)			Produce (1,000 metric tons)
	1924	1925	1926	1924	1925	1926
Wheat . . . . .	13,620	13,897	13,122	7,653	8,990	6,308

Beetroot, sugar . . . . .	501	536	572	5,778	5,871	4,860

In 1927, wheat production was estimated at 7,738,952 tons; oats, 5,507,411 tons; rye, 934,734 tons; barley, 1,209,902 tons; mixed corn, 105,365 tons; potatoes, 17,144,990; beetroot (sugar), 5,573,018.

The annual production of wine and cider appears as follows:—

Year	Under Vines, acres	Wine produced thousands of gallons	Wine Import, thousands of gallons	Wine Export, thousands of gallons	Cider produced 1,000's of gallons

1926	3,351,695	892,410	230,312	36,803	270,534

The production of fruits (other than for cider making) and nuts for 1927, is given in metric tons, as follows (figures for 1926 in brackets):—Apples and pears 308,560 (150,107), plums 77,226 (33,286), peaches 21,762 (11,814), apricots 8,225 (5,011), chestnuts 218,984 (198,731), walnuts 51,045 (19,963).

On December 31, 1926, the numbers of farm animals were: Horses, 2,393,960; mules, 184,810; asses, 263,630; cattle, 14,482,440; sheep and lambs, 10,775,260; pigs, 5,776,900; goats, 1,388,490.

Silk culture, with Government encouragement (primes), is carried on in 24 departments of France—most extensively in Gard, Drôme, Ardèche, Var and Vaucluse. Silk production for 4 years:—

Year	Number of producers	Quantities of eggs put into incubation	Total production	Total value of produce

				Worked steel .	6,900	7,446	8,430

In 1927 the production of coal and lignite was 52,846,698 metric tons, and of iron, 43,500,000 metric tons.

The production of ores for three years, in metric tons, is as follows :—

Ores	1924	1925	1926	Ores	1924	1925	1926
Lead, zinc, silver . . .	39,900	30,300	52,300	Manganese . .	3,700	3,100	2,625

III. MANUFACTURES.

Sugar.—In 1925–26, there were 107 sugar works, employing 23,086 men, 873 women, and 348 children. The yield of sugar during 12 years (expressed in metric tons of refined sugar) was :—

Years	Tons	Years	Tons	Years	Tons	Years	Tons
1914–15	302,961	1917–18	200,265	1920–21	805,041	1923–24	446,773

Alcohol.—In 1906, 59,616 thousands of gallons of alcohol were produced; in 1921, 34,184; in 1922, 38,126; in 1923, 39,314; in 1924, 43,168; in 1925, 44,264; and in 1926, 32,658.

Cotton.—In 1928, there were 11,004,400 spindles, 131,400 looms and 268 textile printing machines used in the cotton industry which employed a total number of 188,630 operatives.

IV. FISHERIES.

For the French fisheries, including those of Algeria, the following are statistics for 1925 (the latest available):—Persons employed, 131,600; sailing boats, 20,289; steamers, 535; motor boats, 2,387; value of products, 840,100,000 francs.

Commerce.

In French statistics General Trade includes all goods entering or leaving France, while Special Trade includes only imports for home use and exports of French origin.

The chief subdivisions of the special trade in thousands of francs and in tons were for two years :—

	Imports				Exports

Internal Communications.

I. RIVERS, RAILWAYS, ETC.

In 1926, there were in France 25,000 miles of national roads, 11,400 miles of departmental roads, 400,000 miles of local roads, making a total of 436,400 miles. Of the total 24,601 miles are improved roads.

In 1924, there were 4,222 miles of navigable rivers with a total traffic of 19·44 million tons, and 3,291 miles of canals with a total traffic of 17 million tons.

By a law of July 11, 1842, the construction of railways was left mainly to companies, superintended, and if necessary assisted, by the State; which now constructs lines which the companies work, and works on its own account one important State system. There are lines of local interest subventioned by the State or by the departments. The concessions granted to the six great companies expire at various dates from 1950 to 1960, till when (by a Convention made on June 28, 1921), the State guarantees to them working expenses and the interest and redemption of capital and loans.

The length of principal lines open for traffic in 1926 was 25,808 miles, made up as follows: State, 5,610 miles; Nord, 2,374 miles; Est, 3,116 miles; Paris-Orléans, 4,630 miles; Paris-Lyons-Mediterranean, 6,064 miles; Midi, 2,608 miles; Alsace-Lorraine, 1,402 miles. The total receipts for 1927 of all the seven companies was 13,282,300,000 francs; for 1926, 12,835,249,000 francs. Working expenses in 1927 amounted to 10,903,100,000 francs and financial charges, 2,680,900,000 francs, the deficit on the year being 321,700,000 francs.

It has been decided to electrify the whole French railway system. In December, 1926, was opened the newly electrified section of the Orleans railway from Paris to Vierzon, a distance of 127 miles. Important sections of the Medi Railway have also been electrified, namely between Bordeaux and Arcachon and between Dax and Toulouse.

The following table gives particulars of air traffic for 5 years :—

Years	Miles of airway	Mileage flown (in thousands of miles)	Passengers carried	Freight (1,000 lbs.)	Mail (1,000 lbs.)	Load

II. POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS.

In 1924, the receipts on account of posts, telegraphs, and telephones, amounted to 1,718 million francs; the expenditure to 1,604 million francs. The number of ordinary letters carried in 1924, was 1,670 millions, and of registered letters 86 millions.

The total length of the telegraphic lines in 1924, was 221,616 miles. In 1924, there were despatched 47,922,687 telegrams, of which 42,192,667 were internal and 5,730,020 international. In 1924, gross telegraph receipts were 288,000,000 francs.

In 1924, the telephone systems in France had 148,050 miles of line; number of subscribers (1924) 665,000; number of conversations 808,433,000.

Money and Credit.

The nominal value of the French money coined in France during the past years was :—

Year	Gold	Silver	Nickel and Bronze	Total
	Francs	Francs	Francs	Francs
1914-1921 . . . . .	165,002,990	585,580,361	137,158,781	887,742,132
1924 . . . . .	—	—	210,814,724	210,814,724

The ordinary savings-banks numbered 558 (with about 1,800 branch offices) on December 31, 1926; the number of depositors was 8,872,883, with deposits to the value of 11,203,542,715 francs, representing an average of francs 1319·01 to each depositor. The National savings-banks, on December 31, 1925, held deposits and interest amounting to 3,935,727,157 francs due to 7,417,740 depositors, representing an average of 530·60 francs per account.

The Bank of France, founded in 1800, and placed under State control in 1806, has the monopoly (since 1848) of issuing bank notes. The present privileges of the Bank were last renewed on December 20, 1918, for a further 25 years, i.e., until December 31, 1945. The capital of the Bank is fixed at 182,500,000 francs.

The situation of the bank on February 16, 1928, and on March 3, 1927, was :—

	February 16, 1928	March 3, 1927
	1000 francs	1000 francs
Gold . . . . .	5,543,831	5,547,828
Silver . . . . .	342,935	341,987
Advances to the Public . . . . .	1,721,732	1,915,335
Advances to the State . . . . .	22,750,000	29,700,000
Notes in circulation . . . . .	57,952,175	52,462,400
Capital and Reserve . . . . .	500,777	434,932

At the outbreak of war the maximum note issue of the Bank of France was 6,800 million francs; on August 5, 1914, it was raised to 12,000 million francs; the amount was increased on successive occasions, the last having been December 7, 1925, when the maximum was fixed at 58,500 million francs.

The following are the principal banks :—The Crédit Foncier de France, founded in 1852, which lends money on mortgage; the Crédit Lyonnais, founded in 1863; the Société Générale, founded in 1864; the Comptoir National d'Escompte de Paris; Banque de Paris et des Pays Bas; and the Banque Nationale de Crédit.

Money, Weights, and Measures..

The Franc of 100 centimes was in normal conditions of the value of 9½*d.* or 25·225 francs to the pound sterling.

Gold coins in common use are 20 and 10 franc pieces. The 20 franc gold piece weighs 6·4516 grammes 900 fine, and thus contains 5·80645 grammes of fine gold. Silver coins in common use are 5, 2, 1, and half franc pieces. The 5-franc silver piece weighs 25 grammes 900 fine, and thus contains 22·5 grammes of fine silver. The franc piece weighs 5 grammes 835 fine, and contains 4·175 grammes of fine silver. There are also 25, 10, and 5 centime pieces in nickel and bronze perforated in the centre and consisting of 750 parts copper and 250 parts nickel, and weighing respectively 5, 4 and 2 grammes. These tokens are in place of the former bronze coins of 10 and 5 centimes, and the coins of pure nickel of 25 centimes which, though they have not altogether disappeared from circulation, are no longer minted. There are also aluminium coins of 2 francs, 1 franc and 50 centimes.

Since May 1920, no silver coins have been struck, while gold coins have not been issued since 1915, save only in 1921 when coins to the value of about 4 million francs were minted. (See mintage table above.) The actual metal currency in circulation is composed of token coins in aluminium-bronze (2 franc, 1 franc and 50 centimes), bronze-nickel coins (25, 10 and 5 centimes), and the old bronze pieces (10 and 5 centimes) or pure nickel (25 centimes). Total value of token coins in circulation on December 31, 1925, 921,125,970 francs.

There is a double standard of value, gold and silver, the ratio being theoretically  $15\frac{1}{2}$  to 1. Of silver coins, however, only 5-franc pieces are legal tender, and of these the free coinage has been suspended since 1879.

The metric system of weights and measures is in general use in France.

ANDORRA.

The principality of Andorra, which since 1278, is under the joint suzerainty of the head of the French state and of the Spanish Bishop of Urgel, consists chiefly of a valley, surrounded by high mountain peaks. Its maximum length is 17 miles, and its width 18 miles; it has an area of 191 square miles and a population of 5,231, scattered in 6 villages. The surface of the country is rough and irregular, with an altitude varying between 6,562 and 10,171 feet. It is governed by a council of twenty-four members elected for four years by the heads of families in each of the six parishes. Half of the council is re-elected every two years. The council nominates a First Syndic (Syndic général d s Vallées) to preside over its deliberations; in the First Syndic is vested the executive power. A Second Syndic is also nominated as deputy of the First Syndic. The judicial power is exercised in civil matters in the first instance by 2 civil judges (Bayles) appointed by the Bishop and by France respectively. There is a Court of Appeal and also a Supreme Court of Andorra at Perpignan. This, and the Ecclesiastical Court of the Bishop, are the highest appeal courts. For criminal suits two magistrates (le Viguier de France and le Viguier Episcopal) preside over a criminal court at Andorra-la-Vieille. The principality pays an annual due of 960 francs to France and 460 pesetas to the Bishop. A permanent delegate, the Prefect of the Pyrénées Orientales, moreover, has charge of the interests of France in the principality and his department controls the public services established in the principality by France, such as public instruction, posts, and telegraphs, etc. A good road runs from the Spanish frontier to Andorra. Catalan is the language spoken. French and Spanish currency are both in use.

Colonies and Dependencies.

The colonies and dependencies of France (including Algeria and Tunis) have an area which is given officially as about 10,255,510 sq. kilometres, or 3,958,626 square miles, with a population of 55,631,184. Algeria, however, is under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of the Interior, and Tunis and Morocco are attached to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. For Syria and Cameroon France holds mandates under the League of Nations. The administration of the colonies is directed or controlled by the Ministry of the Colonies, which was organised as a separate department in 1894. Most of them enjoy some measure of self-government and have elective councils to assist the governor. The older colonies have also direct representation in the French legislature, Réunion, Martinique and Guadeloupe sending each a senator and two deputies, French India a senator and a deputy, Senegal, Guiana, and Cochinchina each a deputy, while most of the others are represented on the 'Conseil Supérieur des Colonies.' This council consists of the senators and deputies of colonies, delegates from other colonies, and officials and other persons appointed on account of their special knowledge or qualifications. Some only of the colonies have a revenue sufficient for the cost of administration. In 1928, France is to spend on the colonial service 452,744,000 francs.

The area and population of the colonial domain of France are as follows :

ASIA.

FRENCH INDIA.

The chief French possession in India is Pondicherry. It was founded by the French in 1674, taken by the Dutch in 1693, and restored in 1699. The English took it in 1761, restored it in 1765, re-took it in 1778, restored it a second time in 1785; re-took it a third time in 1793, and restored it in 1814.

As established by the treaties of 1814, and 1815, the French possessions in India consist of five separate colonies, which cover an aggregate of 50,803 hectares (about 196 square miles), and had on January 1, 1927, the following estimated populations:—

*Pondichéry . . . 47,329	Modéliarpeth . . . 14,493	Nédoukadou . . . 7,529
Oulgaret . . . 23,003	Ariancoupom . . . 17,055	Cotchéry . . . 6,678
Villénour . . . 22,022	*Karikal . . . 16,434	*Chandernagor . . . 26,595
Tiroubouvané . . . 25,928	Tirnoular . . . 9,764	*Mahé . . . 11,572
Bahour . . . 19,437	Grande Aldée . . . 7,768	*Yanaon . . . 4,758
Nettapacom . . . 15,048	Neravy . . . 9,019	Total . . . 284,432

In 1927, the population of the Provinces was as follows:—Pondichéry, 184,315; Karikal, 57,192; Chandernagor, 26,595; Mahé, 11,572; Yanaon, 4,758.

The colonies are divided into five dépendances (the chief towns of which are marked with an asterisk in the above table) and seventeen communes, having municipal institutions. There is also an elective general council. The Governor of the colonies resides at Pondichéry. The colonies are represented in the Parliament at Paris by one senator and one deputy. At Pondichéry the birth-rate in 1926, was 4·17 per cent., and the death-rate 3·53 per cent. There were in 1926, 59 primary schools and 3 colleges, all maintained by the Government, with 300 teachers and 10,459 pupils. Local revenue and expenditure (budget of 1927) 2,835,350 rupees. The principal crops are paddy, rice, sugar, cotton, manioc, cacao, coffee, ground-nuts. On December 31, 1926, there were 84,640 cattle, 26,125 sheep, and 32,565 goats. There are at Pondichéry 3 cotton mills, and at Chandernagor 1 jute mill; the cotton mills have, in all, 1,635 looms and 72,067 spindles, employing 8,225 persons. There are also at work a few oil presses for ground-nuts, and 1 ice factory. The chief exports from Pondichéry are oil seeds. At the ports of Pondichéry, Karikal, and Mahé in 1926, the imports amounted to 10,187,752 rupees, and the exports to 26,285,194 rupees. At these three ports in 1926, 836 vessels entered and cleared. Railway open, 43 miles, Pondichéry to Villapuram, and Peralam to Karikal.

FRENCH INDO-CHINA.

CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

Governor-General (ad interim).—M. Monguillot (January 24, 1928).

Secretary General—M. Monguillot (December, 2, 1925).

French Indo-China, with an area of about 274,385 square miles and a population in 1927, of 19,999,423, of whom 34,443 were European (excluding military forces), consists of 5 States: the Colony of Cochin-China, the Protectorates of Annam, Cambodia (including the territory around Battambang ceded by Siam in 1907), Tonking and Laos; and Kwang-Chau-Wan, leased from China. The whole country is under a Governor-General, assisted by a Secretary-General, and each of the States has at its head an official bearing the title of Resident-Superior, except in the case of Cochin-China, which, being a direct French Colony while the others are only Protectorates, has a Governor at its head. There is a Government Council for the whole of Indo-China and a Permanent Commission of the Council.

In Cochin-China justice is administered by French magistrates for both Europeans and natives, but in the Protectorates there are native tribunals for matters affecting natives, and French courts for matters affecting Europeans. From the native tribunals there is an appeal to courts at Saigon and Hanoi. In these appeal courts European judges, in matters affecting natives, are assisted by Annamite mandarins.

There is a common budget for the whole of Indo-China, and also a separate budget for each of the States. The Provinces, in Cochin-China only, have also their budget, as have the municipalities. The general budget is supported by receipts from customs, Government monopolies, indirect contributions, posts, telegraphs, and railways in all the countries of the union, and besides maintaining these, provides for military and judicial services, public works, and other matters relating to the whole of the union. For 1927 the revenue and expenditure of the general budget balanced at 78,850,000 piastres. The outstanding debt of Indo-China amounted to 425,969,000 francs, to which must be added the loan of 6,180,000 piastres raised in March 1922, and the loan of 2,060,000 piastres in 1926.

The military force, consisting of two divisions with a special effective force, is commanded by the Commandant-Superior, a general of division with the same rank as army corps generals in France. The naval force comprises 2 gun-boats, 4 torpedo-boats, and 21 despatch vessels.

Indo-China is divided into three main economic areas:—(1) The territory tributary to Saigon (Cochin China, Cambodia, Southern Laos, and Annam South of Cape Varela), which, apart from the fisheries on the Coast and the interior lakes, is almost entirely agricultural, being one of the great rice regions of the world. (2) The region tributary to Haifong (Tonking and the three northern districts of Annam), which is devoted to agriculture, mining and manufacture. (3) Central Annam (the region between Porte d'Annam and Cape Varela), with Tourane as the principal port, which is mainly agricultural, but is not a great rice-growing district; its main exports are cinnamon, sugar and tea. The minerals of Indo-China are coal, phosphates, zinc, antimony, tin, wolfram, graphite and lead.

In 1887, the French possessions in Indo-China, including Annam, Tonking and Cambodia, were united into a Customs Union. In 1926 the total imports amounted to 2,641,945,471 francs, and exports to 3,033,440,986 francs. The chief export is rice, forming about 68 per cent. of the total, and other exports are timber, fish, pepper, hides, coal, cotton, rubber and sugar. The principal imports are cotton-tissues, cotton-thread, tin, petrol and metal goods.

Into Great Britain in 1926, the imports from Indo-China amounted to 328,834l., and the exports from Great Britain, 323,667l.

There are about 7,300 miles of metalled roads and 10,000 miles of good unmetalled roads (1927).

The oldest railway in Indo-China is that from Saigon to Mytho. Total length of line, two-thirds Government, at end of 1927, 1,478 miles. There were 460 principal post offices and more than 700 rural post offices (1927).

The Bank of Indo-China, with an authorised capital of 72 million francs and reserve and redemption funds amounting to eighty million francs, is the principal banking institution of Indo-China. It is above all a bank of issue. This privilege expired in 1920, but has since been renewed from year to year pending the fixing by the French parliament of conditions on which it could be renewed for a further fifty years. For French Indo-China there is a coinage of silver pieces, piastres,  $\frac{1}{2}$ -piastres,  $\frac{1}{4}$ -piastres, and  $\frac{1}{8}$ -piastres; the piastre (since 1895) weighs 27 grams, and the fractional coins in proportion; the piastre and  $\frac{1}{2}$ -piastre are '900 fine, but the  $\frac{1}{4}$ - and  $\frac{1}{8}$ -piastre (since 1898) only '835 fine. The piastre is usually worth rather less than 24d. There is a bronze coin equal to the 100th part of a piastre, and a nickel coin equal to the twentieth part of a piastre. On June 30, 1927, the total circulation of paper and metal currency was 149,412,000 piastres, while the metallic reserve of the Bank of Indo-China was 38,585,000 piastres.

STATES AND PROTECTORATES.

Cochin-China.

The area of French Cochin-China is estimated at 26,476 square miles. The whole is divided into 20 provinces. The towns of Saigon and Cholon have been formed into municipalities. The Colonial Council contains 24 members. The colony is represented in France by one deputy. The population consists mainly of Annamites, Cambodians, Moïs, Chams, Chinese, and a few Indians, Malays, Tagals, and foreigners. In 1926, the total population was put at 4,119,832, of whom 12,865 were French and 587 European foreigners (excluding the military forces). Saigon had, in 1926, a population of 143,167, of whom 9,415 were French and 477 other Europeans, exclusive of 3,066 troops; the town of Cholon has 198,713 inhabitants, of whom 846 were Europeans and about 93,556 Chinese. There are about 1,445 schools, with 3,337 teachers, and 104,464 pupils.

The total area is put at about 5,720,935 hectares (1 hectare = 2.47 acres) of which 2,325,269 hectares are cultivated. The chief culture is rice, to which 5,118,000 acres were devoted in 1927. The production of cleaned rice in 1927 was 1,486,006 metric tons, or about 35 per cent. of the total crop of the whole of Indo-China. Other crops are maize, beans, sweet potatoes, earth-nuts, cotton, rubber, sugar-cane, tobacco, coffee, coco-nuts, betel-nuts, pepper, oranges, bananas, etc. The farm animals in 1924, comprised 15,350 horses, 444,460 buffaloes, 392,200 pigs, 3,000 sheep and goats.

River and coast fishing is actively carried on; the fishery products are valued at 2,800,000 francs yearly. There are 11 rice mills in Saigon and Cholon, turning out 3,000 tons of rice a day. In these towns are also 2 saw-mills, 2 soap factories, and a varnish factory. Commerce is mostly in the hands of Europeans and Chinese, but about 22,000 Annamites are small traders. The chief exports in 1926 were rice (1,411,559 metric tons), fish (28,685 metric tons), and fish oil, pepper (2,989 metric tons), cotton, copra (11,342 metric tons), silk, shrimps, isinglass, hides, cardamoms. The cultivation of rubber is increasing. In 1926, exports amounted to 8,589 metric tons, and in 1925, 7,842 metric tons. During 1926, 878 steamers of 1,959,577 tons entered at the port of Saigon, of which 103 of 191,964 tons were British, and 346 of 989,293 tons French. The vessels of the Messageries-Maritimes and of the Chargeurs-Réunis Companies visit Saigon regularly. There is also constant communication with Hong Kong and Singapore by British vessels. (For railways see Indo-China.) At Saigon there are 7 banks or bank-agencies. The total exports in 1926 amounted to 3,067,682,872 francs, and imports to 1,835,375,255 francs.

In 1926, the local budget balanced at 19,471,075 piastres.

Annam.

French intervention in the affairs of Annam, which began as early as 1787, was terminated by a treaty, signed on June 6, 1884, and ratified at Hué on February 23, 1886, by which a French protectorate has been established over Annam. The King Bao-Dai succeeded to the throne on November 6, 1925. During his minority, the Government is in the hands of a Regency Council. The King governs the country, assisted by a Council of Ministers, in accordance with the wishes of the French Government, represented by a Resident Supérieur. A Chamber of representatives of the people was established in 1926. The ports of Tourane, Qui-Nhon, and Xuan Day are opened to European commerce, and the customs revenue conceded to France; French troops occupy part of the citadel (called Mang-Ca) of Hué, the capital (population 60,611). Binh-Dinh, the largest town, has 147,199 inhabitants. Annamite functionaries, under the control of the French Government, administer all the internal affairs of Annam. The area of the protectorate is about 39,758 square miles, with a population in 1926, of 5,580,974. There were 2,584 Europeans (exclusive of the military forces) in 1925. The population is Annamite in the towns and along the coast, and consists of various tribes of Moïs in the hilly tracts. At the end of 1920 the official schools of Annam were reorganised and placed under the direct control of the French Protectorate. There were in 1927, 744 preparatory schools with 22,821 pupils; 124 elementary schools (107 for boys, 17 for girls) with 7,972 pupils (7,351 boys, 621 girls); 45 secondary schools (4 for girls) with 11,106 pupils (10,664 boys, 442 girls); one higher secondary school for boys at Hué, with 447 pupils, one at Vinh with 455 pupils and one at Quinhon with 420 pupils; one higher secondary school for native girls at Dong-Khanh with 388 pupils; one professional school with 105 pupils; one normal school for boys, and one for girls, both at Hué. Local budget, 1927, balanced at 9,770,815 piastres. The Phanrang river has been utilised to irrigate about 10,000 acres, and similar works, on a smaller scale, have been carried out in Central Annam. Rice is one of the most important products. Others are cotton, maize, and other cereals, the areca nut, mulberry, cinnamon, tobacco, sugar, betel, manioc, bamboo; excellent timber abounds, also caoutchouc, cardamoms, coffee, dye, and medicinal plants. Raw silk is produced. There are about 500,000 head of cattle in Annam, and cattle rearing is of some importance. There are copper, zinc, and gold in the province of Quang-nam; the mines are worked by natives. An important seam of haematite iron is worked about 9 kilometres from Thanhhoa. At Nongson, near Tourane, coal mines are worked. In North, Central, and Southern Annam there are salt works. Imports in 1926, 67,468,123 francs; exports, 96,775,317 francs. The chief imports are cotton-yarn, cottons, tea, petroleum, paper goods, and tobacco; chief exports, sugar, rice, cotton and silk tissues, cinnamon, tea, and paper. In 1926, 14 English ships of 16,965 tons, 31 Chinese of 82,596 tons, 5 French of 2,052 tons, 2 Japanese of 1,917 tons, 8 German of 12,884 tons, and 94 Chinese sailing vessels of 4,691 tons cleared the port of Tourane, the total tonnage being 71,045 tons.

Cambodia.

Cambodia is bounded on the south by Cochin China, on the east by Annam, on the north by Laos and Siam, on the west by Siam, and on the south-west by the Gulf of Siam.

Area, 67,550 square miles; population according to the census of 1926: 2,535,178, of whom 1,901 were Europeans (excluding the military forces), 152,000 Annamites, 195,300 Chinese, 2,107,450 Cambodians, 61,591 Sino-Cambodians, 61,253 Malaysians, 20,071 Laotians, and 35,612 of various races. The present King, Monivong, succeeded his late father, Sisowath, on August 9, 1927. The country is divided into 14 provinces. The four chief towns are Phnôm-Penh (population 81,712), the capital of the territory, located at the crossing of Tonlé-Sap and Mékong rivers, Battambang, 180 miles further north-west, Kampot (92 miles from the capital), a seaport on the Gulf of Siam, but not accessible for sea-going vessels, and Kompong-Cham. The budget for 1927, balanced at 10,838,089 piastres, including a sum of 578,000 piastres allowed for the civil list of the king and princes. There are 171 French schools, including one college and one professional school, with 12,000 Cambodian, Annamite and Chinese pupils.

The soil is fertile, but only a part of it is under cultivation (1,900,000 acres) owing to shortage of labour. The chief product of Cambodia is rice (production in 1926-27, 900,000 metric tons), of which that country exported 140,000 tons; this export is made by way of Cholon where the rice is milled, and Saigon where it is shipped. Amongst the other products are tobacco, kapok, cotton, pepper, indigo, coffee, palm sugar and rubber. Pepper is especially grown in the country of Kampot, the production being over 3,000 metric tons annually. Cotton growing is extending; the production is estimated at 8,000 tons, the whole of which is exported. Cattle breeding is a flourishing native industry, especially between Phnôm-Penh and Manila. Other native industries are: weaving of silk and cotton, pottery and making of rush mats. There is a cotton-ginning mill at Ksach-Kandal, near Phnôm-Penh, and another at Kompong-Cham, a silk factory, several iron foundries, rice-mills, and saw-mills at Phnôm-Penh, but not very important. Valuable forests cover an area of about 10,000,000 acres. Iron ore, limestone, phosphate and sapphire are the principal minerals, but not worked very extensively. The overflow of the Mekong river fills up the Great Lake, which occupies the middle of Western Cambodia. With the low-water season the lake slowly empties and leaves innumerable ponds on the ground it covered during the high-water season. These ponds are filled with an enormous quantity of fish suitable for salting and smoking. This is the principal native industry, and the export to China of Mekong fish was in 1926, 26,000 tons. The external trade is carried on mostly through Saigon in Cochin-China. Imports in 1926: 68,009,173 francs; exports, 26,253,000 francs. The imports comprise salt, wine, textiles, chemicals; the exports comprise rice, salted fish (1926: 26,230 metric tons), pepper, maize (1925: 27,000 metric tons), cotton (1926: 2,284 metric tons), tobacco (881 metric tons), fish-oil, palm-sugar (2,000 metric tons), pea-nuts (5,000 metric tons), sticklac, nux vomica (303 metric tons), kapok, lime, wood, resin, hides, and cattle (1926: 30,630 head). This last trade is carried between Phnôm-Penh and Manila.

Cambodia possesses two little sea-harbours, Kep and Réam, both on the Gulf of Siam and connected to Bangkok and Saigon by the steamers of the "Siam Steam Navigation Company," and the "Sté des Affréteurs Indochinois." Total tonnage of the different little steamers and junks that enter and clear out the different ports of Cambodia is about 1,000,000 metric tons per year. The Mékong and the Great Lake, with their affluents, give a total of 875 miles of waterways, of which about 370 are not navigable to launches during the low-water season. Sea-going steamers can easily reach Phnôm-Penh, which has good quays and embankments.

Cambodia possessed in 1927, 1,209 miles of good metalled roads and nearly 435 miles of unmetalled roads and 1,160 miles of roads in course of construction. The chief roads are from Saigon to the Siamese frontier, via Phnôm-Penh and Battambang, from Phnôm-Penh to the Gulf of Siam, from Saigon to Kratié, and from Phnôm-Penh to Angkor via Kompong-Thom.

Of all the countries of the Far East, Cambodia is among the richest in ancient monuments. The ruins of Angkor are specially famous.

Tonking.

This territory, brought under France's protectorate in 1884, has an area of 40,530 square miles, and is divided into 23 provinces, and 4 military territories, with 10,885 villages and a population in 1926 of 7,401,912, of whom 9,143 were Europeans (exclusive of military forces). The King of Annam was formerly represented in Tonking by a viceroy, but, in July, 1897, he consented to the suppression of the vicerealty and the creation of a French residency in its place. Chief town Hanoi, a fine and large modern town, with a population of about 103,235 in 1926. This town on January 1, 1902, became the capital of Indo-China, instead of Saigon. In 1926, there were 14 native primary schools (57,686 pupils), 2 native normal college (416 students), 1 native college (670 students), 1 school of applied arts (298 students), 2 French High Schools (148 pupils), and 1 French Lycée (600 pupils). The University of Indo-China was organised in 1917, and contains 10 faculties. There were in 1926, 404 students. The local budget for 1927, balanced at 18,017,180 piastres. The chief crop is rice (total exports 1926, 162,896 tons valued at 149,000,000 francs) exported mostly to Hong Kong. Other products are maize, arrow-root, sugar-cane, coffee, tea, various fruit trees, and tobacco. A large quantity of raw silk is produced annually, most of which is used in native weaving and the remainder exported (79,400 kilogrammes for 1926). There are rich limestone quarries, calamine and tin mines, and also rich hard coal beds. In 1925, the principal mineral products were coal (1,363,000 metric tons), zinc (52,800 metric tons), phosphates (15,274 metric tons), tin and graphite. The enormous limestone quarries allowed the rapid increase of Portland cement manufacture which produced in 1925, 150,000 tons of cement.

Imports in 1926, 1,700,758,000 francs; exports, 1,316,401,000 francs.

Chief imports are metal tools and machinery, yarn and tissues, beverages; chief exports, rice, maize, and animal products. The principal port is Haiphong, which is visited regularly by the steamers of three French lines.

In 1924, 1,019 vessels of 1,338,213 tons gross entered and cleared this port, 242 vessels (285,441 tons) being British, and 538 vessels (773,175 tons) French.

The Laos territory, under French protectorate since 1893, is estimated to contain 82,604 square miles, and in 1926, there were 855,146 inhabitants. The capital is Vientiane. In the country there is a protected state, Luang Prabang, which has a capital of the same name, the residence of the King, who is assisted in his government by a French Administrator. The soil is fertile, producing rice, cotton, indigo, tobacco and fruits, and bearing teak forests, from which the logs are now floated down the Mekong to Saigon. Gold, tin, lead and precious stones are found, and concessions have been granted to several French mining companies. It can be entered by the Mekong, which is barred at Khone by rapids, and by two new roads from Vinh to Thakhek and from Quang Tri to Savannakhet. A railway, four miles in length, has been constructed across Khone island, and by means of it several steam launches have been transported to the upper waters, where they now ply. A telegraph line connects Hué in Annam with the towns on the Mekong, and these with Saigon and Hanoi. The local budget for 1927, balanced at 3,370,000 piastres.

In 1900, the territory of Kwang Chau Wan on the coast of China, leased from China in 1898, and increased in 1899, by the addition of 2 islands in the bay, was placed under the authority of the Governor-General of Indo-China. The territory has been divided into 6 administrative circumscriptions, including 2 Municipalities (Fort-Bayard, the seat of the local Administration, and Tchekham, a commercial centre), but the Chinese communal organisation is maintained. Its area is about 190 square miles and its population 205,000. The imports are chiefly cotton yarns, petroleum, matches, refined sugar, cunao (for tinctorial purposes); the exports are straw sacks, swine, cattle, brown sugar, and ground-nuts. Imports in 1925, 6,735,239 piastres; exports, 5,844,992 piastres. The port is free. The territory is regularly visited by the vessels of a French company; in 1925, 298 vessels of 130,000 tons entered. The local budget for 1927, balanced at 660,000 piastres.

MANDATED TERRITORY IN ASIA: SYRIA AND LEBANON.

Syria, a province of Turkey-in-Asia, has been recognised as an independent State to be placed under a Mandatory Power. By decision of the Supreme Council of the Allied Powers at San Remo (April 25, 1920), France has been assigned the Mandate for Syria, which was confirmed by the League of Nations on July 24, 1922 (Declaration of London).

High Commissioner.—M. Henri Pansot (October 12, 1926).

Area and Population.—Syria under the Mandate is bounded by the Mediterranean on the west, by Palestine on the south, by Mesopotamia on the east, and by Turkey on the north.

The Anglo-French agreement of Dec. 23, 1920, defines the frontier between Syria and Mesopotamia and Palestine, and also the southern boundary of Syria, which begins at Ras Nakura; then follows the watershed between the Farah, Kurn, and Kerbera Wadis on the south and the Duhleh-el-Ayon and Zerka Wadis on the north; then follows the watershed between the Litany and the Jordan as far north as Metullah, the most northern Jewish Colony, then turns eastward, leaving Banias and its "source of the Jordan" in Palestine; then passes down the Wadi Jeraba to the Sea of Galilee, then crosses the Sea of Galilee, leaving the country of the Gadarenes to France. From Semakh to the east of the outflow of the Lower Jordan from the Lake it runs to the south of the Yarmuk so as to include Deraa and Bosrah in Syria. From Deraa the frontier runs to Nasib, thence to Intar and north-east to the nearest point of the Euphrates at Abu Kemal, 50 miles west of Anah; then it runs to Rumeilan Keui so as to leave all the western Khabur to Syria, and thence to the nearest point of the Tigris, about 70 miles north-west of Mosul. The eastern frontier of Syria runs up the Tigris as far as Jeziret-ibn-Omar, when it joins the Turkish frontier laid down in the Convention of London of March 7, 1921, confirmed by the Treaty of Angora, October 21, 1921. The section of the southern frontier between Ras Nakura and the valley of Garmonk was ratified by the two governments on March 7, 1923.

The frontier between Syria and Turkey has been fixed by the Franco-Turkish Treaty of October 21, 1921, as beginning at the Gulf of Alexandretta, immediately south of Payas, thence to Meidan Ekbes: thence to the south so as to leave to Syria the town of Movisova, and to Turkey Karnaba and Killis; thence to the Baghdad railway at Chobanbeg, following the line to Nisibin; thence to the Tigris at Jeziret-ibn-Omar, the last-named as well as Nisibin being in Turkish territory.

The country was originally organised into 5 territories (états), but since January 1, 1925, two of these, viz. Damascus and Aleppo, were united to form the single territory of Syria (Sanjaks of Hama, Homs, Damascus, Hauran, Aleppo, Alexandretta and Deir ez Zor). The remaining territories are those of the Alaouite (Sanjaks of Latakia and Tartous); of the Great Lebanon (Sanjaks of North Lebanon, Mount Lebanon, South Lebanon and Bekaa); of Jebel Druze (south of Hauran).

The GREAT LEBANON was proclaimed a State on September 1, 1920. It has the following frontiers:—North, the Nahr-el-Chebir; south, the frontier of Palestine; west, the coast; and east, the heights of Anti-Lebanon. Beirut is the seat of the Government. The national flag is the French Tricolour with a cedar superimposed on the white ground. There is one Legislative Assembly.

The total area of Syria subject to the French Mandate may be estimated at 60,000 square miles. The total population of this area in 1926, was 2,046,857. The population of the 4 territories was as follows:—Syria, 1,120,792; Lebanon, 597,789; Alaouite, 277,948; and Jebel Druze, 50,323. The bulk of the population of Syria is of Arabic origin, and Arabic is the prevailing language, with many dialectical varieties. But there is a large influx of foreign elements, including Turks, Turkomans, Kurds, Circassians, Armenians, Persians, Jews, and a certain number of Europeans. The principal towns are Damascus, population 170,000; Aleppo, 140,000; Beirut, 80,000; Homs, 60,000; Hama, 35,000; Tripoli, 30,000; Antioch, 30,000; Latakia, 20,000; Alexandretta, 15,000; and Zahlah in Lebanon, 13,000. There are no statistics of births and deaths.

Religion and Education.—The population of Syria is composed mainly of Moslems, of whom there are 1,514,755. The majority are Sunni Moslems (1,075,816). The Druses number about 86,125, the Alaouites 227,930, and Ishmaelites 14,882. There have been Christians in Syria since the earliest times. They number at present 505,419, of whom 186,676 are Maronites, 66,762 Greek Catholics, 7,805 Armenian Catholics, 32,859 Armenians, 8,887 Protestants, 28,885 Gregorians, and 151,326 belong to the Orthodox Greek Church. There are also 16,526 Jews. There are now three Uniat Patriarchs and one Orthodox Patriarch of Antioch.

There were, in 1927, 552 public elementary schools with 38,873 pupils; 5 lycées for boys, one each at Damascus, Aleppo, Homs, Hama, and Deir Ez Zor, with a total of 669 pupils: 2 secondary schools for girls at Damascus and Aleppo, to each of which is attached a department for the training of teachers ; 2 secondary schools for boys at Beirut and Tripoli, and one secondary school for girls at Beirut.

At Damascus there is a Syrian university (founded June 15, 1923), with a faculty of medicine (115 students) and a faculty of law (287 students). There is also an Arab High School, founded and maintained by the High Commissioner, and also agricultural colleges at Sélémié and Bekaa. There is a school of arts and crafts at Beirut (95 pupils).

The private elementary and higher-grade schools had 86,648 pupils, of whom 44,724 were in local institutions, 26,246 in French, 6,120 in American, 2,010 in English, 1,147 in Italian, and 401 in Danish. The private secondary schools had 8,674 pupils, of whom 6,687 were in French colleges and 1,987 in local colleges.

There are also two universities in Beirut, one French and one American. The American university contains a faculty of medicine and several schools, with 1,178 students, of whom 468 were Moslems, 24 Druses, 25 Bahairtes, 584 Christians, and 77 Jews. The French university has a faculty of medicine with 450 students, and several schools.

Finance.—The revenue and expenditure for four years was as follows in Syrian pounds (Syrian pound = Francs 20):—

	1923	1924	1925	1926 <sup>1</sup>
	Syrian Pounds	Syrian Pounds	Syrian Pounds	Syrian Pounds
Revenue . . .	7,509,813	10,606,279	12,003,741	12,799,521
Expenditure . .	6,422,188	7,458,155	8,830,390	12,799,521

The Budget for 1926 was distributed as follows:—(in Syrian pounds), Lebanon, 3,470,546 ; Alaouite, 788,550 ; Syria, 8,041,050 ; Sanjak of Alexandretta, 355,000 ; and Jebel Druze, 144,375.

Defence.—A French army is in occupation of the whole country.

Production and Industry.—Syria is essentially an agricultural country, the bulk of the population being engaged in the cultivation of the soil and in cattle breeding ; the total area under crops (1926) was roughly 2,000,000 hectares (7,719 square miles), or about half the cultivatable area of the mandated territory. The principal products in 1926 were : wheat, 372,780 metric tons ; barley, 235,622 metric tons ; oats, 19,000 metric tons ; maize, 98,890 metric tons ; olives, 85,081 metric tons ; silk cocoons, 2,950 metric tons ; and cotton, 1,692 metric tons. Despite the relatively large acreage planted, the total cereal crop is still insufficient for the needs of the country. Sesamé, from which oil is produced, is one of the most valued crops, but is very uncertain, the annual yield being about 30,000 tons, a third of which is exported. Chickpeas, lentils, beans, vetches, and lupins are largely cultivated, the annual crop of chickpeas being estimated at 50,000 tons. About 4,700 acres in Latakia, Aleppo, Beirut, and Damascus produce about 3,000,000 lb. of tobacco, valued at 200,000L. The cultivation of cotton has been considerably extended during the last two years. Hemp and sugarcane are also cultivated. The most important fruit trees are the olive, vine, mulberry, lemon, banana, and orange. The white mulberry is largely cultivated in Northern Syria for feeding silk-worms. Sheep-raising is also of importance.

Syria is poorer in minerals than in other resources, but this may be due to insufficient exploration. Northern Lebanon has been worked for iron in ancient and modern times. At Majerba the ore is rich, and the iron good. There is a comparatively rich mine of lignite in South Lebanon. There are indications of petroleum in various places, but the attempts to work it so far have not been successful. There are indications of phosphates, lead, copper, antimony, nickel, chrome; gypsum is widely distributed. There is abundance of marble and good building stone.

The industries of Syria are on a very small scale. Flour, oil, soap, and silk thread are the most important. The chief centres of the silk industry are Beirut, Aleppo, Tripoli, and Latakia. There were 81 mills in 1924. Wine and tobacco are also produced.

Commerce.—The imports and exports for three years (in thousands of Syrian pounds) were as follows (1 Syrian pound = 20 francs):—

	1924	1925	1926
	1,000 Syrian pounds	1,000 Syrian pounds	1,000 Syrian pounds
Imports . . . . .	30,832	48,780	68,357
Exports . . . . .	16,997	22,960	27,241

The following are the principal articles of import and export:—

According to Board of Trade Returns the imports from Syria into Great Britain amounted to 304,316*l.* in 1926, and 339,815*l.* in 1927, while the exports to Syria amounted to 1,199,743*l.* in 1926., and 1,620,905*l.* in 1927.

Communications.—Most of the ports of Syria are visited regularly by the steamers of various shipping companies. In 1926, 1,616 vessels of 3,158,310 tons entered the ports of Lebanon and Syria. Of these, 493 (802,475 tons) were British; 493 (1,051,787 tons) Italian; 296 (824,220 tons) French; and 100 (91,101 tons) Greek. Beirut was the principal port of call with 824 vessels of 1,734,564 tons.

In 1926, there were 1,151 miles of first-class roads with 304 miles in the course of construction. Syria is comparatively well provided with railways, and new lines and branches are proposed. The following railways were open in 1926:—from Beirut to Damascus, 91 miles; Rayak to Aleppo, 206 miles; Homs to Tripoli, 64 miles; Beirut to Mameltein, 11 miles; Damascus to El Hammé, 120 miles. Three companies operate passenger routes across the Syrian Desert between Beirut and Baghdad.

The official currency as from May 1, 1920, is the Syrian Bank Note, issued by the Bank of Syria, under French Treasury control. The monetary unit is the Syrian pound, divided into 100 piastres (1 piastre=20 centimes), which are exchangeable in Paris at the fixed rate of 20 francs to the pound. On December 31, 1921, the notes in circulation amounted to 201,626,334 francs.

There is a Consul-General at Beirut, and Consuls at Aleppo and Damascus.

Government.

The government and administration of Algeria are centralised at Algiers under the authority of the Governor-General, who represents the Government of the Republic throughout Algerian territory. With the exception of the non-Mussulman services of Justice, Public Instruction, Worship, and the Treasury, which are under the appropriate ministries in Paris, all the services are under his direction. He has to prepare a special budget for Algeria, he grants concessions for works, and he contracts loans in the name of the Colony.

The budget of Algeria which, since 1901, has been entirely distinct from that of France, comprises under revenue the imposts of every sort which are collected within the Colony and under expenditure the whole of the civil disbursements. The expenditure on War and Marine is still at the cost of the mother country, as is also the burden of guarantees of interest on railways up to 1926. The budget, prepared by the Governor under the control of the Minister of the Interior, is discussed and voted by the Financial Delegations and the Superior Council. These Delegations were instituted in 1898 to enable the body of tax-payers to state their views on questions of imposts by means of elected delegates. There are three Delegations representing respectively the French colonists, the French tax-payers other than colonists, and the Mussulman natives. The Superior Council is composed of elected members and of high officials. Lastly, the Governor is assisted in the exercise of his functions by a purely consultative council of government.

The territories of the South, forming a separate colony, are each under a military command which directs all the administrative and civil services under the authority of the Governor. They have a budget distinct from that of Algeria. The natives are represented on the communal administration. By the law of February 4, 1919, the position of French citizens is accorded to natives, above the age of 25 and monogamous, who served in the war, who are proprietors or farmers, who can read or write or hold a French decoration. It is proposed to create in Paris a Consultative Committee on the same lines as the British Council of India.

The French Chambers have alone the right of legislating for Algeria, while such matters as do not come within the legislative power are regulated by decree of the President of the Republic. Each department sends one senator and two deputies to the National Assembly.

Governor-General.—M. Pierre Louis Bordes, appointed November 20, 1927.

Area and Population.

The census of March 7, 1926, which is the last taken, showed a population (including the military forces) amounting to 6,064,865 (of whom 872,439 were Europeans and 5,192,426 natives) on an area of 847,000 sq. miles. The colony has been organised in 2 great divisions called respectively Northern (80,000 sq. miles) and Southern Algeria (767,000 sq. miles). Northern Algeria consists as formerly of Civil Territory and Territoire de Commandement, but the Civil Territory has been extended, while the Territoire de Commandement has been diminished and will before long be completely merged in the Civil Territory. Northern Algeria contains 17 arrondissements, 276 communes, and 76 mixed communes, in the Civil Territory, and 3 mixed communes in the Territoire de Commandement. Southern Algeria consists of the 4 Territories of Ain-Sefra, Ghardaia, Touggourt, and the Saharan Oases, organised under decree of August 14, 1905. These territories contain 14 communes of which 7 are mixed and 7 native.

Population, including military forces, according to the census of March 7, 1926 :—

	Municipal Population			Population numbered separately
	Euro-pean	Native	Total	Euro-pean	Native	Total	Grand Total
Northern Territory	831,405	4,615,294	5,446,699	83,720	42,221	75,941	5,522,640
Southern Territory	4,779	532,091	536,870	2,535	2,820	5,355	542,225
Grand Total	886,184	5,147,385	5,933,569	86,255	45,041	81,296	6,064,865

Population, according to Departments and Territories (census of March 7, 1926):—

Northern Algeria (Departments)	Population	Southern Algeria (Territories)	Population
Algiers . . . .	1,866,714	Ain Sefra . . . .	173,832
Oran . . . . .	1,880,801	Ghardaia . . . .	119,940
Constantine . . . .	2,275,125	Touggourt . . . .	213,783
		Saharan Oases . . . .	35,670
Total . . . . .	5,522,640	Total . . . . .	542,225
Grand Total . . . .		6,064,865

The total population in 1891, was 4,124,732, in 1896, 4,429,421. In 1926, the native municipal population numbered 5,147,385; French and naturalised French, 690,124; foreigners, 182,307.

The chief towns with the total communal population in 1926 were: Algiers, 226,218; Oran, 150,801; Constantine, 93,733; Bona, 51,895; Sidi-bel-Abbes, 43,148; Philippville, 29,242; Mascara, 28,033; Tlemçen, 26,758; Sétif, 26,677; Mostaganem, 26,355; Blida, 24,758; Bougie, 15,941; Tizi Ouzon, 2,944.

Religion and Instruction.

The native population is entirely Musulman, the Jews being now regarded as French citizens. The Roman Catholic Church has an archbishop and 2 bishops, with 386 officiating clergymen. There are 13 Protestant pastors and 6 Jewish rabbis sharing in Government grants.

At Algiers (city) there is a University, attended (July 31, 1926) by 1,664 students (821 for Law, 427 Medicine and Pharmacy, 176 Science, 240 Arts). There are also special schools for commerce, the fine arts, hydrography, and agriculture. There were also in 1926, 545 Musulman schools with 45,349 pupils. There are higher Musulman schools (medersas) at Algiers, Tlemçen, and Constantine, with 145 students (1926) (119 Arabs, 26 Kabyles). In Algeria there are 17 establishments for secondary education with, in 1926, 9,773 pupils (7,052 boys and 2,721 girls). In 1926 there were 1,302 primary and infant schools, public and private, with 110,031 pupils. There were (1926) two normal schools for men teachers with 17 professors and 251 students (38 Musulman), and three normal schools for women teachers with 15 professors and 218 students.

Justice and Crime.

There is an Appeal Court at Algiers, and in the arrondissements are 17 courts of first instance. There are also commercial courts and justices of the peace with extensive powers. Criminal justice is organised as in France for Europeans. Since 1902, there have been criminal courts and special repressive tribunals for trying natives accused of crime.

Musulman justice is administered to natives by Justices of the Peace and Cadis in the first instance with an appeal to French courts.

Finance.

Europeans and natives pay the same direct and indirect taxes. The departments of War and Marine are excluded from the estimates, but the proceeds of the Military tax, the Government monopolies, and some other revenues are paid to France. The total expenditure (including military and extraordinary disbursements) exceeds the Algerian revenue by about 75,000,000 francs.

The budget estimates for five years were as follows in francs :—

Total (including all items) . . .	720,060,006	Total (including all items) . . .	719,881,836

The extraordinary budget for 1927, balanced at 209,713,120 francs. A supplementary ordinary budget for 1927, was estimated at 64,870,980 francs for receipts, and 64,877,172 francs for expenditure. Including the supplementary extraordinary budget, the total budget for the year amounted to 895,371,968 francs revenue, and 895,358,851 francs expenditure.

There is a separate Post Office budget which is estimated to balance revenue and expenditure for 101,196,541 francs.

Defence.

The military force in Algeria and Tunis comprises the XIXth Army Area, which includes 3 divisions. French residents are under the same obligation to serve as in France; natives are under the obligation to serve 3 years with the colours and can be called up as reservists in case of mobilisation. The troops may be stationed in North Africa or employed on Colonial expeditions, but they belong to the 'Metropolitan,' not to the Colonial Army. There are 6 regiments of zouaves, each of 3 battalions, of 5 companies; 6 regiments of cavalry (Chasseurs d'Afrique), of several squadrons; 3 groups of field and 1 of heavy artillery; 1 battalion of engineers; and 1 regiment of the Flying Corps. These are all European troops, and in the case of the artillery and engineers their recruiting dépôts are in France. The Foreign Legion of 4 regiments of a varying number of battalions is recruited from foreigners of any nationality, but officered chiefly by Frenchmen; the headquarters of the regiments is in Sidi-Bel-Abbes, in Oran, but battalions are sent to any colony where they may be required. The Natives are 12 regiments of Algerian Tirailleurs each of 3 battalions, and 6 regiments of Spahis (Arab cavalry) each of several squadrons. The officers and a proportion of the non-commissioned officers of the native regiments are French. In November, 1927, the strength of the garrison of Algeria and Tunis was 71,345.

Agriculture and Industry.

There exists in Algeria a small area of highly fertile plains and valleys in the neighbourhood of the coast, mainly owned by Europeans, which is cultivated scientifically, and where profitable returns are obtained from vineyards, cereals, &c., but the greater part of Algeria is of limited value for agricultural purposes. The northern portion is mountainous and generally better adapted to grazing and forestry than agriculture, and a large portion of the native population is quite poor. In spite of the many excellent roads built by the Government, a considerable area of the mountainous region is without adequate means of communication and is very inaccessible.

The soil is, under various systems, held by proprietors, by farmers, and by métayers or khammés. Most of the State lands have been appropriated to colonists. The chief crops in 1926 were wheat, 3,753,121 acres with a yield of 638,448 tons; barley 3,522,862 acres with a yield of 493,338 tons; and oats, 628,672 acres with a yield of 126,170 tons; maize, potatoes, artichokes, beans, peas and tomatoes. Flax, silk, and tobacco (the cultivation of the latter being most remunerative) are also produced. In 1926 there were 16,890 tobacco planters, the area under cultivation was 56,010 acres, and the yield 20,538 tons. Sericulture is in an experimental stage and subsidised by the government. There were 326 growers in 1926, and 227 in 1925. In 1925, 17,600 pounds of cocoons were produced against 15,400 in 1926.

In 1926, the yield of wine was 184,857,596 gallons from an area of 515,205 acres. The yield of oranges in 1926 was 37,000 tons from an area of 12,250 acres; of mandarines, 54,200 tons from an area of 9,000 acres; of lemons, 5,500 tons from an area of 2,450 acres. Date, banana, pomegranate, almond, fig, and many other fruits grow abundantly. The production of olive oil amounted to 5,716,942 gallons from 7,799,627 trees. Cotton was sown on 15,500 acres. State forests (1926), 2,221,707 hectares, and, for the most part, belong to the State and communes. The greater part is mere brushwood, but on 1,099,150 acres are cork-oak trees, 1,691,950 acres Aleppo pine, 1,627,730 acres evergreen oak, and 97,812 acres cedar. The dwarf-palm and alfa are worked on the plains. Timber is cut for firewood, also for industrial purposes, for railway sleepers, telegraph poles, &c., and for bark for tanning. Considerable portions of the forest area are also leased for tillage, or for pasture for cattle, sheep, or pigs. The forest revenue in 1925 was 11,000,000 francs net.

On December 31, 1926, there were in Algeria 167,324 horses, 165,156 mules, 234,569 asses, 945,507 cattle, 6,786,266 sheep, 3,125,714 goats, 92,742 pigs, and 173,328 camels.

There are extensive fisheries for sardines, allaches, anchovies, sprats, tunny-fish, &c., and also shell-fish. In 1926, 1,185 boats of 7,575 metric tons, and 5,534 persons were employed in fishing, and the fish taken were valued at 15,222,832 francs. The yield of coral, 3,164 kilos, was valued at 1,224,220 francs. Sponges, 4,810 kilos, were valued at 1,269,640 francs.

Algeria possesses iron, zinc, lead, mercury, copper, antimony, and petrol. The mineral output in 1926 was as follows: iron ore, 1,136,929 tons; lead, 23,569 tons; zinc, 64,748 tons; copper, 2,290 tons; antimony, 950 tons; manganese, 577 tons; phosphate of lime, 857,247 tons; coal (approx.), 10,000 tons; kaolin, 2,400 tons; marble and onyx, 1,700 tons; sulphate of barytes, 26,000 tons; petroleum, 1,800 tons.

Commerce.

The foreign trade of Algiers in recent years has been as follows (in 1,000 francs):—

—	Imports	Exports	—	Imports	Exports
	1,000 francs	1,000 francs		1,000 francs	1,000 francs
1922	1,897,775	1,864,000	1925	3,524,941	2,518,173
1923	2,525,250	1,851,000	1926	4,119,041	4,014,986
1924	3,188,275	2,205,950	1927	4,855,898	3,520,948

The imports and exports for 1927 were divided as follows (in thousands of francs):—

—	Imports			Exports
	From France	From Other Countries	Total	To France	To Other Countries	Total
Animal products . . .	155,417	113,547	268,964	325,839	80,169	412,008

The principal imports in 1927 were (in thousands of francs), sugar, 156,572; petroleum, 132,242; paper, 105,576; clothing, 58,355; automobiles, 213,181. The principal exports were sheep, 112,450; phosphates, 65,728; eggs, 35,192; wheat, 108,164; figs, 22,997; tobacco, 67,686; cigarettes, 48,599; wines, 1,815,730.

In 1927 the receipts of the customs authorities (excepting sugar) amounted to 93,449,373 francs; and in 1926 to 47,562,116 francs.

Total trade between the United Kingdom and Algeria (Board of Trade returns) for 5 years:—

—	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Algeria into U.K. .	2,165,781	1,972,927	2,000,658	1,820,726	2,421,797
Exports to Algeria from U.K. .	2,116,902	2,078,107	1,487,788	666,195	1,638,640

Shipping and Communications.

In 1927, 4,322 vessels of 6,985,250 tons net entered, and 4,846 vessels of 7,883,594 tons cleared Algerian ports.

On January 1, 1927, the mercantile marine of Algeria consisted of 21 vessels of 15,733 tons (overseas trade); 220 coasting vessels of 50,977 tons; and 334 harbour craft of 1,518 tons.

There were 21 national roads in 1926, with a length of 3,500 miles, apart from Departmental roads, which, added to the smaller type of road, aggregate some 10,000 miles. In 1927, 9,000,000 francs were allotted to roads.

In 1926, there were 2,700 miles of railway open for traffic (exclusive of lines on Tunisian territory), the railway receipts amounting to 259,247,000 francs. There is a regular air service between Oran and Casablanca (Morocco) and between Oran and Alicante (Spain). Experimental flights are being made in connection with the Algiers-Marseilles (800 kilometres) air line. In 1926 Algeria budgeted a contribution of 1,300,000 francs to civil aviation.

The postal receipts in 1926 were 25,371,095 francs, and there were 702 post offices. The telegraphic receipts were 12,528,309 francs, and those from telephones 11,605,151 francs.

The telegraph of Algeria consisted on December 31, 1919, of 8,131 miles of line and 25,283 miles of wire, serving 786 offices (791 in 1923). There were on January 1, 1927, 18,856 telephone subscribers, 744 public telephone offices, and 15,007 miles of inter-urban line.

Postal cheque accounts were opened at Algiers on February 1, 1921, and on December 31, 1926, there were 8,243 accounts with a total balance of 55,411,829 francs.

The Bank of Algeria is a bank of issue, with a capital of 20,000,000 francs, but its note circulation must not in any case exceed 2,100,000,000 francs (law of August 6, 1926). Several co-operative agricultural banks, assisted by Government funds, are in operation. Barclay's Bank (Overseas), Ltd., have branches at Algiers and Oran.

TUNIS.

(AFRIKIYA.)

Government.—Sidi Mohamed el Habib Bey, born 1858, succeeded his cousin, Sidi Mohamed En Naceur Bacha Bey, July 10, 1922.

The reigning family of Tunis, occupants of the throne since 1705, descend from Hussein ben Ali, commonly believed to be a native of the Isle of Crete, who made himself master of the country, acknowledging, however, the suzerainty of the Sultan of Turkey.

After the French invasion of the country in the spring of 1881, the treaty of Kasr-es-Said (May 12, 1881), confirmed by convention signed June 8, 1883, placed Tunis under the protectorate of France. The government is carried on under the direction of the French Foreign Office, which has a special department for Tunisian affairs, under the control of a French Minister Resident.

General, who is also Minister of Foreign Affairs, and a ministry of 11 heads of departments, 8 of the ministers being French and 3 Tunisian. The country is divided into 19 districts (contrôles civils), and 6 military circles; the district governors (contrôleurs) are French; the subordinate officials (Caids, Kahias and Sheiks) are Native. French tribunals administer justice between subjects of European powers, and also between them and natives; there are Native courts for cases between natives (tribunals at Ouzara and Charaa). In 1914, the Tunisian penal law was codified. French administration in Tunis has been confirmed by conventions with all the European Powers regulating the status and the conditions of trade of their respective citizens within the Regency.

French Resident-General.—Lucien Saint (appointed November 24, 1920).

Area and Population.—The present boundaries are: on the north and east the Mediterranean Sea, on the west the Algerian province of Constantine, and on the south the great desert of the Sahara and Libya. Area about 48,300 English square miles, including that portion of the Sahara which is to the east of the Djerid, extending towards Gadamés.

According to the census held on April 20, 1926, the total European population was 173,281, composed of 71,020 French (exclusive of the army of occupation and of the navy), 89,216 Italians, 8,396 Maltese, 517 Spaniards, 646 Greeks, and 3,486 other foreigners. The total native population was 1,986,427, of whom 1,982,184 were Arabs and Bedouins, and 54,243 Jews. Grand total was 2,159,708.

The capital, the city of Tunis, had, in 1926, a population of 185,996, of whom 106,860 were Moslems, and 24,181 Jews, besides 27,922 French, 44,076 Italians, 4,994 Maltese, and 1,763 other Europeans. By means of the channel, which was opened in 1893, Tunis is directly accessible to ocean-going vessels. Other towns are Bizerta with 20,593 inhabitants (6,738 Europeans); Sousse with 21,298; Sfax with 27,723; Kaisouan, the Holy City of the Moslems, with 18,527 natives exclusively; Ferryville with 4,462 (4,155 Europeans), and Tindja, 1,500 inhabitants.

The bulk of the population is Mohammedan under the Sheik-ul-Islam, and the revenue from the 'Habus' lands, like that from the 'Wakf' lands in Egypt, is applied to religious, educational, and charitable purposes. There are about 170,000 Roman Catholics, under the ministration of the Archbishop of Carthage, and about 125 other clergymen. The Greek Church (400), the French Protestants, and the English Church are also represented, and there are 30 English Protestant missionaries at work.

Education.—Within the Regency there are (1927) some 434 public schools, including 8 lycées and colleges, and 32 private schools (of which 6 Jewish schools are provided for by the Government). In the schools there are 64,568 pupils, of whom 38,853 are boys. Of the total number of pupils, 11,824 are French; 26,092 Mussulman; 7,975 Jews; 8,645 Italian; 1,156 Maltese and 336 others. In the Great Mosque at Tunis there is a Mohammedan university. In the city are 88 and in the interior 1,219 Mussulman primary schools, some of them assisted by Government funds. 24 Moslem apprenticeship-schools have been created during the last few years numbering 490 native pupils. Many private schools have recently sprung up at Tunis and Sfax. The abolition of congregational teaching decreed in France has been extended to the Regency as regards French children. The Italian Government and certain Italian societies still maintain Italian schools at Tunis and other large towns.

Defence.—The army of occupation consists of 25,000 men, including 1,145 officers, supported by native regiments (tirailleurs and spahis), and the Foreign Legion.

Production and Industry.—Tunis may be divided into five districts—the north, characterised by its mountainous formation, having large and fertile valleys (e.g., the valley of the Medjerdah, and the plains of Mornag, Mateur, and Beja); the north-east, with the peninsula of Cap Bon, the soil being specially suited for the cultivation of oranges, lemons, and citrus fruits; the Sahel, where olive trees abound; the centre, the region of high table lands and pastures; and the south, famous for its oases and gardens, where dates grow in profusion. The chief industry is agriculture, and large estates predominate. The area of the country is divided as follows :—7,112,500 acres of tillage land; 2,725,000 acres of cork and pine forest, 68,490 acres of vineyards (the production in 1926 was 16,229,933 gallons); and 11,437,500 acres of stockland. The area of wheat in 1926 was 1,861,670 acres; the production was 355,000 tons; of barley 1,420,752 acres, and the production 192,000 tons; of oats 96,227 acres, and the production 31,000 tons. There were 16,181,744 olive trees; the produce is about 40,000 tons of oil yearly. In the south of Tunis date palms abound; there were in 1926, 2,138,000 date palms, of which 1,034,892 produced 1,000,000 pounds of dates. Other products are almonds, oranges, lemons, shaddock, pistachios, alfa grass, henna, and cork. Considerable areas of agricultural land have been acquired either on lease or by purchase by immigrants.

In 1926, the farm animals were :—horses, 86,851; asses, 154,175; mules, 36,800; cattle, 467,588; sheep, 2,171,970; goats, 1,582,443; camels, 153,162; pigs, 23,568.

In 1926, 87 mines were worked; value of ore exported (including phosphate) in 1926, 11,183,113*l.* These are being developed, and the output steadily increases. Lead-ore, zinc-ore, and iron are all found. By far the greatest development has been in phosphates, the output of which is increasing yearly. Mineral output in 1926 :—lead, 37,000 tons; zinc, 30,000 tons; mixed, 7,000 tons; iron, 582,000 tons; phosphate of lime, 2,563,000 tons.

Native industries are the spinning and weaving of wool for garments, carpet weaving, leather embroidery, saddle making, the manufacture of slippers, pottery (in ancient style), and matting; tanning and silk weaving are declining.

The fisheries are principally in the hands of Italians and Tunisians. In 1926, 4,114 boats (10,918 tons) were engaged in this industry, with a total of 15,137 men. Sardines, anchovies, allaches, tunny (5,570 tons of fish) were caught.

Commerce.—The imports and exports for 4 years were as follows :—

In the year 1926, there entered the ports of the Regency 9,423 vessels. Good roads to the length of 3,219 miles have been constructed between 1882 and 1926.

Length of railways, 1,258 miles in 1926 (315 miles broad gauge and 942 miles narrow).

There were in 1926, 3,375 miles of telegraphs; 270 telegraph offices; messages, 1,368,767. Urban telephone systems had 7,993 miles of line; inter-urban systems had 12,655 miles of wire. There were in 1926, 517 post offices; letters sent and received, internal service, 50,213,644; external service, 58,887,504.

Money, Weights, and Measures.—The Banque d'Algérie has begun operations in the Regency and issues Tunisian bank notes.

The legal coinage since 1892 consists of pieces similar to the French, the pieces being coined in France.

The ounce = 31.487 grammes; the multiples of the ounce are the various denominations of the Kottolo, which contains from 16 to 42 ounces.

The Kaffis (of 16 whibas, each of 12 sahs) = 16 bushels.

The principal measure of length is the pik: the pik Arbi for linen = .5392 yd.; the pik Turki for silk = .7058 yd.; the pik Andoulsi for cloth = .7094 yd.

French weights and measures have almost entirely taken the place of those of Tunis, but corn is still sold in kaffis and whibas.

British Consul-General at Tunis.—J. M. MacLeod, C.M.G.

There is a Consul at Bizerta, and Vice-Consuls at Sfax and Susa; and Consular Agents at Mehdiya, Monastir, Gabes, and Djerba.

FRENCH EQUATORIAL AFRICA (FRENCH CONGO).

The French Congo extends along the Atlantic coast between Cameroon and the territories of the Belgian Congo, with the exception of the Spanish territory on the coast from the Muni river on 1° N. lat. to Cameroon, and inland to the meridian of 11° 20' E. of Greenwich, and the Kabinda region, which is Portuguese. Inland it is bounded by the Congo and Ubanghi rivers and stretches northwards to the Bahr-el-Ghazal and Lake Chad. French acquisition began on the Gabun river in 1841; Libreville was founded in 1849; Cape Lopez was gained in 1862, and the French possessions extended along the coast for about 200 miles. Since then the territories have been increased by exploration and military occupation and their limits have been defined in a series of international conventions. By a convention, dated November 1, 1911, France agreed to cede certain parts of the colony to Germany in return for German recognition of the French protectorate in Morocco. These territories were restored to France by the Treaty of Versailles of June 28, 1919. The territory which in November, 1911, Germany ceded to France was incorporated in French Equatorial Africa. The boundary between French Equatorial Africa and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan was fixed by a protocol signed on February 28, 1924.

By decree of January 15, 1910, the French Congo was divided into three circumscriptions which form three colonies, viz.:—the Gabun Colony (capital Libreville), the Middle Congo Colony (capital Brazzaville), and the Ubangi-Shari Colony (capital Bangui). The Chad Territory, which was formerly a dependency of the Ubangi-Shari Colony, was, by decree issued on March 17, 1920, made a separate colony. (Capital, Fort Lamy).

By decrees issued on January 15, 1910, the name of the French Congo was changed into French Equatorial Africa, which extends over the Gabun, the Middle Congo, the Ubangi-Shari and Chad Colonies.

The area is about 975,635 square miles, containing a population which at the 1926 census numbered 3,127,707; the Europeans numbered 2,502. The area and population of the separate colonies are shown as follows for 1926:—

Colony.	Area in square miles.	Men	Women	Boys	Girls	Total
Gabun . . .	121,898	126,840	161,888	51,524	49,147	388,899
Middle Congo . .	150,331	212,085	261,447	118,862	106,409	698,753
Ubangi Shari . .	207,997	350,800	377,594	174,849	163,701	1,066,444
Chad . . .	495,414	331,011	317,259	166,491	158,850	978,611
Total . . .	975,635	1,020,686	1,117,688	511,226	478,097	3,127,707

The Colonies have each a Lieutenant-Governor; they all have financial and administrative autonomy, and each has an administrative council; the Lieutenant-Governors are under the Governor-General of French Equatorial Africa, having his headquarters at Brazzaville, who is assisted by a Secretary-General and a Council of Government. There is a general budget for the whole of French Equatorial Africa, and also separate budgets for the colonies. Local revenues accrue chiefly from customs duties; there are native poll taxes. The sale of alcohol to natives is restricted. The budgets showed the following figures:—

	1927	1928
	Francs	Francs
General Budget—
French Equatorial Africa . .	20,090,157	40,550,000
Local Budget—
Gabon . . . . .	9,220,000	12,900,000
Middle Congo . . . . .	11,785,000	15,051,000
Ubangi-Shari . . . . .	11,175,000	13,500,000
Chad . . . . .	6,900,000	10,127,000

In the colony there were in 1927, 50 public schools with 3,553 pupils, and 24 European teachers with 52 native assistants. There is also 1 Higher Elementary school at Brazzaville and another is in course of construction at Libreville.

The resources of French Equatorial Africa are quite undeveloped. There are about 300,000 square miles of tropical forest extending to the Gabun coast, containing many species of trees of industrial value. Wild caoutchouc is the most important. Palm oil is produced to some extent. Coffee, Cacao and cotton are also cultivated. In the Chad Colony large numbers of cattle, sheep, asses, camels, horses, and ostriches are raised, but there are no facilities for export. Ivory is an important article of export. At the beginning of 1922 there were calculated to be 712,468 head of cattle in Chad. Copper, zinc, and lead are found.

Imports and exports for 1926 were as follows:—

Colony	Imports			Exports
	France and French Colonies	Foreign Countries	Total	France and French Colonies	Foreign Countries	Total

There is considerable shipping at Port Gentil and Libreville, the chief ports; but at Loango steamers must anchor about three miles off the coast. Whale fishing commenced in 1922.

On February 6, 1921, a new railway was commenced to connect Brazzaville with the Atlantic at Pointe-Noire, and is expected to be completed in 1930.

The Central African telegraph line connects Brazzaville with Pointe-Noire, the terminus of the French cable from Brest via Dakar and Libreville, and is in communication with the English Atlantic cable. Wireless telegraphy connects Brazzaville and the head of the Southern Railway in the Loango Region, a distance of 300 miles, and also Brazzaville and Leopoldville, and a radio service with France was inaugurated in 1927. In the Chad region there are several stations connecting Fort Lamy, Ati, Faya, and Maô. A line has been laid to connect Brazzaville with Bangui, and another to connect Bangui with Fort Lamy. The total length of telegraph line in operation is about 3,253 miles.

On the north-east of Lake Chad is the state of Kanem, which was completely subjected to France in 1903, and is now only a district of the Shari territory with Maô for its capital. Wadai, to the east of Kanem, with an area of about 170,000 square miles, and a semi-civilised population of about 1,000,000, accepted the French Protectorate in the summer of 1903. In 1911 a French force occupied Arada, some miles to the north of the capital, Abeshr, which is in communication with Benghazi, on the coast of Tripoli, by caravans, and in 1913 Ain-Galakka.

In 1926, a bank, called La Banque de l'Afrique Occidentale, was established in French Equatorial Africa as a bank of issue. Other banks are Banque Française de l'Afrique and Bank Commerciale Africaine.

Governor-General of Equatorial Africa.—R. Antonetti (July, 1924).

MADAGASCAR.

Government.

The last native sovereign of Madagascar, Ranavàlona III. (born 1861, died 1916), succeeded in 1883. The French having claimed a portion of the north-west coast as having been transferred to them by local chiefs, hostilities were carried on in 1882-84 against the Hovas, who refused to recognise the cession. In 1885 peace was made, Diégo Suarez having been surrendered to France. A French Resident-General was received at the capital, and the foreign relations of the country were claimed to be regulated by France. By the Anglo-French agreement of August 5, 1890, the protectorate of France over Madagascar was recognised by Great Britain; but the Native Government having refused to carry out the clauses of the treaty of 1885, a French expedition was despatched in May 1895 to enforce the claims of France, and on October 1, the capital having been occupied, a treaty was signed whereby the Queen recognised and accepted the protectorate. By a unilateral convention made in January, 1896, Madagascar became a French possession, and by law promulgated August 6, 1896, the island and its dependencies were declared a French colony.

Governor-General.—Marcel Olivier (appointed January 11, 1924).

A Consultative Council of Administration has been established at Antananarivo. The Colony is not represented in the French Parliament, but there is an Economic and Financial Delegation, composed of 24 French citizens and 24 natives. The former are elected by the Chambers of Commerce, Industry and Agriculture and the Municipal Councils. The native members are chosen by the votes of a body of representatives itself elected by the chiefs of the villages. This delegation meets once a year for examination of the budget proposals. Four Europeans and two native members of the Council of Administration also take part in the meetings of this assembly. Madagascar is divided into 22 provinces and 76 districts. Natives are employed to a large extent in subordinate positions both in the civil and military administration. In all parts of the island the natives are allowed to choose chiefs who represent them in their relations with the Government.

Area and Population.

Madagascar is situated to the south-east coast of Africa, from which it is separated by the Mozambique Channel, the least distance between island and continent being 240 miles; its length is 980 miles; greatest breadth, 360 miles, and it has a coast line of over 3,000 miles. The area is estimated at 241,094 square miles. According to the last census (1926) the population (including that of the Mayotte and Comoro islands) was 3,621,842 (15·0 per sq. mile of), whom 3,591,943 were Malagasy, 18,040 were French and 11,359 foreigners, including Europeans and others. Of the native population in 1925, 1,024,109 were males, 1,177,726 females, and 1,374,266 were children under fifteen years of age. In 1925, there were 74,244 births among the native population (38,517 boys and 35,727 girls). In the same year there were 74,850 deaths.

The Malagasy races or tribes are very numerous, the more important being the Hova (906,938), the Betsiléo (479,686), the Betsimisaraka (403,475), the Tanala (151,071), the Sakalava (141,726), and the Bara (157,096). Hindus, Chinese, Arabs, and other Asiatics carry on small retail trade. The most intelligent and enterprising tribe is the Hova or Merina, whose language, allied to the Malayan and Oceanic tongues, is understood over a large part of the island. The people are divided into a great many clans, who seldom inter-marry.

The slave trade was nominally abolished in 1877; slavery in Imerina and in all parts under French authority was abolished by proclamation on September 27, 1896. The system of forced labour in the public service was abolished on January 1, 1901, but the personal tax due from 16 to 60 years of age, formerly 5 francs, has been increased to 10, 15, in some provinces 20, and in Antananarivo to 30 francs. The populations of the chief towns were, in 1926, the capital, Antananarivo, in the centre of the island, 70,847 (3,648 French and 661 foreigners); Tamatave, 15,022; Fianarantsoa, 11,156; Antsirabe, 19,130; Majunga, 16,570; Diégo Suarez, 8,604; Tuléar, 7,780; Mananjary, 12,013; Saint-Marie, 8,127; Nosy-Be, 14,022. The principal ports are Tamatave, on the east coast, Majunga on the north-west coast, Diégo Suarez in the north, and Tuléar in the south-west.

In 1896, Diégo-Suarez (a French colony from 1885), the island of Noss Bé (area 130 sq. miles) on the west coast, and the island of Ste. Marie on the east coast (area 64 sq. miles), and in 1914 the Comoro Islands, were placed under the authority of the Governor-General of Madagascar.

Religion, Education, Justice.

Up to 1895, a large portion of the Hova and of the other tribes in the central districts had been Christianised. The Christian population was estimated at 450,000 Protestants, and 150,000 Roman Catholics. There are many missionary societies at work, French (Catholic and Protestant), British the London Missionary Society, the Friends' Mission, and the Anglican Mission); there is also a Norwegian Lutheran Mission and an American Mission. French Catholic missions had 258 European workers (67 female); Protestant and Anglican missions had 173 (54 female). The outlying tribes are still mostly heathen.

Education is compulsory from 8 to 14 years of age. On September 15, 1925, there were 991 official schools for European and native children, with 90,833 pupils (56,865 boys and 33,968 girls), and 1,739 teachers, and 517 private schools, with 49,750 pupils and 1,144 teachers. Children are required to learn the French language. At Antananarivo there is a school of native medicine, an administrative and commercial school, a normal school, and a school of agriculture.

For the administration of French justice there are a Parquet consisting of a Procureur-Général and other officials, a court of appeal, 4 courts of first instance in the principal towns, and justice of peace courts at 17 centres. For native justice there are tribunals in the districts and provinces, and the natives have the right of appeal from lower to higher tribunals. There were also arbitration courts for settling labour disputes.

Finance.

The local revenue of Madagascar is derived chiefly from direct taxation (including a poll tax and taxes on land, cattle, and houses), from customs and other indirect taxes, from colonial lands, from posts and telegraphs, markets, and miscellaneous sources. The chief branches of expenditure are general administration, public works, the post office, and the public debt. The budgetary estimates for the calendar year 1927 aggregated 239,991,133 francs for the receipts, and the same amount for the expenditures. The various budgets balanced at the following figures:—ordinary and extraordinary, 207,777,000 francs; public works, 33,000,000 francs; railways, 33,917,000 francs; native medical services, 15,297,138 francs.

The colony has since 1897 contracted debt to the amount of 4,200,000*l.* at the average yearly rate of interest of 3·02 per cent. The loans were made for the purpose of public works or for the conversion of loans for that purpose.

Defence.

In peace time the troops in Madagascar (including the forces at Diégo-Suarez) consist of 1,542 Europeans, and 5,736 natives. The police and militia, consisting of 3,300 natives, are maintained on the local budget.

Production and Industry.

In 1896, on the completion of the French occupation of the Island, the Malagasy system of land tenure was modified; foreigners were permitted to acquire land, and registration of land was begun. Government lands, urban or non-urban, are let or sold to private persons, or to companies for agriculture, pasturage, or mining. On December 31, 1926, there were 3,048,367 acres of land under cultivation by natives and 285,607 acres by Europeans. The principal crops are rice, sugar, coffee, manioc, cotton, cacao, vanilla, tobacco, butter beans, lima beans, cloves, mulberry trees, and rubber trees. The areas under cultivation in 1927 were:—rice, 1,392,425 acres; manioc, 682,925 acres; maize, 213,540 acres; sweet potatoes, 244,825 acres; haricot beans, 91,097 acres; potatoes, 77,207 acres; coffee, 113,537 acres; vanilla 53,260 acres. Sericulture is encouraged. The forests contain many valuable woods, while caoutchouc, gum, resins, and plants for textile, tanning, dyeing, and medicinal purposes abound.

Cattle breeding and agriculture are the chief occupations of the natives.

There were on December 31, 1925, 7,139,900 cattle in the island; 2,884 horses; 116,114 sheep; 62,833 goats; 1,057 ostriches, and 386,305 pigs.

Silk and cotton weaving are carried on, and the working of metal and the making of Panama and other straw hats. The preparation of sugar, rice, soap, tapioca, &c., is being undertaken by Europeans, as well as the canning of meat. There are large meat-preserving factories at Bo-anamary (Majunga), Diego-Suarez, Tamatave, Antananarivo and Antsirabe.

The value of the total output of minerals in 1926 was 59,231,042 francs, graphite accounting for 44,368,343 francs, gold for 6,934,068 francs, and mica for 4,121,528 francs. The production of phosphates was valued at 1,840,500 francs, that of precious stones at 1,680,679 francs, of industrial stones at 126,055 francs, of corundum at 94,209 francs, radio-active minerals (betafite and euxenite) at 65,292 francs, and zircon at 258 francs.

The following were the principal minerals in 1925 and 1926:—

According to Board of Trade returns, the imports from Madagascar into Great Britain in 1926 amounted to 440,287*l.*, and in 1927 to 453,770*l.*, and the exports from Great Britain amounted to 55,851*l.* in 1926, and 81,792*l.* in 1927.

Shipping and Communications.

Tamatave, the principal seaport of the island, is visited by the steamers of two French shipping companies, and the principal ports are connected with each other by coasting steamers plying regularly. In 1926, 5,776 vessels of 2,521,271 tons entered and 6,000 vessels of 2,544,848 tons cleared at the ports of Madagascar. Of the total vessels (in 1925) entering 3,990 were French, and 1,250 were British; and of those clearing, 4,030 were French, and 1,255 British.

At the end of 1926, there were 1,800 miles of roads. Three railways are at present worked in Madagascar. The first is the through railway line between Antananarivo and Tamatave (229 miles) which was opened for traffic on March 9, 1913, and soon to be electrified. The second is the railway between Antananarivo and Antsirabe (noted for its thermal springs), 98 miles south of Antananarivo, opened for traffic on October 15, 1923. The third is the branch line of the Tamatave railway, from Moramanga to the Antsihanaka provinces, towards the north of the island, which was opened for traffic in October, 1917, a distance of 103 miles. Total railway mileage (including narrow-gauge local lines) on December 31, 1926, 430 miles. A new line from Fianarantsoa to the east coast of the island (105 miles) is projected. This will be electrified. There is also a motor-car service with a network of routes covering 612 miles.

There is postal communication throughout the island. There were in 1926, 185 ordinary post offices and 500 rural offices. The telegraph line has (1925) a length of 4,787 miles, and 7,452 miles of wire. There is cable communication to Mozambique, Mauritius, Réunion, and Aden. In 1926 there were 745 miles of urban telephone line, 1,490 miles of inter-urban circuits, and seven Government wireless telegraph stations. The important wireless station at Antananarivo, forming part of the French inter-colonial network of wireless stations, was opened towards the end of 1924.

Money and Banks.

By the decree of 22 December, 1925, a Bank of issue was established—the Bank of Madagascar, with a capital of 20 million francs. The Comptoir National d'Escompte de Paris has agencies at Antananarivo, Tamatave, Diégo-Suarez, Mananjary, Majunga and Tuléar. The Crédit Foncier de Madagascar and La Banque de l'Océan Indien are also established in the island. On January 1, 1920, a Savings Bank was established, and on January 1, 1924, it had 3,420 depositors with 2,717,491 francs to their credit.

The monetary system is the same as that of France, and all coins and notes which are legal tender in France are also legal tender in the Colony. Since the war, postage stamps affixed to cardboard, for smaller values, viz., 5, 10, 25 and 50 centimes, and 1 and 2 francs, are current.

MAYOTTE AND THE COMORO ISLANDS.

The archipelago of the Comoro Islands, is formed by the islands of Mayotte, Anjouan, Grande Comore and Moheli. Before 1912, Anjouan, Moheli and Grande Comore were only under French protection; Mayotte alone being a colony. But by a law of July 25, 1912, and a decree of February 23, 1914, the whole archipelago has become a colony, attached to the general government of Madagascar, of which it forms a twenty-first province, the Province de 'Mayotte et Dépendances.'

In 1925, the combined population was 119,305, including 804 Europeans.

The island of Mayotte (140 square miles) had a population (1925) of 12,674. There is an increasing emigration to Zanzibar and Madagascar. The chief product was formerly sugar, but the cultivation of vanilla has now superseded that of the sugar-cane. There are now only two sugar works and two distilleries for rum. Besides vanilla and sugar, cacao, aloes and perfume plants (citronella, ylang-ylang, patchouli, &c.) are cultivated.

Grande Comore, Moheli, Anjouan, and a number of smaller islands, have an area of about 650 square miles and population in 1925 of 106,625. Grande Comore itself is about 40 miles long and 18 miles at its broadest points. Vanilla, cacao and perfume plants are successfully cultivated. Grande Comore has a fine forest and exports timber for building and for railway sleepers.

The principal imports are cotton fabrics, metals, and rice; the principal exports, hides, sugar, copra, and vanilla.

RÉUNION.

Réunion (or Bourbon), about 420 miles east of Madagascar, has belonged to France since 1643. It is administered by a Governor assisted by a Privy Council, and an elective Council-General, and is represented in the French Parliament by a Senator and two Deputies. It has an area of 970 square miles and population (1926) of 186,687, of whom 180,694 were French; there were also 628 British Indians, 1,963 natives of Madagascar, 411 Africans, 1,626 Chinese. The chief towns are: St. Denis, with 23,390 inhabitants in 1926; St. Pierre, 20,479; St. Paul, 21,643; St. Louis, 15,867. The towns are under the French municipal law. Réunion has a lycée with 30 teachers and 380 pupils. Primary education is given in two schools, one for boys with 530 pupils and 13 teachers, and one for girls with 448 pupils and 13 teachers, and 194 elementary schools with 27,214 pupils. The chief port, Pointe-des-Galets, is connected by a coast railway of 80 miles with St. Benoît on the one hand, and St. Pierre on the other. In 1888 this railway was taken over by the State. The chief productions are sugar (62,000 acres), rum, coffee (6,000 acres), manioc, (12,000 acres), tapioca, vanilla, spices, essences. The forests occupy about 150,000 acres. The production of rum in 1926 amounted to 1,124,032 gallons (pure alcohol). The sugar production was 56,570 metric tons. The chief imports are rice (valued at 82,272,000 francs in 1926), grain, cotton goods (20,310,000 francs in 1926), &c.; the chief exports are sugar (63,313 metric tons in 1926) and rum. Total value of imports in 1926, 164,883,564 francs; of exports, 164,895,913 francs. In 1926, 83 vessels entered and cleared at the ports of the island. There are about 80 miles of railway. The Tamatave-Réunion-Mauritius Telegraph Cable is open for traffic. During the year 1926, there were 164,871 telephone conversations and 113,835 telegraph communications. There are 42 post offices and 513 central telephone offices. The budget for 1926 showed 52,502,932 francs for receipts, and 46,076,028 francs expenditure. The currency of Réunion consists of local bank notes and token nickel coinage. It has nominally the same value as that of France. The Bank of Réunion has a capital of 6 million francs.

St. Paul and Amsterdam, small islands in the Indian Ocean, belong to France.

Kerguelén, a desolate island, about 50 S. lat. and 70 E. long., was annexed by France in 1893.

British Consul at Réunion.—J. A. Mancini.

FRENCH SOMALILAND.

The colony of the Somali Coast lies between the Italian Colony of Eritrea and British Somaliland. On the north it is bounded by Cape Doumeirah, which separates it from the Italian possessions; on the south by a line drawn from the wells of Hadou to Gueldessa, which separates it from the British possessions; the inland boundary towards Abyssinia being, by convention of March 20, 1897, at a distance of 90 kilometres (about 56 miles) from the coast. The territory has an area of about 5,790 square miles, and the population was estimated in 1926 at 56,059. It is administered by a Governor, assisted by an Administrative Council. The port of Obock was acquired for France in 1862, but it was not till 1884 that its active occupation began. In 1884, Sagallo and Tajurah were ceded to

918 FRANCE:—FRENCH WEST AFRICA AND THE SAHARA

France; in 1885, Ambado; in 1888 the territory was delimited by agreement with Great Britain; in 1888, a port was created at Djibouti, now the seat of government.

Djibouti has (1921) 8,366 inhabitants, of whom 354 are European (190 French). The natives are made up as follows (1921): Somali, 3,428; Arabs, 3,336; Danakils, 208; Indians, 356; Jews, 109; Sudanese, 238; Abyssinians, 89; Senegalese, 248; total 8,012. In 1902 a French mission school for boys and one for girls were opened at Djibouti. In October 1922, these were replaced by a public elementary school. The local budget for 1923 balanced at 13,002,000 francs. The country has scarcely any industries, but with the coast fisheries and inland trade there is considerable traffic. The salt mines, opened in 1912, exported in 1926 34,218 metric tons of salt. The chief imports are cotton goods, butter, coal, sugar; the chief exports were coffee, ivory, hides and skins. The total imports in 1926 amounted to 457,751,424 francs, and the total exports to 401,543,750 francs. Much of the traffic with Abyssinia which formerly passed by Zailah now goes by railway from Djibouti to Addis Ababa (485 miles). The vessels of 3 French, 2 English, and 2 Italian shipping companies visit Djibouti, which is also in communication with Aden by means of French and English steamboats for local traffic. In 1926 there entered at Djibouti 1,423 steam merchant vessels of 1,145,271 tons. Of these vessels, 245 were French, 81 English, 30 Italian, 7 Dutch, 15 Norwegian, 13 German; a total of 2,960 vessels cleared, with a tonnage of 2,280,861.

FRENCH WEST AFRICA AND THE SAHARA

French West Africa comprises the following colonies:—(1) Senegal, (2) French Guinea, (3) the Ivory Coast, (4) Dahomey, (5) French Sudan, (6) Upper Volta, (7) Mauritania, (8) Niger, and (9) Circle of Dakar and Dependencies.

The approximate area and population of French West Africa in 1926 are shown as follows:—

Colony	Area (in Square Miles)	Population 1926			Total	Population per sq. mile
		Europeans		Native Races
		French	Foreign
Senegal . .	74,112	3,057	1,593	1,813,637	1,818,287	17·7

Total . .	1,247,191	11,099	4,300	18,526,212	18,541,611	—

Of the French population, 7,207 were men, 2,578 women, and 1,314 children; while of the foreign population, 2,466 were men, 939 women, and 895 children.

A treaty of October 19, 1906, determines the course of the Anglo-French boundary from the Gulf of Guinea to the Niger. The delineation of the boundary was completed in 1912, and approved by the two governments in 1914. The British government has leased to France for purposes of commerce two pieces of land, one on the right bank of the Niger between Lealaba and the confluence of the rivers Moussa and Niger, and the other on one of the mouths of the Niger, each to form one block of from 25 to 120 acres with a river frontage not exceeding 436 yards; the lease, at first, to be for 30 years. It is further stipulated that, within the boundaries indicated in the convention, British and French as regards persons and merchandise shall enjoy for 30 years the same treatment in all matters of river navigation, of commerce, and of tariff and fiscal treatment and taxes of all kinds.

Under the Anglo-French Convention of April 8, 1904, the river port of Yarbata on the Gambia (belonging to the British colony of Gambia), with all its landing places, was ceded to France, and, if this port should prove inaccessible to sea-going merchantmen, access to the river will be granted to France at an accessible point lower down. At the same time the Los Islands were ceded to France.

By an agreement dated July 6, 1911, between England and France, the boundary line between French Guinea and Sierra Leone was readjusted.

By a Convention between Great Britain and France the former recognised the right of France to all territory west of the Nile basin, which practically includes the whole of the Sahara (exclusive of the Libyan Desert), and the State of Wadai. The French Sahara may be roughly estimated at about 1½ million square miles.

Over the whole of French West Africa there is a Governor-General, who is assisted by a Council, the seat of the general government being at Dakar. The Colonies are each under a Lieutenant-Governor, the Circle of Dakar and Dependencies under a Governor of Colonies, all subject to the direction of the Governor-General, who has been relieved of the direct administration of any portion of his Government, and is free to devote the whole of his attention to directing and controlling the common interests of all the Colonies. To facilitate this object a General Budget has been created, drawn up by the Governor-General, which provides for all the services which are common to all the Colonies, and the funds for which are provided by the customs and shipping dues of each of the Colonies, which have now only their internal revenues to depend upon for their local budgets, which have, however, been relieved of the cost of all the general services.

The following are the financial estimates for 1928:—

	General Budget	Local Budgets	Supplementary Budgets	Total
Revenue . . .	214,730,000	350,000,000	185,000,000	749,730,000
Expenditure . .	214,730,000	330,000,000	165,000,000	709,730,000

The military forces in peace times consist of 12,000 men, of whom 2,000 are Europeans. The police force numbers 4,500.

There were in 1926-27 292 village schools with 24,457 boys and 333 girls, 77 urban schools with 3,507 boys and 1,223 girls, and 8 high schools with 558 pupils for general instruction, and 352 for manual instruction. There were besides 144 evening schools for adults with 5,790 pupils, 8 orphan schools with 309 pupils, and 2 'medersas' or Mussulman schools with 80 pupils; also 3 higher technical schools with 250 students, and 2 Lycées with 291 pupils. The expenditure on education was 11,775,000 francs.

The imports into French West Africa are mostly food substances, textiles, mechanical implements, and beverages; the exports from these colonies are chiefly fruits, oils and oil seeds, as well as rubber, cotton, cocoa and timber.

920 FRANCE:—FRENCH WEST AFRICA AND THE SAHARA

The following is a comparative table of values of the imports and exports during 1925 and 1926 for each of the colonies:—

Colonies	Imports		Exports
	1925	1926	1925	1926
	francs	francs	francs	francs
Senegal . . . . .	698,926,705	909,908,954	588,921,912	885,945,699

Total . . . . .	1,114,970,591	1,550,729,615	899,063,623	1,412,028,809

Of the imports, 525,445,121 francs were from France in 1925, and 792,406,426 francs in 1926; of the exports 527,347,423 francs went to France in 1925, and 767,943,465 francs in 1926.

Total trade between Great Britain and French West Africa<sup>1</sup>, according to Board of Trade Returns for three years, was as follows:—

	1925	1926	1927
Imports from French West Africa from U.K. . . . .	2,401,154	2,087,680	1,230,876
Exports to French West Africa from U.K. . . . .	3,138,457	2,266,768	1,951,540

In 1926, 21,369 vessels of 17,144,123 tons entered and cleared the ports of French West Africa.

There are (1926) 1,866 miles of railway and 13,662 miles of telegraph, with 18,630 miles of wire. In 1926, there were 273 post offices, divided as follows:—Senegal, 52; French Sudan, 60; Guinea, 40; Ivory Coast, 39; Dahomey, 33; Mauretania, 13; Upper Volta, 22; and Niger, 19.

A savings bank was established by a decree of July 22, 1920, and began to function on October 1, 1922, with a single office at Dakar. There are now 3 branch offices at Saint-Louis, Conakry and Porto-Novo. On December 31, 1926, there were 3,648 depositors with 2,498,028 francs to their credit. The use of French weights and measures, and money, is compulsory throughout French West Africa.

Governor-General of French West Africa.—M. Carde. Appointed February 20, 1923.

The colony of Senegal was reorganised by the law of December 4, 1920. The capital is St. Louis, an old town founded in 1658 (population, 1917, 23,326, French 307). Two other important towns are Dakar, a fortified naval station, and the seat of the Government General of French West Africa (population, 1918, 25,468, French 2,791), and Rufisque (population, 11,414, French 205). These three towns, with Goree, a small island situated in front of Dakar (population, 1,444, French 67), are municipal communes governed by a mayor and corporation.

The total area is 74,112 square miles, and the total population in 1926 was put at 1,318,287. The natives of the four towns and their descendants are French citizens, and other natives are French subjects.

The Colony is represented in the French Parliament by a deputy.

The Colony is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor, assisted by a Colonial Council of 40 members, 20 elected by French citizens and 20 by representatives of native chiefs of cantons and provinces. The Colony is divided into 11 'circles,' each under the rule of an administrator. The local budget for 1926 was 85,801,824 francs.

All towns having a sufficiently numerous European or assimilated native population have urban schools giving the same instruction as the French primary schools, modified to suit local requirements. At Dakar there are grouped superior technical schools common to all the colonies, a normal school for teachers, a professional school, a commercial and administrative school, a school of medicine. At St. Louis are a secondary school, a superior primary school, a professional school for interpreters, kadis (native judges), and chiefs' sons. In 1923, 446,428 francs was provided for secondary education. There is a large hospital for natives at Dakar.

The soil is generally sandy. In 1926, there were 585,972 sheep and goats; 415,945 cattle; 58,012 asses; and 40,923 horses. The natives cultivate ground-nuts, millet, maize, and some rice; other products are castor beans, some coco-nuts, gum from Mauritania, and rubber from the Casamance river. Ground-nuts form the bulk of the exports. A salt industry is being developed.

Native industries comprise weaving, pottery, brick-making and jewellery.

Imports in 1926, 909,998,954 francs; exports, 885,945,699 francs. The chief imports are cottons, foodstuffs, metal-work, coal. The chief exports are ground-nuts (740,869,000 francs in 1926), hides and skins, rubber and gums.

There are 1,494 miles of telegraph and about 100 miles of telephone lines. A submarine cable from Brest to Dakar was completed in April, 1905, so that the French West African Colonies are now independent of foreign cables. There are three other cables, one Spanish, one French West African, and the third belonging to a South American company.

One railway connects Dakar, Rufisque and St. Louis (165 miles); another one Thiès and Kayes (Upper-Senegal-Niger) 435 miles (350 miles open).

There is a river service on the Senegal from St. Louis to Kayes, the former a principal town of Upper-Senegal-Niger (490 sea miles) on the Senegal river, during the rainy season, and extensive works for the improvement of the river have been carried out. The Senegal river is closed to foreign flags. Dakar, the principal port, is in regular communication with French ports by the steamers of 4 French lines, and with Liverpool by a British line. The dry dock at Dakar which was completed in 1908, can take boats 630 feet long. The Bank of West Africa (established June 23, 1901), with a capital of 6,000,000 francs, and reserve funds 3,920,000 francs, was founded for the purpose of carrying on financial, industrial, or commercial operations; it has a branch at Dakar, and agencies at St. Louis, and at Rufuquer. La Banque Française de l'Afrique Equatoriale has a branch at Dakar.

H. B. M.'s Consul-General at Dakar (for French Western Africa, including the Sudan).—R. C. F. Maugham.

French Guinea lies on the coast between Portuguese Guinea and the British colony of Sierra Leone, and extends inland so as to include the territories of Koumbia, Dinguiraye, Siguiiri, Kouroussa, Kankan, Kissidougou, Beyla, Macenta, Boffa, Boké, Conakry, Faranah, Forécariah, Kindia, Labé, Mamou, Pita, Gueckédou, and N'zérékoré. The area is about 92,640 square miles, and the population (1927) was 2,183,003, including 2,133 Europeans (1,031 French). A regular system of Government lay schools has recently been introduced all over French West Africa. The principal products are palm oil and nuts, rubber, millet, earth-nuts, rice, gum, cotton, bananas, and coffee, which is grown in the Rio Nunez region. There is an experimental garden near Conakry (the capital) where the culture of bananas, pineapples, rubber trees, and other plants is being tried. Fouta Djallon contains cattle in abundance. In 1927, there were 460,000 cattle, 125,000 sheep, 170,000 goats, 2,400 horses, and 580 asses. Gold is found in the river Tinkisso and in the Bouré and Siecke districts. Imports in 1926, 153,543,000 francs; exports, 75,839,627 francs. The principal exports in 1926 were rubber, 13,873,418 francs; cattle, 4,012,044 francs; ground-nuts, 4,841,117 francs; hides, 8,610,861 francs; gold, 3,511,301 francs; and palm kernels, 23,424,468 francs; animal wax, 3,088,342 francs; palm oil, 2,418,615 francs. The principal imports in 1926 were cotton fabrics, 84,592,961 francs; metal goods, 12,901,327 francs; petrol, 2,575,351 francs; wines, 1,895,069 francs. A network of roads is being made to connect with the railway station from Conakry to the Niger. The French Guinea railway which runs from Conakry on the coast to the Niger at Kourassa (366 miles long) was opened in January, 1911 and in August, 1914, was continued to Kankan (412 miles from Conakry). The jetty 1,066 feet long, at Conakry has been completed. In the colony there are 2,201 miles of telegraph and 232 miles of telephone line, of which 74 miles are urban and 158 miles inter-urban. The Colony is connected by cable with France and Pernambuco; also with Freetown, Monrovia, and Grand Bassam. There is a wireless station at Conakry affording communication with Senegal (Rufisque) and the Ivory Coast (Monrovia). Conakry is visited regularly by the steamers of three French companies and one English company. The budget of the colony provided for 1927 the sum of 29,862,979 francs.

The Ivory Coast lies between Liberia and the British Gold Coast Colony. It has common frontiers with French Guinea, French Sudan, and the Upper Volta Colony. France asserted and obtained rights on the coast about 1842, but did not actively and continuously occupy the territory till 1882. Area about 121,976 square miles; population, 1,724,545; Europeans, 1,614. The seat of administration is Bingerville, the capital, formerly called Adjamé (European population, 94). There is a central school group at Bingerville, and a number of Government schools in the districts. The chief ports, in respect of population and commerce, are Grand Bassam, with a lagoon 124 miles long, and 12 to 15 feet deep forming an excellent inland waterway (there is one jetty, 892 feet long, being built to avoid the bar at the entrance to the harbour); Assinie, also with a lagoon; Grand Lahou, the lagoon of which is connected by means of a canal with the lagoon of Grand Bassam; Sassandra, with a pier, and Tabou, which has a wireless station. The chief centres in the interior are Abidjan (9,126 inhabitants, including 431 Europeans), Dimbokro, Bouaké, Aboisso, Bondoukou, and Korbogo. The natives cultivate maize, rice, plantains, pineapples, and many other fruits. They have also been taught to grow cocoa, the export of which increased from an average of 4 tons in 1904-1908 to 3,600 tons in 1923, 7,865 tons in 1924, 8,491 tons in 1925, and 6,993 tons in 1926. Coco-nuts and rubber are collected. The mahogany forests inland are worked. Gold is found near Grand Bassam in Baoulé, on the Comoé and Bia Rivers, and in Indenié. The imports in 1926 amounted to 181,580,971 francs, and the exports to 213,819,198 francs. Chief imports in 1926 were: tissues, 57,934,243 francs; tobacco, 4,099,527 francs; wines, 5,419,225 francs; metal work, 18,873,149 francs; machinery, 5,997,990 francs. Chief exports were: palm kernels, 32,260,165 francs; palm oil, 23,337,538 francs; dried and smoked fish, 316,755 francs; cacao, 26,966,883 francs; rubber, 5,456,638 francs; cabinet woods, 101,443,633 francs; cotton, 13,300,841 francs. The ports of the Colony are visited by liners of several French, English and Belgian shipping companies. Number of vessels entered in 1926, 1,106 of 3,146,960 tons, and cleared 1,107 vessels, of 3,150,553 tons. From Abidjan, on the north side of the lagoon, a railway has been constructed, running between Abidjan and Niango (281 miles). Contracts have now been made to lengthen this to the north, to the Niger and Upper Volta. There is a large network of roads suitable for motor traffic, total length about 2,794 miles. At the end of 1918, there were 2,300 miles of telegraphic and 117 miles of telephonic lines. The telegraph connects the principal towns and extends to adjoining colonies. Telephonic communication exists between Bassam, Bingerville, Abidjan, Aboisso, and Dabou. The budget of the colony for 1927 has been fixed at 43,668,700 francs.

Dahomey stretches from the coast between Togoland on the west and the British possessions of Lagos and Nigeria on the east, and is bounded on the north-east by the river Niger and on the north and north-west by the colony of the Upper Volta, northwards to the French Military Territories. France obtained a footing on the coast in 1851, and gradually extended her power until in 1894 the whole kingdom of Dahomey was annexed. The colony has only about 70 miles of coast, but opens out northwards into a wide hinterland. The area is 42,460 square miles, and the population, according to the latest census of 1925, 979,609, including 900 Europeans. The seat of government is Porto Novo (the chief business centre), which has about 25,000 inhabitants. Village, regional, and urban schools are instituted under the new West African educational system. In 1926, 1,500,000 francs was spent on education. The natives are of pure Negro stock, and belong to the Fon branch of the Ewe family. They are industrious agriculturists in the coast region, and grow maize, manioc, yams, and potatoes. In 1926, there were 1,800 horses; 500 asses; 90,000 cattle; 40,000 sheep; 90,000 goats; and 110,000 pigs. The forests contain oil palms, which have been profitably utilised. These furnish the chief exports—kernels and oil. Cotton cultivation has recently been successfully introduced in the central provinces. Imports in 1926, 186,537,810 francs; exports, 181,704,213 francs. The principal exports (1925), were palm kernels, 45,000 tons; palm oil, 17,000 tons, and cotton 700 tons.

There are few roads in the colony, but in the last four years they have been greatly improved. A new metalled road, called the East Road (297 miles in length), for motor traffic runs from Savé to the Niger. There is also a road from Darsa-Zoumé to Porga called the West Road (275 miles). There are now altogether more than 2,794 miles of carriage road. At Kotonu an iron pier has been erected, and from that port a railway runs into the interior to Savé (156 miles) with a branch line to Whydah and Segborué in Lake Aheme (20 miles). The line is intended to run to Chaoru (400 miles). The gauge is a metre. A metre gauge railway has also been constructed from Porto Novo to Pobé (50 miles) along the Lagos frontier. A new railway linking the Capital with the port of Kotonu is in course of construction (22 miles). A telegraph line connects Kotonu with Abomey, Togoland, the Niger, and Senegal. In the colony there are 1,389 miles of telegraph line, and 70 miles of telephone line. In 1922, 277 vessels of 720,780 tons entered, and 278 vessels of 723,546 tons cleared the ports of Dahomey. French coins only are in circulation. The local budget for 1926 was 19,102,000 francs.

The Colony of French Sudan was formed in 1904, from the Territories of Senegambia and the Niger, less the Senegal Protectorate, which was restored to Senegal. Its old name of Upper Senegal-Niger was changed to French Sudan by decree of December 4, 1920.

The Colony is bounded on the north by the Algerian sphere; on the west by Mauritania, the Faldémé river, and the frontier of French Guinea; on the south by the frontiers of the Ivory Coast, and the Upper Volta, and on the east by the Colony of the Niger. It therefore includes the valley of the Upper Senegal, about two-thirds of the course of the Niger, much of the country enclosed in the great Bend, and a large part of the Sahara to the Algerian sphere of influence. The area is 360,331 square miles, with a population of about 2,634,982 in 1926.

At the same time that this Colony was formed the Military Territories, which now form an integral part of it, were broken up. The Second Military Territory, which included nearly all the country within the Bend, was handed over to the Military administration, and the First (Timbuktu) incorporated in Upper Senegal-Niger, was administered by a colonel under the authority of the Lieutenant-Governor. Since January 1, 1923 however, the region of Timbuktu has been converted into a "Civilian Territory," presided over by a chief administrator under the authority of the Lieutenant-Governor. The Third (Zinder-Chad) Territory has been constituted an autonomous unit. In 1919 the greater part of the southern portion in the bend of the Niger was created a separate Colony in the name of the Upper Volta (Haute Volta, see below).

The whole of the French Sudan is under civil administration, with the same judicial and educational systems as the other Colonies comprised in the Government General. The budget of the Colony for 1927 provided for 39,600,000 francs.

The most important and populous towns in the French Sudan are: Bamako, the capital, (15,596 inhabitants), Segou (7,597 inhabitants), Kayes (9,866 inhabitants), Djenné (5,450 inhabitants), Timbuktu (5,485 inhabitants), Goundam (4,251 inhabitants), Niore (4,001 inhabitants), Sikasso (9,197 inhabitants), San (3,582 inhabitants), Mopti (3,907 inhabitants). All the principal towns have regional or urban schools; Bamako has a professional school, a junior high school and a veterinary school; there is a Mussulman superior school at Timbuktu with 67 pupils and one médersa (official).

The natives cultivate ground-nuts, millet, maize, rice, cotton, sesame; other products are rubber and kariti. Large stocks of cattle abound in the colony.

Native industries comprise pottery, brick-making, jewellery, weaving, leather-making. Chief imports are cottons, food-stuffs, metal-work; total in 1926, 85,907,623 francs. Chief exports are ground-nuts, cattle, rubber, gum, kajak, skins, cotton and wool; total in 1926, 6,216,551 francs.

There is a very complete system of telegraphs throughout the Colony from Kayes to Niamey, Zinder, and Lake Tchad.

Since the completion of the section from Thiès to Kayes (January 1924), French Sudan is connected with the coast by a railway 745 miles in length, stretching from Dakar to Koulikoro by way of Thiès, Kayes and Bamako. For about seven months in the year small steamboats perform the service from Koulikoro to Timbuktu, and from Bamako to Kouroussa.

Wireless telegraph connects Kabara, Kidal and Bamako with the Eiffel Tower in Paris, and with Dakar, Rufisque, Conakry.

The Colony of the Upper Volta was formed by a decree of March 1, 1919, from the southern section of the Upper Senegal Niger. It lies within the bend of the Niger. By a decree of December 28, 1926, the circle of Say and the eastern part of the circle of Dori were detached from the colony and added to the colony of the Niger.

The eastern boundary, therefore, follows an irregular line through the villages Yatakala, Bossé, Tangou and Botou; its southern boundary is formed by the river Mekrou and the northern boundary of Dahomey, Togoland, the Gold Coast, and the Ivory Coast; thence the boundary runs in a north-easterly direction from the river Bagoé to the Niger, about 16° N., below Ansongo. It embraces the circles of Gaoua, Bobo-Dioulasso, Dédougou, Ouagadougou, Ouahigouya, Tenkodogo, Kaya, Koudougou, and Fada. Area about 142,000 square miles, and native population 3,028,655 (census 1926), with 450 Europeans. The administrative centre is Ouagadougou (population 10,000); other towns are Bobo-Dioulasso (10,000), Dédougou (3,000), and Ouahigouya (6,000). Administratively, it is on the same footing as the other Colonies of French West Africa. Economically, industrially and commercially it possesses the same characteristics as the French Sudan. Cultivation of cotton is on the increase; 60 tons in 1924, 750 tons in 1925, and 2,000 tons in 1926. Imports in 1926, 26,124,659 francs; exports, 22,490,500 francs. The budget for 1927 balanced at 22,000,000 francs. An automobile service between Bouaké and Ouagadougou connects this colony with the Ivory Coast Railway. There are 2,600 miles of good roads.

Mauritania, formed into a Protectorate in May, 1903, converted into a special "Civilian Territory" in October, 1904, became a Colony on January 1, 1921, with a Lieutenant-Governor at its head. It consists of the districts of Trarza, Brakna, Gorgol, Assaba, Guidimaka, Adrar, Levrier Bay, and Tagant, with a total area of 347,400 square miles. The native population numbers 289,184, mostly Moorish Mussulmans. European population about 300. The northern limit of the Colony is approximate, and the foregoing area is obtained by taking the latitude 23° 3' N. as the northern boundary.

The budget of the Colony for 1927 was 11,725,800 francs.

The Colony of the Niger was formed by a decree of October 13, 1922. Estimated area, 404,914 square miles; population (1927), 1,366,667 (270 Europeans). It was originally a Military Territory (1912); in 1920, it was placed under civil administration. The country is composed of a zone in the north, which is largely desolate country; a central strip which is wooded; and the southern zone, richly wooded and abounding in cattle. By a decree dated December 28, 1926, the circle of Say and part of the circle of Dori were transferred from the Colony of Upper-Volta to the Colony of the Niger, the new districts comprising 119,946 inhabitants. On January 1, 1927, there were, excluding the new territories, 47,419 horses, 632,157 oxen, 1,337,386 sheep and goats, 16,851 asses, 27,134 camels. In the southern zone rice, cotton, wheat, tobacco, maize, barley and indigo can be produced. In 1924 the chief agricultural products were, millet and sorghum (400,000 tons), dates (600 tons), earth-nuts (3,000 tons), and beans (10,000 tons). The whole colony lacks water. Local budget in 1927, 13,225,650 francs. Niamey is the capital.

MANDATED TERRITORIES IN AFRICA: TOGO AND CAMEROON.

Togo.—Togo, the former German Colony, lies between the Gold Coast Colony on the west and French Dahomey on the east. It was surrendered unconditionally by the Germans to British and French forces in August, 1914, and is now divided between the French and British. The Mandate was approved by the League of Nations on July 20, 1922. Of the total area of 33,700 square miles, the French have obtained about two-thirds, 21,293 square miles, the boundary running from the north-east in a generally south-east and south direction to Lome, in such a manner that no part of the coast is included in the British sphere. Lome is the seat of the administration. The total population of the whole of Togo is estimated at 762,208 natives, with a European population of 245.

The southern half of Togoland is peopled by natives using 30 different languages, of which the principal is Ewe—these may be regarded as an offshoot of the Bantu peoples. The northern half contains, ethnologically, a totally different population descended largely from Hamitic tribes and speaking in all 16 languages, of which Dagomba and Tim are the most important. The majority of the natives are pagans, but many profess Mohamedanism, while Christianity has, latterly, been making some progress in the coast districts.

Inland the country is hilly, rising to 3,600 feet, with streams and waterfalls. There are long stretches of forest and brushwood, while dry plains alternate with cultivable land. Maize, yams, cassada, plantains, ground-nuts, etc., are cultivated by the natives; oil palms, caoutchouc, and dye-woods grow in the forests; but the main commerce is the barter trade for palm oil, palm kernels, coco, rubber and copra carried on with the European factories. There are considerable plantations of oil and coco palms, coffee, coco, kola, and cassada. During the last four years the natives have engaged in the cultivation of cocoa and cotton. Production of cotton amounted to 678 tons in 1922, 1,601 tons in 1925, and 1,230 tons in 1926. Production of cocoa amounted to 4,606 tons in 1925 and 5,226 tons in 1926. Other products in 1926 were, palm oil, 2,622 tons; palm kernels, 9,952 tons; maize, 3,986 tons. In the Sokodé and Sansane-Mangu districts in the French sphere there are about 65,000 head of cattle; sheep, goats, poultry and pigs are found, but nowhere in large numbers; in some districts horses of small size are bred. Native industries are: weaving, pottery, smith-work, straw-plaiting, wood-cutting, etc. There is no mining by Europeans, but the natives in the Sokodé and Misahöhe districts smelt iron, in which this Colony is very rich. For 1926, imports amounted to 25,065,071 kilograms, valued at 99,047,677 francs, and exports to 28,525,583 kilograms, valued at 70,374,154 francs. The local budget for 1927 balanced at 33,585,000 francs. There was also a railway budget, 17,707,000 francs; and a budget for public health and native medical services, 4,744,000 francs.

There are good roads, connecting the more important centres of the Colony. There are three railways connecting Lome with Anecho (Little Popo) (27 miles), with Palime (74 miles), and with Atakpame (103 miles). Total, 204 miles, with 5 stations and sub-stations. There are 13 post and telegraph stations and 4 sub-stations, connected by telegraph and telephone with the Gold Coast Colony, French Dahomey, and with Europe.

The port of Lome has a wharf with a capacity of 300 tons of traffic daily. A new wharf with a capacity of 600 tons was opened in 1927. At Anecho the embarkation is made by means of surf boats. In 1926, 357 vessels cleared at the two ports.

Cameroon.—The former German Colony of Kamerun, including the area of French Equatorial Africa ceded by France to Germany, was occupied by French and British troops in 1916. The greater portion of the territory has been placed under French administration, and a strip on the southern border of Nigeria under British. The total area allotted to France amounts to 166,489 square miles, excluding the 107,270 square miles ceded to Germany in 1911, which is now included in French Equatorial Africa. Population in 1926 was 1,878,683, of whom 647,341 were men, 680,886 women, and 548,886 children. The Europeans numbered 1,570, of whom 1,233 were French. The portion of Cameroon placed under the Mandate of France by the Treaty of Versailles has, by a decree of March 23, 1921, been constituted an autonomous territory both administratively and financially. The seat of government is Yaoundé. In 1925, there were 73 government schools, of which 1 was a high school at Yaoundé, 9 regional schools, and 51 village schools, 7 professional schools, and 5 schools for domestic training, with a total attendance of 10,549. There are also 36 private schools. The budget provided for 938,474 francs for public education. General budget for 1927 balances at 41,768,350 francs; special railway budget, 16,000,000 francs; special medical budget, 3,597,000 francs. Chief products are tobacco, palm oil, almonds, rubber, timber, cacao and ivory. In 1926, there were 11,600 horses; 10,000 asses; 331,900 cattle; 410,000 sheep and goats; and 8,000 pigs. Imports in 1926 amounted to 192,000,000 francs, and exports to 155,000,000 francs. In 1925, 217 vessels entered at the port of Douala. The country has 1,120 miles of roads, and 369 miles of railway.

AMERICA.

GUADELOUPE AND DEPENDENCIES.

Guadeloupe, situated in the Lesser Antilles, consists of two islands separated by a narrow channel, called 'Rivière Salée.' That on the west is called Guadeloupe proper or Basse-Terre, and that to the east Grande-Terres; they have a united area of 1,380 square kilometres (532 square miles), and a circumference of 275 miles. There are five dependencies consisting of the smaller islands, Marie Galante, Les Saintes, Désirade, St. Barthélemy, and St. Martin; the total area with these is 638 square miles. The colony is under a Governor and an elected council, and is represented by a senator and two deputies. Population (1926) 243,243. Instruction (1926-27) is given in 1 lycée with 464 pupils, a secondary course for girls at Pointe-à-Pitre, with 322 pupils, and 113 public and private elementary schools. The public elementary schools have 324 teachers and 17,180 pupils, and the private have 878 under 40 mistresses. The seat of government is Basse-Terre (8,379 inhabitants). Pointe-à-Pitre (26,455 inhabitants) has a fine harbour. Revenue and expenditure balanced at 29,018,596 francs for 1927. Outstanding debt, December 31, 1926, 499,078 francs.

Chief products are sugar, coffee, cocoa, and rum. For local consumption there are grown bananas, sweet potatoes, manioc, tobacco, indian corn, and vegetables.

In 1926, the imports were 144,849,469 francs, and the exports 167,663,138 francs (sugar, 33,847,169 kilogrammes; coffee, 593,439 kilogrammes; rum, 12,009,494 litres; cacao, 609,956 kilogrammes; vanilla, 34,888 kilogrammes; bananas, 1,431,340 kilogrammes). Guadeloupe is in direct communication with France by means of two steam navigation companies. A new wireless station at Destrellan was opened in 1918. Within the islands traffic is carried on by means of roads. The Bank of Guadeloupe, with a capital of 3,000,000 francs, and reserve funds amounting to 843,746 francs, advances loans chiefly for agricultural purposes, even on the security of jewellery. The Royal Bank of Canada has also established a branch. There is likewise another bank, the Banque de Commerce, but while this is a private institution, the Banque de la Guadeloupe and the Royal Bank of Canada have a semi-official character. Silver coin has disappeared from circulation; nickel treasury tokens (bons) of 1 franc and of 50 centimes are authorised up to a total emission of 1,000,000 francs.

GUIANA.

The colony of French Guiana, on the north-east coast of South America, is administered by a Governor, assisted by a Privy Council of 5 members. The colony has a Council-General of 16 members elected by French citizens resident in Guiana, and is represented in the French Parliament by one deputy. Area about 34,740 square miles, and population, census of 1926, 47,341. Cayenne, the chief town, has a population of 13,936, and the other 14 communes have 28,995. These figures are exclusive of the population of the penal settlement of Maroni, of the floating population of miners without any fixed abode, as also officials, troops, and native tribes. At Cayenne there are a court of first instance, a court of appeal, and justices of the peace, with jurisdiction in other localities. The military force consists of 200 officers and men of the Colonial Infantry. Primary education is given gratuitously since 1889 in lay schools for the two sexes in the communes and many villages. There is also a college for secondary and higher primary education, with a department for professional education and a normal course for teachers. There are also several Congregational schools. The school population in 1926-27 was 3,600. The penal settlement also has 3 schools with 215 pupils. The budget for 1926 amounted to 11,000,000 francs receipts, and 10,500,000 francs expenses. The country has immense forests rich in many kinds of timber. There is little agriculture in the colony; only about 7,900 acres are under cultivation. The crops consist of rice, maize, manioc, cocoa, coffee, sugar-cane, indigo, tobacco, and gutta percha. The most important industry is gold-mining (placer). Silver, iron, and phosphates are also worked. The exports consist of cocoa, phosphates, various woods, gold, rosewood essence, balata, and hides. The total imports in 1926 were valued at 61,973,600 francs, and the exports at 46,105,881 francs. There are three ports—Cayenne,

Saint-Laurent-du-Maroni, and Oyapoc. Cayenne and Saint-Laurent are visited once a month by a cargo boat of the Compagnie Général Trans-atlantique. There is also steamboat communication between the capital and the other towns and with the neighbouring colonies. A waterplane service connects St. Laurent with the capital and inland centres. There are three chief and many secondary roads connecting the capital with various centres of population in the interior.

Since 1885, Cayenne has had a penal settlement for habitual criminals and convicts sentenced to hard labour. On December 31, 1926, the penal population consisted of 6,200.

The Bank of Guiana, under Government control, with a capital of 600,000 francs, with statutory reserve fund amounting to 650,000 francs, advances loans for agricultural and other purposes.

MARTINIQUE.

The colony is under a Governor assisted by a Privy Council. An elected General Council votes the Budget, and elective municipal councils administer the communes. It is represented by a senator and two deputies in the French Chamber. Area 385 square miles, divided into 32 communes; population (census 1926) 244,482. The military force consists of one company of infantry and a battery of artillery. There is a law school (at Fort-de-France) with 70 students; a lycée for boys, with 800 pupils; a high school for girls with 815 pupils; primary schools, with 21,037 pupils (including 7 private schools); a commercial school with 137 pupils, and a school of arts and crafts (93 pupils). Chief commercial town, Fort-de-France (population, 40,000). The budget for 1926 balanced at 56,146,218 francs. Sugar, rum, and cocoa are the chief productions, then come coffee, tobacco, pine-apple, and bananas. There are 15,000 hectares under sugar-cane and food-producing crops. Tobacco culture is under special regulations. There are 15 sugar works, with 15 distilleries attached, 117 agricultural distilleries, 4 industrial distilleries devoted to the production of rum, and 17 industrial establishments. In 1926, 43,286 metric tons of sugar, 4,629,620 gallons of rum, and 435 metric tons of cocoa beans were exported. The total imports in 1926 were valued at 223,387,726 francs, and the exports at 222,155,091 francs. Vessels entered in 1926, 538 of 961,402 tons; vessels cleared, 538 of 979,505 tons. The island is visited regularly by the steamers of French and American companies. For local traffic there are subsidised mail coaches and motor-cars; and subsidised steamers ply along the coast. The colony is in telegraphic communication with the rest of the world by telegraph cables and wireless. The Bank of Martinique at Fort-de-France with a capital of 3,000,000 francs, the Crédit Martiniquais with a capital of 3,500,000 francs, and a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada advance loans for agricultural and other purposes.

ST. PIERRE AND MIQUELON.

The largest islands of two small groups close to the south coast of Newfoundland. Area of St. Pierre group, 10 sq. miles; population in 1921, 3,419; area of Miquelon group, 83 sq. miles; population, 499; total area, 93 sq. miles; total population, 4,030. Since July, 1921, a Governor organises and regulates the various branches of the public service. He is assisted by a consultative council of administration and municipal councils. Chief town, St. Pierre. Primary instruction is free. There are 2 public schools for boys, and 3 for girls, with (in all) 25 teachers and 626 pupils. There are, besides, infant schools, 'salles d'asile,' frequented by 140 children. There are a private boarding school and two private schools.

The islands, being mostly barren rock, are unsuited for agriculture. The chief industry is cod-fishing. Imports in 1924, 149,075,555 francs; exports, 142,804,699 francs. The imports comprise textiles, salt, wines, foodstuffs, meat; and the exports, cod, dried and fresh, and fish products. St. Pierre is in regular steam communication with North Sydney and Halifax; and is connected by telegraph cable with Europe and the American continent. Local budget for 1927: Receipts, 8,985,250 francs; Expenditure, 8,983,469 francs.

AUSTRALASIA AND OCEANIA.

NEW CALEDONIA AND DEPENDENCIES.

Governor.—M. Guyon (1925).

New Caledonia is administered by a Governor assisted by a Privy Council consisting of the Secretary-General, the Procureur-Général (the head of the Judicial administration), the Superior Commandant of the Troops, the head of the Department of Domains and Colonisation, and two notables of the colony appointed by the President of the Republic. The colony has also an elective Council-General. Nouméa, the capital, has a municipality; other centres of population are locally administered by municipal commissions. The colony contains a penal settlement at Nou Island. Since 1896, however, no convicts have been sent thither, and the convict element in the population is quickly decreasing.

The island is situated between the 20° 1' and 22° 26' parallels south latitude, and 161° 30' and 144° 40' east longitude. It has a total length exceeding 248 miles and an average breadth of 81 miles. Area, 8,548 square miles. According to the census of July 5, 1921, the population was 47,505, of whom 14,172 were free, 2,810 of convict origin, and 25,123 Melanesians and Polynesians. On October 31, 1925, the native population was 27,061. Nouméa had (1921) 9,386 inhabitants, of whom 6,328 were free. The immigrants from France are not numerous. Other immigrants (July 1, 1925) were 2,604 Javanese, 2,929 Tonkinese, 64 Indians, and 244 islanders from the New Hebrides. Primary instruction is provided in public and also in private elementary schools, the latter being assisted by the local budget. In 1925, there were 55 public and private primary schools with 2,779 pupils (1,425 being girls), and 74 native schools with 2,746 pupils. In Nouméa the 'Collège La Pérouse' gives classical tuition to 140 pupils and professional instruction (iron and wood) to 60 pupils. Local budget for 1927, receipts and expenses, 28,080,437 francs, of which 23,207,860 francs were for the ordinary budget, and 4,878,431 extraordinary budget. In 1925 the military force consisted of 95 Europeans and 69 native troops. Of the total area more than half is mountainous or not cultivable; about 1,600 square miles is pasture land; about the same area is cultivated or cultivable; and about 500 square miles contain forest which is being worked. The land is divided into 3 domains: that of the state (in which gratuitous concessions may be made); that of the penal establishment (about 400 square miles); and that of the native reserve. The chief agricultural products are coffee, copra, cotton, manioc (cassava), maize, tobacco, bananas, pine-apples. There are 200,000 cattle and about 25,000 sheep. The mineral resources are very great; chrome, cobalt, nickel, iron, and manganese abound; antimony, mercury, cinnabar, silver, gold, lead, and copper have all been obtained. The nickel deposits are of special value, being without arsenic. Local industries are developing; there are a grain storage and cleaning dépôt, meat preserving works, barking mills for coffee and cotton, and two blast furnaces melting nickel ore. A hydro-electric factory was established in 1926. About 128,000 hectares of mining land are owned, and 137,000 hectares have been granted for prospecting. In 1925, mineral export comprised chrome ore, 20,715 tons; nickel, 4,400 tons; phosphates, 10,000 tons. The value of the mineral export was 4,019,334 francs. The blast furnaces produced 4,435 tons matto of nickel valued at 12,475,006 francs. The imports in 1926 were valued at 141,746,983 francs, and the exports at 90,652,759 francs. The imports comprise wine, coal, flour, rice; the exports, minerals, coffee, copra, cotton, guano, and preserved meats. In 1926, 123 vessels of 176,749 tons entered and 123 of 174,008 tons cleared at the ports of New Caledonia. Of those which entered, 83 (122,312 tons) were French. Nouméa is connected three times monthly with Sydney in New South Wales by regular steamers sailing monthly, and by other vessels sailing irregularly. There is a mail service by steamer along the coast. There is a narrow-gauge railway (single line) from Nouméa to Paita, about 20 miles long. The proposed extension to Bourail, 105 miles from Nouméa has, however, been postponed. There is a daily motor road service for passengers from Nouméa to Bourail, but most of the roads are only suitable for horseback transport. There are 921 miles of telegraph line and 707 of telephone line.

Dependencies of New Caledonia are:

1. The Isle of Pines, 30 miles to the south-east, with an area of 58 square miles and a population of about 600.
2. The Wallis Archipelago, north-east of Fiji, with an area of 40 square miles and about 4,500 inhabitants. The islands were placed under the French protectorate in 1842. There is a French Resident, and the archipelago is in regular communication with Nouméa. Budget for 1927, 298,640 francs.
3. The Loyalty Islands, 60 miles east of New Caledonia, consisting of 3 large islands, Maré, Lifou, and Uvéa, and many small islands with a total area of about 800 square miles. The chief culture in the islands is that of coconuts; the chief export, copra and rubber.
4. The Huon Islands, 170 miles north-west of New Caledonia, a most barren group.
5. Futuna and Alofi, south of the Wallis Islands, with about 1,500 inhabitants, were annexed by France in 1888.

The New Hebrides, in accordance with the Anglo-French convention of February (ratified in October), 1906, are jointly administered by the High Commissioners of His Britannic Majesty and the French Republic. In 1914 an Anglo-French conference was appointed to devise means of remedying the defects of the condominium. Population (census of May 1, 1924), 2,161. In 1925 there were 746 French and 322 English. There are French and English courts, and a mixed court with a judge foreign to both nations. Local budget for 1927, 3,209,000 francs. Exports in 1926 amounted to 43,267,835 francs, of which 34,371,306 were French trade, and 8,896,529 francs British trade; imports to 30,457,405 francs, of which 20,326,172 francs were in French trade, and 10,131,233 in British trade. Maize, coffee, cotton, cocoa, vanilla, coconut trees are grown, and are the chief articles of export. In some places sulphur is abundant. In 1926, 63 vessels of 82,675 tons entered, and 61 vessels of 81,686 tons cleared the ports. Of these 40 entering were British (62,255 tons), and 25 French (20,335 tons). Of those clearing 37 were British (61,067 tons), and 23 French (20,594 tons).

FRENCH ESTABLISHMENTS IN OCEANIA.

These, scattered over a wide area in the Eastern Pacific, are administered by a governor with an Administrative Council consisting of certain officials, the maire of Papeete, and the Presidents of the Chambers of Commerce and Agriculture. The establishments consist of the Society Islands, the most important of which are Tahiti and Moorea, the former with an area of about 600 square miles and (census 1926) 8,585 inhabitants, the latter with an area of 50 square miles and 1,837 inhabitants; the principal product is phosphate (annual production, 80,000 metric tons). Other groups are the Marquezas Islands, with a total area of 480 square miles and 2,255 inhabitants, the two largest islands being Nukahiva and Hivaoa; the Tuamotu group, consisting of two parallel ranges of islands from King George's Island on the north to Gloucester Island on the south, their total population being 4,276; the Leeward Islands (Iles sous le Vent) (8,502 inhabitants), of which the more important are Huahiné (pop. 1,283), Raiatée and Tahaa (pop. 4,307), and Bora-Bora-Maupiti (pop. 1,330); the Gambier, Tubuai, and Rapa Islands; the Gambier group (of which Mangareva is the principal) having six square miles of area and 501 inhabitants; the Tubuai (or southern) Islands, of which Rurutu is the largest, Raiavae (or Vavitu), Rimatara, and, far to the south, Rapa, having together an area of 115 square miles and 3,170 inhabitants; Makatea, 1,086 inhabitants; Island of Maiao, 81 inhabitants. The total area of the Establishments is estimated at 1,520 square miles, and their population, according to the census of 1926, was 35,862, of whom 29,644 were natives. There were 870 French, 217 English, and 3,989 Chinese. In 1903 it was decreed that separate islands or groups should no longer be regarded as distinct Establishments, but that all should be united to form a homogeneous colony. Budget for 1927 balanced at 15,167,573 francs.

The most important of the islands is Tahiti, whose chief town is Papeete with 4,601 inhabitants, of whom 2,126 are French. A higher primary school, with a normal school, has been established at Papeete, and there are (1925) 63 primary schools, with 91 teachers and 3,750 pupils. Pearls and mother-o'-pearl are important products. The island is mountainous and picturesque with a fertile coastland bearing coconut, banana, and orange trees, sugar-cane, vanilla, and other tropical fruits, besides vegetables grown in temperate climates. The chief industries are the preparation of copra, sugar, and rum. Value of imports (1926) 49,943,864 francs, exports, 53,650,477 francs. The chief imports are tissues, wheat, flour, metal work. The chief exports were copra (12,177 tons), mother-o'-pearl, vanilla, coconuts and phosphates. The export of phosphates in 1926 was 127,177 tons, in 1925, 81,062 tons. The New Zealand company (with a French subvention) has a monthly service connecting San Francisco, New Zealand and Australia with Papeete, the Tuamotu Islands, the Marquesas, and the Leeward Islands. The shipping between the islands is carried on by sailing boats.

GERMANY.

(DEUTSCHES REICH.)

On November 9, 1918, the abdication of the German Emperor was announced, and from that date Germany became a Republic.

(For the constitution of the Empire and its rulers see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1918, pp. 881-884.)

Constitution and Government.

The Council of People's Commissioners in Berlin took over the Government of the country; the reigning princes of the Federal States were either deposed or abdicated, the existing Imperial Parliament was declared dissolved, and arrangements were made for summoning a National Assembly. The elections for the body (for which all Germans, men and women, over 20 years of age voted) were held in January, 1919, and resulted, on the basis of proportional representation, in the return of the following parties:—Majority Socialists, 165; Centre (Catholic) Party, 90; Democrats, 75; Conservatives, 42; Independent Socialists, 22; German People's Party, 22; and minor parties, 7; total, 423. The National Assembly was summoned to meet at Weimar on February 6 and on February 11, 1919, it elected the first President of the Republic, Friedrich Ebert, who held office from February 11, 1919, until his death on February 28, 1925.

President of the Republic.—Paul von Hindenburg. Elected the second President on April 26, 1925; assumed office on May 12, 1925.

The President is elected by the direct vote of all citizens, male and female, over 20 years of age. The election must be held either on Sunday or on a day of public rest. The President holds office for 7 years.

On February 1, 1927, the following Cabinet was appointed :—

Chancellor and Minister for the Occupied Provinces.—Dr. Wilhelm Mara (Centre).

Minister of Justice and Vice-Chancellor.—Oskar Hergt (German National People's Party).

Minister for Foreign Affairs.—Dr. Gustav Stresemann (German People's Party).

Minister for Home Affairs.—Dr. v. Keudell (German National People's Party).

Minister of Finance.—Dr. Kohler (Centre).

Minister of Defence.—Lieut.-General Wilhelm Groener (January 19, 1928).

Minister of Labour.—Dr. Heinrich Brauns (Centre).

Minister of Food and Agriculture.—Martin Schieler (German National People's Party).

Minister of Posts.—Dr. Schaetzel (Bavarian People's Party).

Minister of Transport.—Dr. Wilhelm Koch (German National People's Party).

Minister of Economic Affairs.—Dr. Julius Curtius (German People's Party).

The Constitution of the Republic was adopted on July 31, 1919, by the National Assembly at Weimar, and promulgated on August 11, 1919. It declares that the new Commonwealth is a Republic and that the power of the State is derived from the people. The colours of the Republic are black, red and gold. The trade flag is black, white, and red with the colours of the Reich in the upper inside corner. The Constitution provides for Central, and State Legislative organs; makes foreign relations, defence, customs duties taxation and railway services matters for the central authority; lays it down that every component State in the Federation must have a Republican Constitution, with a universal, equal, direct, and secret franchise of male and female voters on the proportional system. A State Council (Reichsrat) is to be formed for the representation of the component States (Länder). All Bills (Gesetzesvorlagen) before they are introduced into the Reichstag require the assent of the Reichsrat, but the Reichstag can pass a Bill into law with a two-thirds majority over the head of the Reichsrat. The principle of the Referendum is provided for in the Constitution. The Constitution further declares all Germans equal before the law, and abolishes all privileges or disadvantages of birth, class, or creed. Freedom of speech and of the Press is guaranteed; so is the right of meeting. Members of the Legislature of the Republic (Reichstag) are to be elected by universal, equal, direct and secret votes of male and female voters, on the proportional system. The Reichstag is to be elected for 4 years. The Cabinet appointed by the President must enjoy the confidence of the Reichstag. Declarations of war and conclusions of peace are made by a law of the Republic.

The Reichsrat consists (1926) of 68 members (Prussia 27, Bavaria 11, Saxony 7, Württemberg 4, Baden 3, and the other States 16).

The Reichstag, elected on December 7, 1924, is composed as follows: Socialists, 181; Centre Party, 68; German National People's Party, 110;

German People's Party, 51; German Democratic Party, 32; Bavarian People's Party, 19; Communists, 44; and minor parties, 38; total, 493.

New elections were timed to be held in May 1928.

Area and Population.

I. PROGRESS AND PRESENT CONDITIONS.

The following table gives the area and population of the present States (Länder) of Germany in the order of their magnitude, embodying the returns of the census of June 16, 1925 :—

According to the Treaty of Versailles (June 28, 1919) Germany has agreed to the following territorial arrangements :—(1) Alsace-Lorraine ceded to France, (2) the greater part of the Provinces of West Prussia and Posen ceded to Poland, (3) a part of Eastern Silesia and of East Prussia likewise to Poland, (4) a portion of Upper Silesia to Czechoslovakia, (5) Memel to Lithuania, (6) Danzig, a Free State under the protection of the League of Nations, (7) Eupen and Malmedy to Belgium, (8) a part of Schleswig to Denmark.

Provision was made in the Treaty to settle the ultimate fate of the following areas by plébiscite:—(1) The Saar Basin (after 15 years), (2) Schleswig (in two zones), (3) districts in Southern East Prussia, in West Prussia and in Upper Silesia. Results of the plébiscites.—Schleswig (March, 1920), northern zone for Denmark, southern zone for Germany; East and West Prussia (July, 1920) for Germany; Upper Silesia (March, 1921) for Germany. Despite the decision in Upper Silesia, 1,241 square miles, with a population of 892,537, were transferred to Poland.

An estimate of the actual areas and populations (according to the Census of 1910) lost to pre-war Germany has been made as follows: Alsace-Lorraine, 5,607 square miles, population 1,874,014; ceded to Belgium, 400 square miles, population 60,003; ceded to Poland, 17,816 square miles, population 3,854,961; Memel, 1,026 square miles, population 141,238; Danzig, 739 square miles, population 330,630; ceded to Denmark, 1,542 square miles, population 166,348; ceded to Czechoslovakia, 122 square miles, population 48,446; total 27,252 square miles, population 6,475,640.

The Saar Basin, which has been placed under the government of the League of Nations for 15 years, has an area of 738 square miles and a population (1926) of 773,764. (See also p. 956.)

The area of the territory occupied under the Treaty was originally about 12,528 square miles, containing about 7 million inhabitants, but by January 31, 1926, the Cologne zone, with 2,527 sq. miles and 2,640,798 inhabitants, had been evacuated.

The population of the German Empire (without Heligoland) was 24,831,896 in 1816, and 31,589,547 in 1837, showing an average annual increase of nearly 1·3 per cent. The following table shows the actual increase in population at various periods, with the annual rate of increase per cent. The small increase in 1867–71 is explained by the intervention of the war with France.

Year	Increase	Annual Rate per cent.	Year	Increase	Annual Rate per cent.

II. MOVEMENT OF THE POPULATION.

The following table shows the movement of the population of the Empire during three years:—

Year	Marriages	Total Births	Stillborn	Illegitimate	Total Deaths	Surplus of Births
1924	440,039	1,313,625	42,805	139,321	801,880	+511,745
1925	482,792	1,336,327	43,828	160,452	788,519	+547,808
1926	483,198	1,269,419	41,519	159,572	775,878	+493,541

Of the children born in 1925, 691,110 were boys and 645,217 girls; in 1926, 655,678 were boys, and 613,741 girls.

The number of divorces in Germany was in 1925, 35,451, being 56·8 per 100,000 inhabitants; in 1924, 35,936 or 57·8.

The following table shows the annual number of German emigrants for six years:—

III. PRINCIPAL TOWNS.

German towns are distinguished as large towns (with 100,000 inhabitants and upwards); medium towns (20,000–100,000 inhabitants); small towns (5,000–20,000 inhabitants), and country towns 2,000–5,000 inhabitants). In 1925, 2 towns had over 1,000,000 inhabitants; 18 others over 250,000; 26 others over 100,000; 50 between 50,000 and 100,000; and 166 between 20,000 and 50,000. According to the results of the census of June 16, 1925, the population of the principal towns at that date was:—

Religion.

According to the census of June 16, 1925, there were in Germany 40,014,677 Protestants (64 per cent. of the total population), 20,193,334 Catholics (32 per cent.), 87,580 other Christians (0·1 per cent.), and 564,379 Jews (0·9 per cent.).

The Constitution provides for entire liberty of conscience. There is no State Church. Every religious community manages its own affairs, and makes appointments to its offices without interference from the State.

The Evangelical Churches are now united in the German Evangelical Church Union.

There are 5 Roman Catholic archbishoprics, 14 suffragan bishoprics, and 6 bishoprics immediately subject to Rome; there are 3 apostolic vicariates. The 'Old Catholics' have a bishop at Bonn.

The Jewish congregations are federated in the 'Deutsch-Israelitischer Gemeinde-Bund.'

Instruction.

Education is general throughout Germany, all children between the ages of 6 and 14 being bound to attend some recognised school. The teachers in German schools are required to hold a Government certificate, and to have undergone a period of training and probation.

According to a school census taken in 1926-27 there were in that year 52,320 public elementary schools in Germany with 180,273 teachers (187,124 males and 43,149 females), and 6,629,779 pupils (3,340,804 boys and 3,288,975 girls).

There were in 1922, 675 private schools with 35,534 pupils (14,986 boys and 20,598 girls).

According to the law of April 28, 1920, German children are all bound to receive a four years' course of instruction in the 'Foundation School' (Grundschule). The next highest school for elementary education is the 'People's School' (Volksschule), which like the Grundschule, is supported partly by the State (mostly for personnel), and partly by the municipalities (mostly for school buildings, etc.). Besides the Volksschule there is found the 'Middle School' (Mittelschule), which differs from the former in that instruction is provided in English and French. Apprentices and young people at work must attend Continuation Schools for 6 to 8 hours weekly during working hours. In addition there is a large number of special schools which prepare the pupils for particular callings.

To prepare for the Universities and for admission into certain professions, there are several kinds of secondary schools with a course of study extending in the main over 9 years. Of these the oldest is the Gymnasium, which specializes in classical studies; side by side with this is the Realgymnasium, which specializes in mathematics, natural science and modern languages, but also teaches classical subjects. The Gymnasien are the most fully developed classical schools; the Progymnasien differ from these only in not having the highest classes. The Oberrealschulen give instruction in mathematics, natural science and modern languages, but not in classics. Experimentally two other kinds of schools have been established—the German High School (Deutsche Oberschule) and the Aufbauschule, the former to stress German subjects (besides modern languages), and the latter to provide an intensive and curtailed high school education for the bright scholars of elementary schools.

For girls there are Lyceen, Oberlyceen and special Studienanstalten which prepare for the universities.

In 1921-22 the number of secondary schools was as follows:—For boys, Gymnasias, 515, with 10,051 teachers and 152,367 pupils; Realgymnasias, 322, with 6,678 teachers and 115,615 pupils; Oberrealschulen and Realschulen, 506, with 9,404 teachers and 184,175 pupils. For girls, High Schools, 824; with 14,852 teachers and 299,285 pupils.

There are 10 fully equipped Technical High Schools, with the power of granting degrees. They are all aided by the States to which they respectively belong. The statistics for 1926 were as follows:—

There are, besides, 2 Veterinary Colleges (388 students in 1926), 4 Agricultural Colleges (1,794 students in 1926), 3 Afforestation Academies (831 students in 1926), 2 Mining Academies (888 students), 5 Commercial High Schools (4,189 students), 1 Academy for Practical Medicine (50 students), 14 Schools of Art (2,349 students), and 10 Colleges of Music (3,489 students).

There are 23 universities in the German Republic, besides the Philosophical and Theological High Schools at Braunsberg (32 students in 1926), Augsburg (25 students in 1926), Bamberg (87 students in 1926), Dillingen (132 students in 1926), Eichstatt (124 students in 1926), Freising (142 students in 1926), Passau (145 students in 1926), and Regensburg (188 students in 1926), which have only faculties of theology (Roman Catholic) and philosophy (Augsburg has philosophy only).

In three universities, namely, Freiburg, Munich, and Würzburg, the faculties of theology are Roman Catholic; four are mixed, both Protestant and Roman Catholic—Bonn, Breslau, Münster, and Tübingen; and the rest are Protestant. Cologne, Frankfurt, and Hamburg have no theological faculties.

Justice and Crime.

A uniform system of law courts exists throughout Germany, though, with the exception of the Reichsgericht, all courts are directly subject to the Government of the special State in which they exercise jurisdiction, and not to the Central Government. The appointment of the judges other than those of the Reichsgericht is also a State function, and not that of the Central Government.

The lowest courts of first instance are the Amtsgerichte (1,745 on January 1, 1927), each with one or more judges, competent to try petty civil and criminal cases. Cases relating to property in which the amount involved does not exceed 500 marks are usually tried by a single judge. In the trial of more serious criminal cases the judge is assisted by two assessors (laymen), to whom on the request of the public prosecutor a professional magistrate may further be added (Schoffengericht). The Landgerichte (159 on January 1, 1927), contain both civil and criminal chambers. The former, consisting of three judges, exercise a revising jurisdiction over the Amtsgerichte, and also, a more extensive original jurisdiction, including divorce cases, &c. For trying commercial cases there are further commercial chambers, consisting of one judge and two laymen. The criminal chamber hears appeals from the Amtsgerichte in criminal cases; if the appeal is from the decision of a single magistrate it is heard by one judge with two lay assessors (small chamber); if from a decision of the Schoffengericht, by three judges and two laymen (large chamber). For the trial of capital cases, the Landgerichte are transformed into Schwurgerichte, consisting of three judges and six laymen. The first court of second instance is the Oberlandesgericht. There are twenty-seven such courts in Germany. The Oberlandesgerichte contain criminal and civil senates consisting of three judges. They exercise appellate jurisdiction over the Landgerichte in civil cases, and over the 'small chambers' (and in some cases over the 'large chambers') in criminal cases. The total number of judges on the bench in all the courts above mentioned was 9,498 (Jan. 1, 1927). The supreme court is the Reichsgericht, which sits at Leipzig, and has 91 judges. This court exercises an appellate jurisdiction over all inferior courts, and also an original and final jurisdiction in cases of treason. It has 5 criminal and 7 civil senates, consisting of 5 judges each.

Number of persons condemned after trial, 1925, 592,051; 1926, 598,460.

Poor Relief.

The relief of the poor, war invalids, dependents of those killed in the war and of minors in need of assistance was regulated by the law of February 13, 1924. Relief is granted by District Unions (Bezirksfuersorgeverbände) or Provincial and State Unions (Landesfuersorgeverbände). The former are either identical with the larger municipalities, or are a union of smaller ones. Relief is granted in the ordinary place of residence of the recipients, usually by the District Unions. But where the recipient has no ordinary place of residence, the Landesfuersorgeverbaende make the grant. Relief may be made dependent on labour. Poor rates are not levied.

Compulsory Insurance.

Social insurance has existed in Germany since 1883. It comprises compulsory insurance of workmen against sickness (including maternity), accidents, unemployment, old age and infirmity; and also of employees against unemployment, old age and infirmity.

Under an Imperial law of 1883 and amending Acts, workmen must be insured against sickness, and must themselves pay two-thirds of the contributions, their employers paying one-third. For accident insurance, under an Act of 1884 and amending Acts, the contributions are paid entirely by the employers, and they, for mutual protection, have been obliged to unite into associations according to the nature of the industries in which they are engaged. The working of these insurance associations is controlled by Government. For invalidity and old age insurances, under an Act of 1889 and amending Acts, the contributions are paid half by the employee and half by their employers, while towards each pension the Government grants an annual subsidy. The employers are responsible both for their own and the workmen's contributions, but the latter may be deducted from wages paid subsequently. Insurance for old age pensions was introduced by law of December 20, 1911, and amending Acts, 65 being the pensionable age.

The State makes a grant for sickness insurance, also provides for maternity benefit.

For the year 1926 the average of those insured against sickness was 20,258,128. Of this total, 18,402,147 (11,475,009 men and 6,927,138 women) were insured in ordinary societies, and 752,662 (745,732 men and 8,930 women) in Knappschaften or societies for miners, and 1,103,319 in supplementary offices. In 1926, about 24,862,031 persons were insured against accident in 66 industrial and 39 agricultural societies.

The total receipts in 1926 of the ordinary societies were 1,342,888,628 R. M., and of the Knappschaften 107,340,444 R. M. The total expenditure of the ordinary societies was 1,230,023,012 R. M., and of the Knappschaften 95,923,537 R. M. For accident insurance the receipts were 335,214,000 R. M., and the expenditure 321,599,000 R. M.

Defence.

I. ARMY.

Under the terms of the Treaty of Versailles, and in accordance with the law of March 23, 1921, enlistment is voluntary and for 12 years. Officers have to engage to serve for 25 consecutive years on appointment. The Reichswehr is organized in 7 divisions of infantry and 3 divisions of cavalry, with two army corps headquarter staffs. The strength of an army corps staff is 30 officers and 150 N.C.O.'s and men; of an infantry division, 410 officers and 10,830 men; of a cavalry division, 275 officers and 5,250 men. The total strength of the army in 1927 was 3,797 officers and 94,765 other ranks. The President is the supreme head of all land and sea forces. Under his orders the Minister of National Defence exercises actual command through the medium of a General Officer appointed chief of the army command, organised as follows :—

	Divisions	Regiments	Battalions	Squadrons	Companies	Groups	Batteries

By June, 1921, the fortresses specified in the Treaty, and also the coast defences of Kiel and Heligoland had been razed. The equipment of the fortresses of Kustrin, Glatz, Neisse, Glogau, Loetzen, and Marienburg had been surrendered. The maximum armaments authorised are 84,000 rifles, 18,000 carbines, 792 heavy machine guns, 63 trench mortars, 204 7·7 c.m. field guns, and 84 10·5 c.m. howitzers. No military aircraft is permitted.

The army estimates for 1927-28 amounted to 481,400,000 gold marks.

II. NAVY.

The German Navy has become a purely coast-defence force and is directed and administered by the Chief of Naval Direction, under the Ministry of National Defence. In addition to the central administrative division are the Office of Naval Command (staff), the General Naval Office (supply, research and construction), also the Naval Administrative Office, and some departments dealing with the relations of the Navy to the Defence Ministry, which also controls the Army.

The Treaty allows to the German Government the right of maintaining a navy, recruited and maintained on a volunteer basis. The fleet consists of eight pre-Dreadnoughts completed between 1902 and 1906, each displacing approximately 13,000 tons and mounting four 11-inch and from ten to fourteen 6·7 or 5·9-inch guns. They are the Braunschweig, Elsass, Hannover, Hessen, Schlesien, Schleswig-Holstein, Preussen and Lothringen, of which four are usually kept in reserve. They possess little fighting value, though a certain amount of money has been spent in modernising them. The cruisers authorised by the Treaty are the Nymphen, Medusa, Thetis, Amazona, Arkona, Hamburg, and Berlin, completed between 1899 and 1903, and each of them mounting ten 4·1 inch guns; and the Enden, completed at the end of 1925, armed with 8 6-inch guns; 4 new cruisers (Königsberg, Karlsruhe, "D" and "E") are under construction, and will replace four of the older vessels in due course. They carry 9 6-inch guns each on a displacement of 6,000 metric tons. There are also thirty-two destroyers and torpedo-boats, 26 of which date from 1907-13; the remaining 6 were launched in 1924-27 to replace worn-out vessels; 6 more are under construction. As far as funds will permit, all these ships are maintained in an efficient state. No submarines are permitted.

The battleships, cruisers, destroyers and torpedo-boats are divided equally to constitute squadrons severally in the North Sea and the Baltic.

The cruisers Berlin and Emden are training ships, and have recently made extensive cruises with young officers and men.

The total personnel may not exceed 15,000, including a maximum of 1,500 officers and warrant officers. The officers and warrant officers engage for a minimum of twenty-five consecutive years, and the petty officers and men for twelve years. The vessels of war are to have a fixed allowance of arms, munitions, and material.

Naval Estimates: 1925-26, 198,100,000 marks; 1926-27, 223,800,000 marks.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

Generally speaking, small estates and peasant proprietorship prevail in the West and South German States, while large estates prevail in the north-east.

The subdivision of the soil, according to the latest official returns for Germany at the beginning of June, 1927, was as follows (in acres):—Arable land, 51,391,290; grass, meadows, pasture, 20,005,337; vineyards, 201,585.

The areas under the principal crops, in acres, and the yields, in metric tons (1 metric ton = 2,204 lb. or .984 an English ton), were for three years as follows:—

—	Acreage.			Produce (Metric tons).
	1925	1926	1927	1925	1926	1927
Wheat . . .	3,875,541	4,003,025	4,370,212	3,217,266	2,597,185	3,280,104

In 1927 the area devoted to vines was 181,872 acres, the wine yield 31,407,618 gallons. Area devoted to tobacco, 1925, 19,956 acres, 1926, 16,612 acres; 1927, 22,835 acres; yield 1925, 19,006,696 kilos; 1926, 14,410,304 kilos. Sugar production, 1925-26, 1,599,430 tons; 1926-27, 1,662,582 tons. In 1926 the hop production was 252.3 tons, and in 1925, 482.9 tons.

The number of domestic animals in Germany according to the census of December 1, 1927, was:—

II. FORESTRY.

Forestry in Germany is an industry of great importance, conducted under the care of the State on scientific methods. The forest area of Germany in its present extent was put in 1913 (latest statistics) at 31,587,209 acres, of which crown forests occupy 704,338 acres; State and partly State forests, 9,819,471 acres; communal forests, 5,071,010 acres; private forests, 14,727,054 acres, and forests belonging to various associations or foundations, 1,265,336 acres. Of the whole forest area 9,465,708 acres are under foliage trees, oak, birch, ash, beech, etc., and 22,120,446 acres bear pine, larch, red and white fir, etc.

III. MINING.

The great bulk of the minerals raised in Germany is produced in Prussia, where the chief mining districts are Westphalia, Rhenish Prussia, and Silesia, for coal, iron and metal smelting works, Central Germany for brown coal, the Harz for iron and copper ore, and the Westerwald for iron ore. Saxony has coal mines.

In 1925 there were 2,772 mines in Germany employing 779,473 persons (768,637 men, and 10,836 women).

The quantities of the principal minerals raised were as follows in metric tons :—

—	1924	1925	1926
Coal . . . . .	118,768,748	182,622,125	145,295,724
Lignite . . . . .	124,637,201	189,724,614	189,180,557
Iron ore . . . . .	4,457,101	5,923,043	4,793,353
Zinc ore . . . . .	102,513	122,208	200,144
Lead ore . . . . .	100,122	105,363	133,735
Copper ore . . . . .	791,602	810,729	932,332
Rock salt . . . . .	1,596,416	1,767,282	1,965,847
Potash . . . . .	8,091,117	12,029,576	9,408,109

In 1927 the output of coal was 153,597,600 tons; of lignite, 150,805,711 tons; of coke, 32,260,532 tons, compared with 145,362,900 tons of coal, 139,877,407 tons of lignite, and 26,254,691 tons of coke in 1926.

In 1913 the total output of pig iron was 16,763,809 tons; in 1926, 9,636,054 tons; in 1927, 13,102,528 tons. Ingot steel production in 1913 totalled 16,942,808 metric tons; in 1925, 11,866,862 tons; in 1926, 12,341,636 tons; in 1927, 16,305,380 tons.

IV. FISHERIES.

In 1926 the yield of the North Sea fisheries was 201,182,031 kilos of fish and 749,968 oysters; and of the Baltic fisheries, 35,182,094 kilos of fish and 20,934 wild ducks, etc.

V. MANUFACTURES.

The chief seats of the German iron production are the Ruhr, the Saar and Upper Silesia; to a less extent also in Hanover, Bavaria, and Saxony. Steel is made in the Ruhr. The manufacture of both iron and steel is carried on in the vicinity of the coal mines in the district of the Lower Rhine, in Westphalia, and in Thuringia. The electrical industry is found principally in Berlin. The chemical industry is centred on the Rhine and the Main, in the Ruhr, and in Prussian Saxony. Saxony (Free State) is the leading State in the production of textiles, but Westphalia and Silesia also produce linen; Württemberg, Baden, and Bavaria produce cotton goods. Woollens are manufactured in several Prussian provinces, also in Saxony and Bavaria; silk in Rhenish Prussia, and Baden. Beetroot sugar is an important manufacture in Prussia, chiefly in the provinces of Saxony, Hanover, Silesia and Pomerania. Production of potash, mainly in Prussian Saxony and Anhalt, 11,560,000 metric tons in 1926. Glass, porcelain, and earthenware in Silesia, Thuringia, Bavaria, and Saxony; clocks and wooden ware in Württemberg and Bavaria; and beer principally in Bavaria.

The following are the statistics of the beet sugar manufacture in Germany:—

Years beginning 1 September	Number of Factories	Beetroot used in Metric Tons	Production in Metric Tons		No. of Kgs. Beetroot to produce 1Kg. of Sugar

Tobacco products in the year ending March 31, 1927:—6,086,400,000 cigars, 29,113,400,000 cigarettes, 37,115,800 kilos of smoking tobacco, and 2,314,700 kilos of snuff. For 1926 the figures were, 5,631,459,000 cigars, 29,458,930,000 cigarettes, 30,464,303 kilos of smoking tobacco, and 2,318,757 kilos of snuff.

According to the industrial census of June 16, 1925, there were in Germany 1,842,913 industrial establishments, employing 12,482,442 workpeople, (9,609,629 males, being 77 per cent. of the total, and 2,872,813 females, being 23 per cent. of the total). The following table gives certain particulars of the more important industries:—

During the calendar year 1926 there passed in transit through the Kaiser Wilhelm (Kiel) Canal 47,150 merchant vessels, aggregating 18,191,543 net tons.

Internal Communications.

I. RAILWAYS.

In 1926 there were 3,232 miles of tramway, and 5,959 miles narrow gauge railways.

On April 1, 1920, all the various German State railways were transferred to the Central Government. On October 11, 1924, as a result of the adoption of the Dawes Scheme, the German railway system was transferred to a private company—the German Railways Company—which manages and administers the system. The railways, however, remain the property of the State. The total length of railway line was 53,063 kilometres, or 35,999 miles on December 31, 1927. Of this total 53,535 kilometres, or 33,191 miles are State lines.

In 1926, 414,550,876 tons of merchandise were carried on the German railways.

II. CANALS AND NAVIGATION AND AIRWAYS.

The length of inland waterways in 1925 was 12,220 kilometres, or 7,576 miles. Of this total 5,798 miles are rivers or canalised rivers, and 1,372 miles are canals. The inland waterways fleet at the end of 1926 comprised 23,416 vessels of 6,933,537 tons. In 1926, 102,300,000 tons of goods were carried on the inland waterways.

In 1926, 56,286 passengers were carried by air traffic over a total distance of 4,065,382 miles. In 1927, the number of passengers was 102,681 and the mileage 5,708,977.

III. POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS.

The postal and telegraphic services are retained in the hands of the Central Government.

Statistics for 1926:—Employees, 360,339; total number of post, telegraph, and telephone offices, 47,163. In 1926, 267,297,000 letters and packets were delivered.

The following are the telegraph statistics for the year 1926:—Length of telegraph lines, 222,220 kilometres or 137,776 miles; of wire, 3,537,204 kilometres or 2,516,621 miles; number of foreign telegrams, 18,013,500; of inland telegrams, 28,844,200, including official service telegrams. Length of telephone lines, 172,567 kilometres or 106,991 miles; of wire, 12,260,890 kilometres or 7,601,751 miles; number of telephone boxes, 2,688,495; of telephone connections, 2,052,350,740.

Banking, Money, and Credit.

By the Currency Law of August 30, 1924, which came into operation on October 11, 1924, the currency was once more established on a gold basis, with the following gold coins as legal tender: 20 and 10 Reichsmark pieces. Provision was also made for silver coins of 1, 2, 3 and 5 marks, and for 1, 2, 5, 10 and 50 pfennige. The notes of the Reichsbank (10 marks and upwards) are likewise legal tender; they have a minimum gold cover of 40 per cent. of their face value. For the present the convertibility of these notes is suspended. Besides the Reichsbank there are the four so-called 'private note banks' (1) Bayerische Notenbank, in Munich; (2) Sachsische Bank, in Dresden; (3) Württembergische Notenbank, in Stuttgart; and (4) Badische Bank, in Karlsruhe, which also have the right of issuing notes (50 marks and upwards), on the same terms as the Reichsbank.

On October 16, 1923, a proposal was adopted for the setting up of a Renten Bank to issue notes (Rentenmark) secured (since August 30, 1924) by first mortgages in gold marks on the entire German landed property.

Of the currency in circulation before August 30, 1924, the following remain: the gold and copper coins of the pre-war period, the new silver coins, and the Renten-pfennig coins. The Reichsbank and the four other banks of issue are obliged by law to change all their previously issued notes into new Bank notes at the rate of 1 billion marks to 1 Reichsmark.

On January 31, 1928, there were in circulation Reichsbank notes to the value of 4237·2 million marks; 'Private Bank' notes (see above), 176·3 million marks; notes of the Rentenbank (all of which must be withdrawn by the Reichsbank within 10 years), 625·7 million marks; and coins 883·0 million marks; making a total of 5922·3 million marks.

The condition of the Reichsbank of Germany on January 31, 1928, is shown as follows (in thousands of marks):—

Assets	Amount January 31, 1928	Liabilities	Amount January 31, 1928
Gold . . . . .	1,781,752	Old capital . . . . .	122,788
Gold abroad . . . . .	83,532	New capital . . . . .	177,212
Foreign currencies . . . . .	296,005	Reserves . . . . .	248,393
Bills and cheques . . . . .	2,872,350	Notes . . . . .	4,251,185
Token coins . . . . .	71,300	Other liabilities . . . . .	779,180
Notes of other Banks . . . . .	7,477

By the Bank Law of August 30, 1924, the privileges of the Reichsbank were renewed for 50 years.

The Renten Bank commenced operations on November 15, 1923; it is now in liquidation and the process is expected to be completed by 1934 at latest. On December 31, 1927, its only credits outstanding were those to the Central Government, which amounted to 810.1 million marks. The Renten Bank had issued notes to the value of 739.9 million marks, of which the Imperial Bank had 23.6 million marks, and the rest (716.2 million marks) were in general circulation.

By a law of March 19, 1924, there was established the German Gold Discount Bank (Deutsche Golddiscountbank) for the purpose of providing foreign currencies for German business. The capital of the institution is 10 millions sterling, one half provided by the Imperial Bank (with the aid of English credits); the other half, from private sources, is not wholly paid up. On December 31, 1927, the German Savings Banks had deposits amounting to 4820.0 million Reichsmarks.

THE SAAR.

According to paragraph 49 of the Treaty of Versailles, the Saar Basin was placed under the control of the League of Nations. In 1935, the population shall decide, by plebiscite, what nationality they desire. Meanwhile the district is governed by a commission of 5 nominated by the League, of whom 1 is French, 1 resident of the Saar, and 3 others. There is also a Landesrat of 30 members, which co-operates with the Government in an advisory capacity.

Area : Prussian Saar district, 574 sq. miles ; Bavarian Saar, 164 sq. miles ; total, 738 sq. miles.

Population, 1926 : Prussian portion, 674,791 ; Bavarian portion, 98,973 ; total, 773,764.

In 1926, there were in the area 554,651 Catholics, 211,472 Protestants, 4,554 Jews, and 3,087 others.

Principal towns : Saarbrücken (125,205) ; Dudweiler (25,178) ; Homburg (10,199).

Production of coal, 1927, 13,595,824 metric tons ; 1926, 13,680,874 metric tons ; production of coke, 262,388 tons ; of pig iron, 1927, 1,780,000 tons ; of steel, 1927, 1,900,000 tons.

STATES OF GERMANY.

ANHALT.

(FREISTAAT ANHALT.)

The Constitution of the Free State of Anhalt bears date July 18, 1919. According to the law of November 6, 1922, the government is carried on by the Ministry of State, composed of the Prime Minister (Minister-President) and either one or two other ministers. At the election held in November, 1924, the following parties were returned: Socialists, 15 ; Middle Class Party, 14 ; Democrats, 4 ; Communists, 2 ; National Socialist, 1.

BADEN.

(DEMOKRATISCHER FREISTAAT BADEN.)

Until 1771, Baden was a Margraviate divided into two or more lines; it was then united, and subsequently received various additions, and its ruler took the title of Elector in 1803, and of Grand-duke in 1806. On November 22, 1918, the Grand-duke abdicated, and the Provisional Government proclaimed Baden a Republic.

Constitution.—The Constitution of the Republic of Baden was determined by the National Assembly which met on January 5, 1919, and which was elected on the basis of equal, secret, direct, universal suffrage (with proportional representation) of all males and females over 20 years of age. According to this Constitution of March 21, 1919, the Free State of Baden is a Republic and a component state of Germany. All privileges of birth, religion, and caste are abolished. Women enjoy the same rights as men and are eligible for all public offices. There is no State or established church, but religion is taught in all schools. The right of combining is granted to all citizens, including civil servants. The Initiative and Referendum have been adopted, as also proportional representation. The suffrage is granted to all adults, male and female, who are over 20 years of age. There is only one Chamber (Landtag), the members of which are elected for 4 years. Qualified electors over 25 years of age are eligible as members of the Chamber. No fixed number of seats has been provided for, but generally one member is allocated for each 10,000 voters. The present Landtag, elected on October 25, 1925, will continue until October 25, 1929; it contains the following parties:—Centre, 28; Socialists, 16; German Democratic Party, 6; Right Block, 9; German People's Party (Liberals), 7; Communists, 4; Economic Union, 2; total 72.

The Cabinet consists of 4 Ministers and 2 State Councillors (Ministers without portfolio), elected by the legislature. The Landtag also nominates the President of the Cabinet, who is styled officially 'State President.'

The Government is made up as follows:—

State President and Minister of Justice.—G. Trunk (Centre).

Minister of Finance.—Dr. Franz Josef Schmitt (Centre).

Minister of the Interior.—A. Remmele (Socialist).

Minister of Religion and Education.—O. Leers (Democrat).

For general administrative purposes there are (since April 1, 1924) 40 'Amtsbezirke,' superintended by four general commissioners (Landes-Kommissäre). For local government there are 11 circles (Kreise), and 1,557 communes (Gemeinden), 124 communal cities, and 1,433 parishes.

Area and Population:—

District	Area: Square miles	Population		Pop. per square mile 1925
		1925	1919
Konstanz . .	1,610	337,508	320,265	209.6

Heidelberg . . . 73,034	Bruchsal . . . 16,469	Villingen . . . 13,982

Marriages, 1926, 16,481 ; births, 47,609 ; deaths, 28,072.

Religion and Instruction.—In 1925 there were 1,350,479 Catholics, 910,324 Protestants, 8,058 other Christians, 24,064 Jews, and 19,537 others.

All religious denominations enjoy equality and self-government, appointing their own clergy. The Protestant Church is governed by a synod, and its affairs are administered by a board (Oberkirchenrat). The Roman Catholic Church has an Archbishop (at Freiburg), whose 4 suffragans are outside Baden. The Catholic Foundations Council (Oberstiftungsrat) manages the property of the Catholic Church. The Jews, whose ecclesiastical affairs are managed by the 'Oberrat der Israeliten,' have 15 rabbimates.

Instruction is general, free, and compulsory. Schools are under the authority of the State. Religious instruction, however, is provided by each denomination, but there is no compulsion to give or to receive religious instruction. Baden has 2 universities (Heidelberg and Freiburg), 1 technical high school (Karlsruhe), 1 Academy of Arts (Karlsruhe), 1 commercial high school (Mannheim), 17 gymnasia, 13 Realgymnasia, 18 Oberrealschulen, 26 Realschulen, 15 high schools for girls, 1 training college for teachers, and a number of technical and special schools.

Finance.—The budget for 1928 and 1929 fixes the ordinary revenue at 275·8 million gold marks, and ordinary expenditure at 281·2 million for each year ; the extraordinary revenue at 26·5 million gold marks, and expenditure at 39·6 million for the two years.

Production and Industry.—Of the total area, 1,389,227 acres (94 per cent.) is cultivable land. Of this total 1,470,758 acres (39 per cent.) are forests. In 1926 the area under cultivation was 2,098,142 acres. Oats, barley, wheat, rye and potatoes are grown. Vines in 1926, 30,755 acres, yield 6,488,232 gallons of wine ; beetroot, turnips, hemp, hops and chicory are also grown. Tobacco area in 1927, 12,522 acres. The corn crop in 1926 was 315,581 metric tons. The number of animals in 1926 was: cattle, 622,324 ; pigs, 486,601 ; sheep, 44,836 ; goats, 149,367 ; horses, 69,459. Mineral produce almost solely salt and building-stone.

Principal manufactures: Tiles, cigars, jewellery, machinery, clocks, musical instruments, chemicals, silk ribbons, cotton tissues, paper and cardboard, leather, wood-work, and brushes.

BAVARIA.

(FREISTAAT BAYERN.)

Bavaria was for over a century a kingdom, ruled by descendants of the ancient Counts of Wittelsbach, who flourished in the twelfth century. Duke Maximilian I. of Bavaria was elevated to the rank of Elector of the Holy Roman Empire in the Thirty Years' War; and Elector Maximilian Joseph was raised to the rank of king by Napoleon I. in 1805. On November 22, 1918, the dynasty was deposed, and Bavaria was declared a Republic.

Constitution and Government.—On the outbreak of the Revolution the Government was taken over by a cabinet under the leadership of Kurt Eisner, an Independent Socialist. Eisner was assassinated in February, 1919, and a struggle ensued between the extremists of the Left, who proclaimed themselves Bolsheviks, and their more moderate opponents, with varying success on either side. By May, 1919, the moderate party had returned to power.

The constitution of August 14, 1919, establishes the Free State of Bavaria. The supreme power lies with the people. ## PRUSSIA.

(FREISTAAT PREUSSEN.)

On November 18, 1918, Prussia was proclaimed a Republic.

Until that date the country was ruled by sovereigns of the Hohenzollern family, the last of the line being William II (1888-1918). For an account of the rise of Prussia, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1922, p. 973.

Constitution and Government.

The Constitution, adopted on November 30, 1920, gives a vote to every citizen, male and female, over 20 years of age in general, equal, secret, and direct suffrage. Prussia is declared to be a Republic. Besides the Diet (Landtag) there is a State Council (Staatsrat) elected by the Provincial Assemblies on the basis of one representative for every 50,000 inhabitants. The function of the State Council is to advise and control the Diet, and is intended to be a kind of parallel institution to the Reichsrat in the Empire. The State Council has the right of rejecting legislation adopted by the Diet. The Diet elects the Premier, and he appoints the other members of the Cabinet. The Diet is elected for 4 years on the principle of proportional representation by secret and direct ballot, and the ministry is invested with the powers of the former King.

The Prussian Constituent National Assembly, elected by universal, equal, and secret suffrage of men and women, met on March 14, 1919.

On December 7, 1924, the elections were held for a Parliament, and resulted in the return of the following parties:—114 Social Democrats; 81 Centre (Catholics); 109 German National Party; 11 National Socialists; 45 German People's Party; 27 Democrats; 44 Communists; 11 Economic Party; 6 German Hanoverians, and 2 Poles; total, 450.

The Cabinet appointed on April 4, 1925, is composed as follows:—

Prime Minister.—Herr Otto Braun (Socialist).

Minister of National Welfare.—Herr Hirtsiefer (Centre).

Minister of Justice.—Herr Dr. Hermann Schmidt (Centre). Appointed March 6, 1927.

Minister of Commerce.—Herr Dr. Schreiber (Democrat).

Minister of the Interior.—Herr Grzesinski (Socialist).

Minister of Finance.—Herr Dr. Höpker Aschoff (Democrat).

Minister of Education.—Herr Dr. D. Becker (Independent Democrat).

Minister of Agriculture, Domains, and Forests.—Herr Steiger (Centre).

For local government Prussia is divided into Provinces, Government districts (Regierungsbezirke), urban circles (Stadtkreise), and rural circles (Landkreise). According to the Constitution, there are 14 Provinces. Urban circles consist of towns of over 25,000 inhabitants; rural circles consist of the smaller towns, rural communes (Landgemeinden), and manors (Gutsbezirke). For provinces and rural circles the local authorities of the constituent areas elect deliberative assemblies which appoint executive committees. Each province has a governor (Oberpräsident); each government district has a president, and deals chiefly with local affairs of State concern. In towns the deliberative authority is the town council (Stadtverordnetenversammlung), elected on the system of proportional suffrage. The executive is a magistracy with the burgomaster as president. Each rural circle has a Landrat. Local administrative business varies according to the nature of the administrative division. The matters dealt with are such as poor-relief, roads, light railways, etc., but in rural districts they include agricultural interests, and in towns, education, sick-insurance, valuation, collection of certain taxes, management of gas, water, and electric works, etc.

Religion.

Absolute religious liberty is guaranteed in the Republic. According to the census of 1925 there were in Prussia 24,751,368 Protestants (65 per cent.), 11,940,978 Catholics (31 per cent.), 54,617 other Christians (0·1 per cent.), 403,969 Jews (1·1 per cent.), and 969,241 others.

The Evangelical or Protestant Church has since October 31, 1817, consisted of a fusion of the Lutheran and Calvinistic bodies, from which, however, there are still a few dissenters. It is governed by 'consistories,' or boards elected by the people. There are also synods in most circles and provinces, and general synods representing the old provinces only. The constitution of the Catholic Church differs in the various provinces. Altogether in Prussia there are one archbishop and ten bishops.

Instruction.

Education in Prussia is compulsory. Every town, or community in town or country, must maintain a school supported by local rates, supplemented by the State, and administered by the local authorities, who are elected by the citizens, and called aldermen or town councillors. All parents are compelled to have their children properly taught or to send them to one of these elementary schools, in which all fees are now abolished. No compulsion exists in reference to a higher educational institution than elementary schools, but parents who send more than one child to any school supported by the community have, in many cases, a reduction made in the charge, and a limited number of pupils (about 10 per cent.) whose parents cannot afford to pay the full rate, either enjoy this reduction or are admitted entirely free, at the discretion of the authorities. The school age is from 6 to 14 years.

The following table gives the educational statistics of Prussia:—

	No.	Teaching Staff	Students or Pupils

There are also 4 technical high schools (Berlin, Hanover, Aachen, Breslau), 2 forestry schools (Eberswalde, Münden), 1 technical mining school (Klausenthal), 2 agricultural high schools (Berlin, Bonn-Poppelsdorf), agricultural institutes connected with universities, 2 veterinary high schools (Berlin, Hanover), a great number of other schools for various aspects of agriculture, 2 commercial high schools (Berlin, Königsberg i. Pr.), 1 academy of local government work (Düsseldorf), besides other special schools and State establishments for art and music.

The Universities, the high schools (exclusive of commercial high schools), some of the Gymnasias, Realgymnasias, and similar schools, as also the normal schools, are maintained and administered by the Government, while all the other scholastic institutions are supported by the community, etc., under control of the Government.

Justice, Crime.

Prussia contains 13 Oberlandesgerichte (see under German Empire). The Oberlandesgericht at Berlin is called the Kammergericht. The prosecution in all criminal cases is conducted by Staatsanwälte, or public prosecutors, paid by the State.

SAXONY.

(FREISTAAT SACHSEN.)

The former Kingdom of Saxony was proclaimed a Republic on November 9, 1918.

The former royal house of Saxony counted amongst the oldest reigning families in Europe. Heinrich of Eilenburg, of the family of Wettin, was Margrave of Meissen 1089-1108; he was succeeded by his son, Heinrich (1103-1123), and Konrad the Great (1128-1156), well known in Saxon history. The house subsequently spread into numerous branches, the elder of which, called the Ernestine line, is represented by the former ducal families of Saxe-Altenburg, Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, and Saxe-Meiningen, and the grand-ducal family of Saxe-Weimar; while the younger, the Albertine line, lived in the rulers of the Kingdom of Saxony. In 1806 the Elector Friedrich August III. (1763-1827), on entering the Confederation of the Rhine, took from Napoleon the title of King of Saxony, which was confirmed by the Congress of Vienna in 1815.

Constitution and Government.—The Constitution of the Republic bears date October 26, 1920. The Diet was elected on October 31, 1926, and is composed of 31 German Social-Democratic Party, 4 Saxon Social-Democratic Party, 5 Democrats, 14 German National Party, 12 members of the German People's Party, 14 Communists, 10 Middle Class Party, 4 People's Rights Party, and 2 Hitlerites.

Premier.—Herr Heldt (Socialist). Appointed February 1924. Re-elected January 11, 1927.

THURINGIA.

(LAND THÜRINGEN.)

The seven Thuringian States after much negotiation, which commenced in May, 1919, and ended on December 24, 1919, decided to combine into one State. The two Republics of Reuss had by a law of April 4, 1919, already been merged into the one People's State of Reuss, and Coburg had elected to merge with Bavaria. On March 31, 1922, the 'Administrative Districts' (Gebietsregierungen) of Thuringia were abolished, and instead the country was divided into 10 town and 15 country Districts (Kreise) and one sub-district (Kreisabteilung).

The elections to the first Diet of Thuringia were held in June, 1920, and the Diet adopted the Constitution on March 11, 1921. At the election on January 30, 1927, the following parties were returned: Conservative bloc, 19; Socialists, 18; Communists, 8; Other Parties, 6; total, 51.

President of the State Council.—Dr. Lutheusser.

Vines in 1926, 26,770 acres, yielded 943,118 gallons of wine. In 1925 there were produced 50,090,392 gallons of beer. There are active iron foundries and salt works.

In 1926 the total deposits at the savings banks amounted to 136,700,000 marks.

GREECE

(HELLENIC REPUBLIC)

GREECE gained its independence from Turkey in 1821-29, and by the Protocol of London, of February 3, 1830, was declared a kingdom, under the guarantee of Great Britain, France, and Russia. The crown was accepted by Prince Otto of Bavaria, who ascended the throne January 25, 1833, being under the age of eighteen. He was expelled the Kingdom, after a reign of 29 years, in October, 1862, which event was followed by the election, in 1863, under the directing guidance of the three guaranteeing Powers, of King George I. George I., who was assassinated on March 18, 1913, was succeeded by his son Constantine, who reigned until June 11, 1917. Alexandros, second son of King Constantine, then reigned till his death on October 25, 1920. Constantine returned to Greece on December 19, 1920, reigned until September 27, 1922, and died in exile on January 11, 1923. He was succeeded by his eldest son Georgios II, who was forced to leave Greece on December 18, 1923.

Constitution and Government.

By a plébiscite on April 13, 1924, the Republic was established. In the voting 758,742 votes were for a Republic and 325,322 votes against. A new Constitution was published on September 22, 1926. It was revised by the Chamber elected on November 7, 1926. The new constitution was published on June 3, 1927. It prescribes among other things that a Second House (Senate) consisting of 120 members shall be established, that Parliament shall be elected by direct universal and secret voting and that the Senate shall be elected partly by the people, partly by the Parliament and the Senate in a common meeting, and partly by the corporations of the different professions:

Provisional President of the Republic.—Admiral Konduriotis (Appointed Dec. 4, 1926).

Elections to the Chamber were held on November 7, 1926 with the following result: Republican Parties, 165; Royalist Popular Party 65; Metaxists, 47; Communists, 7; Independents, 2; total, 286.

The Ministry, constituted on February 8, 1928 is as follows:—

Premier.—A. Zaimis.

Minister for Foreign Affairs.—A. Michalacopoulos.

Minister of War.—General Mazarakis.

Minister of Marine.—J. Merlopoulos.

Minister of the Interior.—A. Maris.

Minister of Agriculture.—G. Exindari.

Minister of Social Insurance.—A. Kyrkos.

Minister of Justice.—V. Tourkovassilis.

Minister of Finance.—G. Kaphandaris.

Minister of Communications.—General J. Metazas.

Minister of Education.—D. Nicoloudis.

Area and Population.

Old Greece (before 1912) comprised continental Greece, the Peloponnesus to the south of the Gulf of Corinth, the Aegean Island of Eubœa, the Cyclades (about 220 islands, including Syra, Naxos, Andros, Tenos, Mikonos, Thermia, Seriphos, Paros, and Amorgos), the Sporades Islands (about 20), and the islands in the Ionian Sea, including Corfu, Zante, Santa Maura, and Cephalonia. Total area, 25,223 square miles.

New Greece consists of Macedonia, Western Thrace, Epirus, Crete, and the other Aegean lands.

At the Census of 1879 Greece had a population of 1,679,470; in 1889 (including that of Thessaly in 1881), 2,187,208; in 1896, 2,433,806; on October 27, 1907, 2,631,952. In 1920 the population numbered 5,536,375 (2,750,904 males and 2,785,471 females).

The acquisition of new territories by Greece, obtained as the result of the war with Turkey from October 17, 1912, to May 30, 1913, and with Bulgaria from June 30 to August 10, 1913, gave the country an additional area of 20,730 square miles. According to the Treaty of Lausanne (1923) Greece obtained a further area of 3,182 square miles. Including the new territories the total area of the country is thus 49,912 square miles.

The population of the country, according to the Census of 1920, and that of the refugees made in April 1923, is as follows for the administrative divisions according to latest revised figures:—

It is estimated that between August 1922, and January 1925, 1,400,000 Greek refugees migrated to Greece from Asia Minor, Constantinople and Eastern Thrace, and that the total population of the country may be put at 6,600,000 at the end of 1926.

In accordance with the Treaties of Lausanne (1923), London, and Athens, Greece retains all those Aegean islands which she occupied during the war, except Imbros, Tenedos, and Castellorizzo, which are to be restored to Turkey. These include Lemnos, Samos, Chios, and Mytilene.

Mount Athos, the easternmost of the three prongs of the peninsula of Chalcidice, is inhabited by the monks of Greek (17), Russian (1), Bulgarian (1), and Serbian (1) monasteries and hermitages (Sketari). The monks and the novices till the fields, tend the vineyard, take in the harvest, fish, weave, transact business in their own shops, and, indeed, carry on the secular duties of the community as well as the sacred. Originally inhabited by one mediaeval ascetic, Peter the Athonite, it has in the course of time grown to a religious colony of 5,140 (Census of 1920), distributed in 20 monasteries with their respective dependencies; and after having passed in the fifteenth century from the sovereignty of the Greek Emperors of Byzantium to that of the Sultans it fell again into the hands of the Greeks, who occupied it in November, 1912. Each of the 20 monasteries is a sort of little republic in itself, those of the 'coenobitic' category being ruled by abbots elected by the brethren of the monastery, while the 'idiorrhhythmic' monasteries are administered by a board of overseers (epitropoi) elected for a certain term of years. Hitherto the peninsula has been administered by a Council of 4 members, and an Assembly of 20 members, the latter consisting of 1 deputy from each monastery. The Greek government on September 10, 1926, recognized the autonomous form of government existing in Mount Athos for centuries and ratified it by Articles 106-109 of the Constitution. It has also sanctioned by a law the Charter of Mount Athos, which was drawn up at he extraordinary double meeting held by representatives of its 20 monasteries on May 20, 1924.

Religion.

The great majority of the inhabitants of the country are adherents of the Greek Orthodox Church. By the terms of the Constitution of 1864, the Greek Orthodox Church was declared the religion of the State, but complete toleration and liberty of worship was guaranteed to all other sects. The government of the Orthodox Church is at present vested in a permanent council, called the Holy Synod, consisting of the Metropolitan of Athens as president and 6 bishops, who must during their year of office reside at Athens. The Orthodox Church has 33 archbishops in the old territory and 38 archbishops and 7 bishops in the new territories. Besides the members of the Greek Orthodox Church there are about 350,000 Mussulmans, 120,000 Jews, 60,000 Bulgaro-Orthodox, and 40,000 Roman Catholics.

Instruction.

All children between the ages of seven and twelve years must attend school, but the law is not well enforced in country districts.

There were (1922) 7,200 primary schools with 13,996 teachers and 199,084 pupils. For secondary education there were (1924-25) 650 high schools with 2,523 teachers and 86,500 pupils. In 1924-25 there were 24 commercial schools with 188 teachers and 3,607 pupils (3,249 boys and 358 girls). There are 2 agricultural schools in Greece with, together, 200 pupils. There are two Universities in Athens, the National University (founded 1836) and the Capodistria University, with 61 professors and 9,799 students. A third University, founded at Salonica, began work in the winter of 1925. The Polytechnic, with 22 professors and 170 students, provides instruction in painting, sculpture, mechanics, architecture, surveying, etc.

The Ministry of Education is also charged with the Service of Antiquities, managed by an Archæological Council, which is responsible for the conservation and reparation of ancient monuments of all periods (Prehistoric, Classical, Byzantine and Mediæval), the upkeep of museums and the conduct of excavations.

British scholarship is represented in Athens by the British School of Archæology, which, by the aid of grants from the Government, universities, and private subscribers, is able to encourage and carry out scientific research of all kinds, but especially art, archæology and history. Members of the school have in recent years been responsible for the excavations at Knossos, in Crete, in Melos, at Sparta, in Thessaly, at Mycenæ, and elsewhere. There are also similar French, American, Italian, Austrian and German institutions.

Finance.

The estimates of revenue and expenditure for 6 years are as follows :—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
1922-23	Drachmai 25,847,155	Drachmai 29,233,077	1925-26	Drachmai 7,020,400,868	7,020,400,868

Grand total . . .	9,750,028	8,829,331	Grand total . . .	9,059,955	8,879,710

The total public debt of Greece amounted on August 31, 1927, to 10,158,154,897 drachmai. Of this total 1,777,734,532 drachmai were external debt (in gold), and 8,380,420,365 drachmai (in paper) internal debt (including 160,391,958 drachmai floating debt).

In accordance with the peace preliminaries between Greece and Turkey and the Greek Law of Control of March, 1898, the financial commission of delegates representing France, Great Britain, and Italy (the mediating Powers) is established at Athens in direct relation with the Greek Minister of Finance. The public debt of Greece is in large measure under the control of this commission. To this commission were assigned, for the payment of the interest on the external debt, the revenues (for the most part in Old Greece) from certain Government monopolies, the stamp duty, and the import duties at the port of Piræus. The total income during the two years from these sources was, 1927, 200,293,830 drachmae from monopolies, and 815,754,198 from the Piræus customs. For 1926 the figures were 226,709,435 and 566,730,556 drachmae respectively.

In addition the sum of 707,872,718 drachmai was collected from the new provinces in 1925 for the service of the Refugee Loan of 1924, the sources of revenue being the same as in the above table. The surplus at the disposal of the Greek Government was 863,772,000 drachmai in 1924 and 1,798,804,000 drachmai in 1925.

The payments made by the commission in 1925 for the service of Greek foreign debts totalled 587,361,000 drachmai as compared with 495,650,000 drachmai in 1924. Payments made by the commission for the service of the internal debt amounted to 4,561,000 drachmai in 1925, approximately the same as in each of the preceding years.

The collection of the assigned revenues and the administration of the monopolies is entrusted to a Greek Company, called the "Société de Régie des Revenues affectés au Service de la Dette Publique," which is under the control of the international commission.

Defence.

I. ARMY.

Military service in Greece is compulsory and universal. It commences in the 21st year, and lasts up to the 50th. The normal term of service in the active army is 18 months for all arms, followed by 19 years in the first reserve of the active army and 8 years in the second. The normal annual contingent of recruits is about 35,000.

The country is divided into 12 military areas. To these correspond 11 divisions and 1 brigade, out of which 4 army corps are organised in time of peace. Moreover there are two divisions of cavalry and a number of units (telegraphists, railwaymen and engineers), as well as of Army Service Corps directly under the Minister of War. Each division contains three regiments of infantry (8 battalions) and one regiment of Mountain Artillery (3 or 4 batteries).

The army force during the period of simultaneous service of the two classes is composed of 5,043 officers, 60,396 soldiers and 10,110 animals.

The infantry is armed with the Mannlicher-Schönauer and the Lebel rifle, the polybole guns, Hotchkiss as well as French ones, and the mitrailleuses Schwargloze, St. Etienne and Hotchkiss. The artillery is armed with mountain guns of 65 mm. and Schneider 75 and 105 m. 1919 and by field guns Schneider, M.P.O.F. and Krupp as well as with heavy short guns, Schneider 155.

II. NAVY.

The Greek Navy is not a force of any considerable importance. The principal vessels are as follows:—

—	Launched	Displacement Tons	Armour		Principal Armament	Torpedo Tubes	Horse Power	Max. Speed Knots
			Belt In.	Gun In.
Gio. Averoff.	1910	9,960	8		4 9·2; 8 7·5in.; 14 Sin.	3	19,000	22·5
Kilkis <sup>1</sup>	1905	13,000	9	12	4 12in.; 8 Sin.; 8 7in.	2	10,000	17

The old battleships, Spetsai, Hydra, and Psara, 5,000 tons, have been relegated to harbour training service. There are 11 destroyers, 12 torpedo boats, 4 minelayers, 2 submarines, and a variety of miscellaneous craft. Four new submarines are approaching completion, and the Giorgios Averoff has been completely refitted and modernised.

Preliminary work has been done on the new arsenal intended to take the place of the establishment at Salamis. The cost of the new work was estimated at 2,800,000*l*.

The services of a British naval mission to reorganise the Greek fleet were lent by the Admiralty, 1927.

Production and Industry.

Greece is mainly an agricultural country, and the economic life is directly dependent on the products of the soil. Of the total area only one-fifth is cultivable. The total area (old Greece) is 6,534,530 hectares (16,146,823 acres), made up as follows: 1,391,503 hectares (3,438,403 acres) is cultivated land; 5,055,122 hectares (12,486,151 acres) is covered by mountains; and 87,905 hectares (217,125 acres) occupied by lakes and marshes. Forest area, 1,514,488 hectares (938,982 acres).

By the draining of Lake Copais, an area of about 53,000 acres has been acquired for agricultural purposes. Irrigation and drainage canals, farm roads and buildings are being constructed, tree planting is undertaken, and the breed of cattle is being improved.

The acreage and production of the chief crops for two years were as follows:—

	Area in Acres		Production in Metric Tons
	1924	1925	1924	1925
Wheat . . .	1,166,466	1,162,665	210,227	305,411
Barley . . .	415,316	441,796	93,767	151,240
Maize . . .	503,408	503,759	156,184	172,780
Oats . . .	153,992	252,956	44,701	79,352
Tobacco . . .	203,951	200,922	50,297	60,827
Cotton . . .	40,658	33,876	10,277	10,558
New wine . . .	308,774	281,229	230,136	236,277
Currants . . .	212,779	190,321	185,355	177,777

The estimated production of the principal crops in 1926 was as follows (in metric tons):—cereals, 790,000; wine, 170,000; currants, 150,000; tobacco, 57,000; cotton, 20,000; figs, 15,000.

Olives are abundant, about 865,000 acres are under cultivation; olive oil production in 1926, 63,045 metric tons, valued at 1,640 million drachmai compared with 44,830 metric tons, valued at 896 million drachmai in 1925. The production of edible olives amounted to 42,000 tons in 1926, compared with 33,300 tons in 1925. Rice is cultivated in Greek Macedonia—Vodena, near Salonika, being the principal centre. Two kinds of cheese are produced in Greece—sliced cheese in brine (commercially known as Fetta cheese) and head cheese.

There were in Greece (1925) 200,000 horses, 125,000 mules, 250,000 asses, 550,000 cattle, 6,000,000 sheep, 3,500,000 goats, and 400,000 pigs.

Greece has a great variety of mineral deposits, and there are now in force about 35 mining concessions embracing a total area of nearly 20,000 acres. The ore and other minerals worked include iron, copper, zinc, lead, silver, manganese, aluminium, antimony, tin, nickel, magnesite ore, cobalt, lignite, sulphur ochre, and various other earths. The Laurium district, Thessaly, Eubœa, the Ægean islands and other parts of Greece yield a large output of ores and earths.

The principal mineral output of all Greece for two years is given as follows (in metric tons):—

	1924	1925		1924	1925
	Tons	Tons		Tons	Tons
Iron ore . . .	270,915	269,667	Magnesite . .	58,218	90,828
Iron pyrites . .	7,203	9,616	Salt . . .	75,000	77,714
Lead . . .	23,404	34,887

Lignite production: in 1921, 168,576 tons; in 1922, 132,233 tons; in 1923, 117,927 tons; in 1924, 131,109 tons; in 1925, 142,076 metric tons; in 1926, 145,000 tons.

Navigation and Shipping.

The merchant navy of Greece on June 30, 1927, had 731 sailing vessels of 59,417 tons and 472 steamers of 942,885 tons. In 1926, 31,117 vessels of 18,417,294 tons entered the ports of Greece.

Internal Communications.

There are about 8,611 miles of roads in Old and New Greece, and 570 miles under construction. There is a canal (opened November 9, 1898) across the Isthmus of Corinth (about 4 miles). In 1924, 2,307 steamers of 459,486 tons and 2,068 sailing vessels of 46,833 tons passed through the canal.

Railways open for traffic in 1926 for a length of about 1,940 miles. Principal lines:—State Railway, 833 miles; Piræus-Athens-Peloponnesus railway, 462 miles; the Thessalian Railway, 142 miles; Athens-Piræus railway, 6 miles; Attica Railway, 51 miles; North-Western Railway, 46 miles; Salonica-Gevgheli, 49 miles; Salonica-Monastir, 136 miles; Salonica-Dedeagats, 215 miles. Before the war with Turkey (1912-13) Greece was completely isolated by land from the rest of Europe, but on May 8, 1916, the railway was completed between Gida, on the Salonica-Monastir line, and Papapul, on the Thessalian frontier, a distance of 56 miles, whereby Greece was linked up with the European railroads. The railway system has been extended by the inclusion of the lines in Western Thrace. The Government has also purchased from England for two million francs the Salonika-Angista-Stavros line, 75 miles long, which was built by the British during the war. The lines are State-owned and State-controlled, except the Piræus-Athens-Peloponnesus, Attica, North-Western, and Thessalian Railways. In 1925 there were 217 miles of new lines under construction. The operating revenues of the State railways in 1926 reached 262,055,896 drachmai, and other revenues 1,090,916 drachmai, while operating expenses were 250,055,385 drachmai, the net income for the year being 13,091,427 drachmai.

The telegraph lines on December 31, 1926, had a length of 11,527 miles, with 29,801 miles of wire and 4,015 miles of cable. The number of offices was 2,056. They dispatched 4,926,479 inland telegrams, and 504,896 international.

In 1926 there were 256 miles of urban telephone lines with 3,386 miles of wire, and 3,890 miles of inter-urban lines with 6,781 miles of wire. The number of subscribers was 5,417, and the number of offices 14.

Of post offices there existed at the end of 1926, 1,067, and there passed through the post in that year:—inland post:—letters, 41,784,345; post-cards, 2,207,386; printed matter, journals and samples, 17,031,755; postal orders, 687,507, of a total value of drachmai 402,869,245; parcels, 567,628. Foreign postal service (dispatched):—letters, 12,273,568; post-cards, 1,160,734; printed matter and journals, 2,323,938; postal orders, 32; samples, 222,048; parcels, 15,602. Foreign postal service (received):—letters, 12,017,196; post-cards, 1,211,801; journals and other printed paper, 5,234,657; samples, 618,752; parcels, 119,876; money orders, 1,252, of a total value of drachmai 1,727,878.

Banking and Credit.

The National Bank (founded in 1841) was authorised to issue bank notes, the amount being increased each time the privilege of the bank was extended. The last extension is to December 31, 1950. On March 31, 1927, the total bank-note circulation amounted to 4,972,312,820 drachmai.

Money, Weights and Measures.

Greece entered the Latin Monetary Union in 1868.

The Drachma, of 100 lepta, is equivalent to the French franc (25-225 francs = 1*l.* sterling). 100 new drachmai = 112 old drachmai.

By Royal decree of January 30, 1893, the gold coins of Great Britain, Austria, Germany, Denmark, Russia, Spain, Turkey, Egypt, and the United States are accepted by the Treasury and by private persons as legal tender, one-fourth per cent. being deducted from their nominal value.

In September, 1893, it was announced that it had been decided to introduce the metric system as regards measures of length, weight, and capacity.

In 1922 the metric system was made compulsory. The use of the Gregorian Calendar has been authorised as from March 1, 1923.

The old weights and measures are still met with. The principal are :—

- 1 oke = 400 drams = 2'832 lbs.
- 1 kantar = 44 okes = 124'608 lbs.
- 1 pii = 27 inches.
- 1 stremma = '2471 acres.

GUATEMALA.

(REPÚBLICA DE GUATEMALA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Guatemala, established on March 21, 1847, after having formed part for twenty-six years of the Confederation of Central America, is governed under a Constitution proclaimed December, 1879, and modified October, 1885, November, 1887, October, 1889, and July, 1903. By its terms the legislative power is vested in a National Assembly, consisting of representatives (one for every 20,000 inhabitants) chosen by universal suffrage for four years, and a Council of State of 13 members, partly elected by the National Assembly, partly appointed by the President of the Republic. The executive is vested in a President, elected for six years. On May 27, 1927, the Foreign Ministers of Guatemala, Honduras and Salvador signed a convention binding the three countries to a unified foreign policy in the recognition of governments, declarations of war and other matters; this has been ratified by Salvador.

President of the Republic.—General Lazaro Chacon (December 1926).

The administration is carried on, under the President, by the heads of seven departments—of Foreign Affairs, Government and Justice, Finance and Public Credit, Public Instruction, Public Works, War, and Agriculture.

Area and Population.

Area estimated at 109,724 sq. kilometres, or 42,353 English square miles. In 1903 the population was 1,842,134; and according to the 1920 census it was 2,004,900. About 60 per cent. are pure Indians, most of the remainder being half-caste, there being very few descendants of Europeans. Guatemala is administratively divided into 22 departments.

Capital of the Republic and seat of the government is Guatemala, with 115,928 inhabitants, according to census of 1921, almost all ladinos or descendants of Europeans. Earthquakes from December 25, 1917, to January 24, 1918, almost completely destroyed the city. Other towns are Quezaltenango, 30,125, Coban, 26,774, and Zacapa, 18,094.

Religion and Instruction.

Roman Catholicism is the prevailing religion; but all other creeds have complete liberty of worship. Guatemala has an archbishopric.

In 1926–27 there were 9,909 primary schools with 3,212 teachers, and 48 professional, normal, secondary and special schools. The number of pupils enrolled in the primary schools was 103,859, and the average attendance 80,997. The University of Guatemala, established in 1910, was suppressed, but there survived a School of Law, a School of Medicine and Surgery and a School for Engineering, and finally a decree was issued re-establishing the University as from January 15, 1928. The National Central Institute confers degrees which are recognised in all the Central American Republics. Among the other institutions are a School of Handicraft for Women, a National Conservatoire of Music, a School of Art, and a College of Pharmacy and Natural Sciences. Total expenditure on education in 1926, 1,170,345 quetzales. The national library contains 19,400 volumes.

Justice and Crime.

Justice is administered in a supreme court, 6 appeal courts, and 26 courts of first instance. In all the municipalities there are Justices of Peace.

Finance.

Ordinary revenue and expenditure in currency:—

Principal items of expenditures for 1927-28 as authorized are, in quetzals Interior, 2,004,655; Treasury, including debt service, 2,800,004; War, 1,436,599; Education, 1,682,425; and Agriculture, 1,279,009. Total, all items, 11,031,102 quetzals.

On December 31, 1926, the outstanding amount of the 4 per cent. External Debt of 1895 was 936,700 $\frac{1}{2}$ . Certificates in respect of unpaid interest bring the total up to 1,779,323 $\frac{1}{2}$ . The internal debt on December 31, 1926, amounted to 256,132,756 pesos, and 6,626,574 dollars gold.

Defence.

Military service is compulsory between the ages of 18 and 50. By the Washington Convention of February 7, 1923, between the 5 States of Central America, Guatemala agreed to limit her standing army in time of peace to 5,200 men. The approximate strength of the reserves in 1923 was 40,000.

Military budget 1927, 1,436,600 quetzales.

Production and Industry.

The Cordilleras divide Guatemala into two unequal drainage areas, of which the Atlantic is much the greater. The Pacific slope, though comparatively narrow, is exceptionally well watered and fertile between the altitudes of 1,000 and 5,000 feet, and is the most densely settled part of the Republic. The Atlantic slope is sparsely populated and has little of commercial importance beyond the timber cutting of the Peten, coffee cultivation of Coban region, and banana raising of the Motagua Valley and Lake Izabal district.

The soil in general is exceedingly fertile and agriculture is the most important industry. The principal crop is coffee, of which there are 1,500 plantations under cultivation, covering an area of 162,666 acres in 1923, and containing some 450,000,000 coffee trees; coffee exports in 1926-7, 647,965 bags totalling 93,502,392 lbs. in weight; estimated exports for 1927-8, 89,000,000 lbs. Germans own and control between 30 and 40 per cent. of the coffee plantations of Guatemala. Next to coffee, sugar is the most important crop; the area in 1923 was 26,579 acres; average annual yield is 42,000,000 lbs. of white sugar, and about 100,000,000 lbs. of brown sugar. Other crops are rice, maize, and bananas. Guatemala has almost a monopoly of the chicle gum which is used for chewing in the United States; exports in 1926 were valued at 715,000 dollars. On the high plateaux the area of the cattle-grounds (potreros) is about 758,640 acres.

The forest area has an extent of 1,316,482 acres. The department of Petén is rich in mahogany and dye woods, for which there is a ready market in the United States.

There are silver, gold, copper, iron and lead mines, but owing to the lack of transport, mining is little developed. Chrome was discovered in 1916.

Shipping and Communications.

In 1926, tonnage of vessels entered, 1,723,757 tons (151 ships being British, 107 German, 184 Norwegian and 272 American), and of vessels cleared, 1,703,132 tons. The chief ports on the Atlantic side are Puerto Barrios and Livingston; on the Pacific side, San José and Champerico.

The International Railway of Central America was incorporated in 1912 and represents a consolidation of the Guatemala Railway (198 miles), the Guatemala Central Railway (139 miles), the Occidental Railway (51 miles), and the Ocos Railway (22 miles). Control was purchased by American capital in 1924. The company's main lines at present extend from Puerto Barrios to Guatemala City, a distance of 198 miles, thence to San José de Guatemala, on the Pacific Ocean, a distance of 74 miles. The company receives subsidies from the Governments of Guatemala and Salvador for construction, and controls a railway mileage of 652 miles. The Salvador division of 40 miles is operated separately. The Government of Guatemala may purchase the lines after the year 2002 at a price to be decided by arbitration. The lines located in Salvador may be purchased after June, 1978, by the Government of that country at an arbitrated price. After the year 2006 Salvador will receive the lines without indemnity. In 1914 the International Railways of Central America acquired by purchase a 60-mile railroad extending from Santa María, on the main line between Guatemala City and San José de Guatemala, to Las Cruces. The same year it built an extension from Las Cruces to Ayutla, a distance of 45 miles. Ayutla is on the border of Mexico; Suchiate, in Mexico, being on the other side of the river Suchiate, which forms the boundary between the two countries. It has also projected a line to run from Zacapa to Santa Ana in Salvador. It is stated that when this and other lines in Central America, projected or under construction, are completed, a direct through route will be afforded between Vera Cruz, Mexico, and Panama and Colon, extending along the western portion of Central America through the five Republics of Guatemala, Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica. A Los Altos railway, in Western Guatemala, was commenced in July 1926. All roads are of 3 ft. gauge.

There are many good roads, and many bridges have been recently built. Motor traffic is possible almost everywhere during nine months of the year.

There were in 1925, 362 post-offices, through which passed 28,502,499 letters, &c.; revenue in 1925, 11,261,380 pesos; expenditure, 24,739,046 pesos. In 1925 the national telegraph lines had a length of 4,267 miles, and the telephones 2238 miles. There were 261 telegraph offices and 87 central telephone stations; number of telephones in use, 1992. In 1925, the revenue for the combined telegraph and telephone systems was 11,261,380 pesos; expenditure, 24,739,046 pesos.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The creation of the Central Bank of Guatemala, with an authorised capital of 10,000,000 quetzals and the exclusive right to issue paper money for 10 years, was decreed on June 30, 1926.

Other important banks are: Pacific Bank and Trust Co. (1927), paid-up capital, 1,000,000 dollars; Bank of Guatemala (1895); International Bank of Guatemala (1877); American Bank (1895); Western Bank of Quezaltenango (1881); Agricultural Mortgage Bank.

The unit of currency is the gold quetzal, equal to the United States dollar. Gold coins in circulation, 20, 10, and 5 quetzals; quetzal notes in circulation, 100, 20, 5, 2, and 1. Silver coins are in circulation of the value of 1,  $\frac{1}{2}$ , and  $\frac{1}{4}$  quetzals, and 10 cents and 5 cents. The inconvertible paper currency has been stabilised at the rate of 60 pesos to the quetzal. Notes in circulation (no longer issued) for 500, 100, 50, 25, 20, 5 and 1 pesos, and there are copper-aluminium coins for 5, 1, and  $\frac{1}{2}$  pesos, and for 1 cent.

The Spanish Libra of 16 ounces . . .	= 1.014 lb. avoirdupois.
„ Arroba of 25 libras . . .	= 25.35 lb. „
„ Quintal of 4 arrobas . . .	= 101.40 „
„ Tonelada of 20 quintals . . .	= 18.10 cwt.
„ Fanega . . .	= $1\frac{1}{2}$ imperial bushels.

The metric system has been officially adopted.

HAITI.

(RÉPUBLIQUE D'HAÏTI.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Haiti, formerly a French colony, was proclaimed independent January 1, 1804, and is now governed under a Constitution ratified on June 12, 1918. Pending the creation of a Senate and a Chamber of Deputies, the legislative and executive power are exercised by a Council of State composed of twenty-one members appointed by the President, and holding office during his pleasure. The President is elected by the Council of State for a period of four years.

President of the Republic.—Louis Borno; elected April 10, 1922; assumed office, May 15, 1922. Re-elected April 12, 1926, for a further period of four years.

The administration of the Republic is carried on, under the President, by ten departments supervised by five Secretaries of State. The President receives an annual salary of 24,000 dollars.

In November, 1915, both Houses of the Haitian Congress ratified a treaty with the United States by which the latter agreed to assist in the establishment of responsible, orderly government. The treaty provides for a number of American Advisers to the Haitian Government, appointed by the President of Haiti on the recommendation of the President of the United States; these supervise the constabulary, finances, public health, public works, and agriculture.

Area and Population.

The area of the Republic, which embraces the western portion of the island of Haiti—the larger but less populated eastern division forming the Dominican Republic—is estimated at 10,204 English square miles. The inhabitants were estimated to number 960,000 in 1887; the ecclesiastical estimate, based on parish registers, in 1909 put the number at 2,079,700. On January 1, 1927, the estimated population was 2,800,200, excluding 3,000 white foreign residents and the military forces of the United States. The majority of the population are Negroes; there are also great numbers of Mulatto Haitians, the descendants of the former French settlers. Capital, Porto-au-Prince, with 125,000 inhabitants, situated on a large bay, and possessed of an excellent harbour. Cap Haitien has an estimated population of about 22,000; Cayes and Jacmel about 12,000 each; Gonaives, 10,000; Port de Paix, 5,000. The official language of the country is French, though most of the common people speak a dialect known as Creole French.

Religion and Instruction.

The religion is Roman Catholicism. There is an archbishop with 4 suffragan bishops. The Catholic clergy are French.

Public elementary education is free, the country being divided into 24 inspectors' districts. The sum allotted for public instruction amounts to nearly 1,000,000 dollars annually, chiefly for agricultural education, but the educational system is still very imperfect, especially in rural districts. In 1910 education was made compulsory. In the 6 national lycees in 1925-26 there were 1,042 pupils, in 11 private secondary schools, 3,219 pupils; in 14 national primary schools, under friars, 5,820 pupils; and in 34, under nuns, 7,440 pupils. During 1925-26, 53 private rural primary schools had 4,105 pupils, and 85 private city primary schools 5,517; 417 national rural primary schools, 25,348 pupils; 115 religious national rural primary schools, 5,868 pupils; 240 national urban primary schools, 24,462 pupils.

Justice.

Justice is administered by a Court of Cassation and by lower courts. All the judges are nominated by the President and are irremovable.

Finance.

About 90 per cent. of the revenue of Haiti is derived from customs, paid in American gold on exports and imports. In 1925-26 debt charges absorbed 23.41 per cent. of revenue.

The following table shows the revenue and expenditure for five years (in United States dollars):—

	1921-22	1922-23	1923-24	1924-25	1925-26
Revenue . . . . .	4,992,959	6,890,020	6,580,464	8,097,583	9,072,980
Expenditure . . . . .	7,955,182	8,112,028	6,843,099	7,843,040	8,186,146

In October 1922, the Haitian Government signed a contract with the National City Company and the National City Bank of New York for a thirty-year 6 per cent. bond issue of the nominal value of 16,000,000 dollars, secured by a second charge on the customs and a first charge on the internal revenues. The Haitian Government received 14,755,253 dollars or 92 per cent. of the nominal value. The proceeds of the loan have been used for the conversion of the two external loans in France, the cash settlement of outstanding debts and for public works. A second loan was secured in 1923 for 2,660,000 dollars to meet the default on the government-guaranteed National Railway Bonds. The internal debt comprises a 6 per cent. thirty-year loan, which is due in 1953, and the portion of the fiduciary currency of the government uncovered by reserves. The loan was for 5,000,000 dollars; the outstanding balance of September 30, 1926, was 3,955,015 dollars. The fiduciary currency in excess of reserves amounts to 1,046,465 dollars.

On August 31, 1927, the total debt was 19,941,400 dollars.

Defence.

An armed constabulary (Gendarmerie d'Haïti), both urban and rural, was instituted in 1916. The officers are in part drawn from the United States Marine Corps and Navy. The establishment consists of 183 officers and 2,537 non-commissioned officers and men.

Production.

The industries of Haiti are mainly agricultural, and the most important product is coffee of excellent quality grown by peasants; 78,685,094 lb. were exported in 1926. Cocoa is grown extensively and cotton is exported in increasing quantities (6,581,881 lb. in 1926). The cultivation of tobacco is extending. Sugar is likewise grown, and there are 2 sugar-making establishments. Export in 1926-27, 21,650,200 lb. An extensive sugar central, founded with American capital, has been constructed near Port-au-Prince. Rum and other spirits are distilled but not exported; the rum is of a superior quality. Logwood is an important product (95,808,161 lb. exported in 1926), and other valuable woods are now exported. Cattle breeding is encouraged.

Haiti possesses considerable mineral resources quite undeveloped. Gold, silver, copper, iron, antimony, tin, sulphur, coal, kaolin, nickel, gypsum, limestone and porphyry are found but are little worked.

Commerce.

Imports and Exports for 4 years:—

—	Imports	Exports	—	Imports	Exports
	Dollars	Dollars		Dollars	Dollars
1923-24	14,696,128	14,176,822	1925-26	18,851,400	20,184,000
1924-25	20,237,565	19,403,762	1926-27	15,751,400	15,299,000

In 1925-26 imports of cotton and cotton goods were 4,805,600 dollars, and of iron and steel goods, 958,301 dollars. Exports of coffee in 1925-26 were 16,324,320 dollars (10,361,732 dollars in 1923-24). Exports of sugar were 680,600 dollars.

The value of imports into Haiti from various countries for the year 1925-26 were as follows:—From the United States, 14,030,158 dollars (74.22 per cent.); from Great Britain, 1,369,000 dollars (7.24 per cent.); from France, 1,377,782 dollars (7.27 per cent.); Germany, 873,249 dollars (4.63 per cent.). Of the exports, 1,377,767 dollars went to the United States (6.82 per cent.); 13,186,366 dollars to France (65.32 per cent.); 659,911 dollars to the United Kingdom (3.29 per cent.); 1,060,923 dollars to Belgium (5.25 per cent.); 493,527 dollars to Germany (2.44 per cent.), and 1,613,961 dollars to Denmark (7.09 per cent.).

Total trade between Haiti and the U.K. for 5 years (Board of Trade Returns):—

	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports . . .	184,805	199,401	223,915	201,445	162,455

Shipping and Communications.

In 1925-26 there entered and cleared at the port of Port-au-Prince 408 steam and 27 sailing vessels of 1,001,007 tons. By tonnage and registry they were: American, 598,109 tons; Dutch, 135,683 tons; British, 83,791 tons; French, 75,115 tons; German, 58,156 tons. Several lines of steamers (French, Dutch, and Norwegian) connect the ports of Haiti with New York.

Port-au-Prince is connected with Cap Haitien by a road 169 miles long, and with Mirebalais and Lascahobas by a road 33 miles long. Total length of motor road in 1924 was 646 miles. A light railway has been constructed from Port-au-Prince to Lake Assuéi (28 miles), and to Léogane (22 miles), but the traffic is small. The 'National Railroad of Haiti' runs from Port-au-Prince to Verrettes, distance 85 miles. Port-au-Prince has 5 miles of tramway. The two railroads, the National and the P.C.S. (Compagnie des Chemins de Fer de la Plaine de Cul de Sac) are both American-owned.

The principal towns are connected by the Government telegraph system. A cable runs from the Mole St. Nicholas to Santiago de Cuba and from the Mole to Port-au-Prince, and also to Cap Haitien, whence it runs to Puerto Plata (Santo Domingo) and to New York and South America. The All-America Cables has a cable to Haiti.

There were 95 post offices in 1925. Haiti joined the Postal Union in 1880.

Port-au-Prince has a modern automatic telephone exchange; 1,200 miles of telephone cables connect 46 commercial and 17 local exchanges.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The Banque Nationale de la République d'Haïti, established October 21, 1910, with a capital of 10,000,000 francs (present capital, 2,000,000 dollars), undertakes to render services to the Government in respect of loans and other matters; it has a monopoly of the note issue. In 1916, the National City Bank of New York purchased control over this bank. In 1919 the Royal Bank of Canada established a branch at Port-au-Prince.

The unit of currency is the Gourde which has a fixed value in relation to United States currency, i.e. 1 gourde is equivalent to 20 cents U.S. currency. There were in circulation on September 30, 1926, 12,275,000 gourdes of notes guaranteed by the Banque Nationale and of fiduciary nickel and copper coins. It is also estimated that there are United States notes to the value of 1,600,000 dollars in circulation in the coast towns.

The metric system of weights and measures came into use officially on October 1, 1920, and by a presidential decree of May 9, 1922, was made obligatory in all operations after July 1, 1922.

HONDURAS.

(REPÚBLICA DE HONDURAS.)

Constitution and Government.

On September 15, 1821, the State of Honduras declared its independence of Spain and set up as a Republic which is governed under a charter proclaimed on October 3, 1824. This gives the legislative power to a Congress of Deputies consisting of 43 members, chosen for 4 years directly by popular vote, in the ratio of one per 15,000 inhabitants. It meets for 60 days on January 1 each year. The executive authority rests with a President, nominated and elected by popular vote for 4 years, and holding office from February 1st. The Constitution of the Republic was re-written in 1924, the most important innovation being the appointment of a Permanent Commission of five members who sit whilst Congress is not in session for the transaction of such routine business as usually falls to the latter.

President.—Dr. Miguel Pas Baraona.

The administration of the Republic is carried on by a Council of six ministers, to whom are entrusted the departments of Foreign Relations, Government and Justice, War and Navy, Treasury and Public Credit, Public Works and Agriculture, and Instruction.

Area and Population.

Area about 44,275 English square miles, with a population, on January 1, 1923, of 773,408, according to official figures, or 15·2 inhabitants to the square mile. The inhabitants are chiefly Indians with an admixture of Spanish blood. On the north coast there is a considerable proportion of negroes, chiefly employed by the fruit exporting companies, of whom about 10,000 are British subjects. The Republic is divided into 17 departments and one territory. La Mosquitia is still practically unexplored and is inhabited by native races who speak little or no Spanish. The capital of Honduras is Tegucigalpa, with approximately 40,000 inhabitants. Other towns are Pespire, 7,132; Nacaome, 8,152; La Esperanza, 11,453; Santa Rosa, 10,574; Oholoteca, 8,065; San Pedro Sula, 7,820. The main ports are Amapala on the Pacific, and, on the Atlantic, Puerto Cortez (2,500), Omoa (1,000), La Ceiba, Trujillo, Puerto Castilla, and Tela. The port of entry for the Bay Islands is Roatan. Amapala, on Tiger Island, is 2 hours by gasoline launch from San Lorenzo on the mainland, where an automobile road starts for Tegucigalpa 81½ miles (130 kilometres) distant.

Religion, Instruction, Justice.

Roman Catholicism is the prevailing religion, but the Constitution guarantees freedom to all creeds, and the State does not contribute to the support of any.

Instruction is free, compulsory (from 7 to 15 years of age), and entirely secular. In 1925-6 there were 863 public and 34 private schools, with 28,048 children enrolled. At Tegucigalpa there is a National University (72 students in 1925); also military and aviation schools, and at Comayagua there is a school of jurisprudence. In 1925 the secondary schools had 200 pupils, the normal schools 113, and the commercial schools 257. There is a school for the teaching of agriculture with (1925) 17 pupils.

The Judicial power resides in the Supreme Court with five judges chosen directly by the people for 4 years; four Appeal Courts, and departmental and local judges. In 1923 a Supreme Court was established at San Pedro Sula to serve the Northern Provinces.

Finance.

For the years stated, ending July 31, the revenue and expenditure are given as follows (the silver peso is legally fixed at one-half the value of an American dollar).

On December 31, 1926, the public debt of Honduras was estimated at 2,456,000. made up as follows: external debt: in accordance with agreement of Oct. 29, 1925, between the Government and British bondholders, 452,000; loan floated in the United States, 500,000 dollars. Internal debt, public credit balance of April 30, 1926, 7,553,425 pesos; claims recognised by decrees of the Ministry of War up to Aug. 1, 1926, 4,959,541 pesos; annual interest (3 per cent.) on last two items, 375,389 pesos; due to banks, 2,000,000 pesos; due to private companies, 1,140,000 pesos; obligations incurred in connexion with National Railway, 3,138,000 pesos. Total, 19,166,355 pesos.

By an agreement with the bondholders drafted in 1926, the Government sanctions the levy abroad of a special Consular tax of 3 per cent. upon the value of imports to Honduras; it is expected that the proceeds will be sufficient to permit 30 annual payments of 40,000. to bondholders.

Defence.

Every citizen of Honduras is liable to serve in the army from the age of 21. Service in the active army is for two years, and in the reserves from the age of 23 to 40. Foreigners are exempt from service, naturalised citizens being exempt for 10 years. Under the terms of the Washington Central American Conventions of 1923 the size of the Regular Army is fixed at 2,500 men, including the National Guard. The strength in 1925-26 was 344 officers and 2,253 men. The military budget for 1925-26 was 1,861,500 pesos.

Production and Industry.

The chief culture is that of bananas, on the Atlantic coast, where coconuts are also grown. For the year ended July 31, 1926, there were exported 14,569,201 stems of bananas, of which 1,326,196 stems were sent to England, and the balance to the United States. The coconut groves of Puerto Sal extend from the Ulua River to the Cuero River, a distance of about 60 miles, and are said to contain over 28,000 fruit-bearing trees. The export of coconuts in 1926 was 6,958,000. Coffee of fine quality is grown; 3,339,744 lbs. were exported in 1926; 2,016,000 lbs. in 1927. Tobacco too is grown. The production of sugar is increasing, 40,553,000 lbs. having been exported in 1926.

Honduras is essentially a cattle producing country, but little is done to encourage breeding. A National School of Agriculture was authorised by Congress in 1923.

The mineral resources of Honduras are—gold, silver, copper, lead, zinc, iron, antimony, some of them being found in almost every department. Gold, bar silver, some copper and lead, and various ores are exported. Deposits of brown and other coal have also been found. The production of silver for the year ended Dec. 31, 1926, was 2,457,582 ounces, and of gold 5,912 ounces.

Straw hats and cigars are manufactured for local consumption. A good quality of Panama hat is manufactured in the Departments of Copan and Santa Barbara. There is a large number of small factories of all classes in the Republic, chiefly for the manufacture of shoes, soap and candles, beer, non-alcoholic beverages, cigarettes and ice. There is a flour mill at San Pedro Sula.

Communications.

In general, travelling and transport are accomplished by means of mules and ox-carts. Slow improvements in road-making and repairing continue to be made. There is a fair mail service by automobiles. The two principal roads are the Carretera del Sur from San Lorenzo, on the Pacific Coast, to Tegucigalpa, 84 miles ; and the Carretera del Norte, from Tegucigalpa to Comayagua, and Lake Yojoa, 154 miles. A third road is being built from Lake Yojoa to Signatepeque, and a fourth from Tegucigalpa to Juticalpa.

There is a railway of 66 miles from Puerto Cortez to Potrerillos ; the line, which was taken over by the Government in 1912, has been almost completely overhauled and repaired, and is now in a condition to meet the heavy demands made upon it by the banana crop. The other four railroads are owned and operated by the various fruit companies on the north coast. The Trujillo Railway, which will eventually reach Juticalpa, has about 147 miles completed ; the Tela Railway has about 210 miles completed ; the Cuyamel Fruit Co. Railway (Department of Cortes) has an extension of 162 miles ; and the Vaccaro Brothers' Railway, which is being built towards the town of Yoro, has 201 miles. Total length of line (1924) 934 miles.

In 1924 the country had 868 miles of telephone lines and 4,977 miles of telegraph lines. Number of telephone offices, 714 (1923); number of telegraph offices, 280.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The silver peso or dollar, of 100 cents, weighing 25 grammes, .900 fine, is the monetary unit. The fractional silver money consists of 50, 25, 20, 10, and 5 cent pieces. The real is also in popular use. It is equivalent to 12½ cents. There are 1-cent and 2-cent copper coins. On the north coast the currency is almost entirely American paper money. The value of the silver peso is legally fixed at one-half the value of an American dollar. United States paper currency circulates extensively. A law passed in 1926 authorizes the issue of a new unit, the Lempira, which is ultimately to be sole legal tender; 5 and 10 lempira pieces have been coined and issued.

On May 30, 1922, the Government signed a contract for 25 years with the Banco de Honduras (founded in 1889), whereby the Bank becomes the Bank of the Republic, with a capital of 2,000,000 silver pesos, of which the Government will provide one-fifth. Present and future notes of the Bank will be recognized as currency. The Banco Atlantida (founded in 1913), which belongs mainly to American interests, also operates in the Republic. Its capital is 500,000 gold dollars.

The metric system of weights and measures has been legal since April 1, 1897, but English pounds and yards and the old Spanish system are still in general use :

1 Vara	.	.	.	.	.	= 32 inches.
1 Arroba	.	.	.	.	.	= 25 lb.
1 Quintal	.	.	.	.	.	= 100 lb.
1 Tonelada	.	.	.	.	.	= 2,000 lb.

HUNGARY.

(KINGDOM OF HUNGARY.)

Constitution and Government.

HUNGARY first became an independent kingdom in 1001. On October 31, 1918, a revolution broke out in Hungary with the object of establishing a Republic. On November 13 King Charles issued a letter of abdication, and on November 16, 1918, Hungary was proclaimed an independent Republic (Hungarian People's Republic), of which Count Michael Károlyi became Provisional President. The two Houses of the Legislature were abolished, and their place taken by a Provisional National Council. The Károlyi regime continued until March 22, 1919, when its place was taken by a Soviet Government, which proclaimed the dictatorship of the proletariat. An opposition Government was, however, soon set up at Arad and Szeged, which with the assistance of the Rumanian army swept away the Soviet Government, and on August 7, 1919, a National Government was again in the Capital. Elections were held on the basis of universal suffrage in January and February 1920, and as a result a bloc composed of parties of the Right was returned to power. The new Parliament considered the period of the revolutions of 1918 and 1919 as de jure a blank space of time, and resolved that the old monarchical constitution should be continued. Hungary was thus considered a monarchy with a vacant throne, the functions of the monarch being exercised by a Regent. It has been decided that the dynastic question shall be solved at such time as the people are freed from external pressure.

Regent.—Nicholas Horthy de Nagybánya. (Elected March 1, 1920.)

The Legislature consists of two houses; the character of the Upper House was represented by a Bill passed on November 11, 1926. According to this the House consists of 6 groups—(1) elected representatives of the former hereditary members, about 38; (2) members elected by the County Councils and municipalities, about 50 members; (3) heads of the various religious communities, about 31 members; (4) high dignitaries—such as judges, the commander-in-chief of the army, the chairman of the National Bank; (5) representatives of scientific institutions, the Chambers of Commerce, about 40 members; and (6) life members appointed by the head of the State.

The Lower House consists of 245 members. At the elections held on December 20, 1926, the following parties were elected:—Party of National Unity (Bethlen Party), 171; Christian Social Union, 35; Socialists, 14; other parties, 25; total 245.

The Ministry originally formed on June 17, 1922, was reorganised on October 15, 1926 as follows:—

Prime Minister.—Count Stephen Bethlen.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Dr. Louis Walko.

Minister of the Interior.—Dr. Béla Scitovszky.

Minister of Finance.—Dr. John Bud.

Minister of Agriculture.—John Mayer.

Minister of Commerce.—Maximilian Hermann.

Minister of Public Instruction.—Dr. Count Kuno Klebelsberg.

Minister of Justice.—Dr. Paul Pesthy.

Minister of National Defence.—Count Charles Csáky.

Minister of Social Welfare.—Dr. Joseph Vass.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

In Hungary a distinction is observed between communes which are large or small, or may be townships with regular magistrates, and municipalities (counties or towns), which are regarded as communes of a higher order. In the communes the electoral right is possessed by every male inhabitant over twenty years of age who for two years has paid the State tax. The representative body is composed half of members elected for six years, and half of persons who pay the highest taxes. The committee consists of members appointed, in the towns for six years, in the rural communes for three years, with officials appointed for life. The counties, and cities invested with similar rights, are independent municipalities. Each has its council constituted similarly to the representative body of the communes; and the members are elected also for six years. All electors for the Parliament are qualified to vote. The executive is in the hands of the officials of the municipality, who sit and vote with the council.

Area and Population.

The Treaty of Trianon, signed on June 4, 1920, and ratified by Hungary on November 13, 1920, mentions in general terms the boundaries of the new State with Austria, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania. The exact boundaries with Yugoslavia and Rumania are to be determined by a mixed commission. As a result of negotiations with Austria and of the consequent plebescite, Hungary has obtained Sopron (Oedenburg) in Western Hungary.

The population of Hungary according to the census of December 31, 1920, is 7,980,143, and its area 35,875 square miles. (These figures are exclusive of the area of 36 square miles with a population of 7,000, obtained after the census.) Of the total population were 3,870,904 males and 4,109,239 females.

The following is the division of the total population according to language as estimated on December 31, 1926: Hungarian (Magyar), 7,589,239 (89·8 per cent.); German, 577,720 (6·8 per cent.); Slovak, 147,494 (1·7 per cent.); Rumanian, 25,089 (0·3 per cent.); Ruthenian, 1,534; Croatian, 38,340 (0·5 per cent.); Serbian, 16,942 (0·2 per cent.); others, 61,494.

Estimated population on December 31, 1926, 8,457,852.

Religion.

Religious toleration is one of the fundamental principles of the Hungarian State. There is perfect equality among all legally recognised religions, which include the Roman and Greek Catholic, the Evangelical (Augsburg and Helvetian), the Unitarian, the Greek Oriental, the Gregorian-Armenian, the Baptist (since 1905), the Jewish, and the Mohammedan (since 1916). Each has the independent administration of its own affairs.

In 1926, the population according to religion was estimated as follows : Roman Catholics, 5,435,743 (64·3 per cent.) ; Greek Catholics, 195,677 (2·3 per cent.) ; Helvetian Evangelicals, 1,753,118 (20·8 per cent.) ; Augsburg Evangelicals, 522,350 (6·2 per cent.) ; Greek-Orientals, 52,823 (0·6 per cent.) ; Unitarians, 6,311 (0·1 per cent.) ; Jews, 477,431 (5·6 per cent.) ; others, 9,399.

Instruction.

Public education in Hungary comprises the following grades:—(1) Infant schools ; (2) elementary schools ; (3) industrial and commercial apprentice schools ; (4) primary (city) schools ; (5) training colleges for teachers ; (6) middle or secondary schools ; (7) special schools ; (8) universities and colleges.

School attendance is compulsory for children of six to twelve years at day schools, and then for three years in continuation schools. There were in the school year 1925-26 altogether 1,021 infants' schools and permanent foster-homes with 1,369 female teachers and 113,892 infants, and 3 training colleges for female teachers of infant schools.

In 1920, 15·4 per cent. of the population over 6 years of age was illiterate (33·3 per cent. in 1910 on the territory of pre-war Hungary).

In Hungary there were in the school-year 1925-26, 6,438 elementary schools with 656,349 pupils and 16,705 teachers. There were also 4,528 general and 1,092 agricultural continuation schools (or courses). There were 400 apprentice schools, 366 for industrial and 34 for commercial apprentices. The number of industrial apprentices was 69,981 and of commercial apprentices 4,340. There were 19 training colleges for elementary schools for males and 24 for females, with 590 teachers and 4,901 students. The number of primary schools was for boys 163, for girls 212, with 87,161 pupils and 3,892 teachers. The number of training colleges for primary schools was 6 (2 State and 4 denominational).

In the middle schools the curriculum extends over eight years. They are maintained by the State, by the larger communes, or (in the case of the denominational schools) by ecclesiastical foundations, with sometimes a subvention from the State. There were in 1925-1926, 28 gymnasia, 70 realgymnasia, 22 modern schools, and 32 girls' secondary schools. Total number of teachers, 2,959, pupils, 61,757 (50,073 boys and 11,684 girls).

Of the special schools, 36 are agricultural, 34 industrial and 49 commercial, with 26 others. Of the commercial schools, 33 were for boys and 16 for girls; total number of pupils, 10,204. The other special schools had 8,678 pupils.

Hungary has four universities and (since 1919) an independent Faculty of Economics at Budapest (42 professors, 1,084 students in 1926-27), all maintained by the State. In 1926-27 the University of Budapest had 373 professors and 5,393 students; the University of Szeged, 80 professors and 1,135 students; the University of Pécs 68 professors and 1,005 students, and of Debreczen 57 professors and 952 students—the last two having been founded in 1912. Total number of students at the Universities, 1926-27, 9,569. There are also 17 theological colleges, viz., 13 Roman Catholic, 3 Protestant, and 1 Jewish, with a total of 93 professors and 674 students; and 3 law schools with 29 professors and 1,048 students; and the veterinary school with 25 professors and 261 students. The technical high school (polytechnicum) in Budapest has 118 professors and 1,803 students (1926-27); the high school of mining and forestry of Sopron 26 professors and 161 students; and 3 agricultural colleges have 38 professors and 632 students.

Justice and Crime.

The Supreme Court in Budapest is the highest instance in all civil and criminal matters. As courts of first instance, there are county courts (törvényszékek) with collegiate judgeships; district courts (járásbíróságok) with single judges; and jury courts, (sajtóbíróságok) for press offences, besides an army special court.

Pauperism.

In Hungary poor relief is in the main left to communal administration. In the smaller communes orphans and the indigent are cared for by official guardians and overseers, while in the larger there are poor-houses, the funds being mostly derived from fines and taxes. The number of asylums for paupers and orphans is about 800. The Church and charitable societies also render assistance, and several millions of crowns are annually bestowed in legacies and gifts towards benevolent purposes.

The public debt of Hungary on December 31, 1925, was given at 1,599,389 million gold crowns, of which 858,322 million gold crowns were pre-war debt.

Defence.

According to the Treaty of Trianon, Hungary is authorised to maintain an army of 35,000 officers, non-commissioned officers and men. The Treaty laid down that conscription was to be abolished, and consequently recruiting on a voluntary basis has been substituted. All recruits have to undertake to serve in the Army for a minimum period of 12 consecutive years, at least 6 of which are to be with the colours. Officers now serving will continue to do so until they attain the age of 40 years at least. Officers newly appointed must undertake to serve on the active list for a minimum of 20 consecutive years. No reserves or measures for mobilisation are permitted.

Hungary is divided into the following seven military districts:—Budapest, Székesfehérvár, Szombathely, Pécs, Szeged, Debrecen, and Miskolcz. To each of these districts is allotted a mixed brigade each composed of 1 brigade staff, 1 cavalry squadron, 2 infantry regiments, 1 trench mortar company, 1 field artillery group, 1 cyclist battalion. In addition to the 7 mixed brigades there are the following troops: 4 hussar regiments, 1 field artillery group, and 3 pioneer battalions. Strength in November, 1927, 1,478 officers and 34,708 men.

Hungary has a force of 12,000 gendarmerie and of 12,000 police, as well as 5,750 customs guards, and 1,500 river guards. The members of this force are under the obligation to serve for a minimum of 6 consecutive years. The authorised armament is as follows:—Gendarmerie: 1 rifle or 1 carbine per man; Police: 1 sword or revolver per man (automatic pistols for 5 per cent. of the establishment, i.e. 600); Customs Guards: 1 rifle per man.

A force of 3,000 finance guards is also maintained. These are armed with revolvers.

Hungary has no navy or air force, but only four patrol vessels for police duty on the Danube.

Production and Industry.

The cultivation of the soil is the chief industry of Hungary. The soil is noted for its fertility and the variety of its products. The area and production of crops in Hungary in 1924-25 and 1925-26 was as follows:—

Crop	1924-25		1925-26
	Area	Yield	Area	Yield
	Acres	Quintals	Acres	Quintals

Estimated yield for 1927: wheat 20,639,315, rye 5,732,785, barley 5,076,992, oats 3,152,292, maize 17,602,402, potatoes 18,072,151, sugar beet 12,840,849 metric tons.

In Hungary there were, in 1927, 903,326 horses, 1,805,438 cattle, 1,610,716 sheep, and 2,386,664 pigs.

The total area under forest in Hungary (1925) was 2,695,418 acres.

The production of coal in Hungary was in 1900, 6,575,000 tons; in 1910, 9,036,000 tons; in 1923, 7,709,051 tons; in 1924, 7,169,057 tons; in 1925, 5,742,293 tons; and in 1926, 6,156,987 tons. The best quality coal is found in the Mecsek Mountain, in the district of Pécs. Bituminous coal is found at Ajk. Hungary has a considerable number of brown-coal and lignite mines, and her bauxite deposits may be counted among the largest in the world.

Hungary retains important fishery preserves in the Danube and Theiss rivers and in lake Balaton. The latter, situated in the west, is the largest lake in central Europe, being 50 miles long and from 2 to 7 miles broad. Its waters contain plentiful supplies of perch, carp, pike, sheatfish, shad and other fish. The north shore of Lake Balaton is an important wine-producing district. The best known Hungarian wines come from the hilly country, "Tokaj," in the northeast section of Hungary.

The industries of Hungary are based on agriculture. They include milling, distilling, the manufacture of sugar (1,778,000 metric quintals of raw sugar in 1926), hemp and flax, and also iron and steel works (187,812 metric tons of pig-iron and 324,679 metric tons of steel in 1926. In 1926 there were in Hungary 3,012 factories, employing on an average 201,400 workmen, with an output valued at 1,820 million gold crowns.

Internal Communications.

In 1926 there were 2,282 miles of state roads, 9,282 miles of municipal roads and 5,320 miles of inferior roads, total, 16,884 miles of road.

There are two railway systems in Hungary, the M. A. V. (Royal Hungarian State Railways), which is owned and operated by the Government, and the Danube-Save-Adriatic Railway Co., a private corporation. The former is by far the more important, owning about 92 per cent. of the country's total mileage. The length of railways in Hungary on December 31, 1926, was 8,566 kilometres, or 5,324 miles, of which 1,899 are owned by the State. Of the total 984 kilometres or 612 miles are double track. There are four air line over which 1,954 flights were made in 1926 with 2,718 passengers.

Number of Hungarian post-offices (not including collecting places and railway post) (1926), 2,274. On December 31, 1926, the length of telegraph lines was 5,677 miles; of telegraph wires, 51,480 miles; of telephone lines, 12,156 miles; and of wire, 258,557 miles. The postal and telegraphic services are in the hands of the Government.

The total number of telegrams sent in 1926 was 3,618,300 (3,462,500 in 1925), and of telephone calls, 3,912,400 (3,769,400 in 1925).

Money and Credit.

By a law of November 4, 1925, a new monetary unit, the 'pengő' (= 12,500 paper crowns), subdivided into 100 fillér, was instituted, and came into use on December 27, 1926. Up to January 31, 1927, new pengő coins were issued to the value of 24,752,105 pengős, the old paper crown notes being withdrawn from actual circulation in the same proportion.

The amount of the bank notes in circulation, issued by the National Bank of Hungary, was 477,334,377.58 pengő on September 30, 1927.

The metric system of weights and measures is in use.

IRAQ (MESOPOTAMIA).

IRAQ was freed from the Turks during the Great War. It was recognised as an independent State, to be placed under a Mandatory Power, and the mandate was allotted to Great Britain. On December 14, 1927, a treaty was signed between Great Britain and Iraq (ratified in 1928), by which the former undertook to recognise the latter as an independent State.

King.—Faisal (Hon. G.C.M.G.), third son of the King of the Hijaz.

Government.—In 1920 a Council of State was formed, as a provisional measure, to conduct the administration of the country. On August 23, 1921, the High Commissioner proclaimed the Emir Faisal King of Iraq, by election of the people, as the result of a plebiscite in which 96 per cent. of the inhabitants of the country voted in his favour.

The Cabinet, formed in January, 1928, is as follows:—

Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs: Abdul Mohsen Es Saadun, K. C. M. G.

Minister of Interior: Abdul Aziz Qassab.

Minister of Defence: General Nuri Pasha Said, C. M. G.

Minister of Finance: Yusuf Ghanima.

Minister of Justice: Hikmet Suleiman.

Minister of Works: Mohsen Shalash.

Minister of Education: Tawfik Swaidi.

Minister of Auzaf: Sheikh Ahmed Daud.

Minister of Irrigation and Agriculture: Sulman Barrak.

On October 11, 1922, the British Government entered into treaty relations with the Government of Iraq. The treaty was to remain in force for 20 years, but under a protocol of April 30, 1923, it was agreed that the treaty should terminate upon Iraq becoming a member of the League of Nations, and in any case not later than four years from the ratification of peace with Turkey (i.e. in 1928 at the latest). The British Government undertook to secure a speedy delimitation of the frontiers of Iraq. The frontier between Iraq and Turkey was finally fixed in 1926 in accordance with a decision of the League of Nations taken in Dec. 1925. To give effect to that decision, a new treaty was made between Gt. Britain and Iraq on Jan. 13, 1926, whereby the Treaty of 1922 remains in force for 25 years from Dec. 1925, or until Iraq shall be admitted as a member of the League of Nations. To secure the admission of Iraq to the League, the British Government will use its good offices. In all important matters affecting the international and financial obligations and interests of the British Government, the King of Iraq agrees to be guided by the advice of the British High Commissioner. The Organic Law passed by the Constituent Assembly in June, 1924, provides for a limited monarchy and a responsible government. The legislative body consists of a Senate of 20 nominated 'elder statesmen,' and the Lower House of 88 elected deputies.

In March, 1924, the elective Constituent Assembly met for the purpose of ratifying the Anglo-Iraq treaty, passing the Organic Law and the Electoral Law for the election of a subsequent parliament. It completed these duties early in August, and was then dissolved. The first Parliament under the Constitution was opened by King Faisal on July 16, 1925.

The country is now divided into the following Liwas: Mosul, Arbil, Kirkuk, Sulaimani, Diyala, Baghdad, Dulaim, Kut, Karbala, Hillah, Diwaniyah, Nashiyah, 'Amarah, Basrah. Each Liwa is administered by a Mutasarrif, and is sub-divided into Qadhas (under Qaimmaqams) and Nahiyahs (under Mudirs).

Area and Population.—The country has an area of 143,250 square miles (the former Turkish vilayets respectively of Baghdad, 54,540 square miles, Basrah, 53,580 square miles, and Mosul, 35,130 square miles), and a population, according to the census of 1920, of 2,849,282. The following are the detailed figures of the census results:—

Instruction.—The medium of instruction in the schools has been changed from Turkish to Arabic in the Arabic-speaking provinces, and to Kurdish in Kurdish-speaking areas; Turkish remains in a few Turcoman towns (Tuzkhurmatu, Kirkuk, Kifri). The standard of education is being steadily raised and public interest is increasing. In 1926 there were 22,607 pupils (boys and girls) in 247 government schools, with 877 teachers, and (1925) 12,900 pupils (boys and girls) in 45 private schools. Fifty new schools have been built since 1918 (15 at government expense and 35 by local subscriptions). There are secondary schools at Baghdad and Mosul with 577 pupils, and six intermediate schools at other places with 87 pupils. There are four technical schools, a law school, an irrigation and survey school, a military college and a theological college for both sects. There are one men's training college for primary teachers with 307 students and one for secondary teachers, two women's training centres and one night secondary school. There are 80 evening classes for illiterates (male and female) at various centres in the country. In April, 1922, the King laid the foundation stone of the future Al ul Bait University, and the first block was opened on March 15, 1926. The education budget for the year 1926-27 amounted to 25,24,000 rupees.

Justice.—Civil Courts are established throughout the country as follows:—A Court of Cassation at Baghdad with a British President and 5 Iraq Judges; 16 Courts of First Instance; 12 Courts of First Instance with limited jurisdiction; 23 Peace Courts. In addition Shar'a Courts are established at every place where there is a Civil Court of First Instance or a Peace Court. In 1926, the Courts of First Instance dealt with 2,731 cases and the Peace Courts with 42,566 cases.

Wherever a Civil Court is established there is also a Criminal Court, every judge having either first or second class magisterial powers. Certain administrative officials of outlying places where no courts have been formed have also magisterial powers. In 1926, there were 25,620 cases of crime reported, of which 13,930 ended in conviction. The number of prisoners in gaols at the end of 1926 was 2,628.

Finance.—Civil receipts and expenditure:—

Defence.—Besides British Imperial Forces, which passed on October 1, 1922 under the control of the Air Ministry, local forces consist of the Iraq Army, which is in process of formation, and a Levy Force under British officers, financed by the Imperial Exchequer. The establishment of the Iraq Army at the close of 1926 was as follows:—3 cavalry regiments and 1 cavalry dépôt; 1 field battery and 3 pack batteries; 6 infantry battalions, 3 infantry dépôts, and 1 special frontier company; 8 transport companies; the Iraq Army medical corps; remounts and veterinary department; ordnance department; military police corps; wireless section; royal military college; the King's bodyguard.

Production.—Iraq is a land of great potentialities. The soil of the country is rich, but there are vast areas which can only be cultivated if irrigated by canals or pumps. The amount of land under cultivation by pump irrigation is steadily increasing. The problem of economic cultivation with pump irrigation is closely connected with the question of cheap oil. The natural oil resources of Iraq are being surveyed; rich deposits are believed to exist. A concession for the exploitation of the oil in the Baghdad and Mosul vilayets was granted to the Turkish Petroleum Co. in March, 1925, and the Anglo-Persian Oil Co. have concession rights on the Persian frontiers near Khaniqin. Drilling continues in this area, and one well has reached the oil bearing strata and is now producing. A refinery on the Alwand river, about 5 miles from Khanaqin, was begun in June 1926. The British Cotton Growing Association is encouraging cotton cultivation by offering a secure market to cultivators, and the Department of Agriculture co-operates by undertaking scientific experiments and seed culture. In 1926, deliveries to the ginnery were estimated at 3,000 bales, compared with 2,540 in 1925. Other crops cultivated are wheat, barley, oats, linseed and flax, though mostly in the experimental stage. Date crop is important.

Commerce.—Imports and exports for four years were as follows:—

	1922-23	1923-24	1924-25	1925-26
	Rupees	Rupees	Rupees	Rupees
Imports . . . . .	16,73,49,736	18,14,84,118	19,12,40,989	10,70,40,626
Exports . . . . .	9,91,08,940	13,57,91,335	14,20,08,617	5,02,93,733

Customs gross revenue in 1925-26, 2,22,32,805 rupees; in 1924-25, 2,12,29,485 rupees. Transit trade 1925-26, 7,06,34,192 rupees.

The export of barley was in 1925, 1,176 tons, and in 1924, 45,243 tons; of wheat, 1925, 1,316 tons, 1924, 10,305 tons; of wool, 1925, 14,899 tons, 1924, 15,855 tons; and of dates, 1925, 151,310 tons, 1924, 136,611 tons.

The total trade between Iraq and United Kingdom, according to the Board of Trade Returns, was as follows for three years:—

	1925	1926	1927
Imports from Iraq . . .	1,653,873	852,267	1,707,894
Exports to Iraq . . .	4,371,081	2,829,955	3,679,702

Communications.—The Iraq railway system now consists of a metre gauge line from the Port of Basrah, which is the Port of Iraq situated on the Shatt-El-Arab at the head of the Persian Gulf, to Baghdad, a distance of 350 miles. There are further a metre gauge line, connected with the Basrah line by a wagon ferry across the River Tigris at Baghdad, from Baghdad to Khanaquin (109 miles) which is an important town near the Irak-Persian Frontier; a branch metre gauge line from the Baghdad-Khanaquin line to Kirkuk (109 miles), which is to be extended to Mosul; a standard gauge (4 ft. 8½ in.) line from Baghdad to Shergat (136 miles) along the right bank of the Tigris towards Mosul. From Shergat to Mosul is 80 miles by road. The main Basrah-Baghdad line passes the ancient cities of Ur of the Chaldees, Babylon and Kish, and special railway facilities exist to enable travellers to visit these cities. Goods are carried direct from Basrah Port to Khanaquin on the Irak-Persian Frontier, whence they are transported by road to the markets of Persia. The total route mileage open on March 31, 1926 was 810·73 miles. There were also 194·45 miles of siding, making a total of 1,005·18 miles. Railway earnings for the year 1925-26 were 94,99,995 rupees, and expenses 89,20,974 rupees.

Before the War, road communications within Iraq were very poor. Only certain stretches of roads were passable for the only type of wheeled traffic then in use, viz. country carts and arabanas. Since the War, however, several thousand miles of roads, chiefly earthen, have been constructed for the passage of all classes of traffic. It is now possible to visit all large towns and practically every small town by motor car, the numbers of which have increased from a few before the War to about five thousand at the present date.

There were 81 Post Offices in 1926. Mail communication is maintained in Iraq over a distance of 3,770 miles. Of this distance over 808 miles is by railways, 2,012 miles by mechanical transport, 333 miles by river, 554 miles by pack animals and runner service, and 13 miles by tram.

After December 31, 1926, the Cairo-Baghdad fortnightly Air Mail Service was taken over by Imperial Airways, Limited, and extended to Basrah. In the middle of April, 1927, it was increased to a weekly service in both directions.

The weekly Overland Mail Service, Baghdad-Haifah, was extended for conveyance of packets and parcels, in addition to the existing Letter Service. The transit to Europe is 8 days by air and 10 by overland.

During the year 1926 the following articles were dealt with:—Letters, 4,025,500 received and 4,294,000 dispatched; packets, 1,421,600 received and 1,034,600 dispatched; registered letters, 180,907 received and 149,822 dispatched; parcels, 61,550 received and 16,999 dispatched; money orders, 30218, of an aggregate value of 17 lakhs of rupees, received and 52,863, of an aggregate of 31·5 lakhs of rupees, dispatched.

The following new services were introduced:—Foreign telegraphic money orders, cash on delivery, heavy parcel service, insurance, and sale of British postal orders.

On December 31, 1926, the Line and Wire mileage of the Telegraph System in the country was 3,287 and 18,748 miles respectively. The number of Post and Telegraph Offices open for paid public traffic was 65, excluding 62 Railway Telegraph Offices which also accept this class of traffic, and 4 departmental telegraphic offices. The total number of telegrams of all classes transmitted during 1926 was 263 927, as compared with 305,544 in 1925. Inland telegrams numbered 202,057 (230,704 in 1925), and paid foreign telegrams 53,428 (67,700 in 1925). On December 31, 1926, there were six Departmental Telephone Exchanges, with 723 connexions (including 103 internal and external extensions) and 36 non-exchange connexions of varying distances. An up-to-date Strowger Automatic Telephone System was brought into use at Basrah with effect from 17th June, 1923.

The new Wireless Station of the latest Thermionic 3 K.W. valve type transmitter at Basrah was brought into operation on 25th January, 1923. The Station is in regular communication with Cairo and Beyrouth Wireless Station and accepts commercial traffic for the U.K., Germany, France, Italy, Palestine, Egypt, Syria and America. A new Wireless Station was established at Rutba, on the western desert frontier, on September 11, 1926. This Station is in direct communication with the Wireless Station at Basrah, the R.A.F. Stations at Baghdad, Amman and Gaza.

Currency.—The rupee currency now in use will shortly be displaced by a new national Iraq currency and note issue.

The standard unit of the new currency will be the gold dinar, equivalent in value to the half of £1 sterling. The issue will be made by a Currency Board established by Act of the Iraqi Parliament. To prevent any over-issue of the new notes and their consequent depreciation they will be issued only in exchange for rupees withdrawn from circulation, and with the money so withdrawn the necessary purchases of sterling will be made.

ITALY.

(REGNO D'ITALIA.)

Reigning King.

Vittorio Emanuele III., born November 11, 1869, the only son of King Umberto I. of Italy and of Queen Margherita; succeeded to the throne on the death of his father, July 29, 1900; married October 24, 1896, to Elena, born January 8, 1873, daughter of Nicholas, King of Montenegro; offspring, Princess Jolanda, born June 1, 1901, married on April 9, 1923, to Count Calvi di Bergolo; has one daughter, born in 1924 and one son born in 1927; Princess Mafalda, born November 19, 1902, married to Prince Philip of Hesse; has two sons, born in 1926 and in 1927 (October 30) respectively; Prince Umberto Nicola Tommaso Giovanni Maria, Prince of Piedmont and Heir Apparent, born Sept. 15, 1904; Princess Giovanna, born November 13, 1907; Princess Maria, born December 26, 1914.

Uncle of the King.

Prince Tomaso Alberto Vittorio, of Savoy, Duke of Genoa, born February 6, 1854.

Cousins of the King.

Prince Emanuele Filiberto, of Savoy, Duke of Aosta, born January 13, 1869, married, June 25, 1895, to Princess Elena, d'Orleans, daughter of the late Comte de Paris; offspring, Prince Amedeo Umberto, Duke of Apulia, born October 21, 1898, married November 5, 1927, to Anna Princess of France, daughter of the Duke of Guise; and Prince Aimone, Duke of Spoleto, born March 9, 1900; Prince Vittorio Emanuele, of Savoy-Aosta, Count of Turin, born November 24, 1870; Prince Luigi Amedeo, of Savoy-Aosta, Duke of the Abruzzi, born January 29, 1873—children of the late Prince Amedeo of Savoy, Duke of Aosta, from his union with Maria Vittoria, Princess of Pozzo della Cisterna, who died November 8, 1876.

Most genealogists trace the origin of the reigning house to a German Count Berthold, who, in the eleventh century, established himself on the western slope of the Alps, between Mont Blanc and Lake Lemman. In the end of the eleventh century the Count of Savoy acquired the countries of Turin and Susa. Count Amadeus, in 1388, founded a law of primogeniture which led to the immediate acquisition of the territory of Nice. In 1416 the Counts of Savoy adopted the title of Duke; in 1418 they acquired the Principality of Piedmont; and in 1713 they obtained the island of Sicily, with the title of King. Sicily had to be exchanged, in 1720, for the isle of Sardinia, to which henceforth the royal dignity remained attached. The Genoese territory was added at the peace of 1815. The direct male line of the House of Savoy died out with King Carlo Felice in 1831, and the crown fell to Prince Carlo Alberto, of the house of Savoy-Carignano, a branch founded by Tommaso Francesco, born in 1596, younger son of Duke Carlo Emanuele I. of Savoy. King Carlo Alberto abdicated the throne March 23, 1849, in favour of his son, the late King Vittorio Emanuele II., who, by the Peace of Zürich, November 10, 1859, obtained Lombardy, with the exception of Mantua and a part of the surrounding territory. On March 11, 1860, annexation to Sardinia was voted by plébiscites in Parma, Modena, the Romagna, and Tuscany; on October 21, Sicily and Naples (including Benevento and Pontecorvo, part of the Papal States), and on November 4, the Marches and Umbria. The first Italian Parliament assembled in February 1861, and declared (March 17, 1861) Vittorio Emanuele King of Italy. The remaining part of the province of Mantua and Venetia were added in 1866. Finally, the remaining part of the Papal States (province of Rome), having been taken possession of by an Italian army (September 20, 1870), after the withdrawal of the French garrison, was annexed to the Kingdom by plébiscite on October 2; and after the Great War, large portions of Austria.

The civil list has been settled (1919) at 11,250,000 lire; by a law of 1925 an allowance of 2,000,000 lire was settled on the Prince of Piedmont, Heir Apparent; Duke of Aosta, receives an allowance of 1,000,000 lire; Duke of Apulia an allowance of 400,000 lire; and Prince Tomaso, Duke of Genoa, an allowance of 1,000,000 lire.

The greater part of the private domains of the reigning family has been given up to the State.

Constitution and Government.

The present Constitution of Italy is an expansion of the 'Statuto fondamentale del Regno,' granted on March 4, 1848, by King Charles Albert to his Sardinian subjects. According to this charter, the executive power of the State belongs exclusively to the Sovereign, and is exercised by him through responsible ministers; while the legislative authority rests conjointly in the King and Parliament, the latter consisting of two Chambers—an upper one, the Senate, and a lower one, called the 'Camera de' Deputati.' The Senate is composed of the princes of the royal house who are twenty-one years of age (with the right to vote when twenty-five years of age), and of an unlimited number of members, above forty years old, who are nominated by the King for life; a condition of the nomination being that the person should either fill a high office, or have acquired fame in science, literature, or any other pursuit tending to the benefit of the nation, or, finally, should pay taxes to the annual amount of 3,000 lire, or 120*l*. On January 1, 1927, there were 373 senators and 10 members of the royal family. The electoral law of January 1926, made the suffrage universal for men 21 years of age. In 1927 the number of enrolled electors was 12,424,183 (30·7 per 100 inhabitants without distinction of sex or age) inclusive of the electors temporarily disfranchised on account of military service. The number of deputies is 560. A deputy must be twenty-five years old, and have the requisites demanded by the electoral law. Incapable of being elected are all salaried Government officials, and persons receiving pay from the State. General and field officers in the army and navy, ministers, under-secretaries of State, and various other classes of functionaries high in office may be elected. All deputies receive 15,000 lire annually, and all deputies and senators travel gratis on the railways and on some steamship lines.

The duration of a Parliament is five years, and it must meet annually; but the King has the power to dissolve the lower House at any time, being bound only to order new elections, and convoke a new meeting within four months. Each of the Chambers has the right of introducing new bills, the same as the Government; but all money bills must originate in the House of Deputies. The ministers have the right to attend the debates of both the upper and the lower House; but they have no vote unless they are members. No sitting is valid unless an absolute majority of the members are present.

The executive power is exercised, under the King, by a Cabinet. The present Cabinet is as follows:—

Head of the Government, Prime Minister, Secretary of State and Minister of Foreign Affairs, Minister of the Interior, Minister of War, Minister of Marine, Minister of Aeronautics, and Minister of Corporations.—Signor Benito Mussolini.

Minister for the Colonies.—Signor Luigi Federzoni.

Minister of Justice.—Signor Alfredo Rocco.

Minister of Finance.—Senator Count Giuseppe Volpi.

Minister of Public Instruction.—Signor Pietro Fedele.

Minister of Public Works.—Signor Giovanni Giuriati.

Minister of National Economy.—Signor Giuseppe Belluzzo.

Minister of Communications.—Signor Costanzo Ciano.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

On March 31, 1927, there were 9,067 communes. At the head of the communal organisation is a Podestà in all the communes with the exception of Rome, which has a Governor, and the city of Naples, which has an extraordinary Royal Commissioner. The Podestà is nominated for five years by royal decree. In communes which are the capitals of provinces and have more than 20,000 inhabitants, he may be assisted by one or two deputies (Vice-Podestà). Side by side with the Podestà, the Prefect of the province may nominate, also for five years, a Municipal Council drawn from persons designated by the local syndical associations. In communes which are the capitals of provinces or with a population of more than 20,000, the nomination of such a Council is obligatory. The Council has only advisory functions; its advice may be sought on the budget, the imposition of taxes, etc.

Each province has a provincial council and a provincial commission, the number of the members varying according to population. The council elects its president and other officials. The provincial commission is elected by the council from its own members. It conducts the business of the province when the latter is not sitting.

As a result of the Treaty of St. Germain there has been a considerable rearrangement of the Italo-Austrian frontier, and Italy has obtained large tracts of what were formerly Austrian lands.

In 1927, the number of Italian departments was increased by 16, the new territory acquired since the war being included. The following is a complete and revised list with area and population as at the census of 1921:—

Emigrants.—Total number in 1925, 280,081, of whom 178,208 went to other European countries or those bordering on the Mediterranean, and 101,873 to countries overseas. In 1926 there were 268,810 emigrants, of whom 122,496 went to countries overseas.

The number of Italians who returned to Italy was in 1926, 177,619 (of whom 39,524 were from the United States and Canada).

PRINCIPAL TOWNS.

The numbers of inhabitants at the different centres do not in Italian statistics afford a sufficient basis for distinguishing between the urban and rural population. In Northern Italy the population is scattered over the country and there are few centres. In Southern Italy and in the islands the country people live in the towns, coming and going to cultivate their own plots of land; consequently there are many populous centres where, if numbers alone were considered, the population would be regarded as urban, though it is, in truth, almost exclusively rural. The following statement gives the classification of communes according to resident population on March 31, 1927, on the basis of the 1921 census:—

	Number	Population	Per 1,000

By the Treaty with Yugoslavia, of January 27, 1924, it was agreed to hand over Fiume to Italy.

An Italo-Hungarian Convention providing for the formation of a Free Zone at Fiume for the benefit of Hungary was signed in Rome on July 26, 1927.

Religion.

The Roman Catholic Church is, nominally, the ruling State religion of Italy; but the power of the Church and clergy is subordinated to the civil government, and there is freedom of worship to the adherents of all recognised religions. The census returns of 1911 (the latest available) were as follows:—

Profession	Total	Per cent.
Roman Catholics . . . .	82,983,664 <sup>1</sup>	95·13
Evangelical Protestants . .	123,253	0·36
Jews . . . . .	34,324	0·11

Not known . . . . .	653,404	1·88

Of the Protestants, 22,500 belonged to the Waldensian Church of Piedmont, about 10,000 to the other Evangelical Italian Churches, and 30,000 to foreign Protestant bodies.

Italy is divided into 13 apostolical provinces, comprising 272 episcopal jurisdictions, viz., 1 patriarchate (Venice), 49 archbishoprics, 6 cardinal bishoprics, and 216 bishoprics, 11 abbeys, and a number of prelates without dioceses. Every archbishop or bishop is appointed by the Pope, on the advice of a committee of Cardinals; but the royal exequatur is necessary for his installation. In 1911, the number of parishes was 20,707. According to the census, 1921, the secular clergy numbered 55,633: the regulars (monks, lay-brothers, nuns, &c.), 51,997; sacristans, &c., 7,093; persons employed at the Pontifical and Episcopal Courts, &c., 774.<sup>1</sup> There were in 1921, 474 Evangelical pastors and ministers of other religions.

The suppression of the religious corporations began for the old provinces in 1855, and was continued for the whole of the country by a law of July 7, 1866, and completed by the law of June 19, 1873, which extended the measure to the city and province of Rome. Of the monastic edifices some were occupied by the State, others assigned to communes or provinces. The corporations of Lombardy were privileged by the treaty of Zürich, and their lands and houses

In 1919 there was set up a national institute for the instruction of illiterate adults; and on January 15, 1928, there was opened in Rome a Fascist Popular University.

Justice and Crime.

Italy has 1 Court of Cassation, in Rome, and is divided for the administration of justice into 17 appeal court districts, subdivided into 116 tribunal districts, and these again into mandamenti, each with its own magistracy (Pretura), 1,080 in all. In 15 of the principal towns there are also Pretori urbani (17), who have jurisdiction exclusively in penal matters. For civil business, besides the magistracy above mentioned, Conciliatori have jurisdiction in petty plants.

The Pretori have jurisdiction concerning all misdemeanours (contravvenzioni) and offences (delitti) punishable by imprisonment (reclusion and detention) not exceeding six months, or banishment not exceeding one year, or by fine not exceeding 5,000 lire. The penal Tribunals have jurisdiction in the first instance in offences (delitti) for which the Code establishes a minimum penalty not exceeding five years of imprisonment and a maximum not exceeding ten years, or in offences punishable by a fine, exceeding 2,000 lire.

The Courts of Assize have jurisdiction in all proceedings concerning serious offences punishable by imprisonment for life (ergastolo), or by imprisonment (reclusion and detention) exceeding in the minimum five years, and in the maximum ten years. Appeal is allowed to the penal Tribunals from the sentences of the Pretori, and to the Courts of Appeal from those of the penal Tribunals. There is no appeal from sentences of the Courts of Assize. The Court of Cassation in Rome has power to annul, for illegality, sentences passed by the inferior magistracy and to decide questions of jurisdiction or competency.

By a law of November, 1926, a special tribunal was instituted with jurisdiction in offences (delitti) against the security of the State.

1924	610,595	549,742	57,762	3,091

In 1926 (January 1) there were 42,638 male and 3,859 female prisoners; and 2,496 males and 941 females were placed in reformatories. At that date there were 174 central and arrondissement prisons, 67 penal establishments, 20 reformatories, and 5 colonies for persons under domiciliary restraint. There were, besides, 833 cantonal prisons.

Pauperism.

In Italy legal charity, in the sense of a right in the poor to be supported by the parish or commune, or of an obligation on the commune to relieve the poor, does not exist. Public charity in general is exercised through the permanent charitable foundations, called 'Istituzioni pubbliche di assistenza e di beneficenza' (Opere pie), regulated by the laws of July 17, 1890, July 18, 1904, and February 4, 1923. The general results of an inquiry in 1900 were:—Leaving out of account institutions intended for lending, or for the encouragement of saving (that is, monti di pietà, monti frumentari, casse di prestanze agrarie), there were 27,078 opere pie, with a gross capital of about 2,205,000,000 lire. Their net income amounted to 52,559,000 lire. Added to this net income were casual legacies, contributions from private benefactors, subsidies from communes (for hospitals), &c., all of which receipts are spent annually, and thus the sum at the disposal of the opere pie in 1900 (last available data) amounted to 120,765,000 lire. Between 1901 and 1917 the capital of all the benevolent institutions was increased by 385 million lire.

Defence.

I. FRONTIER.

The extent of the land frontier of Italy is as follows:—French frontier 303 miles; Swiss 450; Austrian 261; Yugoslav 152; frontier of San Marino 24; in all (exclusive of San Marino) 1,166 miles. The coast line of the peninsula measures 2,472 miles; of Sicily, 693; of Sardinia, 830; of Elba and the small islands, 973; the total length of coast is thus 4,968 miles.

II. ARMY.

Service in the army (or navy) is compulsory and universal. The total period is 19 years, beginning at the age of twenty. The young men of the year are divided into 3 categories; the first being posted to the permanent army; the second also to the permanent army but with 'unlimited leave'; and the third, that is those exempted from active service, to the territorial militia. The second category men form what is called the 'complementary force.'

The term of service in the ranks of the permanent army is 18 months for all arms. After passing through the ranks, the men are placed on 'unlimited' leave, i.e., they are transferred to the reserve, in which they remain until they have completed a total of 8 years' service. From the reserve the soldier passes to the mobile militia, the term of service in which is 4 years. After completing his time in the mobile militia he is transferred to the territorial militia, in which he remains 7 years; thus finishing his military service at the age of 39.

The second category recruits are regarded as belonging to the permanent army for the first 8 years of their service. During this period they receive from 2 to 6 months' training, which may be spread over several years. They then pass to the mobile militia, and afterwards to the territorial militia, the periods of service in each being the same as in the case of the first category soldiers. The men allotted to the third category, who are posted at once to the territorial militia, receive 30 days' training.

In Italy each regiment receives recruits from all parts of the country, and the troops change their stations by brigades every four years. On mobilisation regiments would be filled up by reservists from the districts in which they are quartered at the time. Reliefs are so arranged that at least half the reservists shall have previously served in the unit which they would join on mobilization.

The field army is organized into 10 Territorial Army Corps, sub-divided into 30 divisions and 2 cavalry divisions, and includes—the General Staff and Commands of the larger units, the Royal Carabinieri, Infantry, Cavalry, Artillery, Engineers, Aerial Corps, the Military Districts, Invalid and Veteran Corps, Mechanical Transport, Railway Transport, Medical Corps, Supply Corps, Administrative Services, Veterinary Corps, the Military Schools, Institutes and various Technical establishments, the Army and Navy Supreme Tribunal and the Military Penal Establishments.

Besides the above-mentioned units, the Volunteer Militia for National Security was formed by decree of August 1, 1924. It is organised in 12 areas and 95 legions. Its members are required to fulfil the normal obligations of service in the active army. The establishment of the active army in 1927 was: officers 17,684, other ranks 283,200, inclusive of Carabinieri, and was organised as follows:—

	Army Corps	Divisions	Brigades	Legions	Regiments	Battalions	Squadrons	Groups	Batteries	Special Units
Royal Carabinieri . . .	—	—	10	28	—	12	—	—	—	—

The Carabinieri are a force of military police. They are recruited by selection from the army, and remain in the force for 3 years. They then serve in the reserve of the Carabinieri for 4 years, after which they are transferred to the territorial militia for the remainder of their service, and are reckoned as a part of the army. In 1927 the Carabinieri numbered 60,000; the public safety police 80,000 and the Customs Guards 30,000.

The garrison of Libya consists of 2 infantry battalions, 4 companies mounted infantry, and 3 mountain batteries of colonial troops recruited voluntarily in Italy for 3 years' service. The native army consists of 5 battalions, 7 squadrons, 4 mountain batteries, 3 camel squadrons, etc.

The Italians have a special African corps in Erythrea, consisting of 2 companies of white infantry and 6 native battalions; also 12 native machine-gun sections, a local company of artillery (Italians), and a native mountain battery. The total strength of the Italian forces in North Africa is 23,567 all ranks.

In Italian Somaliland there is a native corps of 10 infantry companies, 1 camel company and 1 artillery company, with Italian officers, and a body of military police. Total strength about 3,000 of all ranks.

III. AIR FORCE.

By Royal Decree of April 1923, the Italian Royal Air Force is constituted as a separate force under a High Commissioner for Aviation. Detachments of the Royal Air Force doing duty with the Army and Navy are for the time under the control of these services. The expenditure for 1926-27 was estimated at 635,355,000 lire. The number of aeroplanes in possession of the Air Force was 1,500, of which about 950 were available for active employment. It is proposed to increase this number to 4,500, of which 1,500 will be with the active force, 1,500 in second line, and 1,500 in third line. The Royal Air Force is organized in one division of 6 regiments and comprises 25 squadrons of aeroplanes, 5 squadrons of seaplanes, and 1 group of dirigibles. In 1927, the establishment was 1,859 officers, and 22,653 other ranks.

IV. NAVY.

The future of the Italian Navy is yet uncertain, but developments are contemplated. The Treaty of Washington makes Italy the equal of France in capital ship tonnage, and establishes a replacement tonnage at 175,000 tons (177,800 metric), but the existing ships have a gross displacement of only about 110,000 tons. The current building programme, which is really for replacements, includes 2 cruisers of 10,000 tons, and 4 of 5,300 tons; 24 destroyers, and 20 submarines. Italy may begin to build capital ships, if she should so desire, at any time from 1927, but there will be no compulsory scrapping until 1931.

The Navy underwent complete revision and much reduction after the Armistice. The armoured cruisers are of little value. The list of light cruisers has been expanded by the accession of five enemy vessels. No large shipbuilding is contemplated, and all attention is directed to the flotillas, and to the naval air service. The two 10,000 ton cruisers Trento and Trieste are approaching completion, and a considerable number of new destroyers and submarines are being placed in commission to replace worn-out tonnage.

The naval expenditure for 1927-28 is estimated at 1,218,970,630 lire, as compared with 1,040,340,130 lire in 1926-27.

The naval administration is under the Minister of Marine, with an assistant secretary and a Chief of the Staff. The merchant marine is under the Minister of Communications. For purposes of local naval administration there are rear-admirals at all the important ports, while the naval commands are at Spezia, Maddalena, Naples, Messina, Taranto, Venice, Pola and Brindisi.

The five cruisers last named are ex-enemy vessels. There are 4 modern flotilla leaders, of over 2,200 tons, and a speed from 34 to 37 knots. Eight of the light cruisers, besides other smaller vessels, are equipped as mine-layers and carry large supplies.

The large flotillas of destroyers are composed of 30 to 38 knot vessels, very effective in character, and there are flotillas of quite modern torpedo-boats. Considerable additions are being made. The flotilla leaders and destroyers include 3 ex-German and 5 ex-Austrian.

The personnel consists of over 1,200 officers and 44,000 men, including 15,000 volunteers.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

The systems of cultivation in Italy may be reduced to three:—1. The system of peasant proprietorship (coltivazione per economia o a mano propria); 2. That of partnership (colonia parziaria); 3. That of rent (affitto). Peasant proprietorship is most common in Piedmont and Liguria, but is found in many other parts of Italy. The system of partnership or colonia parziaria, more especially in the form of mezzadria, consists in a form of partnership between the proprietor and the cultivator. This system is general in Tuscany, the Marches, and Umbria. Large farms (la grande coltura) exist in the neighbourhood of Vercelli, Pavia, Milan, Cremona, Chioggia, Ferrara, Grosseto, Rome, Caserta, and in Apulia, the Basilicata, Calabria, and at Girgenti and Trapani in Sicily. In Italy generally the land is much subdivided.

The area of Italy comprises 76,633,803 acres. Of this area 33,276,000 acres (43 per cent.) are devoted to seed lands; 16,996,250 acres (21·9 per cent.) to meadows and permanent pastures; 3,731,750 acres (4·8 per cent.) to horticulture; 13,958,000 acres (18 per cent.) to forests; 3,127,500 acres (4 per cent.) are productive non-cultivated lands, and 6,406,500 acres (8·3 per cent.) unproductive land. The total agrarian land is therefore 73·7 per cent. of the whole.

Number of proprietors in Italy, 1921:—Proprietors of lands, 1,113,106; of buildings, 725,184; of lands and buildings, 2,081,409; total, 3,919,699. Proprietors of lands and buildings (3,919,699) per 100 of population, 10; proprietors of lands (3,194,515) per square mile, 27.

The principal crops for 3 years were as follows:—

The wheat acreage in 1927 was 12,315,000 acres, and the yield 53,291,000 quintals.

In 1926 Italy had 1,000,000 horses, 952,000 asses, 503,000 mules, 7,100,000 cattle, 2,750,000 pigs, 11,000,000 sheep, and 3,000,000 goats.

II. FORESTRY.

The total forest area was 5,585,400 hectares (13,801,523 acres) in 1926. The forest area belonging to the State on June 30, 1926, was 226,584 hectares (559,889 acres).

III. MINES AND MINERALS.

The Italian mining industry is most developed in Sicily (Caltanissetta), in Tuscany (Arezzo, Florence, and Grosseto), in Sardinia (Cagliari, Sassari, and Iglesias), in Lombardy (particularly near Bergamo and Brescia), and in Piedmont.

Production in metric tons (1 metric ton = 2,204 lbs., or 1,016 metric tons = 1,000 English tons) of metallic ores and other minerals in 1926:—

IV. MANUFACTURES.

The Italian industrial census of June 10, 1911, showed that there were 243,926 industrial establishments in the country, having 2,304,438 employees, and possessing 1,620,404 horse-power.

The cotton industry is the largest and most important. In 1926, 756,929,236 yards of single width and 265,851,371 yards of double width of cotton were woven. Silk culture, while flourishing most extensively in Lombardy, Piedmont and Venetia, is carried on all over Italy. Production

FOREIGN DEPENDENCIES.

Colony of Eritrea.

The dominion of Italy on the coast of the Red Sea extends from Cape Kasar (18° 2' N.) to Cape Dumeirah on the Strait of Bab-el-Mandeb (12° 30' N.). The length of coast is about 670 miles. The total area is 45,754 square miles, and the whole population is estimated at 402,793, exclusive of 4,251 Europeans, of whom 3,901 are Italian (exclusive of the military forces) and 350 of other nationalities. Massawah has (1923) 12,275 inhabitants, of whom 137 are European, mainly Italian. The seat of the Government is Asmara, a modern town 7,765 feet above the sea-level, with 14,711 inhabitants (2,500 European). The religions of the native population are the Christian (Coptic rite) and the Mohammedan. There are some Roman Catholics and a few Pagans. Tigr̄y and Tigré, two languages originating from the ancient Ghehz, and other languages are spoken in the plateau, and Arabic in the lowlands.

The Italian possessions on the Red Sea are constituted as the Colony of Eritrea, with the management of its own finances and an autonomous administration in 8 commissariats, as follows :—

Commissariat	Area in square miles	Total Native Population (Census 1921)	Capital
Hamassien . . . . .	1,165	60,234	Asmara
Massawah . . . . .	5,109	47,910	Massawah
Assab . . . . .	5,523	3,926	Assab
Acchelé Guzai . . . . .	3,505	62,169	Adi Caleh
Serae . . . . .	3,817	69,311	Adi Ugri
Cheren . . . . .	8,836	78,737	Cheren
Barca . . . . .	12,777	58,540	Agordat
Gasc and Setit . . . . .	5,522	26,966	Barentu
	45,754	402,793

Military force (1927): 200 commissioned and non-commissioned officers and about 5,000 native troops, exclusive of the police force of the colony.

In the Italian dependencies the central government is represented by a civil governor, who is nominated by the King and is under the direction of the Minister for the Colonies.

Governor.—Dr. Jacopo Gasparini (1928).

For the financial year 1927–28 the revenue and expenditure of the Colony of Eritrea are estimated at: Colonial revenue, 42,455,500 lire; expenditure, civil administration, 26,330,250 lire; military, 16,125,250 lire. Revenue and expenditure, 1928–29, 42,482,300 lire.

For climatic and agricultural purposes the country must be divided into two zones, the lowlands along the sea coasts and the plains, where the climate is tropical and the rains fall in winter; and the uplands, where the climate is cool, and sometimes cold, and the rains fall in summer. Both in the lowlands and the uplands the annual rain is sufficient for the successful raising of the crops. Irrigation works are being carried on in the lower zone in order to facilitate intensive production by Italian farmers. Pasture is abundant, and the pastoral population is partly nomadic. In 1922 there were 553,311 cattle, 1,655 horses, 46,923 asses, 9,916 mules, 1,701,496 sheep and goats, 68,445 camels, and 265 pigs. Numerous wild animals are also found. Pearl-fishing is carried on at Massawah and the Dahlak archipelago to the value of 1,086,989 lire for pearls and 3,639,159 lire for mother-of-pearl, and 5,436,842 lire for trocus (1926). A very promising trade is being carried out in palm nuts. The exportation of these nuts in 1926 was 7,537,107 lire. There are gold mines worked successfully in several localities of Hamasien.

At Massawah the imports by sea, the exports, and the tonnage entered were as follows:—

—	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926
Imports . Lire	87,781,759	106,294,311	146,129,077	203,453 475	171,789 645
Exports . "	31,623,301	40,394,759	87,901,857	119,402,517	97,852,451
Tonnage entd. Tons	421,931	458,941	493,695	520,846	574,668

Through the land frontier the imports in 1926 amounted to 64,781,680 lire, and the exports to 87,910,789 lire.

There are 75 miles of railway from Massawah to Asmara, and 65 miles from Asmara to Cheren; and now the line from Cheren has nearly reached Agordat (54 miles). There are monthly sailings between Massawah and Genoa and Massawah and Trieste, and weekly sailings for Egypt, and frequent sailings for the Far East. There are 10 post-offices. There is a telegraph line of 416 miles in length with 11 public offices. There are 1,023 miles of telephone lines with 8 public offices. Wireless telegraph stations have been opened at Massawah, Assab, and Asmara. They communicate with the radiotelegraphic system of Italian Somaliland and also with Italy (St. Paolo of Rome). There is thus thorough wireless communication between Italy and Italian Somaliland, via Massawah.

The legal currency consists of Italian coins and Maria Theresa dollars. The Italian mint in 1918 issued a new silver coin, the Tallero d'Italia, the weight of which is 28·0668 grammes.

Italian Somaliland.

The Colony of Italian Somaliland has an area of about 190,000 sq. miles and a population of about 900,000 (1,000 Italians). It extends along the east coast of Africa from British Somaliland to Dik's Head in Kenya Colony. The inland boundaries are determined under the Treaty of May 6, 1908, between Italy and Abyssinia, by a line (only partially demarcated) from the confluence of the Ganale with the Dawa, thence to Bender Ziada (45th parallel) on the Gulf of Aden following an irregular line which runs at a mean distance of 180 miles from the coast through Jet, Ato, El Gorum, Bur Lelmis, Bur Gumburn, Bur Burdubo, and Bur Galambaladi to Bender Ziada. As a result of the Treaty of 1915 and the Colonial rearrangements consequent on the war, Britain has ceded Italy territories on the right bank of the Juba with the port of Kismayu (Chisimaio). This district is incorporated in Somalia and forms one of its provinces. It has an area of 35,000 sq. miles and an estimated population of 100,000. [See map in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1925.]

Italian Somaliland comprises (I.) The territories of Northern Somalia, viz.—(1) The territory of the Mijertins, from Bender Ziade, the most northerly point belonging to Italy on the Gulf of Aden, to Cape Gabà on the Indian Ocean (8° 13' N. lat.), with an Italian Regional Commissioner, resident at Alula, and a resident at Bender Cassim; (2) the territory of the Nogal, from Cape Gabà to Cape Garad (6° 47' N. lat.), formerly occupied by the Mad Mullah, with a resident at Eil; (3) the territory of Obbia, from Cape Garad to the northern boundary of the colony of Benadir, determined by a line which ends at the sea near the wells of El Gabobe (about 4° 30' N. lat.), with an Italian Regional Commissioner resident at Obbia, and four residents at Obbia, El Bur, Gallacaio, and Harardera. (II.) Southern Somalia, formerly called 'Benadir,' which extends from 4° 30' N. lat. to Ras Chiamboni (Dik's Head), and comprises the following four administrative divisions:—(1) the frontier region, with a Regional Commissioner resident at Oddur (2,000 inhabitants), and seven residents at Garbaharre, Lugh, Oddur, Tigieglò, Belet Ven, Sinadogò and Dolo; (2) the Juba region, with a Regional Commissioner at Khismayu (10,000 inhabitants), and seven residents at Bardera, Gelib, Margherita, Khismayu, Afmadù, Gobuin and Dugiuna; (3) the Central Region, with a Regional Commissioner at Merca (6,000 inhabitants) and seven residents at Baidoa, Buracaba, Audegle, Merca, Brava, Dinsor and Afgoi; and (4) Webi Shebeli, with a Regional Commissioner at Mahaddei (2,000) and seven residents at Balad, Mahaddei, Villaggio Duca degli Abruzzi, Buloburti, Bugda, El Bur and Bud-Bud. Mogadiscio (population 25,000), capital of the Colony, with its territory, has been placed under the direct dependence of the Governor.

The Colony is administered by a civil governor who resides at Mogadiscio. He is assisted by a Secretary-General for civil and political affairs, and by a military commandant. The currency is the Italian lira (silver coins and currency notes issued by the Banca d'Italia).

The principal occupations of the people are cattle-rearing and agriculture. In Southern Somaliland the whole country near the banks of the Webi Shebele and the Juba is inhabited and cultivated by the natives, and in the district of Merca-Genale and in that of Villaggio Duca degli Abruzzi there are Italian plantations with a cultivated area of c. 70,000 acres. In Northern Somaliland agriculture is almost unknown; the Mijertins rear camels and sheep. Exports (1926) were 29,031,366 lire; imports, 129,441,852 lire. Imports are cottons, sugar, rice, tea, coffee, iron, machinery, timber; exports, sesame oil, gum, hides, butter, cotton and cotton-seed oil, resin, kapok and ivory. In 1927 exports to U.K. amounted to 42,848% and imports from U.K. 30,322%. In 1926 these figures were 4,258% and 31,484% respectively. Length of roads 1,500 miles; steamship service on the Juba River from Kismayu to Bardera. In 1926, 576 ships entered and cleared the ports of the colony. Military force (1927), 200 (Italian) officers and 10,000 (coloured) men. A detachment of the Flying Corps has recently been added.

Governor.—Count Cesare de Vecchi (1923).

The budget of Italian Somaliland for the year 1927-28 is as follows: Revenue proper of the colony, 21,240,000 lire; State contribution, 55,515,250 lire; extraordinary revenue, 3,750,000 lire; total, 80,505,250 lire. Civil expenditure, 42,277,150 lire; military, 30,579,100 lire; extraordinary expenditure, 7,649,000 lire; total, 80,505,250 lire. Revenue and expenditure, 1928-29, 75,255,250 lire.

Twenty wireless telegraph stations are working in the Colony. The wireless station at Afgoi communicates directly with Italy.

There are in the Colony 6 principal post offices (Mogadiscio, Merca, Brava, Khismayu, Baidoa, and Mahaddei), and 35 local post offices. A railway runs from Mogadiscio to Afgoi Adalei (48 miles). The construction of the railway line from Adalei to Villaggio Duca degli Abruzzi has been started.

Tripolitania and Cyrenaica.

(LIBIA ITALIANA.)

Italian Libia lies along the north coast of Africa between Tunis on the west and Egypt on the east, in longitude from about 9° to 25° east. The extreme northerly point of Libia is at about the parallel of latitude 33° north; the southernmost point is unknown, as the territory runs into the unmapped Sahara indefinitely. According to an arrangement with France (September 12, 1919) as a result of the Treaty of 1915, the western frontier extends in a curve from west of Ghadames to south of Tummo including Ghat. On the Egyptian frontier Italy has obtained Jaraboob from Britain.

Tripoli fell under Turkish domination in the sixteenth century, and though, in 1714, the Arab population secured some measure of independence, the country was in 1835 proclaimed a Turkish vilayet. In September, 1911, a quarrel broke out between Turkey and Italy, and the latter invaded Tripoli and established an army there. On November 5, 1911, a decree was issued annexing Tripoli, and on February 23, 1912, the Italian Chamber passed the Bill which ratified the decree of annexation. The war, nevertheless, continued until October 18, 1912, when the Treaty of Ouchy was signed, by which the sovereignty of Italy in Tripoli was established. This has been recognised by the Great Powers.

For administrative and military purposes the country is divided (decree of May 17, 1919) into two independent districts, Tripolitania and Cyrenaica, with their respective capitals at Tripoli and Bengazi, both under the jurisdiction of the Italian Minister of Colonies.

TRIPOLITANIA.

Governor.—General Emilio De Bono (July, 1925).

Area and Population.—The area of the territory is estimated at about 900,000 square miles. According to a census taken on December 1, 1921, there were about 550,000 natives. This census gave the European population of Tripolitania as 20,716 (18,093 Italians). It is estimated that of the total population, 203,000 are Arabs, 186,000 Berbers, 178,000 Arab-Berbers, and about 40,000 Jews. Of the Mussulman population the negroes of various races form about 35 per cent. Arabic is more generally spoken than written, and both Italian and Arabic are the official languages. The principal towns of Tripolitania are on the coast: Tripoli with about 60,000 inhabitants, Misurata with 14,000, and Homs with 5,000; other important centres are at Azizia, Zuara, and Zavia on the west coast, Sirte on the east coast, and Garián, Jefren, Giado, and Nalut on the highland. Inland are the caravan halting places, Ghadames, Sinauen, Mizda, Murzák, and Ghat.

Justice.—In both districts justice, in so far as personal status or family or succession matters are concerned, is administered by Mahommedan or rabbinic tribunals for native Mahommedans or Jews according to their own religious law, and by regional tribunals according to Italian law in civil and commercial matters, whether the parties concerned be Italians strangers or natives, except for special concessions made by the Colonial Judiciary to native mentality. Criminal cases are tried by the regional tribunals with the assistance of two assessors, chosen from the citizens of the best class, who with the President (a professional magistrate) form the Judicial College. One of the assessors must be a Mussulman or a Jew, according to the religion of the accused, but the judges of the metropolitan citizens are all Italians. More serious penal cases are tried by the Court of Assize, consisting of the President of the Court of Appeal with four assessors, two of whom must be Mahommedans or Jews, according to the religion of the accused. Appeals in both the districts, whether in civil or in criminal cases, are heard by the Court of Appeal for Libia, which was instituted in December, 1912, with its seat at Tripoli. There is a final appeal to the Supreme Court of Cassation at Rome. Disputes as to titles to land (which have to be inscribed in the Land Registry) are tried in the first instance by the Land Registry Office, from which there is an appeal to the Regional Tribunal composed of a judge and four assessors, and finally to the Court of Appeal of Libya.

Finance.—For the financial year 1927–28 the revenue and expenditure were estimated at: Revenue proper of the colony, 64,500,000 lire; State contribution, 152,874,250 lire; total, 217,374,250 lire; civil expenditure, 53,420,000 lire; military expenditure, 163,954,250 lire. Revenue and expenditure, 1928–29, 228,719,250 lire.

Defence.—The military force in Tripolitania consists of a corps of Colonial troops numbering 560 officers, 620 non-commissioned officers, and 18,500 men (13,500 natives and 5,000 Italians). There is an aviation station near Tripoli, also a naval command, with its station at Tripoli and a higher naval officer at its head. To this are attached some light vessels and tugs, stationed in the harbour.

Production and Industry.—Tripolitania has three zones from the coast inland—the Mediterranean, the sub-desert and the desert. The first, which covers an area of about 17,231 square miles, is the only one properly suited for agriculture, and may be further subdivided into (1) the oases along the coast, the richest in N. Africa, in which thrive the date-palm, the olive, the orange, and all Mediterranean plants; (2) the steppe district, suitable for cereals (barley and wheat) and pasture. This district is the one where Italian colonisation has chiefly spread; it has olive, almond and mulberry trees and ricinus plants; (3) the dunes, which are being gradually afforested with acacia, robinia, poplar and pine; (4) the Jebel (the mountain district, Tarhuna, Garián, Fessato), in which thrive the olive, the fig, the vine and other fruit trees, and which on the East slopes down to the sea with the fertile hills of Msellata. The sub-desert zone produces the alpha plant, from which cellulose is made. The desert zone contains some fertile oases, such as those of Ghadamas, Ghat and Fezzan, which produce olives, alpha, henna, palms, oranges, grapes and almonds.

Commerce.—There is a considerable caravan trade between Tripoli and Central Sudan now that the routes are free from raiders. An important article of trade is ostrich feathers, which are brought overland from Central Africa, and exported to Paris and London from Tripoli to the value of 40,000*l.* to 50,000*l.* annually.

The trade of Tripolitania was: Imports, 1926, 211,217,533 lire; 1925, 185,729,013 lire; exports, 1926, 45,246,772 lire; 1925, 38,153,270 lire. In 1926 the exports to the United Kingdom were 31,967*l.* and the imports 70,944*l.* In 1927 the figures were 43,171*l.* and 103,152*l.* respectively.

Sponge-fishing is of great importance. The two fishing seasons in Libia are from November to February, and from March to October, the latter being the more important. During the season of 1926, the sponges collected totalled 49,750 kilos, valued at 5,472,000 lire. In 1926, 11,738 tons of tunny fish were caught, valued at 11,792,800 lire. Among the other industries the most flourishing is that of tobacco and tobacco manufactures, which in the year 1926-27 will provide the Colonial Budget with a net profit of about 20,000,000 lire. The exports into Cyrenaica, Upper Jubaland, Italy, and Egypt of the products of the tobacco manufacture reached in 1925-26 the sum of 2,433,493 lire. The Mellaha salt-pits yielded 18,000 tons of the best salt in 1926, nearly the whole of it being exported. Among the other products are matting, carpets, leather articles, fabrics embroidered with gold and silver, and other articles of value of a local character.

Communications.—The principal means of communication inland are the caravans which follow long-frequented routes. Tripoli (town) is connected by telegraph cable with Malta, and by land lines with Bengardane (Tunis). In 1912 an Italian cable was laid between Syracuse and Tripoli.

Total length of railways, 117 miles. The principal lines in Tripolitania are: a line 73 miles long, along the coast, from Tripoli to Fuara; one 13 miles long, from Tripoli to Tagiura; and one 31 miles long, from Tripoli to Azizia. There are 370 miles of carriage road.

There are fortnightly steamship sailings from Tripoli to Naples. From Tripoli to Syracuse and vice versa there are two steamship sailings every week. Malta is always touched. From Tripoli along the coast there are weekly steamship sailings.

In Tripolitania, during the year ending June 30, 1927, 354,000 registered letters were received and 302,202 despatched; 27,628 insured letters received and 25,259 despatched; 68,046 parcels received and 35,010 despatched. Deposits in savings bank, 8,375,153 lire; number of telegrams despatched, 193,447; number received, 171,115.

Banking and Currency.—The Banca d'Italia, the Banco di Sicilia, the Banco di Napoli, the Banco di Roma, the Cassa di Risparmio, the Cassa di Piccolo Prestito and other banks carry on financial operations. The official currency is the Italian, but English pounds and francs are also used in commercial transactions.

There is a British Consul at Tripoli and a Vice-Consul at Homs.

---

CYRENAICA.

Governor.—S. E. Attilio Teruzzi (December 2, 1926).

Area and Population.—The area of the territory is estimated at about 75,340 square miles, and with the hinterland (zone of Cufra) 285,640 square miles. According to a census taken on December 1, 1926, there were about 185,000 natives. This census gave the European population of Cyrenaica as 10,000. The principal town is Benghazi with 30,056 inhabitants in April, 1927, exclusive of garrison. (Italians and other Europeans, 7,194, native Mohammedans 19,865, Jews 2,997).

The oasis of Jarabub, on the eastern border of Cyrenaica, was ceded by Egypt to Italy, and Italian troops occupied it on February 7, 1926. On the other hand, the frontier in the neighbourhood of Sollum on the sea was rectified in favour of Egypt.

Justice.—For details as to the Administration of Justice, see above under Tripolitania.

Finance.—For the financial year 1927-28 the revenue and expenditure of Cyrenaica were estimated at: Revenue proper of the colony, 46,400,000 lire; State contribution, 160,770,250 lire; total, 207,170,250 lire; civil expenditure, 60,124,000 lire; military expenditure, 147,046,250 lire. Revenue and expenditure, 1928-29, 209,206,250 lire.

Defence.—The military force in Cyrenaica consists (1927) of 600 officers and 18,000 men (11,000 natives and 7,000 Italians).

Production and Industry.—Pasturage is abundant and cattle could be bred on a vast scale. Bananas are grown at Derna. Barley is the chief food of the people. In 1925 about 152,500 acres were sown with barley, and 50,500 acres with wheat. About 600 quintals of sponges are gathered annually. In 1924, 1,200 tons of tunny fish were preserved.

Commerce.—The trade of Cyrenaica was (1926): Imports, 171,733,100 lire; exports, 25,930,800 lire. The principal imports are cotton goods and sugar; exports, sponges (11,965,335 lire in 1926) and barley (1,165,000 lire in 1925, compared with 2,780,000 lire in 1924 and 8,145,000 in 1923); wool and goats' hair are also exported, as well as tunney fish and cattle.

Communications.—Good carriage roads join the coastal centres, and run from there inland, linking up with the old caravan routes which lead through the oases to Darfur, Wadai, and Borker. A steamer calls every week at Benghazi from Syracuse. In 1925 the construction of a port at Benghazi was sanctioned at an estimated cost of 60,000,000 lire. In 1912 an Italian cable was laid between Syracuse and Benghazi. A railway line 37 miles long runs from Benghazi to el-Abiar, and 35 miles long from Benghazi to Solach. The el-Abiar line has been prolonged half way to Merg, which it will eventually reach.

In Cyrenaica the telegraph lines have a length of about 164 miles (1926). In 1926 there were 7 telegraph stations. There is a cable from Benghazi to Syracuse. There were in 1926, 16 wireless stations, 4 being open to international service, while 12 were military stations. In 1926, 30,000 messages were sent. There were in 1926, 3 telephone exchanges. During the year ending June 30, 1926, 119,669 registered letters were received and 37,781 letters despatched; 9,560 insured letters received and 6,680 despatched; 47,542 parcels received and 5,819 despatched. Deposits in savings bank, 7,192,071 lire; number of telegrams despatched, 301,956; number received, 239,050.

Banking and Currency.—The Banca d'Italia and the Banco di Roma carry on financial operations. In 1925 the Cassa di Risparmio della Cyrenaica opened at Benghazi and Derna.

There is a British Consul at Benghazi.

AEGEAN ISLANDS.

Italy occupied the Aegean Islands in 1912, during the Tripoli War. By the Treaty of Lausanne, which came into force on August 6, 1924, Turkey ceded them, with the island of Castellrosso, to Italy in full sovereignty. The military regime in the islands lasted from the occupation, May 4, 1912, to August 7, 1920. The civil regime was then established, Governors being appointed. The possession enjoys administrative autonomy; that is to say, it has its own Budget, to which the Metropolitan Government contributes ordinary and extraordinary subsidies. The Governor is head of the administration and exercises his authority by means of four Departments. The authority of the Governor is represented in the smaller islands by the Regent of the Government of Cos and five delegates in the islands of Lero, Kalymnos, Symi, Scarpanto and Castellrosso. The Regent and the delegates control all Government offices in the territory within their jurisdiction. The municipalities of the cities of Rhodes and Cos debate autonomously the matters within their province. The municipal councils of these two cities are appointed by the Governor. The other towns and villages are administered by sindaci and demogerondi elected by the people according to ancient customs.

Governor.—Mario Lago.

Area and Population.—The following are the Italian islands in the Aegean with their areas and population in 1927:—

Island	Area in sq. miles	Population 1927	Island	Area in sq. miles	Population 1927
Rhodes . . .	540	42,000	Piscopei . . .	24	1,158
Cos . . .	115	16,169	Calchos . . .	10	1,300
Patmos . . .	12	2,500	Symi . . .	22	7,000
Lipso . . .	6	500	Stampalia . . .	36	1,365
Kalymnos . . .	87	20,000	Scarpanto . . .	109	11,000
Lero . . .	24	4,000	Caso . . .	23	1,760
Nisyros . . .	15	3,158	Castellrosso . . .	3	2,742

The chief towns are: Rhodes (capital) with more than 20,000 inhabitants; Kalymnos, 18,000; Cos, 10,000; Symi, 7,000.

Justice.—The special judiciary of the Aegean Islands includes (1) the Department of Judicial Services, under which are all the judicial offices of the possession; (2) the Tribunal of Second Instance (appeal); (3) the Assize Court; (4) a Civil and Penal Tribunal of First Instance at Rhodes, with jurisdiction over the islands of Calchos, Symi, Piscopei, Scarpanto, Caso and Castellrosso; (5) a Civil and Penal Tribunal of First Instance at Cos, with jurisdiction over all the other islands. The magistrates are metropolitans. These also operate for the Orthodox, Mussulmans, and Jews Special Ecclesiastical and Mixed Tribunals which exert authority in matters of personal status, and Mixed Tribunals of Appeal. These special tribunals apply the provisions of Byzantine, Koranic and Talmudic law.

Public Instruction.—There are Government schools for boys and girls, both elementary and secondary (Lower Technical Institute, Higher Technical Institute, Accountancy, Advanced Science), and private schools, both elementary and secondary, for the various communities.

Defence.—The Aegean Islands are garrisoned by an infantry regiment of two battalions, one stationed at Rhodes and the other at Cos. These battalions send detachments to the smaller islands. The Royal Navy has a station at Rhodes, to which are attached the units scattered over the Aegean and the naval bases of Porto Lago. The police and passport service is in the hands of the Carabinieri (one company). The Customs services are carried out by the Finance Guard (one company).

Agriculture, Commerce and Navigation.—The agriculture of the islands of Rhodes and Cos is highly developed. These islands are famous for the cultivation of the very famous table grapes, other white and black grapes. The cultivation of olives, tobacco and vegetables is also relatively important. The market to which the greater part of the exports is directed is Egypt, which is connected with Rhodes by very speedy steamship lines. The transit and inter-island commerce gives rise to a brisk harbour movement of sailing vessels and small steamers, which serve the neighbouring islands. This traffic is heightened by the peculiar geographical situation of Rhodes. The countries which import manufactures and food-stuffs are principally Italy, Egypt and Turkey.

Concession of Tientsin.—The Italian concession of Tientsin, under the agreement with China of June 7, 1902, lies on the left bank of the Hai-Ho and has an area of about half a square kilometre with a population of 5,148 (Chinese, 4,675; Italians, 60; other Europeans, 413) in 1925. Revenue 1924, 89,908 dollars and 129,783 taels; expenditure, 87,194 dollars and 44,395 taels.

JAPAN.

(NIPPON.)

Reigning Sovereign.

THE Japanese claim that their empire was founded by the first Emperor Jimmu Tennō, 660 B.C., and that the dynasty founded by him still reigns. It was revived in the year 1868 (the first year of the Meiji), when the now ruling (de jure) sovereign overthrew, after a short war, the power of the Shogun (the de facto sovereign), who had held the ruling power in successive families, since the twelfth century; and in 1871 the feudal system (Hōkei Seiji) was entirely suppressed. The Emperor bears title of Tennō; but the appellation by which he is called in relation to external affairs is 'Kōtei,' a word of Chinese origin. Only foreigners make use of the poetical title 'Mikado.'

Emperor of Japan.—Hirohito, born at Tōkyō, April 29, 1901; succeeded his father, Yoshihito, December 25, 1926; married, January 26, 1924, to Princess Nagako, born March 6, 1903, daughter of H.I.H. Prince Kuninomiya. Offspring:—Imperial Princess.—I., Princess Shigeko (Jerunomiya), born December 6, 1925. II., Princess Sachiko (Hisanomiya), born September 10, 1927; died March 8, 1928.

Empress Dowager.—Princess Sadako, born June 25, 1884; daughter of Prince Kujō; married, May 10, 1900, to late Emperor.

Brothers of the Emperor.—I., Prince Yasuhito (Chichibunomiya), born June 25, 1902. II., Prince Nobuhito (Takamatsumomiya), born January 3, 1905. III., Prince Takahito (Suminomiya), born December 2, 1915.

By the Imperial House Law of February 11, 1889, the succession to the throne has been definitely fixed upon the male descendants. In case of failure of direct descendants, the throne devolves upon the nearest Prince and his descendants. The civil list is fixed at 4,500,000 yen.

Constitution and Government.

By the Constitution of February 11, 1889, the Emperor combines in himself the rights of sovereignty, and exercises the whole of the executive powers with the advice and assistance of the Cabinet Ministers, who are responsible to him, and are appointed by himself. There is also a Privy Council, who are consulted by the Emperor on important matters of State. The Emperor can declare war, make peace, and conclude treaties. The Emperor exercises the legislative power with the consent of the Imperial Diet. It is his prerogative to give sanction to laws, to convoke the Imperial Diet, to open, close, and prorogue it, and to dissolve the House of Representatives. The Imperial Diet consists of two Houses, a House of Peers and a House of Representatives. Every law requires the consent of the Imperial Diet. Both Houses may respectively initiate projects of law, can make representations to the Government as to laws or upon any other subject, and may present addresses to the Emperor.

The House of Peers (407 members in September 1927) is composed of (1) male members of the Imperial family of full age (17 in number); (2) princes and marquises of the age of 30 and upwards (15 princes and 30 marquises); (3) counts, viscounts, and barons of the age of 30 and upwards, who have been elected by the members of their respective orders, to the total number of 18 counts, 66 viscounts and 66 barons; (4) persons above the age of 30 years, who have been nominated members by the Emperor for meritorious services to the State or for erudition, not to exceed 125 in number, the term of membership being, in principle, for life; (5) 4 members of the Imperial Academy of Sciences above the age of 30 years, who have been elected by the members of that body; (6) 1 or 2 persons above the age of 30 years, who have been elected in Hokkaido and each Fu and Ken from among and by respectively 100 or 200 male inhabitants thereof, paying therein the highest amount of direct national taxes on land, trade or industry, to the total number of 66. The term of membership under (3), (5) and (6) is seven years.

Until May 1925 the suffrage for the House of Representatives was restricted by qualification arising from payment of taxes. But in May 1925 general manhood suffrage was enacted to come into force at the first general election. According to the new law, the members of the House shall number 466 (at present, 464), a fixed number being returned from each electoral district for a term of 4 years.

The proportion of the total number of members to the population of Japan proper is 1 to 128, 200. In principle, all the male Japanese subjects above the age of 25 years are electors and those above the age of 30 years eligible; exceptions provided for being among others, bankrupts, paupers who are dependent for their livelihood on public or private support, persons who have no fixed residence, and ex-convicts. Further, heads of the families of peers and persons in the army and navy services can neither elect nor be elected; holders of certain specified offices in the Government are ineligible; and no Government officials except the seimukai (political) class are, while in office, permitted to be members of the House. Such persons as have not lived continuously for not less than a year within the same city, town or village, shall not be registered as electors. Voting is by secret single ballot.

The President and Vice-President of the House of Peers are nominated by the Emperor from among the members, and President and Vice-President of the House of Representatives are nominated by the Emperor from among three candidates, elected by the House. The Presidents of both Houses receive an annual salary of 7,500 yen; Vice-Presidents, 4,500 yen; elected and nominated members of the House of Peers and members of the House of Representatives, 3,000 yen, besides travelling expenses. The Imperial Diet, which must meet annually, has control over the finances.

After the elections held on February 20, 1928, the following parties were returned to the 54th Diet:—Seiyūkai (Conservative Ministerialists), 221; Minseitō (Liberal Opposition), 214; Independents, 16; Labour 8; Jitsugyō Dōshikai (Business Men's Party), 4; Kakushin (the former Shinsei Club), 3; total 466.

The Cabinet (April 1927) consists of the following members:—

Prime Minister.—Baron Giichi Tanaka.

Home Affairs.—Kisaburo Suzuki.

Foreign Affairs.—Baron Giichi Tanaka (Acting).

Finance.—Chuzo Mutsuchi.

War.—General Yoshinori Shirakawa.

Marine.—Admiral Keisuke Okada.

Minister of Justice.—Yoshimichi Hara.

Education.—Rentaro Miuno.

Agriculture and Forestry.—Teijiro Yamamoto.

Commerce and Industry.—Tokugoro Nakahashi.

Communications.—Keisuke Mochizuki.

Railways.—Heikichi Ogawa.

Local Government.

For local administration Japan (except Hokkaidō or Yezo; Chōsen, formerly Korea or Chao-psien; Karafuto or Japanese Sakhalin; and Taiwan or Formosa) is divided into prefectures ('Fu' and 'Ken'). The prefectures are subdivided into municipalities ('Shi'), towns ('Chō') and villages ('Son'). Okinawa Prefecture and some islands have, however, special organisations. Municipality, town, and village are the units of local government. These administrative divisions form at the same time local corporations of the same names. In each prefecture there are a governor ('Chiji'), a prefectural assembly ('Fukwai' or 'Ken-kwai'), and a prefectural council ('Fu-Sanji-kwai' or 'Kensanjikwai'), of which the governor is president; in each municipality a mayor, a municipal assembly, and a municipal council, of which the mayor is the president; and in each town or village a chief magistrate and a town or village assembly. Prefectural assemblies give decisions upon certain matters prescribed by the Law (chiefly upon financial affairs); and municipal, town and village assemblies, upon public affairs in general. The prefectural council gives decisions upon matters delegated by the prefectural assemblies and upon matters of pressing necessity when the assembly is not in actual session.

Citizenship in a municipality, town, or village, is recognised, in principle, for every male person above the age of 25 years who has resided for two years continuously within the municipality, town or village, with similar exceptions to those in the case of the suffrage for the House of Representatives. Every citizen is qualified to elect and be elected for the municipal, town, or village assembly of his own city, town or village, and also for the prefectural assembly of the prefecture to which his city, town, or village belongs.

Hokkaidō has a governor and a special organisation. Chōsen has a Governor-General. The peninsula is administered in 13 Do or provinces, these being sub-divided into 329 Tuand Yun or districts. Taiwan (Formosa) also has a governor-general, who is invested with very extensive powers. The island is divided into 5 provinces (Shū), each of which has a governor. Karafuto is divided into 5 local divisions (Chō).

Area and Population.

The Empire consists of the five principal islands of Honshiu (mainland), Kiushiu, Shikoku, Hokkaidō (Yezo), and Taiwan (Formosa); besides the Chishima (Kuriles), Sado, Oki, Awaji, Iki, Tsushima, Riukiu (Luchu Islands), Ogasawarajima (Bonin Islands), Bōkotō (Pescadores) islands, the peninsula Chosen (Korea), and the southern half of the island of Karafuto (Sakhalin). Total area is shown as follows:—

Grand Total . . . . .	1,574	158,856	260,252	100.00

Administratively there exists a division into 47 prefectures. There is also a division into 633 rural districts, 101 cities, 1,584 towns, and 10,294 villages (1926).

Taiwan (Formosa) and Bōkotō (the Pescadores) were ceded by China in accordance with the treaty of Shimonoseki in 1895, and Japanese Karafuto was ceded by Russia by the Treaty of Portsmouth, N.H., in 1905. By the same Treaty of Peace the Russian Government ceded to Japan the lease of Port Arthur, Ta-lien, and adjacent territory and waters, and also the railway between Chan-Chun and Port Arthur, and the coal mines worked in connection therewith. In March, 1915, the Chinese Government agreed to extend the lease of the territory on Liaotung Peninsula, including Port Arthur and Dalny, to 99 years. The Chino-Japanese Treaty of December 22, 1905, provided for the interests of China and Japan with respect to Manchuria. By a treaty between Japan and Korea on Aug. 23, 1910, the Korean Territory was annexed to the Empire of Japan.

By an agreement signed May 25, 1915, Japan obtained from China exclusive mining rights in Eastern Mongolia, and the right to settle in the province, and in Shantung the transference of all mining and railway privileges hitherto enjoyed by the Germans; also the extension of the lease of Port Arthur to 99 years, and a joint control over certain industrial works in which they have a large financial interest, besides other privileges. (For full details, see Introduction to THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916.)

In 1925 (Census of October 1) the population of the Mainland was 59,786,822 (30,013,109 males and 29,723,713 females; of Chōsen, 19,522,945; of Taiwan, 3,994,884; of Karafuto, 203,754. Total, 83,458,405.

On October 31, 1925, the number of Japanese residing abroad was 625,430 (360,415 males and 265,015 females). Of these, 38,249 men and 25,954 women were in South America; 99,038 men and 58,203 women in North America; 142,355 men and 121,335 women in Asia; 78,372 men and 58,926 women in Australasia; 2,867 men and 567 women in Europe; and 34 men and 30 women in Africa. On December 31, 1925, the number of foreigners in Japan was 28,279, of whom 20,221 were Chinese, 1,961 English, 1,971 American, 1,062 German, 403 French, 176 Portuguese, 86 Dutch, and 1,176 Russian.

Religion.

There is absolute religious freedom. The chief forms of religion are—(1) Shintoism, with 13 sects; (2) Buddhism, with 12 sects (56 denominations). There is no State religion, and no State support. In 1925 Shinto shrines numbered 49,497 (besides 63,256 minor shrines), and the priests, 14,581; Buddhist temples, 71,314 (besides 35,079 minor temples) in 1923; high priests and priestesses, 54,110. There were, besides, 2,346 licensed preachers and 1,504 churches and preaching stations of the Roman Catholic, Greek, Catholic, and Protestant Churches. Since 1891 the Roman Catholics have had an episcopate of one archbishop and three suffragan bishops. There are shrines dedicated to the eminent ancestors of the Imperial House, and to meritorious subjects; these are independent of any religious sect, and some of them are supported by State or local authorities.

Instruction.

Elementary education is compulsory. The following are the educational statistics for 1923-24 :—

Japan has 5 Imperial universities, and 26 other institutions of university rank.

Particulars of the Imperial universities are given as follows :—

University	Location	Established	1923-24
			Teachers	Students
Tokyo Imperial University . . .	Tokyo . . .	1877	586	5,981
Kyoto Imperial University . . .	Kyoto . . .	1897	292	2,548

Kyushu Imperial University . . .	Fukuoka . . .	1910	158	808
Hokkaido Imperial University . . .	Sapporo . . .	1913	196	1,566

The remaining 26 institutions had 1,816 teachers and 27,100 students.

In 1923-24 there were 2,937 libraries in Japan, with 6,168,641 volumes (5,805,410 Japanese and Chinese, and 363,231 European). In 1925, 18,028 original books and translations, and 6,899 periodicals, monthly, weekly, and daily, were published.

In Formosa there is a special educational system.

Justice and Crime.

A system of justice founded on modern jurisprudence has been established. Judges are irremovable, except by way of criminal or disciplinary punishment. There are four classes of courts in Japan; namely, subdistrict courts, district courts, courts of appeal, and court of cassation. In the court of cassation five judges preside; in the courts of appeal and in the district courts three judges; in each case one of them being the chief judge. In the subdistrict courts a single judge presides. A court which deals with disputes respecting administrative affairs is under the direct supervision of the Emperor.

The following are the criminal statistics for five years:—In 1921, 123,900 criminals were condemned; in 1922, 115,488; in 1923, 127,157; in 1924, 149,971.

In 1924 there were 55 prisons, 1,256 detached prisons and houses of correction. Number of prisoners of all kinds, convicted and accused, and those in houses of correction at the close of 1924:—Men, 38,468; women, 954; total, 39,420.

For the trial of cases connected with the military and naval services there are courts-martial.

Pauperism.

In 1899 new legislation settled that the minimum amount of prefectural funds for the relief of sufferers from extreme calamity shall be 500,000 yen; that funds below that limit are to be made up by the Treasury; and that when the amount of relief exceeds 5 per cent. of the funds at the beginning of the fiscal year, one-third of the amount thus granted is to be supplied from the Treasury.

The relief statistics for 3 years show expenditure as follows (in yen):—

Year	Shelter	Food	Clothing	Medicine	Temporary lodgings	Providing with work	Total (including miscellaneous)
1922-23	19,690	84,376	15,727	635	30,713	62,143	224,754
1923-24	143,704	1,495,601	40,723	58,316	295,173	80,709	2,266,806
1924-25	65,618	110,788	9,809	8,273	120,521	526,151	1,398,819

In 1924 the Government relieved 8,111 persons to the amount of 446,763 yen). At the end of 1924, 682 foundlings were being maintained, and the expense in that year was 92,735 yen. There are, besides, several workhouses established by local corporations and private persons. The number of hospitals in 1925 was 1,771 (12 state, 75 public and 1,684 private).

II. LOCAL.

The revenue of the Prefectures for the year 1927-1928 was 407,804,233 yen, and expenditure 407,803,481 yen. The revenue of the cities in 1926-27 was 676,169,371 yen, and the expenditure was 671,907,872 yen. The revenue of the towns and villages in 1926-27 was 442,825,445 yen, and the expenditure was 442,920,520 yen. The total local debt at the end of October, 1926, was 1,262,208,000 yen (1,029,100,000 yen at end of October, 1925).

Defence.

I. ARMY.

Service in the army (or navy) is universal and compulsory. Liability commences at the age of 17 and extends to the age of 40, but actual service begins at 20. All those physically capable of bearing arms are divided into two classes, the 'fit' and the 'absolutely fit.' The numbers necessary for the first line (or active army), called Gen-eki, are taken solely from the 'absolutely fit.' Service in the ranks is for 2 years in all arms; then for 5 years and 4 months in the reserve (Pōbi). Reservists are usually called out once during their reserve service, for 3 weeks. Having completed 7 years and 4 months in the first line, including its reserve, the men are transferred to the second line, called Kōbi. Service in the Kōbi is for 10 years, with usually one period of training of 3 weeks. At the end of their Kōbi service the men are in the 38th year of their age, and they are passed into the Kokumin, which is the territorial or home defence army. In this they serve for 2 years and 8 months, to complete their total service of 20 years.

The reserve for making good the waste of war, or supplementary reserve, is called Hōjū. It is composed of the balance of the 'absolutely fit' recruits not required for the first line, and of as many of those classed as "fit" as may be required to make up a certain fixed number. They all serve in the Hojū for 12 years and 4 months, during which a part of them is called out for training. After completion of this they are passed to the Kokumin until 40 years of age to complete their army service.

The Kokumin is divided into two 'bans.' The first ban comprises all the men who have passed, as shown above, through the first line and landwehr, or through the supplementary reserve and landwehr, and who therefore have only 2 years and 8 months to spend in the Kokumin. The second ban consists of Jōbi, Kōbi, Hojū, and those of which do not serve for the first ban. It includes (1) those who though 'fit' are not required for the Hojū; (2) those who for various reasons have been exempted from military service; and (3) the young men between 17 and 20 years of age who have not been called up. None of these classes receive any military training, but they can be drawn on in case of national emergency.

The partially trained men who have been passed into the Kōbi from the Hojū are not included in the fighting units of the Second Line. They supply the large number of men required for the transport service on mobilisation, and for the expansion of other departmental corps.

The standing army of Japan consists of 17 divisions, including the guard, 4 independent cavalry brigades, 2 independent regiments of mountain guns, and 8 regiments of heavy field artillery.

Two infantry regiments form a brigade, and two brigades (12 battalions) a division. The divisional artillery consists of a regiment of field or mountain artillery (6 batteries of 4 guns). A regiment of cavalry of 2 squadrons, and a battalion of engineers, and also a battalion of transport service, complete the division. Four infantry, and 4 artillery, ammunition columns, 6 field hospitals, 4 supply columns, and 1 remount dépôt accompany each division in the field. The war strength of a division is reckoned at 18,700 officers and men, 4,800 horses, 36 guns, and 1,674 vehicles.

The peace establishment of the active army in 1927 was 220,840 all ranks, organised as follows:—

—	Divns.	Brigades	Regts.	Indepnt. Battns.
Infantry . . . . .	17	34	70	—
Cavalry . . . . .	—	4	25	—

Air Force . . . . .	—	—	7	—
Transport . . . . .	—	—	—	15

The air personnel for army and navy numbered in 1926, 6,156, and the number of aircraft was 548 aeroplanes, 2 dirigibles and 10 balloons.

The Kōbi comprises 228 battalions, 57 squadrons, 114 field batteries, 12 battalions of garrison artillery, and 19 battalions of engineers, and would on mobilisation form independent divisions.

The Japanese Islands are divided into military districts, corresponding to the divisions of the army, and the district is the unit of administration as well as of territorial command. Each division is supplied with recruits from its own district, except the Guards, whose infantry recruits are selected from the whole country; the other arms of the Guard division are recruited from each district of the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 13th and 14th divisions. Abroad there are 9,000 men in Manchuria, and 800 in North China.

The Emperor is the head and supreme commander of the army, and also of the navy. He nominates the War Minister (always a general officer of high rank), the Chief of the General Staff, the Director of Military Schools, and the Members of the Military Council.

The arm of the Japanese infantry is the improved rifle; calibre, 6.5 mm. (.256") machine guns and light machine guns, infantry cannons and infantry howitzers, a Mauser with an altered chamber. The cavalry are armed with a carbine of similar construction, and also with heavy and light machine guns. The field gun is a q.-f. shielded Krupp of 7.5 cm. calibre, which fires a shrapnel of 14.3 lb. The mountain artillery has a gun of the same calibre firing a lighter shell. There are a certain number of field howitzer batteries, armed with 4.6" and 5.9" howitzers, firing shells of about 44 lb. and 80 lb. respectively. A 4" gun for heavy field batteries is being introduced.

The military budget for 1927-28 amounted to 173,614,412 yen.

II. NAVY.

The administration of the Navy is in the charge of the Minister of Marine, under whose control is also the Naval Technical Department for Naval Construction, while the Chief of the General Staff is directly responsible to the Emperor for Operation, Mobilization, and Intelligence.

The coast of Japan is divided into three maritime districts having their headquarters at Yokosuka, Kure, and Sasebo.

The Japanese Fleet is markedly affected by the Washington Agreement, though Japan remains the third great naval power of the world. Her replacement tonnage was fixed by the Treaty at 315,000 tons in capital ships, which is superior to the strength allowed to France and Italy. The obsolete vessels have been scrapped. The other ships are to be modernized for the new conditions, it is said at a cost of 5,000,000/. There will be no further scrapping until 1934. The fleet was being expanded in pursuance of the programme of 1916-17, supplemented by a new programme which was sanctioned in 1920, but had not been put in hand. Of the ships then projected only the battleships Nagato and Mutsu have been completed, the rest being cancelled, except that two capital ships are being completed, under the Treaty, as seaplane carriers. The 1920 programme included 12 light cruisers in addition to 8 of the 1916-17-18 programme, and destroyers and submarines, all to be completed by 1928-29. The 1926 programme including 4 destroyers, and the 1927 programme, including 4 10,000-ton cruisers, 15 destroyers and 4 submarines were authorized for the purpose of replacing obsolete ships. Particulars are given below.

The principal state dockyards are at Kure and Yokosuka, where capital ships have been built, and there is a dockyard also at Sasebo, where lighter vessels are constructed. The earthquake of September 1, 1923, almost destroyed the dockyard of Yokosuka, which was the Japanese Portsmouth, but no ship of the active fleet was damaged seriously, and considerable sums have since been devoted to the reconstruction of the yard. The Kawasaki private shipbuilding yard at Kobe and the Mitsubishi establishment at Nagasaki are well equipped with modern plant, and there are lesser building yards at Maizuru, Uraga and elsewhere, as well as the government armour and armament factory at Kure. Japan has made herself practically independent of Europe for the building and arming and equipment of her warships. There are four naval flying corps (possessing about 200 various machines), and constructing factories at each of the dockyards.

A statement of the Japanese fleet follows :—

The Japanese Government subsidises shipping companies for foreign trade, and now Japanese vessels run on four great routes to Europe, North America, South America, and Australia. There are also lines plying between Japanese ports and Korea, Northern China, and nine ports on the Yangtse-Kiang.

Internal Communications.

The first railway in Japan was built in 1872, between Tokyo and Yokohama, a distance of 18 miles. By 1880 there were 73 miles of railway in operation; by 1900, 3,638 miles; by 1910, 5,354 miles; by October, 1923, 9,974 miles. The following table gives the railway statistics (including, except revenue and expenditure, Formosa) for 1925-26 :—

—	State Railways	Railways owned by Private Companies	Total
Length in miles . . . . .	7,837	3,047	10,884

The railway mileage in 1925-26, was 12,619, of which about 9,115 were main lines. The working revenue in 1925-26 was 480,450,904 yen, and the working expenses 259,439,720 yen.

It has been decided to make the standard gauge 4'85 feet. The work is expected to be completed in 1943, and the cost estimated at 1,408,000,000 yen. Japan has been conceded by China the right to build five railway lines in Manchuria and Mongolia. A railway tunnel under the MojiShimonoseki Straits was commenced in 1920 and is expected to be completed in 1928. The tunnel will connect the island of Kiushu with Honshu. The whole length of the tunnel will be 7 miles, of which one mile will be completely under the sea. Comprehensive plans have been made for the electrification of the Japanese Government railways. The first section to be electrified will be the Tokaido line, 408 miles, from Tokyo to Kobe.

There are (1925-26) 1,059 miles of electric tramway in Japan.

The depositors in the Post Office Savings Bank on March 31, 1927, numbered 32,495,132, and their deposits amounted to 1,182,800,004 yen.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The present monetary law came into force from October, 1897, by which gold standard was adopted. The unit of value is 0·75 gramme of pure gold, and is called the yen = 2s. 0½d., which, however, is not coined. The pieces coined are as follows :—Gold coins (20, 10, and 5 yen pieces), silver coins (50, 20, and 10 sen pieces), nickel coin (10 and 5 sen pieces), and bronze coins (1 sen and 5 rin pieces). The sen is the hundredth part of a yen, and the rin is the tenth part of a sen. The gold coins are '900 fine, and the silver coins '800 fine. The gold coins formerly issued (20, 10, 5, 2, and 1 yen pieces) are used at double their face value. The one-yen silver coin formerly issued is withdrawn. The old copper 2, 1 and ½ sen pieces, are used as formerly.

KOREA (CHŌSEN).

Government.—By a treaty concluded between Japan and Korea on August 22, 1910, the Korean territory was formally annexed to the Empire of Japan. The Emperor was deprived of all political power, and the title of the country was changed back to 'Chōsen,' from Tai Han, which had been adopted in 1897, and the office of Japanese Governor-General established. By an Imperial Rescript of 1919, Korea is to be treated as in all respects an integral part of Japan, Koreans to be on the same footing as Japanese. Members of the Korean Imperial House and the late Korean Cabinet have had Japanese patents of nobility conferred upon them.

Governor-General.—His Excellency General Hanzō, Yamanashi (December, 1927).

Area and Population.—The area is 85,241 square miles. Population at the end of 1925, 19,015,526. The vast majority of the foreign residents are Chinese, numbering 46,196 at the end of 1925. The latest returns (1925) give the number of British subjects as 232, Americans 742, French 86, and Germans 43. At the end of 1925 the population of the largest cities and towns was as follows:—Keijo-fu (Seoul), the capital, 302,711 (77,811 Japanese), Fusan-fu (Pusan), 103,522 (39,756 Japanese), Heijo-fu (Pyongyang), 109,285 (22,527 Japanese), Taikyu-fu (Tai-Ku), 72,127 (22,143 Japanese).

The language of the people is intermediate between Mongolo-Tartar and Japanese, with a large admixture of Chinese words, and an alphabetical system of writing is used. Official correspondence, except with Korean provincial officials, is conducted in Japanese. The written language of the people is a mixture of Chinese characters and native script.

Religion and Instruction.—The knowledge of Chinese classics and of Confucian doctrine, formerly essential to the education of the upper classes, has given way under Japanese and foreign (principally American) influence to a more practical system of instruction, but the worship of ancestors is still observed with as much punctiliousness as in China. In the country there are numerous Buddhist monasteries, which, however, are looked upon with scant respect. There is a large number of Christian converts. In 1890 an English Church mission was established, with a bishop and 20 other members. At the end of 1925 there were 3,896 Christian Churches with 2,120 pastors and 345 Buddhist oratories with 444 priests. The American missionaries have two hospitals in Seoul, where the Japanese have also established a large Government hospital. The member of a government hospital in the country was 29 at the end of 1925; while the Red Cross Society has a numerous membership (71,899 on Dec. 31, 1925) among both Japanese and Koreans. There are over 250 Protestant missionaries (British and American), and 60 Roman Catholic (French, German, and American), also a Russian Greek Church mission in Seoul.

There are numerous Christian Mission schools for boys and girls throughout the country. Technical and industrial schools are rapidly springing up. A model farm and agricultural school has been established at Suiken with 180 pupils. On March 1, 1925 there were for the education of Japanese 449 elementary schools with 54,187 pupils, 10 middle schools with 4,635 pupils, 1 medical school with 280 students, 1 technical high school (at Seoul) with 118 pupils, 21 girls' high schools with 5,694 pupils, one commercial high school (at Seoul) with 246 pupils, one special school for law (at Seoul) with 152 pupils, and various kindergarden and private schools. For the education of Koreans there were 1,244 common schools with 368,585 pupils, 78 private common schools with 17,102 pupils, 23 higher common schools (8 private) with 9,189 pupils, 8 private and 2 higher common schools for girls, with 1,306 and 666 pupils respectively; besides various industrial schools, a medical and a technical college at Keijo with 280 and 118 students respectively. On March 31, 1926, there were 1,931 schools of all kinds with 474,203 pupils, and a University at Seoul with 321 students (89 Koreans and 232 Japanese).

In Seoul there are three daily Korean newspapers, and 2 Japanese, besides others published at Chemulpo and in other parts of the country. There is a Government-owned daily newspaper in English, published at Seoul.

Finance.—The finances of Korea form a special account in the Budget of Japan. The estimated revenue for two years is shown as follows :—

Revenue.	1926-27	1927-28	Expenditure.	1926-27	1927-28
	Yen	Yen		Yen	Yen
Ordinary ...	149,453,358	165,773,875	Ordinary ...	140,338,386	150,879,909
Extraordinary ...	43,371,616	45,136,236	Extraordinary ..	52,436,318	60,030,202
Total ...	192,824,974	210,910,111	Total ...	192,825,154	210,910,111

The total debt on March 31, 1927, was 16,877,430 yen.

Production.—Korea is almost entirely an agricultural country; the cultivated area at end of 1926 was 11,276,115 acres. The chief crops are rice, barley, wheat, beans, and grain of all kinds, besides tobacco and cotton. The rice crops for 5 years were (in bushels):—1922, 75,271,056; 1924, 65,572,033; 1925, 73,279,275; 1926, 76,503,535; 1927, 84,998,445; in 1926, 35,410,630 bushels of barley were produced; 21,757,685 bushels of soya beans, 157,498,981 lbs. of Upland American cotton and 57,149,756 lbs. of native cotton. Whale fishing is carried on on the coast. In 1926, 36,176,105 pounds of apples, 24,942,456 pounds of pears were produced. Silkworm rearing is also carried on and in 1926 there were produced 1,585,400 bushels of cocoons; in 1927, 1,818,583 bushels. Live-stock is raised as a by-product of agriculture. The cattle are well known for their size and quality. In 1927, there were 1,594,814 cattle, 56,054 horses, 1,220,679 pigs, 10,309 donkeys and 24,918 goats. The fishing industry is developing; value of catch in 1926, 53,742,867 yen.

Gold mining is carried on; the value of the 1926 output was 7,485,811 yen. There are four foreign-owned gold mines in active operation. Copper, iron, and coal are abundant in Korea, but the development of these resources is impeded by defective means of communication. The output of pig iron in 1926 was valued at 5,958,940 yen; iron ore at 2,120,148 yen; and coal 4,992,699 yen. An anthracite coal mine in the north of Korea is in operation. Graphite and mica also are found in considerable quantities. The total value of mineral products in 1926 was 24,180,350 yen. The government has the monopoly of ginseng, salt and tobacco, the latter yielding 22,049,535 lbs. in 1926. At end of 1925 there were 4,238 factories with a capital of 265,853,369 yen, and 80,375 employees, while the value of the output was 337,249,418 yen.

Commerce.—The open ports are Seoul, Chemulpo, Fusan, Wousan, Chinnampo, Mokpo, Kunsan, Songchin, Ping-Yang (inland city), Wiju, Yong-Am-Po (1908), Yuki, Chung-jin and Shin-wi-ju.

Trade (merchandise only) at the open ports :—

The imports in 1926 included cotton goods, 34,370,170 yen; machinery, 7,750,564 yen; silk goods, 7,912,679 yen; timber, 9,705,413 yen; kerosene oil, 3,784,868 yen; grass cloth, 5,419,850 yen; sugar, 5,195,874 yen; paper, 7,003,423 yen; and coal, 8,557,790 yen. The principal exports were rice, 192,568,492 yen; beans, peas and pulse, 24,888,552 yen; hides,

2,688,596 yen; cattle, 3,907,702 yen; and gold ore, 1,346,763 yen. Of the total imports in 1926, the value of 248,235,850 yen was from Japan; of the exports, the value of 338,175,745 yen was to Japan. From Great Britain and the United States of America respectively, imports amounted to 5,787,079 yen and 6,635,799 yen.

Imports from United Kingdom (Board of Trade Returns) were 93,185*l.* in 1925, 101,070*l.* in 1926, and 95,510*l.* in 1927; exports to United Kingdom were 2,125*l.*, 674*l.* and 607*l.* in the three years respectively.

Shipping and Communications.—The shipping entered at the open ports in 1926 had a tonnage of 5,801,322, and those that cleared a tonnage of 5,550,152.

Transport in the interior is by porters, pack-horses, oxen, rail, motor cars, and by river. Improvements in road making are being effected. At the end of March 1927 there were 10,318 miles of completed roads. Length of railways, 1927, 1,821 miles; number of passengers carried (1927) 22,452,363.

Number of post offices 670. There were 21,503 miles of telegraph line open (March 1927), and the lines connect with the Japanese and the Chinese systems. The telephone has been introduced at Seoul, Chemulpo, and several other towns; length of lines 3,279 miles (June 30, 1927). During the fiscal year ending March 1927 there were 27,586 telephone subscribers. 5,379,804 telegrams were sent in 1926-27.

In 1926-27, 180,266,705 ordinary mails were collected and 197,931,948 delivered, 2,135,270 parcels were collected and 2,985,038 delivered.

Money.—Regulations for banking were framed in 1906. In 1925 there were 18 ordinary banks with 56,400,000 yen paid-up capital, and deposits amounting to 4,249,502,000 yen.

A central bank, the Bank of Chosen, was established in August, 1909, and in November it took the place of the First Bank of Japan (Dai-Ichi-Ginko) as the Government Treasury. Notes of this bank are permitted to circulate unrestrictedly within the jurisdiction of the Government-General of Chosen and are exchangeable with gold coin and convertible notes issued by the Bank of Japan. The Bank of Chosen has a paid-up capital of 25 million yen, the deposits amounting to 194,000,000 yen (June 30, 1927). Notes issued to June 30, 1927, 88,977,860 yen. Against their issue must be provided a reserve of the same amount, consisting of gold coin, gold and silver bullion, and convertible notes of the Bank of Japan; silver bullion, however, must not exceed one-fourth of the total reserve. The postal savings banks had 1,795,858 depositors with a total amount 22,466,175 yen at June 30, 1927.

The coinage consists of gold pieces of 5-, 10-, and 20-yen, silver of 10-, 20-, and 50-sen, nickel of 5-sen, and bronze of 1-sen. The gold coins, however, are not in general use, the ordinary medium of commerce being the notes of the Bank of Japan or of the Bank of Chosen which are issued in the following denominations, viz.: 100 yen, 20 yen, 10 yen, 5 yen, 1 yen and 50 sen. Notes of smaller value largely issued during the last few years are being withdrawn from circulation. The old nickel coin has been wholly withdrawn from circulation, and the cash currency is now rarely seen, and then only in remote parts of the country. Under certain regulations, bills of exchange and cheques may pass into the currency. In the more important commercial towns there are authorised 'note associations' of merchants for the transaction of business relating to bills.

Money.—Regulations for banking were framed in 1906. In 1925 there were 18 ordinary banks with 56,400,000 yen paid-up capital, and deposits amounting to 4,249,502,000 yen.

A central bank, the Bank of Chōsen, was established in August, 1909, and in November it took the place of the First Bank of Japan (Dai-Ichi-Ginko) as the Government Treasury. Notes of this bank are permitted to circulate unrestrictedly within the jurisdiction of the Government-General of Chōsen and are exchangeable with gold coin and convertible notes issued by the Bank of Japan. The Bank of Chosen has a paid-up capital of 25 million yen, the deposits amounting to 194,000,000 yen (June 30, 1927). Notes issued to June 30, 1927, 88,977,860 yen. Against their issue must be provided a reserve of the same amount, consisting of gold coin, gold and silver bullion, and convertible notes of the Bank of Japan; silver bullion, however, must not exceed one-fourth of the total reserve. The postal savings banks had 1,795,858 depositors with a total amount 22,466,175 yen at June 30, 1927.

The coinage consists of gold pieces of 5-, 10-, and 20-yen, silver of 10-, 20-, and 50-sen, nickel of 5-sen, and bronze of 1-sen. The gold coins, however, are not in general use, the ordinary medium of commerce being the notes of the Bank of Japan or of the Bank of Chōsen which are issued in the following denominations, viz.: 100 yen, 20 yen, 10 yen, 5 yen, 1 yen and 50 sen. Notes of smaller value largely issued during the last few years are being withdrawn from circulation. The old nickel coin has been wholly withdrawn from circulation, and the cash currency is now rarely seen, and then only in remote parts of the country. Under certain regulations, bills of exchange and cheques may pass into the currency. In the more important commercial towns there are authorised 'note associations' of merchants for the transaction of business relating to bills.

FORMOSA (TAIWAN).

The Island of Formosa, or Taiwan, was ceded to Japan by China by the treaty which was ratified on May 8, 1895, and Japan took formal possession on June 2 of the same year. Japanese civil government in the island began on March 31, 1896.

Governor-General.—Mitsunoshin Yamakami.

The Island has an area of 13,889 square miles, with a population (1925) of 4,147,462 (2,131,096 males and 2,016,366 females). Census population Oct. 1, 1925, 3,994,236 (2,055,133 males and 1,939,103 females). There were 189,630 Japanese, and 33,258 foreigners in the Island in 1925. The chief towns are Taihoku (195,555 inhabitants in 1925 Census), Tainan, Kūrun, and Taichu.

Many improvements have been effected by the Japanese administration. A colonising scheme was commenced in 1909, whereby Japanese were settled in Taiwan. There are four villages containing (1916), 652 families consisting of 3,268 persons. An educational system has been established for Japanese and natives. In 1925-26 there were for the instruction of the Japanese 132 primary schools, with 773 teachers and 24,782 pupils; 6 other schools, with 170 teachers and 2,457 pupils. For the instruction of the natives there were 523 schools, with 5,050 teachers and 220,120 pupils; and 5 other schools, with 166 teachers and 1,814 pupils. There are also normal schools, a medical school, an industrial school, and a school for teaching the Japanese language to natives, and native languages to Japanese.

The receipts of the Japanese administration are from inland taxes, customs, public undertakings, and also subsidies from Japan ranging from 5 to 9 million yen annually. The expenditure is chiefly for internal administration and the working of public undertakings.

The agricultural products of Formosa are rice, tea, sugar, sweet potatoes, ramie, jute, turmeric; while camphor is worked in the forests under a Government monopoly. The production of camphor was in 1923-24, 13,216,296 kin; in 1924-25, 5,958,121 kin; in 1925-26, 5,599,630 kif. Production of rice in 1926, 11,209,835 hectolitres; production of raw sugar, 1924-25, 7,992,348 piculs (472,000 tons); in 1925-26, 8,115,231 piculs (479,204 tons). There are active fisheries: value of catch in 1925, 10,031,417 yen. The number of animals (December 31, 1926) was:—horses, 224; goats, 89,139; cattle, 92,244; pigs, 1,542,829; buffaloes, 238,995. The industries comprise flour-milling, sugar, tobacco; oil, spirits, iron-work, glass, bricks, soap, and many other manufactures. Mining is making steady progress: gold (370,097 yen); silver (18,574 yen); copper (60,891 yen); and coal (12,998,768 yen) being the principal minerals in 1925; the output of coal in 1925 was 1,704,581 tons. The total value of minerals in 1925 was 14,627,334 yen. There are 44 new style and 104 old style sugar mills in Taiwan.

The commerce of Formosa is largely with Japan; imports in 1927, 65,555,000 yen; exports, 44,592,000 yen. In 1926 the imports from Japan amounted to 99,612,021 yen; exports to Japan 157,084,336 yen. Imports from other foreign countries, 56,489,060 yen; exports to other foreign countries, 47,965,844 yen. The chief exports in 1926 were tea, 12,345,033 yen; sugar, 3,197,773 yen; camphor, 1,949,291 yen; coal, 8,437,483 yen. The chief imports in 1926 were opium, 987,295 yen; petroleum, 1,107,074 yen; oil-cake, 13,871,401 yen; wood and planks, 2,420,439 yen.

Roads have been and are being constructed throughout the Island. There were, in 1926, 877 miles of railway open (563 miles belonged to the Government and 314 miles to private companies). In 1926 there were 171 post offices, through which passed 57,598,069 packets and 634,004 parcels. The telegraph service has 160 offices; length of line 736 miles; of wire, 2,941 miles; messages (1926), 2,800,647. Telephone line, 1,895 miles; calls, 49,981,511.

At the end of 1925 the post office savings bank had 490,485 depositors with 9,058,492 yen to their credit.

The coinage current in the Island is that of Japan.

---

Bōkotō, or the Pescadores, consist of about 12 islands, with a total area of about 50 square miles.

---

Japanese Sakhalin (or Karafuto) consists of that portion of Sakhalin which lies to the south of the parallel of 50° north latitude. It has an area of about 18,934 sq. miles, and, in 1925 (census), the population was 203,504 (122,202 males, 81,302 females). Residential population on December 31, 1925, 171,798. The most important industry of the island is the herring fishery, but large areas are fit for agriculture and pasturage, and Japanese settlers have been provided with seed and domestic animals. There is a vast forest area of larch and fir trees. The minerals found are coal and alluvial gold; coal raised in 1925, 250,615 tons.

The revenue for the year ending March 31, 1927, is estimated at 18,791,079 yen, and expenditure the same.

---

The leased Territory of Kwantung, the southern part of the Liaotung Peninsula, has an area of about 538 sq. miles, and a population (December 1, 1925) of 1,089,678, of whom 846,523 are Chinese and 241,248 Japanese (exclusive of army and navy). The Territory is under a Japanese governor-general, the seat of administration being at Dairen (or Tairend, formerly called Dalny). At the end of 1925 there were 52 elementary schools with 22,168 pupils, 6 secondary schools with 1,913 pupils, and 7 girls' schools with 2,905 pupils, for the instruction of the Japanese, and 128 schools with 22,709 pupils for the instruction of the natives; also an American Presbyterian Mission with a church and a hospital.

The estimated revenue and expenditure for 1926-27 balance at 14,997,515 yen.

The chief agricultural products of the Territory are maize, millet, beans, wheat, buckwheat, rice, tobacco, hemp, and various vegetables. There is an active fishing industry, the value of the catch in 1922 (3,177,025 kwan) being 2,608,834 yen, as compared with 2,883,737 tons in 1923, valued at 1,643,803 yen. The chief manufactured product is salt, which is abundant in the Territory. Since July 1, 1907, the Territory forms a Customs district under the Chinese Imperial Customs, Dairen being the Customs port, with out-stations at Kinchow, Pulantien, Pitzewo, and Port Arthur. The port is free, goods being subject to duty only on crossing the frontier of the leased territory. The trade is mostly with Japan and China. Imports (1924), 115,039,766 haikwan taels (tael=about 4s. 4d.); exports, 171,259,261 haikwan taels, of which 48,903,265 hk. tls. was imported from Japan, and 82,900,307 hk. tls. exported to that country. Dairen has a fine harbour, ice-free all the year, and protected by a breakwater 1,000 yards long. The harbour is provided with sheds and warehouses, under the control of the South Manchuria Railway Company. The railway connects Port Arthur and Dairen with Mukden, Kharbin, and the Eastern Chinese Railway System. 9,109,004 passengers and 15,045,292 tons of goods were carried during 1925. In 1921 its total length was 695 miles.

Gold and silver coin and the notes of the Yokohama specie bank are current.

Pacific Islands.—Under the Treaty of Versailles Japan was appointed mandatory to the former German possessions north of the Equator. These include :—(1) The Mariannes (or Ladrone) Islands—By treaty of February 12, 1899, these islands, with the exception of Guam (the largest of the Marianne Islands) ceded to the United States in 1898, passed on October 1, 1899, from Spanish to German possession for payment of 840,000*l.* Sipan is the seat of Government. The Japanese population of the islands numbers 7,645, and the natives 48,530. The northern group is actively volcanic and uninhabited.

(2) The Caroline Islands.—The Carolines consist of about 500 coral islets, Ponapé having 7,924 inhabitants, Yap 7,752, and Parao 6,435. The population is mainly of Malay origin, with some Chinese and Japanese. The chief export is copra. For administrative purposes the islands were divided into two groups : (a) the Eastern Carolines, with Truk and Ponapé as the centres of administration. There are in Truk 359 Japanese, 11 Foreigners, and 14,957 natives; in Ponapé there are 258 Japanese, 14 Foreigners, and 9,652 natives. (b) The Western Carolines, with Palau and Yap as administrative centres. There are in Palau 1,115 Japanese, 5,305 natives, and 15 Foreigners. In Yap there are 165 Japanese, 7,570 natives, and 17 Foreigners.

(3) Marshall Islands.—The Marshall Islands, consisting of two chains or rows of lagoon islands (several uninhabited), known respectively as Ratak (with thirteen islands) and Ralik (with eleven islands), first came under German rule in 1885. The population consists of 238 Japanese, 7 Foreigners, and 9,439 natives. The chief island and administrative centre is Jaluit; Protestant (American) and Catholic missions are at work. There are plantations of coco-palm (1,705 hectares). The chief export is copra.

Justice is administered in 3 district courts and in a court of appeal. The islands contain 8 primary and 17 secondary schools. Besides coco-palm, the principal products are sugar-cane (island of Saipan) and cotton (islands of Rota and Tinian). In 1926, there were in the islands 2,623 cattle, 1,674 goats, and 10,660 pigs.

The budget estimates for the Pacific Islands for 1927 were 4,500,000 yen.

LATVIA.

(REPUBLIKA LATVIJA.)

LATVIA, along the southern part of the Baltic littoral, is inhabited chiefly by Letts. As early as the 13th century the Letts fought against the German (battle of Durbe, 1260), but in the long run the Germans carried the day, and the state created by the Teutonic Order under the form of a Federal Republic (consisting of Estonia, Latgale, Livonia, and Courland) lasted until 1560. Eventually, Estonia passed under the rule of Sweden, Latgale and Livonia under that of Lithuania-Poland, while Piltene and Oesel became Danish. Courland alone retained her independence under the form of a vassal duchy of Lithuania-Poland. In 1621 Livonia was annexed by Sweden, and in 1710 by Russia. In 1772, after the first partition of Poland, Latgale was assigned to Russia, and in 1795 Courland joined Russia. From this time onwards, Latvia was under Russian rule.

In 1917 Lettish public opinion expressed itself in favour of the separate existence of Latvia, and announced its view officially in the Russian Constituent Assembly in January 1918. An organization for establishing the independence of the country was formed, and on November 18, 1918, it proclaimed in Riga the sovereign Free State of Latvia, which was recognised as an independent State by most of the Powers, and was admitted to the League of Nations on September 22, 1921.

Constitution and Government.—The Latvian Constitution which was passed by the Constituent Assembly on February 15, 1922, declares that Latvia is an independent democratic Republic and that the sovereign power of the State is vested in the Latvian people. The Saeima (Parliament) consists of 100 representatives elected for 3 years by universal, equal, direct, and secret vote on the basis of proportional representation, by citizens of both sexes over 20 years of age. Its powers expire on the day on which the new Saeima assembles. The Saeima elects the President of the State by absolute majority, and he holds office for 3 years. No person can hold this office for more than 6 consecutive years. The President must be over 40 years of age. He is the Chief of the armed forces of the State, and, for the period of war, appoints a commander-in-chief. War can only be declared after a vote of the Saeima. The President chooses the Prime Minister, who forms the Cabinet; and the Cabinet is responsible to the Saeima. The President may propose the dissolution of the Saeima, which proposal shall then be followed by a vote of the people. If this proposal is accepted by the people, the Saeima is dissolved and new elections are proclaimed; if not, the President of the State is to be considered as having resigned and the Saeima elects a new President. All citizens are equal before the Law. The Judges are independent and irrevocable. The State Control is an independent collegial institution elected by the Saeima for a definite period.

The elections to the Saeima, held in October, 1925, produced the following balance of parties: Right, 8; Alliance of the Farmer parties, 28; Democratic Centre, 12; Social Democrats, 37; Nation Minorities (Germans, Russians, Jews, Poles), 15; total, 100.

The Ministries are those of Interior, Foreign Affairs, Finance, War, National Welfare, Education, Agriculture, Justice, Communications, and State Control.

President of the State.—Gustav Zemgals (elected April 8, 1927).

Prime Minister.—P. Furāševskis (appointed January 23, 1928).

Area and Population.—Latvia consists of the former Russian Province of Courland (about 10,435 square miles), four southern districts (Riga, Wenden, Wolmar, Walk) of the former Russian province of Livonia (about 8,715 square miles) and three western districts (Dvinsk, Reshitza, Lutsin) of the former Russian province of Vitebsk (about 5,292 square miles), making a total of about 24,440 square miles, or, including inland lakes, about 25,000 square miles. The total length of the frontier line of Latvia is 1,040 statute miles, with a coast line of 338 statute miles. For administrative purposes Latvia is divided into: Vidzeme (Livonia), Latgale, Kurzeme (Courland), and Zemgale.

The chief towns are Riga (the capital), population (1925) 387,700; Liepāja (Libau) 60,762; Daugavpils (Dvinsk), 40,640; Jelgava (Mitau), 28,321; Ventspils (Windau), Rēzekne (Rositten), Valmiera, Cēsis.

The census taken in 1925 showed a population of 1,844,805 in Latvia. Of these 1,779,593 were Latvian citizens, and 65,212 foreigners. Of the Latvian citizens 75.61 per cent. were Letts, 12.32 per cent. Russians, 4.48 per cent. Jews, 3·39 per cent. Germans, 2·52 per cent. Poles, 0·90 per cent. Lithuanians, 0·38 per cent. Esthonians, and 0·40 per cent. other nationalities.

The birth-rate during 1926 was 21·96 (105 boys to 100 girls), and the death-rate 14·73 per 1,000.

Religion and Instruction.—The majority of the population in Latvia is Protestant (58 per cent.), but in Latgale and one district of Courland there are also many Roman Catholics (23 per cent.), while in Riga, Ventpils and south-east of Livonia there are about 75,000 Greek Orthodox Letts.

During the year 1926–27 there were 1,921 elementary schools in Latvia, with 164,954 pupils and 7,408 teachers. Most of these schools were supported by the State or municipal institutions, only 111 being supported by private persons or societies. The State or municipal institutions also supported 70 of the secondary schools in the country, the remaining 52 being supported by private persons or societies. In these 122 secondary schools 2,850 teachers taught 22,066 pupils.

Each national minority has the right to its own schools (elementary and secondary) with its own language of instruction. The State contributes to the maintenance of these schools according to the percentage of inhabitants of the respective national minorities. In 1926–27, instruction was given in elementary schools in the following languages (figures in brackets refer to secondary schools):—Lettish in 1,422 (67) schools, with 120,817 (14,658) pupils and 4,990 (1,359) teachers; national minorities in 499 (55) schools, with 44,137 (7,408) pupils, and 2,503 (941) teachers.

Formerly the University of Dorpat served the whole of the Baltic provinces of Russia, and as Dorpat became an Estonian institution, the Riga Polytechnic was in 1919 raised to be the Latvian University. The number of students is (1927) 6,766, and of professors, 317. There are also 70 technical schools with 5,116 pupils; a Musical Academy with 345 students and 48 teachers; and an Academy of Arts with 565 students.

Finance.—Budget estimates for five years are shown as follows:—

	1923–24	1924–25	1925–26	1926–27	1927–28
	Lats	Lats	Lats	Lats	Lats
Revenue . . .	208,958,636	217,538,000	160,949,256	169,927,000	168,597,000
Expenditure . .	172,169,146	198,172,000	160,949,256	169,927,000	168,597,000

The National Debt of Latvia on January 1, 1928, was as follows:—To United States of America, 5,645,000 dollars; to Great Britain, 2,150,000*l*. The internal debt amounted to 580,816 Lats.

Defence.—The standing army numbers 2000 officers and 18,000 men, organized in four divisions. Service is compulsory, beginning at the age of 20, and lasting to the age of 50.

Latvia maintains a coast defence squadron, comprising at present a gun-boat, 2 mine-sweepers, and 2 submarines; 4 destroyers, and 2 more submarines are projected.

Production and Industry.—Latvia is mainly an agricultural country, but an increasing number of people are passing from agricultural to industrial life. In 1927 the principal crops were rye, 640,750 acres;

258,800 metric tons; barley, 463,250 acres, 130,080 metric tons; oats, 763,000 acres, 177,160 metric tons; potatoes, 213,750 acres, 717,350 metric tons; flax, 158,060 acres, 18,570 metric tons (16,640 metric tons linseed). The main export articles of Latvia are (1926) timber, 42,104,398 lats; flax, 37,992,565 lats; butter, 37,450,132 lats. Before the war the Latvian flax crop averaged about 35,000 tons per annum. Latvian timber lands, State and private (5,282,500 acres), produced in 1924-25 91 million cubic feet of timber, (with firewood, 142 million cubic feet). On December 31, 1926, there were 2,732 industrial enterprises in Latvia, employing 49,672 hands.

The principal industries are those connected with distilling and brewing, flax and sugar.

Live-stock in 1926: horses, 365,000; cattle, 955,000; sheep, 1,152,000; pigs, 521,000.

Latvia does not possess any mineral wealth.

Commerce and Communications.—Latvia possesses about 340 miles of sea-coast; its 3 principal harbours are Riga, Liepaja, and Ventspils. Three Russian main lines converge on Latvian ports, viz. the Riga-Tsaritsin line, the Ventspils-Moscow line, and the Liepaja-Romni line.

Trade for four years:—

Year	Imports		Exports
	Kilos	Lats	Kilos	Lats
1924	924,385,580	255,904,500	748,829,977	169,047,116
1925	965,484,785	280,557,489	571,896,811	179,561,734
1926	974,712,082	260,814,396	517,877,260	188,503,587
1927	1,065,758,789	249,655,358	1,006,494,390	220,212,338

The commerce for two years was distributed as follows (in thousands of lats):—

	1926		1927
	Imports	Exports	Imports	Exports
Raw materials and semi-manufactured articles . . .	59,470	161,981	62,252	127,136

	700	266	692	73
Total . . . . .	260,814	188,504	240,655	220,212

In 1927 the imports (value in thousand lats) came from Germany, 98,674; United Kingdom, 26,354; Denmark, 16,578; Soviet Russia, 18,353; Poland, 14,472; Lithuania, 7,286. Exports to United Kingdom, 74,805; Belgium, 23,765; Germany, 58,303.

In 1926 the principal imports of the United Kingdom from Latvia (according to the Board of Trade Returns) were: sawn timber, 1,310,836%; pit props, 200,927%; flax, 1,165,703%. The principal exports to Latvia were coal, 10,023%; herrings, 416,318%; cotton goods, 203,804%.

Total trade between Latvia and the United Kingdom for 5 years (according to Board of Trade returns) :—

	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Latvia into United Kingdom	5,650,842	6,374,805	5,278,553	5,600,468	6,001,308
Exports to Latvia from United Kingdom	1,501,592	2,206,955	1,631,776	1,147,778	1,150,565

In January 1927, 65 steamboats of 44,110 net tons, 46 sailing vessels of 4,988 net tons, and 6 auxiliary sailing vessels of 229 net tons, making a total of 122 vessels with 86,188 gross tons, or 51,115 net tons, were sailing under the Latvian flag. There were also 5 ice-breakers.

In 1927, 4,041 vessels of 1,761,345 tons entered and 4,048 of 1,759,718 tons cleared the ports of Latvia.

To facilitate the transit of goods to and from Russia, the Latvian main lines converging on the ports of Riga and Ventspils have been altered to the Russian gauge, while for Western traffic (Riga-Ostend-Paris line) and internal communications the normal and narrow gauges are used. Of the total length of Latvian railways—1,737 miles on January 1, 1927—920 miles were of Russian gauge and 285 miles of the normal gauge. Gross receipts of Latvian railways in 1926 were 37,586,000 Lats, and expenditure 33,921,000 Lats.; 11,141,000 passengers were carried and 3,643,563 tons of freight handled. There were also 524 miles of macadamised high roads. The navigable inland waterways (1,829 miles) carried about 1,170,122 tons of goods.

In 1926 there were 477 post offices in the country; length of telegraph line, 1,773 miles; length of telephone lines, 5,357 miles.

Money, Banking, and Currency.—The legal tender in Latvia is the Lat, equal to one gold franc, and representing 2903226 grammes of fine gold. After the establishment of the Latvian Republic, the Government first issued circulation notes in roubles, guaranteed by all the property of the State. The exchange rate of those notes fluctuated to a certain extent, and was finally stabilised at 50 Latvian roubles to the Lat. The rouble notes were issued to the extent of about 1,800,000,000, but in the spring of 1922 the issue of additional rouble notes was stopped.

When the Bank of Latvia (Latvijas Banka) commenced its operations on November 1st, 1922, it issued 10 Lat notes by simply over-printing the existing 500 rouble notes, as the Latvian Government had undertaken to maintain the relation between the Lat and the rouble at 1 Lat=50 roubles. In order to do away with the dual monetary system (Latvian roubles and Lats) the Latvian Government have decided to withdraw all rouble notes and replace them by Lat notes of 1, 2, 5, 10 and 20 Lats denomination. Later in the year 10,000,000 Lats' worth of the Government notes were replaced by copper and nickel coins of 1, 2, 5 santims, and 10, 20, 50 santims denomination respectively. The issue of notes in Latvia is strictly limited to the amount of cover, and notes can be encashed in gold.

On December 1, 1926, there were 20 joint-stock Banks, 34 mutual credit societies and 9 communal credit institutions in Latvia, with an aggregate capital of 32,725,000 Lats, and assets totalling 176,250,000 Lats. The Bank of Latvia of Feb. 23, 1927, had notes in circulation amounting to 27,854,530 lats.; deposits, 15,327,203 lats.; and total assets 202,143,233 lats.

The metric system has been established by law, but the old Russian system of weights and measures were used until January, 1, 1924.

LIBERIA.

Constitution and Government.—The Liberian Republic had its origin in the efforts of several colonisation societies of Europe and America to make permanent provision for freed American slaves. In 1822 a settlement was formed on the west coast of Africa near the spot where Monrovia now stands. On July 26, 1847, the State was constituted as the Free and Independent Republic of Liberia. The new State was first recognised by France and Great Britain, and ultimately by other Powers. The Constitution of the Republic is on the model of that of the United States, with trifling exceptions. The executive is vested in a President and a Council of 7 Ministers, and the legislative power in a parliament of two houses, called the Senate and the House of Representatives. The President and the House of Representatives are elected for four years, and the Senate for six years. The President must be at least thirty-five years of age, and have unencumbered real estate to the value of 2,500 dollars, or 500*l*. Electors must be of negro blood, and owners of land. The natives of the country are not excluded from the franchise, but, except in the centres of civilisation, they take no part in political life. The official language of the Government is English.

President of Liberia.—Hon. Charles D. B. King (1928–32).

Vice-President.—Hon. Allen N. Yancy (1928–32).

Liberia is one of the original members of the League of Nations.

Area and Population.—Liberia has about 350 miles of coast line, extending from the British colony of Sierra Leone, on the west, to the French colony of the Ivory Coast on the east, and it stretches inland to a distance, in some places, of about 200 miles. The boundaries were determined by the Anglo-Liberian agreement of 1885 and the Franco-Liberian agreements of 1892 and 1907–10. Early in 1911 an agreement was concluded between the British and Liberian Governments transferring the territory of Kanre-Lahun to Sierra Leone in exchange for a strip of undeveloped territory of about the same area on the south side of Morro River, which now becomes the boundary.

The total area is about 43,000 square miles. The total population is estimated at 2,000,000 to 2,500,000, all of the African race. Since the organisation of the frontier force the Government has obtained complete control of Northern Liberia and of the Kroo countries in Southern Liberia. The indigenous natives belong in the main to six principal stocks: (1) the Mandingos (Muhammadan), (2) the Gissi; (3) the Gola, (4) the Kpwesi, (5) the Kru negroes and their allies, and (6) the Greboes. The Kru tribes are mostly Pagan. The number of American Liberians is estimated at about 20,000. About 60,000 of the coast negroes may be considered civilised. There is a British negro colony of about 500, and there are about 400 Europeans. The coast region is divided into counties, Bassa, Sino, Maryland, and Grand Cape Mount, each under a Government superintendent, and Montserrado, subdivided into 2 districts, each under a superintendent. Monrovia, the capital, has, including Krontown, an estimated population of 10,000, and is administered as a Federal District by a Municipal Board appointed by the President. It is one of the 15 ports of entry along the 350 miles of coast, the others being Liberian Jene (river port), Saywolu (river port), Robertsport (Cape Mount), Marshall (Junk), Grand Bassa, River Cess, Greenville (Sinoe), Nana Kru, Sasstown, Grand Cess, Harper (Cape Palmas), Kablaki (river port), Half Cavalla, and Webbo (river port). Other towns are Robertsport, Royesville, Marshall, Arthington, Careysburg, Millsburg, Whiteplains Bopora (native), Rocktown (native), Philadelphia, Cuttington, Upper Buchanan and Edina.

Religion and Instruction.—The Americo-Liberians are all Protestant (Anglican, Presbyterian, Baptist, or Methodist). There are several American missions at work and one French Roman Catholic. The Government educational system is supplemented by mission schools, instruction being given both to American and to native negroes. The Government has 22 schools with 700 pupils, and the missions 67 schools with 3,200 pupils. The Methodist Episcopalians have a college at Monrovia, as also have the African Methodist Episcopalians; the Protestant Episcopalians a college at Cape Palmas. The Government has a college with (1927) 9 professors and 143 students. A criminal code was enacted in 1900; the customs laws were codified in 1907.

Finance.—The revenue and expenditure for 5 years (in American dollars):—

	1921-22	1922-23	1923-24	1924-25	1925-26
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
Revenue .	507,955	493,889	699,728	943,208	962,570
Expenditure .	487,543	381,258	681,000	943,208	939,978

The customs duties for 1922-23 were 372,097 dollars; for 1923-24, 380,078 dollars; for 1924-25, 481,879 dollars; for 1925-26, 518,504 dollars.

In 1912 an international loan of 1,700,000 dollars was raised, secured by the Customs revenue, rubber tax, and tax on native labourers shipped from Liberia. British financial interests preponderate in the loan. It is further provided that for the security of the revenue a frontier police force sufficient for the maintenance of peace in Liberia shall be established, and that the United States shall designate trained military officers to organise the force. In 1924-25, 120,000 dollars were spent on the force.

Defence.—For defence every citizen from 16 to 50 years of age capable of bearing arms is liable to serve. The organised militia, volunteers, and police number about 5,000.

Production, Commerce.—The agricultural, mining, and industrial development of Liberia has scarcely begun. There are forests unworked; but the working of one para rubber plantation has begun, and rubber is being produced. In 1926 (August) there were six plantations of 10,000 acres each which were laid out with rubber trees from the nursery at Mount Barclay station in Johnsonville. The soil is productive, but cultivation is neglected; cocoa and cotton are produced in small quantities only, and indigenous coffee is the staple product. Piassava fibre, prepared from the raphia palm, palm oil and palm kernels, kola nuts, chillies, beni seed, coffee, anatto seed and rice are also produced. Beeswax is collected, and gum copal is found but is not collected. Tortoiseshell, improperly prepared, is sold in small quantities. In the forests there are rubber vines and trees of 22 species. Iron is worked by the natives. Gold in small quantities, tin, copper, zinc, monazite, corundum, lead, bitumen or lignite, and diamonds have been at different times found in the interior, but not as yet in payable form or abundance.

The trade for five years was as follows (in dollars):—

—	1921	1922	1923	1924	1925
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
Imports . . .	1,281,701	1,501,515	1,361,700	1,433,135	2,115,021
Exports . . .	819,594	1,045,382	1,166,735	1,416,896	1,911,068

The chief imports are rice, Manchester goods, gin, tobacco, building timber, galvanised roofing iron, ready-made clothing, and dried and preserved fish. The chief exports in 1926 were rubber, 494,717 lbs.; palm oil, 610,020 gallons; palm kernels, 18,230,559 lbs.; piassava fibre 9,715,300 lbs.; cocoa, coffee, 2,645,425 lbs.; ivory, 9,191 lbs.; ginger, and camwood. Export of coffee (1925), 376,843 dollars; palm kernels, 209,167 dollars. The trade in 1926 was chiefly with Germany, 753,143 dollars; United Kingdom, 323,466 dollars; Holland, 201,426 dollars; and the United States, 263,717 dollars.

According to Board of Trade returns, the value of the trade between the United Kingdom and Liberia was as follows in five years:—

—	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports into U.K. from Liberia	57,405	61,187	111,807	84,078	61,106
Exports of U.K. produce to Liberia.	113,922	143,242	155,039	173,969	186,313

In 1925, 904 ships of 2,062,852 tons entered and cleared the ports of the Republic.

Communications.—There are no railways, and no vehicular means of transport in the country except motors and ox-carts. There are several motor roads. One from Monrovia to White Plains, a distance of 24 miles, is completed. Another is in course of construction from Monrovia to Sano-quelleh, which will be 300 miles in length. At present 130 miles of this road have been completed for light motor traffic. The Brewerville-Belle Yalla road has been completed to a distance of 40 miles, and a road extending from Cape Palmas into the interior has been completed to a distance of 40 miles. The river St. Paul is navigable for 25 miles from the sea northwards (including creeks, for 38 miles), and various Liberians maintain steam launches thereon. The Liberian Government has a revenue cutter. There is a telephone line connecting Monrovia with Marshall and Grand Bassa. There is direct cable communication with Europe and New York. Of the two wireless stations at Monrovia only one is in operation.

Money, Weights, and Measures.—The money chiefly used is British gold and silver, but there is a Liberian coinage in silver and copper. Official Accounts are kept generally in American dollars and cents, but commercial accounts are generally in English currency. The Liberian coins are as follows:—Silver, 50-, 25-, and 10-cent pieces; copper, 2- and 1-cent pieces.

Weights and measures are the same as Great Britain and the United States.

The Bank of British West Africa, Ltd., has a branch at Monrovia, and agencies at other ports of the Republic.

LIECHTENSTEIN.

THE Principality of Liechtenstein, lying between the Austrian Land of Vorarlberg and the Swiss cantons of St. Gallen and Graubünden, is a sovereign State consisting of the two counties of Schellenberg and Vaduz (formerly immediate fiefs of the Roman Empire). The former in 1699 and the latter in 1712 came into the possession of the house of Liechtenstein and, by diploma of January 23, 1719, granted by the Emperor Karl VI., the two lordships were constituted as the Principality of Liechtenstein. After the break-up of the Empire in 1806 the Principality was incorporated in the Rhine Confederation; from 1815 to 1866 it formed part of the German Confederation, since the break-up of which it has joined no similar union.

The Reigning Prince is John II., born October 5, 1840; succeeded his father, November 12, 1858. The reigning family originated in the twelfth century, and traces its descent through free barons who in 1608 became princes of Liechtenstein. The monarchy is hereditary in the male line. The constitution, adopted in October 1921, provides for a Diet of 15 members elected for four years by direct vote on the basis of universal suffrage and proportional representation. The capital and seat of Government is Vaduz (pop. 1,405). The principality has a High Court. Since February 1921, Liechtenstein has had the Swiss currency, and since January, 1924, it has been included in the Swiss Customs Union; the posts and telegraphs are administered by Switzerland.

Area, 65 square miles; population, of German origin and nearly all Catholic, 1912, 10,716 (5,266 males and 5,450 females). The revenue for 1926 was 685,651 francs and the expenditure 552,555 francs. The inhabitants of Liechtenstein since 1867 have not been liable to military service. The Principality has no army (since 1868). The population is in great part agricultural, the chief products of the country being corn, wine, fruit, wood, and marble. The industries are cotton weaving and cotton spinning, leather goods, and pottery. The rearing of cattle, for which the fine Alpine pastures are well suited, is highly developed.

Administrator.—Gustav Schaedler (appointed June 9, 1922).

LITHUANIA.

(LIEUTUA.)

LITHUANIA became a Grand Duchy in the early part of the thirteenth century. In 1386 the Grand Duke Jogaila embraced Christianity and married the Polish Queen Hedvig, thus becoming King of Poland. During the reign of Vytautas (Vitold) the Great (1392-1430) Lithuania reached the zenith of her power and prosperity, her frontiers extending from the Baltic to the Black Sea. After the death of Vytautas the Great, Polish influence gradually increased in Lithuania, and in 1569 the Lithuanians were forced to unite with the Poles at Lublin, the Lithuanians retaining their own treasury, laws, courts of justice, and army. Both countries elected the same king and had a common Seim (parliament).

At the end of the eighteenth century Lithuania shared the fate of Poland. Greater Lithuania fell under Russian rule, and Lithuania Minor was annexed by Prussia.

In 1917 a Lithuanian Conference of 200 representatives at Vilna elected a Lithuanian State Council (Taryba) and demanded the complete independence of Lithuania. The independence of the Lithuanian State was proclaimed on February 16, 1918.

On December 20, 1922, Lithuania received de jure recognition by the Great Powers. Russia had already accorded that recognition in the Treaty of Peace of July 12, 1920.

Constitution and Government.—The constitution adopted by the Constituent Assembly on August 1, 1922, declares that the State of Lithuania is an independent Democratic Republic. The Diet (or Seimas) is the exponent of the sovereign power of Lithuania, and makes laws, ratifies treaties with other States, approves the State budget and superintends the execution of the laws. The Executive Power is placed in the hands of the President of the Republic and of the Cabinet of Ministers. The President of the Republic is elected by the Diet, and he chooses the Minister-President (Premier), who forms the Cabinet. The President also appoints the higher military and civil officials of the State. In case of the death, resignation or illness of the President, his place is to be taken by the President of the Diet. All the acts of the President must be countersigned by the Premier or the proper Minister. The Cabinet of Ministers is responsible to the Diet and resigns on an expression of a lack of confidence by the latter. The Members of the Diet on entering the Cabinet of Ministers do not cease to be Members of the Diet.

All the citizens of Lithuania, without distinction of sex, nationality or religion, are equal before the law; there are no classes or titles. All citizens are also guaranteed inviolability of person, homes, and correspondence, and freedom of religion, conscience, press, speech, strikes, assembly and organisation.

The present Diet of Lithuania was elected in 1926 by universal, equal, direct and secret suffrage according to the proportional system, the electoral unit being one representative to 25,000 inhabitants. There were elected 85 representatives, composed as follows:—Christian Democrats, 30 (including 11 members of the Farmers' Union, and 5 members of the Workers' Federation); Social Populist Democrats, 22; Social Democrats, 15. Nationalists, 3; Farmers' Party, 2; Jews, 3; Poles, 4; Germans, 1; and 5 members from the Territory of Memel, viz., 3 Agrarians and 2 People's Party.

On December 17, 1926, a coup d'état was carried out by some army officers, after which the following appointments were made:—

President of Lithuania.—M. Antanas Smetona.

Prime Minister.—Professor Augustinas Valdemaras.

For administrative purposes the non-occupied territory of Lithuania is divided into 20 districts, of about 100,000 inhabitants each. The districts are divided into communities, with about 15 communities to each district. National minorities (Jews, Germans, and Poles) enjoy cultural autonomy.

Area and Population.—The Lithuanian Government claims that Lithuania consists of: (1) the whole of the former Russian Province of Kaunas (Kovno); (2) the Province of Vilnius (Vilna), minus the districts of Disua and Vileika; (3) a part of the Province of Gardinas (Grodno), north of the Niemen River and the narrow hinterland of the city of Gardinas (Grodno) in the south; (4) the Province of Suvalki minus the southern parts of the districts of Suvalki and Augustovo; (5), part of the Province of Courland between the old German frontier and the Holy Aa (Sventoji) River by the Baltic Sea.

The eastern frontier of these territories is defined in the Treaty of Peace between Lithuania and Russia, signed July 12, 1920, at Moscow, and runs as follows: Beginning at the Dvina River westward from Druja (estate of Safronovo), along the Drujka River, along the eastern shore of Lake Driviaty, southward through Koziany, Postavy, by the eastern shore of Lake Narocz, along the Narocz River; then it cuts in half the Molodecno railway junction, runs by Volozino, along the Beresina River, and further to the west along the Niemen to the Svislocz River; further on it circles the city of Gardinas at a radius of 15 to 20 versts to the south.

The northern frontier (with Latvia) almost coincides with the old boundary between the Provinces of Courland and Kaunas. A special arbitration convention was adopted by the Lithuanian and Lettish Governments on September 28, 1920, at Riga, according to which the British representative acted as arbiter in finally fixing the details of this frontier and determining the corrections to be made.

In the south (in the region of the Province of Suvalki) the frontier with Poland has not yet been conclusively agreed upon by Lithuania and Poland. Both Lithuania and Poland lay claim to Vilna, but though the Great Powers (on March 15, 1923) recognized the de facto boundary between the two countries as de jure, and though the League of Nations has endeavoured to bring about a solution of this problem, so far (March, 1928) no agreement has been reached.

This territory had, according to the statistics of 1914, an area of 82,000 sq. kilometres (31,652 square miles) and 4,800,800 inhabitants, viz.: the whole of the former Province of Kaunas, 39,900 sq. kilometres, and 1,857,100 inhabitants; 5 districts of the former Province of Vilnius, 29,800 sq. kilometres, and 2,075,700 inhabitants; 5 districts of the former Province of Suvalki, 9,800 sq. kilometres, and 718,000 inhabitants; also parts of the former Provinces of Courland and Gardinas, 2,500 sq. kilometres, and 150,000 inhabitants

The Memel territory (area 2,447 sq. kilometres, population 145,000), which by the Treaty of Versailles was detached from Germany and placed under the control of the conference of ambassadors, was handed over to Lithuania on February 16, 1923, subject to certain conditions intended to regulate the use of the port by both Lithuania and Poland.

The population of unoccupied Lithuania on January 1, 1927, was given as 2,254,668.

The capital of Lithuania is Vilnius (Vilna), with a population of 214,600 in 1914. Other large towns are: Kaunas (Kovno), temporary seat of the Government, 94,904; Gardinas (Grodno), 61,600; Klaipeda (Memel), 32,587; Suvalkai (Suvalki), 31,600; Siauliai (Shavli), 22,111; and Panevėžys (Poneviej), 19,834. Of these cities, Vilna, Grodno and Suvalki are in possession of Poland.

Religion.—In the three districts of Vilna, Kovno, and Suvalki, according to the census of 1923, Roman Catholics formed 85 per cent., Jews 7·7 per cent., Protestants and Calvinists 4 per cent., Greek Orthodox 2·7 per cent. In the Memel Territory Protestants form 90 per cent., Roman Catholics 5 per cent. In April, 1926, the Vatican decided to declare Lithuania a Church Province, with an Archbishop and four bishops.

Instruction.—In 1927 there were 2,320 primary schools with 3,281 teachers and 122,000 pupils, and 120 secondary schools with 22,194 pupils. The University of Kovno which was opened on February 16, 1922, has (1927), 258 professors and teachers and over 4,000 students.

Finance.—The budget for 5 years is shown as follows:—

	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	Litas	Litas	Litas	Litas	Litas
Revenue. . . . .	208,296,779	229,746,000	258,625,300	250,406,394	223,722,762
Expenditure . . . . .	208,296,779	226,842,000	254,887,100	237,420,605	209,388,210

By the Treaty of Peace of Moscow, Russia took over, in place of an indemnity for the damage done by the Russian Army, the whole of the old Russian debt devolving on Lithuania; in addition, it was agreed to hand over to Lithuania 3,000,000 roubles in gold and to concede to Lithuania 100,000 hectares of forests.

On September 1, 1926, the foreign debt of Lithuania was: to the United States, 6,105,000 dollars; to Lithuanians in the United States, 1,846,350 dollars.

Defence.—Military service is compulsory, beginning at the age of 21. Service in the active army is for 2 years. The establishment of the active army in 1925 was 1,380 officers and 19,945 men, organised in 3 divisions.

Production.—Lithuania is an agricultural country, and preponderantly rural in character; the resources of the country consist of timber and agricultural produce. Of the total area, 49·0 per cent. is arable land, 26·0 per cent. meadow and pasture land, 17 per cent. forests, and 8 per cent. unproductive lands. In 1927 in the territory administered by the Lithuanian Government, 5,200,000 hectares (about 13,000,000 acres), there was produced (in metric tons) rye, 537,400; wheat, 136,200; barley, 189,870; oats, 269,750; potatoes, 1,220,000; peas, 65,450; flax fibre, 38,700; flax-seed, 39,700.

In 1926 the country possessed 535,000 horses, 1,396,000 cattle, 1,573,000 sheep, and 1,441,000 pigs. Poultry-farming is considerably developed, particularly geese-rearing. Bee-keeping is also an important occupation.

Forests cover 1,956,000 acres. 62 per cent. of the forests consist of needle-bearing trees, mostly pines, and the remainder of leaf-bearing trees. In 1927, 80,500 tons of peat were produced.

Commerce.—Trade for five years:—

	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926
	Litas	Litas	Litas	Litas	Litas
Exports . . .	76,892,410	146,794,720	266,588,600	242,714,800	258,299,600
Imports . . .	74,884,160	156,627,220	206,638,800	252,702,800	240,760,800

In 1926 imports of textiles amounted to 41,811,400 litas, of food products (sugar, salt, herrings) to 29,819,400, agricultural machinery 3,456,500. Exports of timber in the same period were 27,512,200 litas, foodstuffs (corn, flour, eggs, meat, dairy products) 50,069,100, flax and linseed 68,709,200.

Of the imports in 1926, 19,112,700 litas came from Great Britain, 129,541,600 litas from Germany, 15,142,200 litas from Czechoslovakia. Of the exports in 1926, 63,100,800 litas went to Great Britain, 118,577,800 litas to Germany, and 26,490,400 litas to Latvia.

The chief articles of export are corn, cattle, hams, poultry, eggs, butter, timber, flax, linseed, hides, and wool. The imports are chiefly manufactured articles, fertilisers and agricultural machinery.

Total trade between Lithuania and Great Britain for five years (according to Board of Trade returns):—

	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Lithuania into Great Britain . . .	816,777	735,545	475,230	687,381	389,771
Exports to Lithuania from Great Britain . . .	216,967	315,057	296,957	150,578	234,865

A commercial treaty between Great Britain and Lithuania was signed on May 6, 1922.

Internal Communications.—On October 1, 1926, the total length of railways was 1,673·9 kilometers (1040 miles), of which 1,110 kilometers (687 miles) were broad gauge lines.

There are about 41,000 kilometers (25,461 miles) of roads in the country, while of the waterways those navigable for steamboats extend to 586 kilometers (364 miles); for rafts to 2,000 kilometers (1,242 miles); total, 2,586 kilometers (1606 miles). The river Niemen is navigable for about 270 days in the year; good for floating, 1,977 km.

Banking and Credit.—By a law promulgated on August 16, 1922, a national currency, based on the gold standard, with the Litas as unit, was introduced to replace the Ost mark, Ost rouble, and German mark hitherto in circulation but now withdrawn. The Litas contains 0·150462 grammes of pure gold, and is equivalent to a tenth of the American gold dollar. In this connection the Bank of Lithuania (Lietuvos Bankas) was established in August 1922, on joint-stock principles, 50 per cent. of the shares being held by the State and the balance being available for private subscription. The Bank's capital-stock is 12,000,000 litas. Foreigners may own one-third of the capital-stock. The Bank enjoys during twenty years the sole right of issuing bank-notes. Although under the law the bank-note issue calls for a gold cover of one-third, yet in practice the Government has decided that the actual security must represent 100 per cent. in the form either of gold or stable currencies backed by gold. On July 31, 1927, the bank-notes in circulation amounted to 84,259,600 litas. There are now eight private banks in Lithuania with a total capital of 80,285,423 litas.

The weights and measures are of the metric system.

Reigning Grand Duchess.—Charlotte born January 23, 1896, succeeded on the abdication of her sister Marie-Adelaide, on January 9, 1919; married to Prince Felix of Bourbon-Parma on November 6, 1919.
Offspring :—Prince Jean, born January 5, 1921, Princess Elisabeth, born

December 22, 1922, Princess Marie-Adelaide, born May 21, 1924, Princess Marie-Gabrielle, born August 2, 1925, and Prince Karl, born August 9, 1927. Sisters of the Grand Duchess:—Princess Marie-Adelaide, born June 14, 1894, died January 24, 1924; Princess Hilda, born February 15, 1897; Princess Antonette, born October 7, 1899; Princess Elisabeth, born March 7, 1901; Princess Sophie, born February 14, 1902.

The early history of Luxemburg may be divided into four periods, viz., from 963 to 1443, when the country was part of the Holy Roman Empire; from 1443 to 1506, the Burgundian period; from 1506 to 1714, the Spanish period; and from 1714 to 1795, the Austrian period. From 1795 to 1815 the Duchy was French. The Congress of Vienna made the Duchy into a Grand Duchy, and from 1815 to 1866 the Grand Duchy was included in the dissolved Germanic Confederation. By the Treaty of London, May 11, 1867, it was declared neutral territory, and its integrity and independence were guaranteed.

Constitution and Government.—The Constitution now in force was proclaimed on October 17, 1868; in 1919 some important changes were introduced into it, viz. the Constituent Assembly decided that the sovereign power resided in the Nation (Article 32); that all secret treaties were abolished (Article 37); that the deputies are to be elected on the basis of universal suffrage, pure and simple, by scrutiny of lists, according to the rules of proportional representation and in conformity with the principle of the smallest electoral quotient (Article 52).

The country is divided into four electoral districts: the South, North, Centre, and East. In order to qualify as an elector it is necessary to be a citizen (male or female) of Luxemburg and to have completed 21 years of age; to be eligible for election it is necessary to have completed 25 years of age and to fulfil the conditions required for active electorate. The electors may be called upon to record their votes by means of a referendum or plébiscite in all cases and under the conditions to be determined by law (Article 52). The Members of the Chamber of Deputies receive a salary which may not surpass 4,000 francs per annum; they are also entitled to receive a travelling allowance (Article 75).

The Chamber of Deputies consists of 47 members, elected March 2, 1925. The state of the parties is as follows:—Catholics, 22; Radicals and Socialists, 10; Labour Party, 8; Independents, 7.

The head of the State takes part in the legislative power, exercises the executive power, and has a certain part in the judicial power. The Constitution leaves to the sovereign the right to organise the Government, which consists of a Minister of State, who is President of the Government, and of at least three Directors-General. The Cabinet, appointed July, 1926, is composed as follows:—

Minister of State and President of Government.—M. Bech.

Director-General of Justice and Home Affairs.—M. Dumont.

Director-General of Public Works, Trade and Industry.—M. Clemang.

Director-General of Finance and Social Welfare.—M. Dupong.

Besides the Government there is a Council of State. It deliberates on proposed laws and bills, on amendments that might be proposed; it also gives administrative decisions and expresses its opinion regarding any other question referred to it by the Grand Duke or by the Law. The Council of State is composed of 15 members chosen for life by the sovereign, who also chooses a president among them each year.

On September 28, 1919, a Referendum was taken in Luxemburg to decide on the political and economic future of the country. Those entitled to vote were men and women of 21 (voters on the register, 127,775 ; actual voters, 90,984). The voting resulted as follows :—for the reigning Grand Duchess, 66,811 ; for the continuance of the Nassau-Braganza dynasty under another Grand Duchess, 1,286 ; for another dynasty, 889 ; for a Republic, 16,885 ; for an economic union with France, 60,133 ; for an economic union with Belgium, 22,242. But France refused in favour of Belgium to consider the possibility of an economic union, and negotiations to this end between Belgium and Luxemburg were concluded on December 22, 1921, when the Chamber of the Grand Duchy passed a Bill for the economic union between Belgium and Luxemburg. The Agreement, which is for 50 years provides for the disappearance of the customs barrier between the two countries and the use of Belgian currency in the Grand Duchy. It came into force on May 1, 1922.

Area and Population.—Luxemburg has an area of 999 square miles, and a population (December 1922) of 260,767 (132,023 males and 128,744 females). Of these 227,331 were citizens and 33,436 foreigners. The population is Catholic, save (1922) 2,830 Protestants, 1,358 Jews, and 162 belonging to other sects. The chief town, Luxemburg, has 47,559 (1922) inhabitants. Other towns are Esch a l'Alz, the centre of the mining district, 21,208 inhabitants ; Differdange, 13,129 inhabitants ; Dudelange, 10,311 inhabitants ; Rumelange, 4,639 inhabitants ; and Diekirch, 3,755 inhabitants.

Instruction.—Education is compulsory for all children between the ages of 6 and 13 ; the system of education is modelled on that of Belgium. In 1926 the primary schools had 979 teachers (480 women) ; there are 25 higher elementary schools, 3 classical schools, 2 commercial and industrial colleges, 2 girls' colleges, a technical school, a teachers' training college (male and female), a mining school, a college of agriculture, and an academy of music.

Finance.—Estimated revenue and expenditure (including extraordinary) for six years (in francs) :—

The debt on December 31, 1926, amounted to 459,600,609 francs.

The armed forces of the State number 250 men.

Production and Industry.—Agriculture is carried on by about 90,000 of the population (about 36 per cent.) ; 394,000 acres were under cultivation in 1926. The principal crops are oats and potatoes.

According to the latest census (December 1, 1925), the country possesses 18,328 horses, 100,925 head of cattle, 120,928 pigs, 9,993 sheep, and 10,563 goats.

The mining and metallurgical industries are the most important. The following table shows production and value for four years :—

Year	Iron ore	Cast iron	Steel	Value of iron ore	Value of cast iron	Value of steel metric tons	metric tons	metric tons	francs	francs	francs
1924 .	5,833,580	2,157,170	1,840,800	—	760,103,128	821,190,542
1925 .	6,078,192	2,368,258	2,080,824	79,189,989	727,355,808	835,111,049
1926 .	7,756,240	2,559,151	2,31,487	121,988,062	1,217,435,850	1,186,125,220
1927 .	7,244,278	2,228,859	2,470,172	—	—	—

The number of blast furnaces in each of the above years was 47, employing 6,650 workers in 1926, 6,222 in 1925, and 5,155 in 1924; the wages paid being 66,271,858 francs, 49,662,047 francs, and 38,815,526 francs. There were 7 steel works, and the number of workers were 2,784 in 1926, 2,638 in 1925, and 2,208 in 1924, who received in wages 26,460,789 francs, 20,858,897 francs, and 16,357,080 in the three years respectively.

Communications.—In 1925 there were 342 miles of railway, and 699 miles of telegraph line with 1,826 miles of wire, and 417 telegraph offices. There were also 54 telephone systems with 1,120 miles of line and 10,627 miles of wire. In 1925 there were 139 post-offices, through which there passed 11,577,000 letters and 3,840,000 post-cards, &c.

Currency.—On August 2, 1924, a decree was passed authorising the emission of nickel pieces of 1 and 2 francs to a total of 3 million francs, to replace the notes created by the law of Nov. 28, 1914 and the decree of Dec. 11, 1918. On January 1, 1926, there were 139,633 depositors in the State Savings Bank, with a total of 206,761,467 francs to their credit, compared with 200,781 depositors with 181,183,007 francs on January 1, 1925.

MEXICO.

(REPÚBLICA MEXICANA.)

Constitution and Government.

MEXICO was annexed to the Spanish Crown by conquest in 1521, and for three centuries continued to be governed by Spain. In all 62 Spanish Viceroy ruled the Courts, from Antonio de Mendoza (1535-1550) to Juan O'Donojú (1821-1822). In 1810 the rule of the Spanish Viceroy had become so tyrannical that it caused an outbreak headed by the patriot priest Miguel Hidalgo, who on September 16, 1810, proclaimed the Independence of Mexico. On May 19, 1822, General Augustin Iturbide declared himself Emperor of Mexico, but in 1824 he had to flee, and the Republic was established. Several Presidents (Felix Fernandez Victoria, 1824-28, was the first) ruled the destinies of the country with more or less severity until 1864, when the throne of Mexico was offered to Archduke Ferdinand Maximilian of Austria. He was shot in 1867, and Benito Juarez, who had been President in the northern part of the country, took the reins of government. He was followed by Lerdo de Tejada, who in 1876 fled, and General Porfirio Diaz (died July 2, 1915) made his entry into Mexico City. He ruled the country with the exception of four years (1880-4, General Manuel Gonzalez) until May 25, 1911, when he presented his resignation to Congress. On November 6, 1911, Señor Francisco I. Madero assumed office as President and ruled until February, 1913, when a coup d'état took place, resulting in the President's murder (February 23, 1913) and his replacement by General Victoriano Huerta.

Civil war broke out in April, 1913, and on July 15, 1914, Huerta resigned. The internal discord continued until December, 1915, when most of the American and European States recognized Senor Carranza as head of the Government of Mexico. In May 1920, civil war broke out again: Carranza fled from the capital, and was shortly afterwards killed. General Adolfo de la Huerta was elected Provisional President in May, 1920, and in September, 1920, the presidential elections returned General Álvaro Obregón.

President.—Plutarco Elias Calles. (Elected July 6, 1924.)

A new Constitution, amending the Constitution of 1857, was promulgated on February 5, 1917. By its terms Mexico is declared a federative republic, divided into States, each of which has a right to manage its own local affairs, while the whole are bound together in one body politic by fundamental and constitutional laws. The powers of the supreme Government are divided into three branches, the legislative, executive, and judicial. The legislative power is vested in a Congress consisting of a House of Representatives and a Senate, and the executive in a President. Representatives, who must be at least 25 years of age, are elected for two years by universal suffrage at the rate of one member for 60,000 inhabitants. The Senate consists of fifty-eight members, two for each State, of at least thirty years of age, who are returned in the same manner as the deputies. The members of both Houses receive salaries of 6,000 dollars a year. The President is elected by direct popular vote in a general election, and holds office for four years. By a law of November, 1926, he may be elected for a second, but not consecutive term. Failing the President, Congress acts as an electoral college for the election of a successor. If the vacancy occurs during the first half of the President's term of office, Congress chooses a provisional President and arranges for new elections; if the vacancy occurs in the second term, Congress chooses the President for the remainder of the term. The Session of Congress is to be from September 1 to December 31. During the recess there is a Permanent Committee consisting of fourteen Senators and fifteen Representatives appointed by the respective Houses.

According to the law of April 13, 1917, the administration is carried on, under the direction of the President and a Council, by seven Secretaries of State (Foreign Affairs, Interior, Finance and Public Credit, War and Marine, Communications and Public Works, Industry and Commerce, and Labour and Agriculture), and four Departments of State (Judicial, Educational, Statistics, and Public Health).

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Mexico is divided into twenty-eight States, one Federal District, and two Territories. Each separate State has its own internal constitution, government, and laws; but inter-State customs duties are not permitted, though State taxes are levied. Each State has its governor, legislature, and judicial officers popularly elected under rules similar to those of the Federation. The Governors of the Federal District and the Territories are appointed by the President. All the States of the Mexican Union have their own special codes based, more or less, on those of the Federal District; but at the same time they must publish and enforce laws issued by the Federal Government.

Religion, Instruction, and Justice.

The prevailing religion is the Roman Catholic, but according to the new Constitution of 1917, the Church is separated from the State, and there is toleration of all other religions. No ecclesiastical body can acquire landed property. There are 7 archbishops and 23 bishops. In 1926 all foreign priests were expelled, and the property of the Church declared to belong to the State. In 1921, there were 13,921,226 Roman Catholics; 73,951 Protestants; 22,718 of other faiths; 208,836 of unknown faith.

Education is free and compulsory, and, according to the Constitution of 1917, secular. In the Federal District and in the Territories education is controlled by the National Government; elsewhere the State authorities regulate education. The Federal capital is the seat of the National University of Mexico, re-organised in 1910 (6,186 students in 1925). Another University, the National University of the South east, was established at Mérida (Yucatan) in 1922. The University of Guadalajara (first founded in 1792, closed 1860) was reopened on October 12, 1925. Total number of students in all the universities on July 31, 1925, 11,071. In 1923 the Republic had 14,231 primary schools (of which 13,487 were public schools), with 1,187,407 pupils, and 20,910 teachers. In 1926 there were 3,000 rural schools with an enrolment of 143,435 children and average attendance of 117,673. The Federal Government maintained in 1926 426 day primary schools with an enrolment of 42,957 pupils, of whom 27,215 were boys and 15,742 were girls. There are also 51 normal schools, 20 law schools, 31 medical schools, 12 engineering schools, and 107 technical schools, with 78,403 students and 7,247 teachers. Expenditure on education in 1923, 24,473,065 dollars.

The judicial power, which is entirely distinct from and independent of the executive, consists of the Supreme Court, with 11 judges chosen for a period of four years, nine Circuit Courts, with 3 judges, and District Courts, with 44 judges. After 1923 judges are to be appointed for life. The Federal District has a Higher Court of Justice composed of 14 magistrates; 10 civil, 8 penal and 8 correctional judges. In Tlalpam and Xochimilco there are Judges of First Instance with mixed jurisdiction, and Tacubaya has one civil judge and one penal. Popular juries are part of the judicial system. The General Congress appoints the magistrates of the Higher Court, the civil, penal, and correctional judges, and the Judges of First Instance. In the Territories there is a Judge of First Instance and a magistrate with authority of Second Instance, appointed like the others.

The University of Guadalajara (first founded in 1792, closed 1860) was reopened on October 12, 1925. Total number of students in all the universities on July 31, 1925, 11,071. In 1923 the Republic had 14,231 primary schools (of which 13,487 were public schools), with 1,187,407 pupils, and 20,910 teachers. In 1926 there were 3,000 rural schools with an enrolment of 143,435 children and average attendance of 117,673. The Federal Government maintained in 1926 426 day primary schools with an enrolment of 42,957 pupils, of whom 27,215 were boys and 15,742 were girls. There are also 51 normal schools, 20 law schools, 31 medical schools, 12 engineering schools, and 107 technical schools, with 78,403 students and 7,247 teachers. Expenditure on education in 1923, 24,473,065 dollars.

The judicial power, which is entirely distinct from and independent of the executive, consists of the Supreme Court, with 11 judges chosen for a period of four years, nine Circuit Courts, with 3 judges, and District Courts, with 44 judges. After 1923 judges are to be appointed for life. The Federal District has a Higher Court of Justice composed of 14 magistrates; 10 civil, 3 penal and 8 correctional judges. In Tlalpam and Xochimilco there are Judges of First Instance with mixed jurisdiction, and Tacubaya has one civil judge and one penal. Popular juries are part of the judicial system. The General Congress appoints the magistrates of the Higher Court, the civil, penal, and correctional judges, and the Judges of First Instance. In the Territories there is a Judge of First Instance and a magistrate with authority of Second Instance, appointed like the others.

Federal Finance.

The ordinary receipts and expenditure for four years :—

	1925	1926	1927 <sup>1</sup>	1928 <sup>1</sup>
Revenue	gold pesos 286,399,872	gold pesos 332,000,000	gold pesos 308,000,000	gold pesos 290,000,000
Expenditure	291,863,677	355,800,000	326,000,000	389,900,000

The 1928 budget includes estimates of revenue as follows (gold pesos): customs, 62,980,000; taxes on exploitation of natural resources, 27,800,000; 10 per cent. additional tax, 13,200,000; export taxes (principally oil), 49,030,000; taxes on industry, 49,030,000; Federal stamp tax, 39,400,000.

On September 1, 1925, the figures for the public debt of Mexico were given as follows: Debts not included in the de la Huerta-Lamont Convention of June 16, 1922, capital and interest, 171,445,085 pesos; debts included in the Convention, 982,136,775 pesos. Total, 1,153,581,860 pesos.

The service of the debt during the year 1928 will absorb 42 per cent. of the budgetary revenue. Beginning January 1, 1928, Mexico is obligated to pay in interest under the International Agreement 30,353,687 pesos, and in amortisations 33,989,530 pesos; other obligations derived from the agreement total 3,626,029 pesos for interest and 22,058,817 pesos in amortisations. Grand total, including commissions and exchange differences is put at 94,238,063 pesos. Obligations due abroad and not included in the agreement total 23,524,616 pesos, making total foreign obligations of 117,762,680 pesos (equal to 58,881,340 U.S. dollars).

Defence.

Every citizen is compelled to serve in the active army or in the National Guard. Supreme command is vested in the President, who exercises it through the Secretary for War. The active army consists of 50 battalions of infantry, 30 regiments of cavalry, 2 regiments of military police, 2 marine corps, 4 regiments of artillery and 3 detached companies. Its strength in 1926 was 13,100 officers and 45,000 other ranks. Military education is provided at a military college and in officers' training schools. A school of aviation has been established, and the organisation of an air force is in progress.

The Navy, which is little more than a police force, consists of a coast defence vessel Anahuac of 3,162 tons, purchased in 1924, and the gunboats Bravo and Agua Prieta. There is also an armed transport Progreso and some smaller vessels.

Production and Industry.

Mexico is well suited for agriculture. In the tropical regions, in the mountain valleys, and on the great central plateau are millions of acres of virgin soil and millions more which have been barely skimmed by the antiquated methods of agriculture in vogue.

Cultivated lands, 30,027,500 acres; pastoral lands, 120,444,200 acres; forest lands, 43,933,200 acres. Principal products in 1926 were maize (2,077,001 metric tons), sugar (194,700 tons), sugar cane (4,640,439 tons), henequen (120,000 tons), wheat (278,800 tons), coffee (27,349 tons), beans (173,920 tons), tobacco (9,187 tons), alfalfa (1,620,490 tons). There were 236 tobacco factories in the Republic. The cotton production was 85,869,494 kilos.

Timber lands are estimated to extend over 25,000,000 acres and to contain pine, spruce, cedar, mahogany, logwood, and rosewood.

Live-stock in 1924 : Cattle, 2,187,867 ; horses, 391,367 ; mules, 322,593 ; sheep, 1,728,216 ; goats, 2,865,540 ; and pigs, 1,759,600.

The chief Mexican oil-fields may be grouped in five districts :—(1) the Ebano district, about 40 miles west of Tampico (largely the property of the Mexican Petroleum Company) ; (2) the Panuco district, including the Topila region ; (3) the Huasteca district, south of Tampico, in which the famous 'Casiano,' 'Cerro Azul,' and 'Potrero del Llano' wells occur ; (4) the Tuxpam district, including the Furbero region, south-west of Tuxpam ; and (5) the Tehuantepec-Tabasco district, in the neighbourhood of Minatitlán. The fields actually in exploration occupy a surface of 62,175 acres.

Petroleum was produced as follows : In 1920, 163,540,000 barrels ; in 1921, 193,397,587 barrels ; in 1922, 182,278,657 barrels ; in 1923, 149,584,856 barrels ; in 1924, 139,678,294 barrels ; in 1925 115,514,700 barrels ; in 1926, 90,420,973 barrels. Of the 1926 output, 82,587,681 barrels were exported ; 55,364,454 barrels went to the United States and 3,402,496 to countries in Western Europe. There is a total of 2,005 storage tanks with a total capacity of 83,806,356 barrels. Mexico has the two largest petroleum refineries in the world, with capacities of 118,220 and 140,000 barrels respectively. With the decline of crude oil production from her own wells, Mexico began to import crude oil in 1926 for refining.

Mining is the principal industry in Mexico. It is carried on in 24 of the 31 States and Territories, nearly all the mines yielding silver either alone or in combination with other ores. The following table shows the quantities of mineral products for three years :—

Coal is produced only in the State of Coahuila (800,000 tons in 1926). Opals are mined in Querétaro.

In 1926 the 145 cotton textile factories had 30,500 looms, 780,000 spindles, consumed 41,500 metric tons of cotton and employed 43,199 workers.

Shipping and Communications.

The most important ports are Vera Cruz and Tampico, both on the Gulf of Mexico. In 1926 there entered at all the ports, 3,880 vessels of 7,167,048 tons, and cleared 3,885 vessels of 7,184,133 tons.

In 1909 the main railway lines of Mexico were united in one corporation—The National Railways of Mexico. In 1914 this system and practically all the private lines were taken over and worked by the government under the name of the Constitutional Railways of Mexico. On January 1, 1926, this system was returned to the owner corporations. The National Railways of Mexico own (1925) 8,200 miles of track and control an additional 322 miles. There are also 4,676 miles of private line. Total 13,197 miles. The Mexican Railway has 520 miles of track. The Tehuantepec Railway owns the line (184 miles of track) between Puerto Mexico on the Atlantic to Salina Cruz on the Pacific. The Mexico North-Western Railway owns 512 miles of track. The Southern Pacific Railway of Mexico has about 1,000 miles of track, including recently completed lines connecting Nogales, Guadalajara and Mexico City which promise to accelerate the development of the West Coast region. The United Railways of Yucatan have a length of 500 miles. A railway between Toluca and Zitacuaro (81 miles) has been commenced.

On December 31, 1920, the Federal telegraph and telephone lines had a length of 25,015 miles of line and 55,304 miles of wire. There were other lines belonging to individual States and private persons totalling 17,010 miles of line and 20,706 miles of wire. There were in 1925 548 telegraph offices, 12 telephone offices, 43 telegraph and telephone offices, and 25 wireless stations. Number of telegraph messages in 1925, internal, 5,875,365, foreign, 188,079.

There are about 2,696 post-offices. The post handled, in 1925, 199,898,358 pieces of mail matter.

A new wireless station has been established on the Island of Lobos, off the coast of Tampico, largely for the purpose of affording the various petroleum companies facilities for communicating with vessels while at sea. It is provided with powerful apparatus and is able to communicate with the wireless stations at Mexico City, Tuxpam, Tampico, Vera Cruz, Progreso, Frontera, Mazatlan, Santa Rosalia, La Paz, Queretaro, Monterrey, Saltillo, Torreon, and by way of Habana with various stations in the United States. A trans-oceanic radio station has also been erected at Chapultepec Park, Mexico City.

Banking and Credit.

On June 30, 1923, the banks of the Republic had in circulation notes to the value of 75,047,486 pesos.

On September 1, 1925, the National Bank of Mexico was established with an authorised capital of 100,000,000 gold pesos, of which 63,000,000 pesos was paid up by October 31, 1927. Under Article 28 of the Constitution it has the sole right to issue notes. It now has 25 branches scattered over the country.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

By a decree of April 29, 1925, the monetary unit is the gold peso or dollar, the legal value of which has been fixed at .75 gramme of pure gold. There are 20-peso (called astecas), 10-peso, 5-peso, 2.50-peso, and 2-peso gold coins, .900 fine and .100 copper, weighing respectively 16.666 $\frac{2}{3}$ , 8.333 $\frac{1}{3}$ , 4.166 $\frac{2}{3}$ , 2.083 $\frac{1}{3}$ , and 1.666 $\frac{2}{3}$  grammes. In 1919 American gold coin was decreed to be legal tender at the fixed rate of 1 dollar for 2 Mexican gold pesos. The silver coins are in denominations of 1 peso, 50 and 20 centavos, with a fineness of 720 milligrams of silver and 280 of copper for all the silver coins except the 2-peso, which is .900 fine of silver and .100 of copper. The bronze coins are to be in denominations of 20, 10, 5, 2 and 1 centavos, and have a composition of 95 per cent. copper, 2·5 per cent. tin, and 2·5 per cent. zinc. These coins are restricted legal tender up to 20 pesos for the silver coins. There are 5-centavo nickel coins. The value of the gold peso or dollar in peace time was 24·58 pence. From 1905 to 1925 the amount coined in Mexico was 383,441,966 pesos gold, 273,534,693 pesos silver, 1,660,952 pesos nickel, and 5,590,835 pesos bronze; total, 664,228,446 pesos. To reduce the surplus stock of silver coins the Government during 1927 called in and melted down 850,000 silver pesos; this reduced the discount on silver from 12·5 per cent. to 6 per cent.

The weights and measures of the metric system were introduced in 1884 and their use is enforced by law of June 19, 1895, though the old Spanish measures are still in use. The old weights and measures were:—

Weight.	1 libra = 0·46 kilogramme = 1·014 lb. avoirdupois.
	1 arroba = 25 libras = 25·357 lb. avoirdupois.
For gold and silver.	1 marco = $\frac{1}{2}$ libra = 4,608 granos.
	1 ochava = 6 tomines.
	1 tomin = 12 granos.
	20 granos = 1 French gramme.
Length.	1 vara = 0·837 mètre = 2 ft. 8 $\frac{3}{4}$ English in.
	1 legua comun = 6,666 $\frac{2}{3}$ varas.

MONACO.

Prince Louis II, born July 12, 1870, succeeded his father, Prince Albert, June 26, 1922.

Monaco is a small Principality on the Mediterranean, surrounded since 1860 by the French Department of Alpes Maritimes except on the side towards the sea. From 968 it belonged to the house of Grimaldi. In 1715 it passed into the female line, Louise Hippolyte, daughter of Antony I., heiress of Monaco, marrying Jacques de Goyon Matignon, Count of Thoirny, who took the name and arms of Grimaldi. Antony I died in 1731, Louise Hippolyte reigning only ten months and dying in 1732. She was succeeded by her husband under the name of Jacques I., who also succeeded Antony I. as Duc de Valentinois, and was in his turn succeeded by his son Honorius III. This Prince was dispossessed by the French Revolution in 1792, and died in 1795. In 1814 the Principality was re-established, but placed under the protection of the Kingdom of Sardinia by the Treaty of Vienna (1815).

In 1848 Mentone and Roccabruna revolted, and declared themselves free towns; in 1861 Charles III. ceded his rights over them to France, and the Principality thus became geographically an enclave of France, when the Sardinian garrison was withdrawn and the Protectorate came to an end.

On January 7, 1911, a Constitution was promulgated, which provides for a National Council elected by universal suffrage and scrutin de liste. The Government is carried out under the authority of the Prince by a Ministry assisted by a Council of State. The legislative power is exercised by the Prince and the National Council, which consists of 21 members elected for four years. The territory of the Principality is divided into three communes, administered by municipal bodies, in the election of which women are entitled to take part.

In 1819 the Government adopted a code founded upon the French codes and a Court of First Instance, as well as a Juge de Paix's Court. The Principality issues its own separate postage-stamps, and has its own flag.

The small harbour, absolutely sheltered, has an area of 42 acres, depth at entrance 90 feet, and alongside the quay 24 feet at least. The Customs duties are the same as in France.

The area is eight square miles. Population (census January 9, 1923), 22,153. Towns: Monaco, 2,020; La Condamine, 10,705; Monte Carlo, 9,428.

There has been since 1887 a Roman Catholic bishop. A semi-military police force has taken the place of the 'guard of honour' and troops formerly maintained. The value of the commerce of the Principality is not stated. The revenue is mainly derived from the gaming tables. The annual grant for the concession was 80,000*l.* in 1917; in 1927 it will be 90,000*l.*, and in 1937 100,000*l.*

MOROCCO.

(MOGHREB-EL-AKSA, i.e. The Farthest West).

Reigning Sultan.

Sidi Mohammed, third son of Moulay Youssef (reigned 1912-1927), was proclaimed Sultan on November 18, 1927, on the death of his father.

The introduction of Islam into Morocco about the end of the 7th century was followed by an exceedingly confused period, to the latter part of which belongs the great Arab influx of the 11th century known as the Hilalian invasion. This period witnessed the rise and fall of various Arab and Berber dynasties, notably the Idrissids, under whom Fez was founded or refounded early in the 9th century, and the Almoravids, the first of whom, Youssef Ben Tashfin, founded Marrakesh in 1062, and later extended his power over the north of Morocco and into Spain. His dynasty was followed by the Almohads (12th and 13th centuries), and the Merinids (13th to 16th centuries), whose decline led up to the establishment of the Sherifian dynasties, the Saadians (16th and 17th centuries) and the Alaouis. The latter claim descent from Ali, the son-in-law of the Prophet, through the Filali Sherifs of Taflelt. The present Sultan is the 18th of this dynasty.

Government.

The Empire of Morocco is in principle an absolute monarchy, in which the Sultan exercises supreme civil and religious authority; the latter in his capacity of Emir-el-Muminin or Commander of the Faithful. The majority of his subjects are Sunni Moslems of the Malekite school, the teachings of which formerly constituted the common law of Morocco. The country is now, however, divided into three Zones, in each of which a different system of government prevails as the outcome of the Protectorate Treaty concluded between France and the Sultan at Fez on March 30, 1912, the subsequent Convention between France and Spain of November 27, 1912, and the Convention between Great Britain, France and Spain of December 18, 1923, providing for a special Statute in the Tangier Zone for twelve years.

The Sultan resides in the French Zone, usually at Rabat, but occasionally in one of the other traditional capitals, Fez, Marrakesh, and Meknes. His government, known as the Makhzen, consists of the Grand Vizier, the Vizier of Justice, the Vizier of 'Habous' or Pious Foundations, the Grand Vizier's Delegate for Public Instruction and the Presidents of the Sherifian High Court and the Religious Court of Appeal. All effective authority is exercised by the Protecting Power, which is represented by a Resident General. The latter is Minister of Foreign Affairs to the Sultan and head of an elaborate French administration which has its headquarters at Rabat and which is divided into departments for Finance, Economic Affairs, Public Instruction, etc. The French have created a large body of modern law in the form of Imperial Edicts or 'Dahirs' issued by the Sultan but promulgated and made executory by the Resident General, and decrees of minor importance, all of which similarly require French approval. Local administration is in the hands of native Pashas or Caids and French Controllers. The French civil administration has been made independent of military authority in the coastal regions and the Oudjda district adjoining Algeria. In other districts it is still subordinate to military authority. In the less settled districts in the south-east of the Zone the French control is less direct than elsewhere, and considerable authority is vested in the 'Grand Caïds' or tribal overlords.

In the Spanish Zone the Sultan's powers are entirely delegated to a Khalifa, whom he chooses from a list of two candidates presented by the Spanish Government, and whose administration is controlled by a Spanish High Commissioner resident at Tetuan. Spanish authority in the Zone was consolidated by successful military operations in the spring of 1927. Spain also has treaty rights in a narrow coastal strip at Ifni as well as in an area extending south from the river Dra and some distance inland from the coast about Cape Juby. She has never established herself effectively in the Ifni enclave. The connection of the area south of the Dra with the rest of Morocco is tenuous and it merges into the Spanish Rio de Oro further south.

The Tangier Statute came into force on June 1, 1925, but has not yet received the adhesion of all the Powers signatory of the Act of Algeciras of April 7, 1906. The Zone is permanently neutralised and demilitarised. The régime is one of autonomy, and legislative power is vested in an international Assembly of 26 members, but the parties to the Statute agreed on certain codes which were not to be modified for two years. A Committee of Control, composed of the Consuls of the Powers signatory of the Act of Algeciras, is invested with a right of veto and certain other powers. The administration of the Zone is entrusted to an administrator, an assistant administrator for finance, and an assistant administrator for health, etc., who are French, British and Spanish respectively for the first six years. The Sultan is represented by a Mendoub, who is ex-officio President of the Assembly and who deals more particularly with native affairs.

Area and Population.

The French Zone comprises the whole of Morocco (except the Ifni enclave and the Cape Juby area) from the Atlantic to the Algerian frontier, and from the confines of the Sahara to the boundary of the Spanish Zone as agreed to in 1912. The Franco-Spanish boundary has not been fully delimited. It follows a generally eastern direction from a point on the Atlantic about 16 miles south of Larache to the river Moulouya, which completes the boundary to the Mediterranean. The Spanish Zone comprises the area between this line and the sea, with the exception of the small territory around Tangier which is included in the international zone. The southern and eastern boundaries of Morocco being largely indeterminate, no exact estimate can be made of the total area, but it may be estimated as follows:—

French Zone	approximately	200,000 square miles.
Spanish Zone in north	"	8,000 " "
" " Ifni	"	800 " "
" " Cape Juby	"	9,500 " "
Tangier Zone	"	225 " "
Total . . .		218,525

The native population consists mainly of Islamised Berbers and Arabs dating from the great invasions of the Middle Ages. These elements have to some extent intermixed with each other and with negro stocks. There is a large native Jewish population, mostly in the towns. Since 1912 the European element has greatly increased, especially owing to the influx of French into the towns of the French Zone and of a fair number of agricultural settlers, also mostly French. A census of the French Zone taken in March, 1926, puts the population at 4,016,882 native Moslems, 107,552 native Jews and 104,712 foreigners; total 4,229,146. That of the Spanish Zone may be put at something under 1,000,000, and that of the Tangier Zone at about 80,000.

The following table shows the estimated population of the principal towns, based in the case of the French Zone on the revised results of the 1926 census of the population:—

—	Europeans	Moslems	Jews	Total
French Zone:—
Casablanca . . .	34,984	2,134	19,490	106,608

Tangier . . .	10,000	35,000	15,000	60,000

There are important British colonies at Casablanca (about 700), and Tangier (650). Spaniards form an important element in the European population of the coast towns.

The principal languages are Moorish, Arabic, and numerous Berber dialects. The use of French for official and business purposes is very widespread.

Instruction.

The bulk of the native population is illiterate. There are numerous Koranic schools imparting a very elementary education, and a number of higher schools attached to mosques. The most notable is the Kairoween University at Fez, which is highly reputed in the Islamic world. In the French Zone education on European lines is given in the French schools, of which there were 90 in 1924. There are high schools for boys and for girls at Rabat, Casablanca and Oudjda, and an industrial and commercial school at Casablanca. There are also Franco-Arab primary schools (67 in 1924); schools for the sons of notables and two Moslem colleges at Rabat and Fez, which are recruited from these; an Institut de Hautes Études Marocaines at Rabat; and various establishments in which technical instruction is given, including schools for training native girls in embroidery, etc. Jewish education has made great progress since 1912 under the joint auspices of the Protectorate and the Alliance Israélite. There were in 1924, 42 Franco-Jewish schools and Jewish schools. Research work is done at the Institut Scientifique Chérifien at Rabat.

There are State schools in the chief towns of the Spanish Zone, also certain Hispano-Arabic schools for education of natives. The Alliance Israélite has schools in Tetuan and Larache, and extensive premises for a native school of Arts and Industries are being erected in Tetuan.

The schools in Tangier include one maintained by the Spanish Government, two high schools for boys and girls, and a primary school maintained by the French Protectorate administration, and sundry Jewish schools.

Justice.

French Zone.—Native justice is administered by religious courts and in a large range of criminal and civil cases by the Pashas and Caidas. Under the Protectorate two Courts of Appeal corresponding to these jurisdictions have been set up at Rabat. French Courts modelled on those in France were created in 1913, and deal with cases brought by or against French and other foreigners, except cases against British and United States citizens, who retain capitulatory rights and are justiciable in their own Consular courts. The French Courts are the Court of Appeal at Rabat, Courts of First Instance at Rabat, Casablanca, Oudjda, and Marrakesh, and twelve tribunaux de paix. They administer specially drawn-up codes, which inter alia provide for the application of the national law in matters affecting the personal status of foreigners. Rabbinical Courts deal with matters affecting the personal status of Jews.

Spanish Zone.—Native and Jewish justice is similar to that in the French Zone, except that all criminal cases are tried in the Spanish Courts. These consist of Audiencia, or Supreme Court, Court of First Instance, and Tribunaux de Paix. As in the French Zone, British subjects and American citizens are justiciable in their own Consular Courts. Dutch subjects also retain capitulatory rights in the Spanish Zone.

Tangier Zone.—Native justice is administered as in the French Zone, the Mendoub having a jurisdiction similar to that of Pashas and Caidas. The Statute provides for a Mixed Tribunal which deals with all cases involving foreigners, except the subjects of Powers signatory of the Act of Algeciras, which have not adhered to the Convention and still claim capitulatory rights.

1 Provisional results.

2 Estimates.

3 Preliminary estimates, subject to modification.

The following are the chief items of estimated income for 1927 in francs :—Direct taxes, 154,090,000; indirect taxes, 274,576,000; monopolies, 57,917,000. The main items of estimated expenditure are :—Public debt and Civil List (now including bulk of contribution to French military budget), 140,717,893; Residency General, 46,872,753; Justice and General Administration, 66,627,703; Financial Services, 51,991,930; Economic Services, 157,213,084; Social Services, 50,428,876. There are two special budgets of expenditure chargeable to loans and connected operations (Fr. 55,803,288 in 1927 to be covered by short-term loans), and expenditure chargeable to reserve and 'specially affected resources', including the 'Taxe Spéciale' provided for in the Act of Algeciras (Fr. 85,399,600 in 1927).

The Moroccan debt consists of French loans (1904, 1910, 1914, 1918, and 1920). The 1904 loan amounted to 62,500,000 francs and bears interest at 5 per cent. The 1910 loan was for 101,124,000 francs and also bore interest at 5 per cent. The 1914 loan, guaranteed by the French Government, was for 170,250,000 francs. By a law dated March 25, 1916, the 1914 loan was increased to 242,000,000 francs. The first issue of 70,250,000 in July, 1914, was at 4 per cent., and the second issue 171,750,000 in March, 1918, was at 5 per cent. By the law of August 19, 1920, a further loan, also guaranteed by the Government, was authorised for 744,140,000 francs. Of this amount 300 million francs had been issued by 1923, since when no further issue has been made. The total debt therefore amounts to 705,624,000 francs for loans.

The budget of the Spanish Zone for 1928 balanced at 55,913,441 pesetas by the help of a subvention from the Spanish Treasury. The following are the principal items of the 1928 Budget:—

Revenue	Pesetas	Expenditure	Pesetas
Direct taxes . . . . .	1,900,000	Spanish Administration . . . . .	659,805
Indirect taxes (chiefly Customs) . . . . .	13,692,000	Native . . . . .	1,334,520
Consumption Duties (monopolies) . . . . .	1,501,500	Military . . . . .	40,278,982
Other . . . . .	1,470,000	Public Works . . . . .	3,014,140
Advances from the Treasury . . . . .	37,349,941	Colonisation . . . . .	1,540,300
		Finance . . . . .	1,715,785
		Social Services . . . . .	8,895,750
Total . . . . .	55,913,441	Total (including all items) . . . . .	59,913,441

The principal revenue of the Tangier Zone is from Customs and Consumption duties, against which must be set off a rebate of 25 per cent. payable to the authorities of the Spanish Zone in respect of the estimated proportion of imports consumed in that Zone. The total revenue in francs for 1926 was 25,875,921, and that for 1927 was 27,000,000. The total expenditure for 1926 was 21,337,238, and for 1927, 22,000,000. A reserve fund of some 4 million francs has been maintained. This it is proposed to apply gradually to new public works.

Defence.

The Sherifian army as such no longer exists, except for the Black Guard or Sultan's bodyguard. The military forces in the French Zone are made up of drafts (consisting largely of African troops) from the French Metropolitan and Colonial armies, a portion of the Foreign Legion and native levies of various kinds. Following on the termination of the Riff war a Presidential decree of October 3, 1926, placed the army under the control of the Resident General for all purposes except actual operations, and directed that the regular land forces should be organised in three divisions and two mixed brigades. The French budget for 1927 provided for 2,820 officers and 82,795 men to be employed in Morocco. Military expenditure in 1927, 679,186,545 francs. The composition of the Spanish forces in the Spanish Zone is in the main similar to that of the French. The Tangier Zone is demilitarised. The 1923 Statute provided for a native gendarmerie not exceeding 250 men under a Belgian officer, but this provision is being reconsidered by the interested Powers. Meanwhile the protection of the Zone is still assured by two native labors maintained by the French and Spanish authorities under officers of those nationalities. The total strength of this force is at present 780 men.

Production and Industry.

French Zone.—Agriculture is by far the most important industry. After making large deductions for areas not yet effectively occupied and for mountainous regions, the total agricultural area is estimated at about 23,800,000 acres, not including forests. Forest land is estimated at about 3,700,000 acres, of which one-third lies within the agricultural area. The principal crops are cereals, especially wheat and barley; beans, chickpeas, fenugreek and other legumens; canary-seed; cumin and coriander; linseed; olives; vines and other fruits, especially almonds. The yield of the principal crops (in metric quintals of 220 pounds) in 1924-25 was as follows:—barley, 12,287,479; wheat, 7,723,523; beans, 311,026; oats, 164,432; maize, 1,194,566; chickpeas, 190,778; linseed, 130,680.—Endeavours are being made to stimulate the production of other crops, e.g. cotton. Market-gardening for export has become important in the neighbourhood of Casablanca. The almost universal wild palmetto is put to various uses, including the manufacture of crin végétal. The trees grown include cork, cedar, arar, argan, oak, and various conifers. In 1925 there were 3,215,595 olive trees, 170,849 orange and lemon trees, 326,924 palm trees (dates), 1,154,184 almond trees, and 2,965,197 fig trees. The argan forests inland from Mogador produce a fruit rich in oil. Tizra wood is exported for tanning purposes. Gums are produced in considerable quantities. Stock-raising is an increasing industry. The estimate of the animals in the Zone in 1926 was:—cattle (bovine), 1,932,840; sheep, 9,248,462; goats, 3,037,731; pigs, 59,311; horses, 190,251; asses, 562,835; camels, 117,917.

The bulk of the land is held by natives, who cling to primitive methods. There are now, however, a fair number of European settlers. The number of exploitations was estimated in 1926 at 1,958, of which 1,750, representing an area of 1,800,000 acres, were in French hands. The system of 'immatriculation,' based on the Australian Torrens Act, which was introduced in 1913 with a view to give owners secure titles, applies to rural as well as to urban properties. Since 1919 considerable efforts have been made to promote the settlement of colonists under official auspices, and a certain amount of domanial land is made available for distribution each year. Agriculture is still too much at the mercy of seasonal uncertainty, and the harvests in 1925 and 1926 were disappointing. It is intended to start in 1927 on a considerable programme of irrigation works, which is to include barrages in the rivers Beth, Moulouya, Mellah, Nefis, Oum-er-Rebia, Derna, Tessaout and El-Akhdar. Recent measures to stimulate agriculture include the institution of long-term credit at low rates of interest and premiums for motor-culture.

The principal mineral exploited is phosphate, the output of which (under a State monopoly) has grown rapidly from 8,232 tons in 1921 to 885,720 tons in 1926, and 1,183,469 tons in 1927. The tenor is very high (76 per cent.). Lead ore and manganese are produced in exportable quantities. Prospecting for other minerals is active, including gold, silver, iron, tin, copper, silver, lead and petroleum. Important deposits of iron ore near Tiflet, inland from Rabat, began to be exploited commercially in 1926.

The coasts abound in fish. The chief fishing centres are near Casablanca and at Fedhala, which possesses an important preserving industry.

Pending the realisation of the great scheme for providing a central supply of electrical energy for practically the whole zone by harnessing the water power of the Oum-Er-Rebia, a large power station has been erected at Casablanca and local supplies exist in various other towns.

A great number of miscellaneous industries designed partly to supply local requirements of goods previously imported have grown up in recent years. Among them are flour mills, breweries, soap and candle factories, cement factories, etc., etc.

Spanish Zone.—Agriculture is potentially important, but is carried on by natives in primitive fashion. European colonisation is at present almost entirely confined to the towns. Iron ore is mined and exported from the Melilla district. The Jebala and Ghomara areas are reputed to be rich in mineral wealth, but the disturbed state of the country has prevented any systematic exploitation. Fishing, largely tunny, is an important industry. No other considerable industries exist.

Tangier Zone.—The agricultural output, consisting principally of wheat, barley and chickpea, is insufficient for the needs of the population. The most important single industry is the manufacture by a Régie of cigarettes for the whole of Morocco. This employs 700 persons. There are also important fisheries and preserving factories and a certain amount of market gardening for local requirements.

Commerce.

French Zone.—Foreign trade has expanded considerably in franc value since 1912. The increase has been in the main progressive, especially as regards imports. Imports consists of articles like cotton textiles, sugar, tea, candles and hardware, for which there is a strong native demand, and the more varied requirements of a primitive country undergoing intensive development under European auspices and with a much-increased European population. Exports consist principally of agricultural products, both vegetable and animal, and in recent years phosphates. About 10 per cent. of the total trade crosses the Algerian frontier; the remainder through the Atlantic ports. Imports through Algeria formerly enjoyed preferential customs rates, but this privilege was in 1924 limited to the eastern area by the creation of a customs barrier at Taza, where the difference between the reduced duty paid at the frontier and the ordinary duty has now to be paid.

Spanish Zone.—The closing of the native markets by the tribal rebellions has greatly restricted commerce. The principal imports are wines, textiles, tea, sugar, candles. Supplies for military purposes form a large proportion of the total. The principal exports are eggs, live-stock, iron ore and agricultural products. Imports in 1924 totalled 123 million pesetas; of this amount Spain provided 70 million pesetas; France 17 millions, United Kingdom 10 millions, and U.S.A. 7 millions. Exports totalled 18 million pesetas, of which Spain took 17 millions.

Tangier Zone.—Imports and exports for five years:—

Exports . . . . .	4,409,478	8,414,394	11,569,827	18,096,725	28,594,979

The principal imports are flour, sugar, candles, cottons and other fabrics, coffee, tea, tobacco, soap, oils, cereals, fruit and vegetables and wines. The principal exports are skins, eggs and tinned fish. Live-stock and game are also exported.

Shipping and Communications.

Shipping entered (in foreign trade) in the ports of French Zone and Tangier in 1926:—

Casablanca possesses a fully equipped port, Kenitra a smaller up river one. Modern ports are under construction at Rabat and Tangier. Fedhala can accommodate vessels up to 4,000 tons which supply important oil storage stations. Mazagan and Mogador have lighter ports and another is under construction at Safi.

The ports in the Spanish Zone are relatively unimportant, the bulk of the trade being done through Tangier, Ceuta and French Zone ports; 393 ships of 159,538 tonnage cleared from Larache during 1925, and 147 ships of 68,720 tonnage from Rio Martin, the port of Tetuan. These figures include coastwise trade, for which no separate statistics are given.

Normal gauge (1'44) railways connect:—Fez-Petitjean (112 km.); Petitjean-Arbaoua (88 km.); Petitjean-Rabat (123 km.); Rabat-Casablanca (89 km.); Casablanca-Kourigha (Phosphate lime, 139 km.); Ber-Rechid-Settat (30 km.). The first two form part of the Tangier-Fez railway, which was completed and opened to traffic in July 1927, and the total length of which is 310 km. The normal gauge line from Casablanca is expected to be completed from Settat to Marrakesh at the end of 1928. Narrow-gauge (60 cm.) railways connect:—Oudjda-Taza-Fez (401 km.); Guercif-Tamdafelt (215 km.); Beni Tamam-Ahermouman (40 km.); Kenitra-Onezzan (157 km.); Rabat-Khemisset (94 km.); Ain Defali-Fes El Bali (65 km.); El Tleta-Meshra El Hader (54 km.); Casablanca-Marrakesh (286 km.).

The existing railways in the Spanish Zone are Ceuta-Tetuan (41 km.); Nador-Tistutin (36 km.); and Larache-Alcazar (40 km.), besides the portion of the Tangier-Fez railway which crosses the zone.

Since 1912 Morocco has been equipped with an extensive system of roads. Motor transport plays an increasingly important part in the life of the country both for goods and passengers. The system in the French Zone will when complete comprise about 2,100 miles of first-class and 1,009 miles of second-class roads, to which must be added numerous 'pistes aménagées,' some of which are already possible for motor traffic. The system already connects Rabat and Casablanca with all other important towns on the coast and in the interior, and connects with those of the Spanish and Tangier Zones and of Algeria and Tunis at Arbaoua (frontier of Spanish Zone) and Oudjda (Algerian frontier) respectively. On January 1, 1927, there were completed 1,779 miles of first-class roads and 669 miles of second-class. The Spanish Zone has about 190 miles of roads suitable for wheeled traffic, including roads from Tetuan to Ceuta and Tangier and the Spanish portion of the Tangier-Rabat trunk road. The roads in the Tangier Zone have been considerably improved since the coming into force of the Statute. There are now about 65 miles of urban and rural roads, including portions of the roads to Tetuan and Rabat and tourist roads or 'pistes' to Cape Spartel, Sidi Kasseh, the Caves of Hercules and Bugdur.

There is a daily aeroplane service between Toulouse and Casablanca via Tangier and Rabat, and a weekly service between Casablanca and Dakar. There is also a daily service between Seville and Larache via Tetuan.

A Sherifian postal service under French management exists in the French and Tangier zones. European mails are conveyed by steamer services from Marseilles and Bordeaux, overland through Spain, and by daily steamers between Algeciras and Tangier and increasingly by air from Toulouse. The Sherifian service in 1925 received 19,184,300 letters, 1,871,700 registered letters, 495,540 parcels and 5,749,800 printed papers; and despatched 20,328,900 letters, 1,844,100 registered letters, 52,287 parcels and 2,347,200 printed papers. The Spanish authorities maintain the ordinary postal service in the Spanish Zone. Spain retains a post-office in Tangier, and Great Britain maintains the only foreign postal service still existing in Morocco as a whole, with offices at Rabat, Casablanca, Mazagan, Saffi, Mogador, Marrakesh, Fez, Tetuan, Larache, Arzila and Tangier.

The total length of telegraph lines open to the public in the French Zone on December 31, 1925, was about 1,495 miles, carrying 10,170 miles of wire. These figures do not include the extensive system of military telegraphs. In 1925, 1,189,478 telegrams were received and 1,059,239 despatched, exclusive of 101,521 received and 93,073 despatched free of charge (official, etc.). All important centres in the Spanish Zone are connected by land lines. Communication between Morocco and Europe is maintained by cables between Casablanca and Brest, Tangier-Oran-Marseilles, Tangier-Gibraltar, Tangier-Cadiz, Larache-Cadiz via Algeria. The French Protectorate administration maintains wireless stations at various places in the French Zone and also at Tangier.

Telephone systems exist in all the principal towns of the French Zone and there is a complete inter-urban connection. In 1923 there were in the Zone 4,764 subscribers and 4,185,189 messages sent. Urban services exist in the principal towns of the Spanish Zone and at Tangier.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

Since the withdrawal of the Hassani currency (see below) in 1920 the franc has been the sole currency in the French Zone. Measures were taken later to protect the note-issue of the Moroccan State Bank from the competition of Algerian and French notes, and steps were taken at the end of 1924 to make those measures really effective. The Moroccan franc (State Bank notes of all denominations from frs. .5 upwards) is maintained at parity with the French franc by a current account arrangement dating from 1921. The metric system of weights and measures became in 1923 the sole legal system, subject to qualifications the scope of which was reduced by a decree of February 6, 1925. It is in general use for all important commercial transactions.

Spanish currency circulates in the Spanish Zone together with the old Hassani silver currency. The latter has undergone many vicissitudes since it was the legal currency (concurrently under the Act of Algeciras of 1906 with Spanish money) for the whole of Morocco. It is now relatively stable at an exchange of Pesetas Hassani 50 to the £ stg.

Moroccan francs and Spanish money are legal tender in the Tangier Zone. The Peseta Hassani continues to circulate freely.

The principal native measures still in current use are :—

Weight.—1 Kantar = 100 Rotls. 1 Rotl = 16 ookeyas. The Rotl varies widely round about 2 lbs. Capacity.—The mudd, which varies by locality. Length.—1 Kama = 50 inches. 1 Dra = 20 inches. 1 Kala = 22 inches.

Diplomatic and Consular Representatives of Great Britain in Morocco.

Under the Tangier Convention of December 18, 1923, the diplomatic agencies maintained by the signatory Powers were suppressed.

Consul-General at Tangier.—Hugh Gurney, C.M.G., M.V.O.

Consul-General at Rabat.—Sir Andrew Ryan, K.B.E., C.M.G.

Consul at Tangier.—William Linskill Bond.

There are also Consuls at Casablanca and Tetuan (Vice-Consul with local rank of Consul); and Vice-Consuls at Mazagan, Saffi, Mogador, Marrakesh, Fez and Larache.

NEPÁL.

An independent Kingdom in the Himálayas, between 26° 25' and 30° 17' N. lat., and between 80° 6' and 88° 14' of E. long.; its greatest length 500 miles its greatest breadth about 150 ; bounded on the north by Tibet, on the east by Sikkim, on the south and west by British India.

The sovereign is His Majesty Mahārājādhirāja Tribhubana Bir Bikram Jung Bahādur Shah Bahādur Shumshere Jung, who was born on June 30, 1906, and succeeded his father on December 11, 1911. The Prince-Royal and Heir-apparent was born on June 11, 1920. The government of Nepāl is a military oligarchy. All power is in the hands of the Prime Minister, to whom it was permanently delegated by the Mahārājādhirāja Surendra Bikram Shah under pressure of the Bharadārs or nobles of the State in 1867. The present Prime Minister is General His Highness Projjwal Nepāl Tārādhishk Mahārāja Sir Chandrá Shumshere Jung, Bahādur Rānā, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., D.C.L., who was appointed on June 26, 1901. He holds the rank of General in the British army. The office of Prime Minister is always held by a member of his family, the succession being determined by special rules.

The Gurkhas, a Rājput race originally from Udaipur in Rajputana, who had settled in the province of Gurkha in Nepāl, overran the whole country during the latter half of the eighteenth century, and have maintained their supremacy ever since. A commercial treaty between India and Nepāl was signed in 1792, and a British Resident was sent to reside at Kātmāndu, but was recalled two years later. A frontier outrage, in 1814, compelled the Indian Government to declare war ; and a British force advanced to within three marches of the capital. Peace was concluded and the Treaty of Sagauli signed in December 1815. Since then the relations of the British with Nepāl have been friendly. In 1854 hostilities broke out between the Nepalese and Tibetans, and in 1856 a Treaty was concluded between the Nepalese and Tibetan Governments by which the Tibetans bound themselves to pay an annual sum of Rs.10,000 to Nepal, to encourage trade between the two countries, and to receive a Representative of Nepāl at Lhasa. Besides, trade agents are maintained at Gyantse, Kuti, Kerrong, and other trade marts in Tibet.

In accordance with the treaty of Sagauli, which amongst other things provides that accredited ministers of each shall reside at the Court of the other, a British Envoy, with a small escort of Indian sepoys, lives at the capital : but he does not interfere in the internal affairs of the State.

A fresh treaty was signed on December 21, 1923. By it all previous treaties, agreements and engagements since and including the Treaty of Sagauli were confirmed, and the British and Nepalese Governments acknowledged one another's independence, internal and external.

Area and Population.—Area about 54,000 square miles ; population estimated at about 5,600,000. The estimated gross revenue is 15,000,000 rupees. The races of Nepāl, besides the dominant Gurkhas, include earlier inhabitants of Tartar origin, such as Magars, Gurungs, and Bhotias. The Newars, who came from Southern India, live in the valley or adjacent to it.

Capital, Kātmāndu, 75 miles from the Indian frontier ; population about 80,000, and of the surrounding valley 300,000.

Religion.—Hinduism of an early type is the religion of the Gurkhas, and is gradually but steadily overlaying the Buddhism of the primitive inhabitants.

Defence.—The Army consist of about 45,000 men, mainly infantry, of whom about 20,000 are regulars. The armament comprises about 15,000 magazine 308 rifles, 25,000 Martini-Henry rifles, 110 machine or Lewis guns, 30 modern, 12 fairly modern and about 240 old-fashioned guns.

Trade.—The principal articles of export are cattle, hides and skins, opium and other drugs, gums, resins and dyes, jute, wheat, pulse, rice and other grains, clarified butter, oil seeds, spices, tobacco, timber, saltpetre. The chief imports are cattle, sheep and goats, salt, spices, sugar, tobacco, drugs and dyes, petroleum, leather, brass, iron and copper wares, raw cotton, twist and yarn, silk, cotton and woollen piece goods. Nepál possesses very valuable forests in the southern part of the country.

Slavery was entirely abolished in the country by the Maharaja in 1924-6.

A telephone connects the capital with Birganj near the southern frontier. In February, 1927, the first railway into Nepál (metre gauge), from Raxaul on the Bengal & North-Western Railway to Amlékhanj, a distance of 25 miles, was opened. A ropeway was opened at about the same time for the carriage of goods over the last 14 miles of the road from Raxaul into the Kathmandu valley. A topographical survey of the country by Indian personnel of the Government of India was completed in 1927.

The silver mohar is valued at 6 annas and 8 pies of British Indian currency. Copper pice, of which 50 go to a silver mohar, are also coined. The Indian rupee passes current throughout Nepál.

NETHERLANDS (THE).

(KONINKRIJK DER NEDERLANDEN.)

Reigning Sovereign.

Wilhelmina Helena Pauline Maria, born August 31, 1880, daughter of the late King Willem III., and of his second wife, Princess Emma, born August 2, 1858, daughter of Prince George Victor of Waldeck; succeeded to the throne on the death of her father, November 23, 1890; came of age August 31, 1898, and was crowned September 6 of that year; married to Prince Henry of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, February 7, 1901 Offspring Princess Juliana Louise Emma Marie Wilhelmina, born April 30, 1909.

The royal family of the Netherlands, known as the House of Orange, descends from a German Count Walram, who lived in the eleventh century. Through the marriage of Count Engelbrecht, of the branch of Otto, Count of Nassau, with Jane of Polanen, in 1404, the family acquired the barony of Breda, and thereby became settled in the Netherlands. The alliance with another heiress, only sister of the childless Prince of Orange and Count of Châlons, brought to the house a rich province in the south of France; and a third matrimonial union, that of Prince Willem III. of Orange with a daughter of King James II., led to the transfer of the crown of Great Britain to that prince. Previous to this period, the members of the family had acquired great influence in the United Provinces of the Netherlands under the name of 'stadhouders,' or governors. The dignity was formally declared to be hereditary in 1747, in Willem IV.; but his successor, Willem V., had to fly to England, in 1795, at the invasion of the French republican army. The family did not return till November, 1813, when the United Provinces were freed from French domination. After various diplomatic negotiations, the Belgian provinces, subject before the French revolution to the House of Austria, were ordered by the Congress of Vienna to be joined to the Northern Netherlands, and the whole to be erected into a kingdom, with the son of the last stadhouder, Willem V., as hereditary sovereign. In consequence, the latter was proclaimed King of the Netherlands at the Hague on the 16th of March, 1815, and recognised as sovereign by all the Powers of Europe. The union thus established between the northern and southern Netherlands was dissolved by the Belgian revolution of 1830, and their political relations were not readjusted until the signing of the treaty of London, April 19, 1839, which constituted Belgium an independent kingdom. King Willem I. abdicated in 1840, bequeathing the crown to his son Willem II., who, after a reign of nine years, left it to his heir, Willem III. This king reigned 41 years, and died in 1890; in default of male heirs, he was succeeded by his only daughter Wilhelmina.

The Sovereign has a civil list of 1,200,000 guilders. There is also a large revenue from domains, and in addition an allowance of 100,000 guilders for the maintenance of the royal palaces. The family of Orange is, besides, in the possession of a very large private fortune, acquired in greater part by King Willem I. in the prosecution of vast enterprises tending to raise the commerce of the Netherlands.

Government and Constitution.

I. CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

The first Constitution of the Netherlands after its reconstruction as a Sovereign State was promulgated in 1814, and was revised in 1815 (after the addition of the Belgian provinces, and the assumption by the Sovereign of the title of King); in 1840 (after the secession of the Belgian provinces); in 1848, 1884, 1887, 1917, and 1922. According to this charter the Netherlands form a constitutional and hereditary monarchy. The royal succession is in the direct male line in the order of primogeniture: in default of male heirs, the female line ascends the throne. In default of a legal heir, the successor to the throne is designated by the Sovereign and a joint meeting of both the Houses of Parliament (each containing twice the usual number of members), and by this assembly alone if the case occurs after the Sovereign's death. The age of majority of the Sovereign is 18 years. During his minority the royal power is vested in a R<sup>egent</sup>—designated by law—and in some cases in the State Council.

The executive power of the State belongs exclusively to the Sovereign, while the whole legislative authority rests conjointly in the Sovereign and Parliament, the latter—called the States-General—consisting of two Chambers. The Upper or First Chamber is composed of 50 members, elected by the Provincial States. Members of the First Chamber not residing in the Hague, where the Parliament meets, are allowed 10 guilders (16s. 8d.) a day during the Session of the States-General. The Second Chamber of the States-General numbers 100 deputies, who are elected directly. Members are allowed 5,000 florins (420*l.*) annually, with travelling expenses. Members of the States-General must be Dutch subjects, men or women, and recognised as such.

First chamber (elected 1926): 16 Catholics, 7 Anti-Revolutionists, 7 Protestant Party, 6 Liberty Union, 3 Democrats and 11 Social Democrats.

Second chamber (elected 1925): Catholics, 31; Social Democrats, 24; Anti-Revolutionists, 13; Christian Historicals, 11; Liberty Union, 9; Democrats, 7; other parties, 5.

The electoral reform act, passed December 12, 1917, provides for universal suffrage and proportional representation. The Members of the Second Chamber are, according to the Electoral Reform Act, directly elected by citizens of both sexes who are Dutch subjects not under 25 years. Criminals, lunatics, and certain others are excluded: for certain crimes and misdemeanours there may be temporary exclusion. The electoral body numbered May 15, 1927, 3,671,952 voters, i.e. 98·3 per cent. of the number of citizens of 25 years and older.

The members of the Second Chamber are elected for 4 years, and retire in a body, whereas the First Chamber is elected for 6 years, and every 3 years one half retire by rotation. The Sovereign has the power to dissolve both Chambers of Parliament, or one of them, being bound only to order new elections within 40 days, and to convoke the new meeting within two months.

The Government and the Second Chamber only may introduce new bills; the functions of the Upper Chamber being restricted to approving or rejecting them without the power of inserting amendments. The meetings of both Chambers are public, though each of them, by the decision of the majority, may form itself into a private committee. The ministers may attend at the meetings of both Chambers, but they have only a deliberative vote unless they are members. Alterations in the Constitution can be made only by a bill declaring that there is reason for introducing those alterations, followed by a dissolution of the Chambers and a second confirmation by the new States-General by two-thirds of the votes. Unless it is expressly declared, the laws concern only the realm in Europe, and not the Colonies. The executive authority, belonging to the Sovereign, is exercised by a responsible Council of Ministers. The names of the members of the Ministry are:—

1. President of the Council of Ministers, Minister of Finance.—Jonkheer Dr. D. J. de Geer; appointed March 8, 1926

2. The Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Jonkheer F. Belaerts van Blokland; appointed March 30, 1927.

3. The Minister of the Interior and of Agriculture.—Dr. J. B. Kan; appointed March 8, 1926.

4. The Minister of Justice.—Dr. J. Donner; appointed March 8, 1926.

5. The Minister of the Colonies.—Dr. J. C. Koningsberger; appointed March 8, 1926.

6. The Minister of War.—J. M. J. H. Lambooy; appointed April 24, 1926.

7. The Minister of Public Works (Waterstaat).—Dr. H. van der Vegte; appointed March 8, 1926.

8. The Minister of Marine.—J. M. J. H. Lambooy (interim); appointed April 24, 1926.

9. The Minister of Labour, Commerce, and Industry.—Dr. J. R. Slotemaker de Bruïne; appointed March 8, 1926.

10. The Minister of Instruction, Science, and Arts.—Dr. M. A. M. Waszink; appointed March 8, 1926.

Each of the above Ministers has an annual salary of 16,000 guilders, or 1,838*l.* The Minister of Foreign Affairs enjoys besides 10,000 guilders for representation.

There is a State Council—'Raad van State'—of 14 members, appointed by the Sovereign, of which the Sovereign is president, and which is consulted on all legislative and a great number of executive matters.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The territory is divided into 11 provinces and 1,081 communes (January 1, 1927). Each province has its own representative body, 'the Provincial States.' The members are elected for 4 years, directly from among the Dutch inhabitants of the province who are 25 years of age. Except that they must be inhabitants of the province, the electors are the same as for the Second Chamber. The members retire in a body and are subject to re-election. The number of members varies according to the population of the province, from 82 for Holland (South) to 35 for Drente. The Provincial States are entitled to make ordinances concerning the welfare of the province, and to raise taxes according to legal precepts. All provincial ordinances must be approved by the Crown. The Provincial States exercise a right of control over the municipalities. They also elect the members of the First Chamber of the States-General. They meet twice a year, as a rule in public. A permanent commission composed of 6 (in Drente 4) of their members, called the 'Deputed States,' is charged with the executive power in the province and the daily administration of its affairs. This committee has also to see the common law executed in the province. Both the Deputed as well as the Provincial States are presided over by a Commissioner of the Sovereign, who in the former assembly has a deciding vote, but in the latter named only a deliberative vote. He is the chief magistrate in the province. The Commissioner and the members of the Deputed States receive an allowance.

Each of the communes forms a Corporation with its own interests and rights, subject to the general law. In each commune is a Council, elected for four years directly, by the same voters as for the Provincial States, provided they inhabit the commune. All the Dutch inhabitants 23 years of age are eligible, the number of members varying from 7 to 45, according to the population. The Council has a right of making and enforcing bye-laws concerning the communal welfare. The Council may raise taxes according to rules prescribed by common law; besides, each commune receives from the State Treasury an allowance proportioned to the total number of its inhabitants and to the share which its non-contributing inhabitants have failed to pay towards local taxes. All bye-laws may be vetoed by the Sovereign. The Municipal Budget and the resolutions to alienate municipal property require the approbation of the Deputed States of the province.

The Council meets in public as often as may be necessary, and is presided over by a Mayor, appointed by the Sovereign for 6 years. The executive power is vested in a college formed by the Mayor and 2-6 Aldermen (wethouders), elected by and from the Council; this college is also charged with the execution of the public law. The Municipal Police is under the authority of the Mayor; as a State functionary the Mayor supervises the actions of the Council; he may suspend their resolutions for 30 days, but is bound to inform the Deputed States of the province.

Area and Population.

Of the total on December 31, 1920, 3,410,262 were males and 3,455,052 females.

The area, including the interior waters, amounted in 1926 to 13,210 square miles, whilst the total area, including gulfs and bays, amounted in 1920 to 15,760 square miles.

On June 14, 1918, a law was passed for the purpose of forming a new province by the draining of the Zuiderzee to the extent of 523,000 acres. The work, which was commenced in 1924, is expected to take 15 years, and the total outlay for the first stage is calculated at 66,250,000 florins.

Urban and rural population was as follows :—

Religion.

Entire liberty of conscience is granted to the members of all religious confessions. The royal family and the majority of the inhabitants belong to the Reformed Church. The State Budget (1928) contains allowances for the different churches: for Protestant Churches, about 1,411,000 guilders; for Roman Catholics, about 579,000; for Jansenists, about 12,000; and for Jews, about 15,000.

The number of adherents of the different Churches in the various provinces, according to the census of 1920 was: Dutch Reformed Church, 2,826,633; Other Protestants, 832,164; Catholics, 2,444,583; Jansenists, 10,461; Jews, 115,223; and other creeds or those of none, 635,240; unknown, 1,010.

The government of the Reformed Church is Presbyterian. At the end of 1927 the Dutch Reformed, Walloon, English Presbyterian, and Scotch Churches had 1 Synod, 10 provincial districts, 44 classes, and 1,348 parishes. Their clergy numbered about 1,648. The Roman Catholic Church had one archbishop (of Utrecht), 4 bishops, and 1,295 parishes. The Old Catholics had 1 archbishop, 2 bishops, and 27 parishes. The Jews had 146 communities.

Instruction.

Public instruction (primary) is given in all places where needed, religious convictions being respected. Instruction was made obligatory by the Act of 1900; the school age is from 7-13.

In 1806, and more expressly in 1848, secular instruction was separated from religious or sectarian instruction. The law on the point of the year 1879 is still in force. By a modification of the Act of 1887 public instruction is diminished and a greater share in education is left to private instruction, if approved as efficient by the State, in which case it is paid for out of public funds. The cost of public primary instruction is borne jointly by the State and the communes, the State contributing to the salaries of the teachers and being responsible for 25 per cent of the costs of founding or purchasing schools.

The Secondary Education Act dates from the year 1863, but it has repeatedly been modified since. Superior instruction is given in the larger communities in public or private schools. Private schools may be endowed by the State, private professional schools also by the province and the community. The Higher Education Act dates from the year 1876, but it has repeatedly been modified since. Higher education is given at Universities, in high schools, and grammar schools, either public or private. Private institutions may be endowed by the State. Tuition in Kindergartens has not been regulated by law.

The following table is taken from the Government returns for 1924-25 :

Institutions	Number	Teaching Staff	Pupils or Students

Besides the schools named in the table, there is a great number of special schools, mostly technical. Since 1908 there is also a Government school to train functionaries of the colonial service for superior posts.

In 1924 the State spent on education 122,637,000 guilders; the provinces, 300,000 guilders; the Communes, 46,877,000 guilders.

Of the conscripts called out in 1926, 0.17 per cent. could neither read nor write, the percentage being highest in Limburg, 0.75. Of the persons married in 1918, 0.22 per cent. of the males and 0.41 per cent. of the females could not sign the marriage certificate. Of the convicts in 1911, 4 per cent. could neither read nor write. Of the total number of children from 7 to 13 years (school age) on January 1, 1922, 4.29 per cent. received no elementary instruction.

Justice and Crime.

Justice is administered by the High Court of the Netherlands (Court of Cassation), by 5 courts of justice (Courts of Appeal), by 23 district tribunals, and by 101 cantonal courts; trial by jury is unknown in Holland. The Cantonal Court, which deals with minor offences, is formed by a single judge; the more serious cases are tried by the district tribunals, formed as a rule by 3 judges (in some cases one judge is sufficient); the courts are constituted of 3 and the High Court of 5 judges. All Judges are appointed for life by the Sovereign (the Judges of the High Court from a list prepared by the Second Chamber). They can be removed only by a decision of the High Court.

Juvenile courts have recently been called into existence. The juvenile court is formed by a single judge specially appointed to try children's civil cases, at the same time charged with the administration of justice for criminal actions committed by young persons who are not yet 18 years old, unless imprisonment of more than a year ought to be inflicted, in which case the judge of the juvenile court acts as judge-examiner.

The number of persons convicted was:—

Year	By the Cantonal Courts		By the District Tribunals
	Male	Female	Male	Female
1923	181,834	17,796	15,544	1,807
1924	180,742	15,481	15,598	1,866
1925	192,572	24,171	16,442	1,889
1926	172,504	19,162	15,908	1,909

The number of inmates in the 28 prisons during the years 1924, 1925, and 1926 was respectively, 8,504, 7,720, and 7,126 males, and 360, 323, and 304 females; in the 27 houses of detention, 16,711, 16,296, and 15,756 males, and 965, 815, and 752 females. There are also 5 State-work establishments; the numbers of inmates of these establishments were respectively in the years 1924, 1925, and 1926, 2,910, 2,868, and 2,915 males, and 38, 30, and 33 females.

In 1901 an Act was passed reforming State reformatories for the education of juvenile criminals and establishing disciplinary schools for juvenile criminals and for children admitted by request of parents or guardians (correction paternelle). The number of inmates during the years 1924, 1925, and 1926 in the State reformatories was: 1,026, 896, and 773 boys, and 113, 93, and 101 girls; in the disciplinary schools: 427, 465, and 407 boys, and 66, 85, and 104 girls.

There are both State and communal police. The State police consists of field-constables and cavalry. The former are spread over the country, the latter guard the frontiers (eastern and southern). The cavalry police (maréchaussée) numbers about 24 officers and about 1,118 men. There are about 1,339 field-constables—appointed and paid by the Government—divided into numerous brigades. Besides each commune has its own field-constables or police force.

Pauperism and Social Insurance.

The statistics of the poor relief in the Netherlands have been reorganised and do not yet cover all forms of relief. The following data for the year 1925 relate exclusively to what may be called normal poor relief (not including relief of any kind to the unemployed).

<sup>2</sup> Of which 5,625,000 guilders for the special fund of the maintenance of roads.

The amount of the taxes per head of the population was, in 1927, 75.47 guilders.

The expenditure of the 'Department for the Colonies' entered in the budget estimates only refers to the central administration. There is a separate budget for the great colonial possessions in the East Indies, voted as such by the States-General. The financial estimates for the year 1928 are distributed between the colonies and the mother country in the following proportions—

	Guilders		Guilders
Expenditure in the colonies	616,908,968	Revenues in the mother country . . .	13,554,000
Home Government expenditure . . .	176,162,728	Revenues in the colonies . .	734,190,815
Total expenditure . . .	793,066,696	Total revenue . . .	747,544,815

In the Budget for 1928 the national debt is given as follows—

	Nominal Capital	Annual Interest and Sinking Fund
Funded Debt	Guilders	Guilders
2½ per cent. debt . . .	588,492,000	13,462,313

During the years 1850-1927, 827,596,644 guilders have been devoted to the redemption of the public debt.

The rateable annual value of buildings was given at 285,318,860 guilders in 1926, and of land, 99,249,151 guilders.

The various provinces and communes have their own separate budgets; the provincial expenditure for 1927 was 85,566,000 guilders; the revenue 86,477,000 guilders; debts on January 1, 179,586,000 guilders; the communal revenues, expenses, and debts were (in thousands of guilders) for the year 1926:—ordinary revenue, 551,518; ordinary expenditure, 551,859, extraordinary expenditure, 396,581; debts on January 1, 1,961,168.

Defence.

I. FRONTIER.

The Netherlands are bordered on the south by Belgium, on the east by Germany. On the former side the country is quite level, on the latter more hilly; the land frontier is open all round. The frontiers are defended by few fortresses. The scheme of defence adopted in 1874 contemplated the concentration of the defensive forces in a restricted area, known as the 'Holland Fortress.' This comprises the provinces of North and South Holland, with parts of Zeeland and Utrecht. Two-thirds of the area is surrounded by the sea. On the land side, to the East and South, are lines of more or less permanent works, which can be rendered very difficult of attack by inundations. There are also strong works on the coast, notably the Helder group, barring access to the Zuiderzee, and the Hollandsch Diep and Volkerak position, while the entrances to the Amsterdam and Rotterdam ship canals are defended by powerful forts. The citadel of the whole is Amsterdam, which is well fortified. Here also inundations would almost preclude a successful attack. The coast defences are in good order and are to be further strengthened, but the defences on the land side, except the position of Amsterdam, have of late years been neglected. Moreover, the control of the inundations is not entirely in military hands.

Apart from the Holland Fortress are the works on the Western Schelde. These have hitherto been unimportant, but a plan has been adopted to augment them by entirely new works at Flushing.

II. ARMY.

According to an Act of 1922, service in the army is partly voluntary and partly compulsory; the voluntary enlistments bear a small proportion to the compulsory. Every Dutch citizen and, in certain circumstances, every other resident in the Netherlands, is liable to personal service in the army (or navy) from the age of 19 up to 40. The maximum strength of the annual contingent is fixed at 19,500 (including 1,000 for the sea service). The strength of the army on April 1, 1927, was 8,363 officers and 348,202 men. Military budget for 1928, 58,345,040 florins.

The first training lasts for: (a) 5½ months at the longest for men not belonging to the mounted corps, with the exception of those under (b) and (c); (b) 9 months at the longest for men not belonging to the mounted corps who after enlistment are being trained as subalterns; (c) 12 months at the longest for men not belonging to the mounted corps who after enlistment are being trained as officers, for infirm men, for conscripts of the air service, and for men of the mounted artillery troops; (d) 15 months at the longest for the cavalry; (e) 8 months at the longest for the navy. The time for further training is at the lowest 40 days for all conscripts, with the exception of infirm men and air-service men, who are exempted.

The army is organised as follows :—

	Divisions	Brigades	Regiments	Battalions	Companies	Cy. list Companies	Batteries	Squadrons
Infantry . . . . .	4	8	25	—	96	5	—	—

The Dutch garrison of the East Indies is organised in 2 divisions with a strength in November, 1927, of 1,097 officers and 30,031 other ranks.

The Netherlands infantry is armed with the Mannlicher magazine rifle, model 95. Cavalry and engineers carry the Mannlicher carbine. The field artillery, including the horse batteries, is armed with a shielded Q.F. Krupp gun of 7.5 cm.

III. NAVY.

The Navy is maintained for a double purpose—viz. the protection of the Dutch waters and coast, and the defence of the East Indian possessions. These latter contribute to the maintenance of that division of it known as the Indian Marine. The majority of the vessels recently added to the Navy are intended mainly for the defence of the Dutch East Indies.

Following is a list of the principal ships of the Dutch Navy.

Name	Displacement, Tons	Armour water line	Max. Armour on guns	Principal Armament	Torpedo Tubes	Indicated Horse-power	Normal Speed Knots	Laid down

There are also 3 armoured gunboats; 4 sloops; 5 destroyers of 510 tons, and 4 of 1,620 tons; 8 seagoing torpedo boats; 24 submarines; 2 submarine depot ships and 12 mine layers. 2 more destroyers are under construction. The Zeven Provinciën and the cruisers Java and Sumatra are assigned to the East Indies Fleet, as are the destroyers, 4 older torpedo-boats, and 13 of the submarines, and many of the other vessels mentioned.

The naval budget for 1928 is 40,555,610 florins.

Production and Industry.

I AGRICULTURE.

The surface of the Netherlands was divided in 1926 as follows (in hectares : 1 hectare = 2.47 acres) —Uncultivated land (heath) 426,610; water and morass, 129,451; dykes and roads, 63,238; untaxed land, 77,871 building land, houses, &c., 59,905 Total, 757,075. Cultivated land arable land, 891,761; pasture, 1,266,502; gardens and orchards, 103,660; forest, 249,107. Total, 2,511,030.

Large estates prevail in the provinces of Zealand, South Holland, Groningen, and North Holland; small estates in North Brabant, Guelders, Limburg, and Overijssel.

The areas under the principal crops, in acres, were as follows :—

According to the live-stock census of May-June, 1921, Holland possessed 363,668 horses, 2,062,771 cattle, 668,211 sheep, and 1,519,245 pigs.

II. MINING AND MANUFACTURES.

A few coal-mines are found in the province of Limburg; some of them belong to the State. The quantity of coal extracted in 1920 was 8,607,561 metric tons compared with 6,848,567 metric tons in 1925 and 5,882,000 in 1924. In 1926 the private mines produced 3,411,716 tons, and the State mines, 5,195,845 tons. There is one salt mine at Boekelo, output 1926, 34,505 tons.

There are no official returns of all the manufacturing industries. According to the last reports there were, in 1926: 309 distilleries, 10 sugar refineries, 18 beet-sugar refineries, 13 salt works, 213 breweries, and 3,275 tobacco factories.

III. FISHERIES.

In 1926, 5,194 vessels of all kinds were engaged in the fisheries. The produce of the herring fishery in the North Sea was valued at 10,407,138 guilders in 1926; and that of fresh fish, 12,353,000 guilders; the weight of the catch was, herrings, 58,130 tons; fresh fish, 43,745 tons. The quantity of oysters produced in 1926 amounted to 1,365,760 kilos.

Commerce.

The following are the returns of the imports (exclusive of gold and silver coins and bullion) for home consumption and the export of home produce for six years (in thousands of guilders):—

Internal Communications.

I. CANALS AND RAILWAYS.

The total extent of canals is about 2,000 miles; of roads about 3,000 miles.

In 1926 the total length of the principal tramway lines was 1,863 miles; 324,687,000 passengers were carried, and 2,486,809,000 kilogrammes of goods. Their revenue amounted to 43,791,000 guilders.

In 1926 the 2 principal railways had a length of 2,255 miles. The breadth of the railway gauge is 1·50 metres, or 4 ft. 11 in. In 1926 48,132,000 passengers were carried on the railways. The total revenue was 159,807,000 guilders. All railway companies are private; there is a State railway company, only so named because the road is owned by the State. A project is on foot for bringing the four railway companies under one control.

II. POST AND TELEGRAPHS.

The postal traffic was as follows in 2 years:—

—	Letters	Post Cards	Newspapers and Printed Matter	Parcels	Letters with Money Orders 1925
Internal .	177,482,000	85,406,958	397,907,000	5,643,272	354,502

Internal .	179,457,000	84,683,118	404,795,000	5,908,577	322,743
Foreign .	73,684,000	16,037,578	42,956,000	1,774,110	254,842

The receipts of the Post Office in 1926 were 51,277,000 guilders, the expenditure in 1926, 44,741,000 guilders.

There are several private telegraph lines, but most of the lines are owned by the State. The length of State lines on Dec. 31, 1921, was 5,617 miles, the length of wires on December 31, 1926, 29,242 miles. The number of State offices was, on December 31 1926, 1,837. The number of paid messages by State and private lines in 1926 was 8,442,900. The receipts of the State amounted in the same year to 7,342,000 guilders, and the ordinary expenses in 1926 to 10,639,000 guilders.

In 1921 the interurban telephone system had 2,518 miles of line and on December 31, 1924, 180,933 miles of wire, and is administered by the State; 15,839,196 interurban and 1,536,773 international conversations were held in 1926. The receipts were in the same year for interurban and international intercourse 20,790,000 guilders, and the total expenses 15,639,000 guilders.

II. AIR TRAFFIC.

There is an aeroplane service subsidised by the Government between Amsterdam and London, Amsterdam, Brussels and Paris, Amsterdam and Hamburg, Amsterdam and Dortmund, and between Rotterdam and Copenhagen. In 1924, 8 tons of postal matter, 255.1 tons of goods and 6,275 passengers were carried; in 1927, resp. 35 tons, 401.9 tons and 12,916 passengers.

Money and Credit.

The money in general circulation is chiefly silver. Before 1875 the Netherlands had the silver standard; but a bill which passed the States-General in the session of 1875 allowed an unrestricted coinage of ten-guilder pieces in gold, whereas the coinage of silver was suspended for an unlimited time.

Value of money minted during the following years (in thousands of guilders) —

Year	Gold	Silver	Copper and Nickel	For the East and West India Colonies	Total value	Total number of pieces
1881-1900	8,564	13,710	1,310	10,834	34,418	452,342,090
1901-1920	95,023	108,370	4,362	58,152	265,907	1,370,652,000
1921-1925	11,000	35,220	1,011	15,062	62,293	344,520,000
1926	34,000	550	70	100	34,720	22,900,000

The Bank of the Netherlands is a private institution, but it is the only one which has the right of issuing bank-notes. This right, granted in 1863 for 25 years, was prolonged in 1888 for 15 years, and prolonged again for the same term in 1903, with some alterations in the conditions: e.g. all the paper money is to be issued by the Bank. In 1918 the Charter was once more prolonged for a further 15 years. The Bank does the same business as other banks, only with more guarantees. Two-fifths of the paper money in circulation must be covered. It has agencies in all places of importance.

Year	Value of the notes in Circulation, March 31	Total Exchanges years ending March 31	Stock of Gold, March 31	Stock of Silver, March 31

1927	819,158,000	1,706,857,540	419,329	27,812

The capital amounts to 20,000,000 guilders, the reserve fund on March 31, 1927 to 7,027,840 guilders. The Bank keeps the State-Treasury and the cash of the State Postal Savings-Bank and of other institutions. It receives  $\frac{3}{4}$  per cent. of the clear gains; the remainder is divided between the State and the Bank in proportion of 2 : 1.

There are many savings-banks, all private. Besides these there is a State postal savings-bank, established in 1881. The following table gives some particulars of the latter —

Year	Number of Savings-Banks	Amount deposited (in 1,000 gldrs.)	Amount withdrawn (in 1,000 gldrs.)	Total Deposits at end of year (in 1,000 gldrs.)	Number of Depositors at end of year	Amount per inhabitant. Gldrs.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

MONEY.

The standard coin is the 10-florin piece weighing 6·720 grammes, ·900 fine, and thus containing 6·048 grammes of fine gold. The unit of the silver coinage is the gulden or florin, weighing 10 grammes, ·945 fine and containing 9·45 grammes of fine silver.

Gold is legal tender, and the silver coins issued before 1875.

The principal coins are :—

The gulden, guilder or florin of 100 cents = 1s. 8d. ; or 12 g. = £1.

The rijksdaalder = 2½ guilders.

The gold-pieces are of ten guilders and of five guilders ; silver, of 10, 25, 50, 100 and 250 cents ; bronze, ½ cent, 1 cent and 2½ cents ; nickel, 5 cents. Treasury notes of 1 and 2½ florins are also in circulation.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

The metric system of weights and measures, and, with trifling changes, the metric denominations are adopted in the Netherlands.

There are consular representatives at Amsterdam (C.G.), Dordrecht, Flushing, The Hague, Harlingen, Leeuwarden, and Ymuiden.

Colonies.

The colonial possessions of the Netherlands, situated in the East Indies and the West Indies, embrace an area of about 788,000 English square miles. The total population, according to the last returns was 49,534,618, or nearly seven times as large as that of the mother-country.

DUTCH EAST INDIES.

The Dutch possessions in Asia, forming the territory of Netherlands India (Nederlandsch Indie), are situated between 6° N. and 11° S. latitude, and between 95° and 141° E. longitude.

In 1602 the Dutch created their East India Company. This Company conquered successively the Dutch East Indies, and ruled them during nearly two centuries. After the dissolution of the Company in 1798 the Dutch possessions were governed by the mother-country.

Government and Constitution.

Politically, the territory, which is under the sovereignty of the Netherlands, is divided into (1) Lands under direct government; (2) Subject native States.

With regard to administration, the Dutch possessions in the East Indies are divided into provinces, governments, residencies, divisions, regencies, districts, and dessas (villages). They are also very often divided into: (1) Java and Madura; (2) Sumatra, Borneo, Rian-Lingga Archipelago, Bangka, Belitoeng, Selebes, Molucca Archipelago, the small Sunda Islands, and a part of New Guinea.

The system of administration has been reformed by the organising of the whole territory into large provinces with local government, each of them including a number of the present residencies. Some of them, i.e. the three provinces of Java, have their own provincial councils, presided over by a Governor. So far the province of West-Java has been organised on these lines, and the 'Government of the Moluccoes' has now been formed.

Apart from the above mentioned province of West-Java (which includes four former residencies—Bantam, Batavia, Preanger, and Ocheribon), the territory of Java and Maloera is divided into thirteen residencies, each governed by a Resident, assisted by several Assistant-Residents and a number of subordinate officials, called Controleurs. The Resident and his assistants exercise almost absolute control over the province in their charge; not, however, directly, but by means of a vast hierarchy of native officials. The Outer Provinces are administered by functionaries with the titles of 'Governor,' 'Resident,' 'Assistant-Resident,' 'Controleur,' &c.

The superior administration and executive authority of Dutch East India rest in the hands of a Governor-General. He is assisted by a Council of five members, partly of a legislative, partly of an advisory character. The members of the Council, however, have no share in the executive. The Governor-General and the members of the Council are nominated by the Queen. In 1917 a 'Volksraad' was installed to discuss the budget, and to advise the Government on matters of general importance as a first step towards the development of self-government in the colony. Some of the members are appointed by the Government, some are elected by the local councils, and the Chairman is appointed by the Crown. It includes Europeans, natives and foreign Orientals (Chinese, Arabs). By the Netherlands India Constitution of 1925, the Dutch East Indies are granted a measure of self-government in internal affairs under supervision of the Home Government, the legislative powers being shared between the Volksraad and the Governor-General.

Governor-General.—Jhr. Dr. A. C. D. de Graeff, appointed March 26, 1926.

The population of Java and Madura on December 31, 1926, was 36,902,727, with 18,123,490 males and 18,779,237 females; 169,208 were Europeans, 36,235,637 natives, and 497,882 other Orientals, chiefly Chinese and Arabs (461,161 Chinese and 25,191 Arabs). On December 31, 1925, 25,429,314 were males and 25,584,564 were females; 209,984 were Europeans, 49,848,661 natives, and 955,283 other Orientals, chiefly Chinese and Arabs.

Marriages, births, and deaths among Europeans and persons assimilated to them:—

—	Marriages				Divorces	Births		Deaths

Outer Provinces . . .	189	159	85	78	15	1,5.0	1 449	406	439

The whole population of the colony is legally divided into Europeans, Natives and foreign Orientals. The former generally live under the same laws as the inhabitants of the mother-country, while in the government of the latter the Indian customs and institutions are considered. The Governor-General, however, is, in agreement with the Council, authorised to make individual exceptions to this rule.

Religion.

Entire liberty is granted to all religious denominations. The Reformed Church counted, in 1927, 39 ministers and 25 assistants, the Roman Catholic 37 curates and 178 priests, not salaried out of the public funds. In 1927, about 400 missionaries of various societies were at work.

The bulk of the natives are Mohammedans ; there are also some millions of converted Christians and Animists, and a small number of Buddhists.

Instruction.

There are public (Government) primary schools, where instruction is given through the medium of the Dutch language, for (1) Europeans and persons assimilated with them (a 7 years' course); (2) Chinese ('Dutch-Chinese schools', with a 7 years' course); (3) Natives ('Dutch-Native schools', with a 7 years' course); and (4) link-schools (with a 5 years' course). Public schools where instruction is given through the medium of a native tongue are (1) the 'second class' schools (with a 3, 4, or 5 years' course); and (2) village schools (with a 3 years' course or extremely elementary instruction). Besides, there are schools with an extended primary instruction (in the Dutch language) with a 3 years' course (Mulo-schools) open to all, without distinction of race. Side by side with the public schools, there are various private schools.

For secondary education there are public secondary schools with 5 and 8 year courses in connection with the primary schools, and also with 3 year courses in connection with the extended primary school. In addition to the Government institutions there are 6 private secondary schools for girls with a 3 years' course and 1 with a 5 years' course. Higher education is given at the Technical High School at Bandung, erected in 1920. Furthermore, a High School for Law opened in 1924, and a Medical High School, erected in 1927, both at Batavia.

The following table shows the number of schools, the school attendance, the teaching staff, and the expenditure on education in 1927:—

Schools	Number	Teaching Staff	Pupils	Cost (in guilders)

* Provisional figures.

Furthermore, there were in 1927 the following training schools:—Four public schools for training in engineering, architecture, electrical engineering, and mining (4 years' course), fourteen similar schools for natives (3 three years' course and 11 two years' course), with 113 teachers and 1,511 pupils and one trading school (5 years' course), with 20 teachers and 259 pupils; one private trade school (8 years' course), with 15 teachers and 12 pupils; one 2 years' and three 3 years' commercial schools; one 1 year's navigation course with 9 pupils; two training schools for physicians (10 years' course) with 54 teachers and 608 pupils; a training school for native jurists (8 years' course) with 7 teachers and 56 pupils; a training school for civil-service officers, a training school for police officers, a training school for native officials (5 years' course) with 55 teachers and 597 pupils; 5 training schools for European teachers with 267 pupils, and 19 private schools with 743 pupils.

For native teachers there are the following schools with instruction in the Dutch language: 12 (1 for girls) public training schools (4 years' course), and two higher training schools (3 years' course) with 1,098 pupils (129 girls) with instruction in the native tongue; 20 (5 for girls) normal schools (4 years' course, 1,074 pupils, 304 being girls), 117 normal classes (2 years' course) for native teachers for Village-schools. Besides, there are 3 private training schools with the Dutch language (5 years' course, 365 pupils), and 9 with a native tongue (4 years' course, 343 pupils).

For Chinese teachers there is a school with instruction in the Dutch language (115 pupils).

For kindergarten teachers (Fröbel) there are 3 training schools (4 years' course, 1 public and two private).

Justice and Crime.

The administration of justice for Europeans is entrusted to European judges, while for natives their own chiefs have a large share in the trial of cases. There is a High Court of Justice at Batavia—courts of justice at Batavia, Samarang, Soerabaya, Padang, Medan and Makassar—Resident courts and police courts for Europeans; native courts, magistrate courts, police courts, Regent courts, district courts, and courts of priests for natives.

Finance.

Revenue and expenditure:—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Surplus or Deficit
	Guilders	Guilders	Guilders
1926	792,553,879	747,174,702	+ 45,379,177
1927	702,899,956	765,971,589	- 63,071,633
1928	747,194,826	798,110,550	- 50,915,724

The sources of revenue in 1928 are stated as follows (in guilders): From direct and indirect taxes, 309,000,000; salt monopoly, 18,700,000; pawn-shops, 22,245,000; opium 39,762,000; railway service, 80,258,000; post, telegraph and telephone services, 28,491,000; harbour service, 12,800,000; forestry, 18,175,000; rubber, 10,178,000; cinchona, 457,000; tin, 53,225,000; share in the profits of the Biliton Company, 7,500,000; coal, 17,376,000; all other sources, 128,000,000. Public debt on December 31, 1927, was 1,053,954,700 guilders.

Defence.

The Dutch forces in the East Indies constitute a colonial army which is entirely separate from the home army. The colonial army in 1926 comprised 6 regiments of field infantry, 12 garrison battalions and 2 garrison companies. There were further 2 dépôt battalions of infantry, 7 machine-gun companies, 1 company of cyclist-soldiers, 6 squadrons, 1 dépôt squadron of cavalry, 5 field batteries, 6 mountain batteries, 2 motor batteries, 1 fortress and coast company of artillery, 2 field companies of sappers and miners, 1 motor-car company, 1 technical company and 1 dépôt company of engineering troops; and a flying corps with 39 officers and 48 aeroplanes. In 1918 compulsory service was introduced in the militia for Europeans between 19 and 32 years of age, and in the landstorm between the ages of 33 and 45. On December 31, 1926, there were 12,326 militia-men.

In most battalions there are 3 companies composed either of Europeans or of Natives; the greater part of the officers, and a proportion of the non-commissioned officers, are Europeans. The artillery has European and Native gunners and Native drivers. The Europeans (except the militia) and Natives are recruited by volunteers. The strength of the colonial army in 1926 was 1,143 officers, 32,137 volunteers, of whom 6,137 were Europeans and 25,977 natives. Besides the Army there are different armed troops, viz.: (1) The Legion of the Native Prince Mangkoe Negara, consisting of infantry, numbering about 930 men. In case of war this Legion would be placed at the disposal of the Government. (2) The Barisan, being a native infantry of Madoera, 1,630 men, designed to maintain peace in the island and to participate in campaigns in case of war.

The expenditure for defence (army and navy) estimated for 1928 amounts to about 95,406,631 guilders.

The Netherland Navy in the East Indies numbers 305 officers and 1,551 European and 1,845 native non-commissioned officers and sailors and 139 militia, and consists of 33 men-of-war, including 13 submarines, 7 minelayers 4 destroyers and 2 surveying vessels. There is, besides, a flying corps with 30 hydroplanes, and the Colonial Navy, consisting of 18 smaller ships of no naval value, with 176 Europeans and 832 natives, employed for civil service duties.

Production and Industry.

The greater part of the soil of Java is claimed as Government property, and it is principally in the residencies in the western part of Java that there are private estates, chiefly owned by Europeans and by Chinese. The bulk of the people are agricultural labourers. Formerly the Government or private landowners could enforce one day's gratuitous work out of seven, or more, from all the labourers on their estates; in 1882 the greater part of these enforced services for the Government was abolished, in return for the payment of one guilder per head yearly, and the remainder were abolished in 1914 in return for an increased poll tax.

The harvested area under various 'native' cultures in Java and Madura were in 1926 as follows, in acres:—Irrigated rice, 7,287,448; non-irrigated rice, 1,102,853; maize, 4,247,355; cassava, 1,679,992; sweet potatoes, 420,244; groundnuts, 484,197; soya beans, 420,984; other pulses, 522,869; tobacco (native), 346,640; other secondary crops, 1,461,151; total, 18,573,733.

In 1926, the harvested areas of 'other secondary crops' were potatoes, 45,005 acres; native sugar-cane, 37,722 acres; indigo, 11,648 acres; and capsicum, 139,912 acres. Separate from this area native tea was planted on 69,527 acres.

Owing to the 'agrarian law' (1870), which has afforded opportunity to private energy for obtaining waste lands on hereditary lease (emphyteusis) for seventy-five years, private agriculture has greatly increased, as well in Java as in the Outer Provinces. The total area in use for agriculture in Netherlands-India in 1926 was 6,680,614 acres, of which 61,817 acres were Government-estates, 1,221,507 acres were private lands, and 2,571,303 acres lands hired from native princes in Java and Madura, 2,158,545 acres lands hired on long-lease from self-governing communities or the Government (including a number of acres held by emphyteusis) in the Outer Provinces, 493,382 acres lands hired on short-lease from natives. Of the total only 2,455,107 acres were planted.

The legal coins of 10, 5, 2½, 1 and ½ guilders, as well as the weights and measures, of Dutch India, are those of the Netherlands. But the country has coins of its own, viz., 25, 10, 5, 2½, 1, and ½ cent pieces.

Consular Representatives.

British Consul-General at Batavia.—J. Crosby.

There are also consular officers at Samarang, Sourabaya, Makasser, Medan, Balikpapan, and Padang.

DUTCH WEST INDIES.

The Dutch possessions in the West Indies are (a) Surinam, or Dutch Guiana, and (b) the colony Curaçao.

Surinam or Dutch Guiana.

Dutch Guiana or Surinam is situated on the north coast of S. America between 2 and 6° N latitude, and 53° 50' and 58° 20' E. longitude, and bounded on the north by the Atlantic Ocean, on the east by the river Marowijne, which separates it from French Guiana, on the west by the river Corantyn, which separates it from British Guiana, and on the south by inaccessible forests and savannas to the Tumuc-Humac Mountains.

At the peace of Breda, in 1667, between England and the United Netherlands, Surinam was assured to the Netherlands in exchange for the colony of New Netherlands in North America, and this was confirmed by the treaty of Westminster of February, 1674. Since then Surinam has been twice in the power of England, 1799 till 1802, when it was restored at the peace of Amiens, and in 1804 to 1816, when it was returned according to the Convention of London of August 13, 1814, confirmed at the peace of Paris of November 20, 1815, with the other Dutch colonies, except Berbice, Demerara, Essequibo, and the Cape of Good Hope.

The administration and executive authority is in the hands of a governor assisted by an advisory council consisting of the governor as president, a vice-president and three members, all nominated by the Queen. The Colonial States form the representative body of the colony. The members (13) are chosen for 6 years.

Governor. Baron Dr. A. J. A. A. van Heemstra. Appointed May 23, 1921.

Dutch Guiana is divided into six districts.

Area, 54,291 English square miles; population (December 31, 1926) 142,896 inclusive of the negroes and Indians living in the forests. Capital, Paramaribo, 45,703 inhabitants.

NICARAGUA.

(REPÚBLICA DE NICARAGUA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Constitution of the Republic of Nicaragua came into operation on April 5th, 1913. This is the same as was promulgated on March 12, 1912, with the exception of Articles 168 and 170. Previous constitution was that of March 30, 1905. The present one vests the legislative power in a Congress of two houses consisting of 40 deputies, elected for 4 years by universal suffrage, and 13 Senators elected for 6 years. The Executive power is with a President appointed for 4 years.

President.—Señor Adolfo Díaz (November 14, 1926).

The President exercises his functions through a council of responsible ministers, composed of the heads of the departments. Señor Díaz has been recognised by the United States, but Mexico has recognised his rival, Dr. Sacasa. Civil war, which had apparently been ended in May, 1927, broke out again in December of that year.

The Republic is divided into 13 departments and 2 comarcas, each of which is under a political head, who has supervision of finance, instruction and other matters, and is also military commandant. The Mosquito Reserve now forms a department named Bluefields. The Indians in this region were long under the protection of Great Britain; but under the treaty of April 19, 1905 (ratified August 24, 1906), the treaty of 1860 was abrogated, and Great Britain agreed to recognise the absolute sovereignty of Nicaragua over the territory.

The judicial power is vested in a supreme Court of Justice, three chambers of second instance, and judges of inferior tribunals.

On February 18, 1916, the Bryan-Chamorro treaty between Nicaragua and the United States was signed, under which the United States in return for 3 million dollars acquired the option for a canal route through Nicaragua and also a naval base in the Bay of Fonseca on the Pacific coast and Corn Island on the Atlantic coast. It was ratified by Nicaragua on April 7, 1916, and by the United States on June 24, 1926.

Area and Population.

Area estimated at 51,660 English square miles, with a coastline of about 300 miles on the Atlantic and 200 miles on the Pacific. The population according to the census of 1920, was 638,119. At least 75 per cent. of the inhabitants live in the western half of the country. The two halves of the Republic differ greatly in many respects and there is little communication between them, the journey by trail and river being so slow and difficult that passengers usually go by way of Costa Rica, while the small amounts of merchandise shipped from one side to the other are sent mainly by way of Panama.

The people of the western half of the Republic are principally of mixed Spanish and Indian extraction, though there are a considerable number of pure Spanish descent and many Indians. The population of the eastern half is composed mainly of Mosquito and Zambo Indians and Negroes from Jamaica and other islands of the Caribbean, with some Americans and a comparatively small number of Nicaraguans from the western part of the Republic.

There are within the Republic 105 municipalities of which 28 have from 2,000 to 30,000 inhabitants. The capital of the Republic and seat of government is the town of Managua, situated on the southern border of the lake of the same name, with (1926) 32,536 inhabitants. Leon, formerly the capital, has a population of 23,565; Granada, 18,066; Matagalpa, 10,271; Masaya, 13,763; Jinotega, 6,990; Chinandega, 10,307; Rivas, 4,081; Esteli, 4,583; Matapa, 4,561; Somoto, 6,182; Boaco, 4,342; Jinotepe, 6,817; Diriamba, 6,151; Bluefields, 4,706. Other towns are Corinto, 2,307; and San Juan del Sur on the Pacific.

Religion and Instruction.

The prevailing form of religion is Roman Catholic. In 1914 the Republic constituted one archbishopric and ecclesiastical province (Nicaragua). The Seat of the Archbishop is Managua. There are three bishoprics, Leon, Granada and Matagalpa, the Bishop of Matagalpa being coadjutor to the Archbishop at Managua.

There are 402 state elementary schools, with 788 teachers and 24,800 pupils, and 3 secondary schools, with 37 teachers and 260 pupils, 5 professional schools with 219 students, 3 normal schools with 85 teachers and 2,500 students. There exist, besides, 76 private elementary schools with 5,557 pupils. It is estimated that at least 50 per cent of the population are illiterate. Secondary education is neither obligatory nor free, the secondary schools being carried on not by the state, but by private individuals. Nicaragua has three universities, in the cities of Managua, León, and Granada, called respectively, Universidad Central (Central University), Universidad de Occidente y Septentrión (Western and Northern University), and Universidad de Oriente y Mediodía (Eastern and Southern University).

A national Industrial, Commercial, and scientific Museum has been established at Managua.

Finance.

Revenue and expenditure for 5 years (4.86 cordobas = £1; 1 cordoba = 1 U.S. dollar):—

—	1921	1922	1923	1924	1925
	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue . . .	343,099	322,398	431,540	455,084	396,752
Expenditure .	306,009	311,281	327,160	327,160	391,921

A five (formerly six) per cent. loan for 1,250,000£. was issued in 1909 for the construction of railways, &c., and for conversion purposes. On March 31, 1927, 723,520£. was outstanding. Total public debt on March 31, 1927, was estimated at 10,183,010 cordobas or dollars, divided into: Bonds of 1909 outstanding, 3,521,010 dollars; guaranteed customs bonds of 1918, 2,682,000 dollars; bonds of 1904 not due, 30,000 dollars; claims arising out of 1926-27 revolution (estimated), 4,000,000 dollars.

Defence.

The army was disbanded on May 10, 1927. With few exceptions, all arms, etc., have been delivered into the custody of the National Guard of 400 which is being trained by U.S. marine officers. Period of enlistment, 3 years. There are at present over 2,000 U.S. marines in Nicaragua; the number will probably be decreased to 1,200, who will remain in the country to keep order until after the Presidential elections of October 1928.

Production and Industry.

The agricultural, timber and mining industries are the principal sources of national wealth. The area of cultivation in Nicaragua has extended in recent years and would probably extend still further but for the scarcity of labour. The banana, grown on 41,000 acres, is the principal agricultural product of the eastern part of the Republic. Cocoanuts are also of some importance, and a few plantains, oranges, and pineapples, and some yucca are raised. Rice is grown to a small extent, and some wheat in the hilly Nueva Segovia district, while tobacco is cultivated round Masaya. The products of the western half are much more varied, the most important being coffee, sugar cane, cacao, corn, and beans. The annual average coffee crop, from 104,000 acres, is estimated at 36,000,000 lbs. With the exception of bananas, plantains, and yucca or cassava, the greater part of the food supply of the eastern section is imported from the United States. The western half of the country produces much of its own food, and occasionally exports small quantities of beans, corn, cheese, lard, and sugar to the neighbouring Republics.

The forests contain mahogany and cedar, which are largely exported (19,802,000 board feet of mahogany, valued at 1,567,000 dollars, exported in 1925), many valuable timber trees, rose-woods, cocobolo, guayacan (lignum vitae), dye-woods, gums, and medicinal plants. They are worked both from the Atlantic and Pacific.

There are several gold mines, worked by American and British companies, one having also silver. Operations are at present considerably curtailed and two mines only are in active operation. Copper and precious stones are also found.

Commerce.

The foreign trade of Nicaragua was as follows in 5 years :—

—	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports . .	1,054,219	1,495,562	1,812,118	2,135,040	2,273,258
Exports . .	1,626,228	2,269,199	2,676,960	2,543,123	2,471,917

The customs receipts in 1926 were 533,377. ; in 1925, 483,511.

In 1926 the value of the principal imports (in dollars) was :—Cotton goods, 2,102,998 ; iron and steel, 843,664 ; chemicals, drugs, and medicines, 371,595 ; total food products, 1,440,751. The principal countries of import in 1926 were (values in dollars) :—United States, 7,116,715 (70 per cent.) ; Great Britain, 1,127,637 (10 per cent.) ; France, 253,738 (2 per cent.) ; and Germany, 726,880 (7 per cent.).

In 1926 the value of the principal exports (in dollars) was :—Coffee, 8,100,396 ; bananas, 1,225,660 ; sugar, 876,228 ; timber, 1,342,237 ; gold, 686,264 ; hides and skins, 164,512. The principal countries of export, in percentages, were : United States, 53 per cent. ; France, 23 per cent. ; Germany, 5 ; Spain, 5 ; Holland, 4 ; and Great Britain, 2 per cent.

Total trade between Nicaragua and United Kingdom (Board of Trade Returns) for 6 years :—

—	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Nicaragua to U.K. . . . .	75,119	82,728	99,005	119,660	58,019	196,607
Exports to Nicaragua from U.K. . . . .	114,425	235,773	348,581	238,988	233,095	255,742

Shipping and Communications.

Western Nicaragua has two seaports, Corinto and San Juan del Sur, through which pass approximately 70 per cent. of the imports and exports of the Republic. The eastern ports are Bluefields, Cape Gracias a Dios, Puerto Cabezas, and San Juan del Norte (Greytown). In 1926, 1,490 vessels of 765,312 tons entered the ports of Nicaragua, and 1,493 vessels of 742,329 tons cleared.

Most of the roads of the country are mere tracks over which ox-carts alone can travel in the wet season, but highways are being constructed between the following places: Managua-Matagalpa-Jinotega, 104 miles; Managua-Diriamba, 35 miles; León-Matagalpa, 80 miles; Puerto Diaz-Juigalpa-La Libertad, 50 miles. The road from Managua to Diriamba is completed and is in fairly good condition. The streets of Managua are being paved, but owing to lack of funds construction is carried on in a somewhat spasmodic manner, and progress, in consequence, is slow.

The Pacific Railroad of Nicaragua, owned by the Government and the principal line in the republic, has a total length of 159 miles. The line runs from Corinto to León, Managua, Granada, and Diriamba. There are 20 miles of private railway on the Atlantic coast near the Rio Grande, and, on the west side of Lake Nicaragua, between the port of San Jorge and Rivas, a steam tramway 3 miles in length. In all there are five railroads with a total railway mileage of 203. There are 150 miles of motor road and 200 miles of cart roads, but the east coast is practically shut off from the west coast.

On August 1, 1924, the Government re-purchased the 51 per cent. of the stock of the national railways, which in 1913 it had handed over to two American banking firms.

There are 2,500 miles of telegraph wire, and 103 offices; also 1,240 miles of telephone wire and 40 telephone stations.

The Government have contracted with the Tropical Radio Co. for the installation of wireless stations at Managua, Cape Gracias a Dios, and Bluefields; also El Gallo and Bragmann's Bluff. The station at Managua is completed.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The National Bank of Nicaragua, incorporated under the laws of the State of Maine with a nominal capital of 300,000 dollars, was established in Managua in 1912; it is owned by the Republic of Nicaragua. It has branches at Bluefields and Cape Gracias. Other banks are the Anglo-South American Bank, Ltd., and the Anglo Central American Commercial Bank, Ltd.

In November, 1927, the State Department of the United States, by agreement with both parties in Nicaragua, sent Dr. William W. Cumberland, formerly financial adviser to Peru and Haiti, to Nicaragua to make a financial survey of the country, especially as to the advisability of a loan.

In 1912 a new monetary unit was introduced, the gold cordoba, equivalent to the American dollar, containing 1·672 gr. of gold nine-tenths fine, and divided into 100 equal parts. Other gold coins provided for by the monetary law of 1912 are 10, 5 and 2½ cordobas, but no gold coins have ever been struck. No statements are published either by the Bank or by the Government. The country again has an unconvertible paper currency, and exchange keeps at 2 per cent on account of general shortage of currency. United States notes and silver also circulate.

The silver coins are the silver cordoba, containing 25 grammes of silver nine-tenths fine; the half and quarter cordoba; 10 cents, a coin containing 2½ grammes of silver eight-tenths fine; 5 cents, a coin three-quarters of copper and one of nickel; 1 cent, ninety-five parts of copper and 5 of zinc; ½ cent, in same proportion.

Since January 7, 1893, the metric system of weights and measures has been in use.

NORWAY.

(NORGE.)

Reigning King.

Haakon VII. born August 3, 1872; the second son, Carl, of Frederik, King of Denmark, elected King of Norway by the Storting, November 18, 1905; accepted the crown through his grandfather, the late King Christian of Denmark, November 18, 1905; landed in Norway November 25, 1905; married, July 22, 1896, to Princess Maud, born November 26, 1869, the third daughter of the late Edward VII, King of Great Britain and Ireland.

Son.—Prince Olav, Crown Prince, born July 2, 1903.

According to the Constitution, Norway is a constitutional and hereditary monarchy. The royal succession is in direct male line in the order of primogeniture. In default of male heirs the King may propose a successor to the Storting, but this assembly has the right to nominate another, if it does not agree with the proposal.

By Treaty of January 14, 1814, Norway was ceded to the King of Sweden by the King of Denmark, but the Norwegian people declared themselves independent and elected Prince Christian Frederick of Denmark as their King. The foreign Powers refused to recognise this election, and on August 14 a convention was made proclaiming the independence of Norway in union with Sweden. This was followed on November 4 by the election of Karl XIII. as King of Norway. Norway declared this union dissolved, June 7, 1905, and after some months' negotiation, a mutual agreement for the repeal of the union was signed, October 26, 1905. The throne of Norway was offered to a prince of the reigning house of Sweden, but declined, and, after a plebiscite, Prince Carl of Denmark was formally elected King. In November, 1907, a treaty guaranteeing the integrity of Norwegian territory was signed at Kristiania (Oslo) by the representatives of Norway, Great Britain, France, Germany, and Russia, and on January 8, 1908, received the unanimous approval of the Storting. The treaty was denounced January 8, 1924.

The following is a list of the Sovereigns of Norway since the year 1204, with the date of their accession.

Inge Baardsson . . . . .	1204	Erik af Pommern . . . . .	1389
Haakon Haakonsson . . . . .	1217	Kristofer af Bayern . . . . .	1442
Magnus Lagabøtter . . . . .	1263	Karl Knutsen . . . . .	1449
Erik Magnusson . . . . .	1280	Same Sovereigns as in Denmark
Haakon V. Magnusson . . . . .	1299		1450-1814
Magnus Eriksson . . . . .	1310	Kristian Fredrik . . . . .	1814
Haakon VI. Magnusson . . . . .	1355	Same Sovereigns as in Sweden
Olav II. Haakonsson . . . . .	1381		1814-1905
Margræta . . . . .	1388	Haakon VII.	1905

The King has a civil list of 700,000 kroner, the Crown Prince 50,000 kroner.

Constitution and Government.

The Constitution of Norway, called the Grundlov, bears date May 17, 1814, with several modifications passed at various times. It vests the legislative power of the realm in the Storting, the representative of the sovereign people. The royal veto may be exercised twice; but if the same bill pass three Stortings formed by separate and subsequent elections, it becomes the law of the land without the assent of the sovereign. The King has the command of the land and sea forces, and makes all appointments, but except in a few cases, is not allowed to nominate any but Norwegians to public offices under the crown.

The Storting assembles every year. The meetings take place suo jure, and not by any writ from the King or the executive. They begin on the first weekday after January 10 each year, and the Storting remains assembled as long as it may find it necessary. Every Norwegian citizen of twenty-three years of age (provided that he resides and has resided for five years in the country) is entitled to elect, unless he is disqualified from a special cause. Women are, since 1913, entitled to vote under the same conditions as men, and since 1915 are eligible as members of the Cabinet. The mode of election is direct, and the method of election is proportional. Every third year the people choose their representatives, the total number being 150. The country is divided into districts, each electing from three to eight representatives. Representatives must not be less than thirty years of age, must have resided in Norway for ten years, and be voters in the district from which they are chosen. Former members of the Cabinet can be elected representatives of any district of the Kingdom without regard to their residence.

At the elections for the Storting held in November, 1927, the following parties were elected for the period 1928-1930: Labour Party 59, Conservatives and Moderate Liberals 31, Liberals 31, Communist 3, Agricultural Party 26.

The Storting, when assembled, divides itself into two sections, the 'Lagting' and the 'Odelsting.' The former is composed of one-fourth of the members of the Storting, and the other of the remaining three-fourths. The Ting nominates its own presidents. Questions relating to laws must be considered by each section separately. The inspection of public accounts and the revision of the Government, and impeachment before the Rigsret, belong exclusively to the Odelsting. All other matters are settled by both sections in common sitting. The Storting elects five delegates, whose duty it is to revise the public accounts. All new laws must first be laid before the Odelsting, from which they pass into the Lagting to be either accepted or rejected. If the Odelsting and Lagting do not agree, the two sections assemble in common sitting to deliberate, and the final decision is given by a majority of two-thirds of the voters. The same majority is required for alterations of the Constitution. The Lagting and the ordinary members of the supreme court of justice (Höiesteret) form a High Court of the Realm the Rigsret for the impeachment and trial of Ministers, members of the Höiesteret, and members of the Storting. Every member of the Storting has a salary of six thousand kroner per annum, besides travelling expenses.

The executive is represented by the King, who exercises his authority through a Cabinet called a Council of State (Statsraad), composed of a Prime Minister or Minister of State (Statsminister), and at least seven ministers (Statsraader). The ministers are entitled to be present in the Storting and to take part in the discussions, but without a vote. The following are the members of the Cabinet, appointed February 13, 1928.

Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs.—J. L. Mowinckel.

Minister for Education and Ecclesiastical Affairs.—S. M. Hasund.

Minister of Justice.—H. M. Brønstad.

Minister of Agriculture.—H. J. Aarstad.

Minister for Public Works.—O. M. Mjelde.

Minister for Social Affairs.—T. Værland.

Minister for Finance.—P. Lund.

Minister for Defence.—T. Anderssen-Rysst.

Minister for Commerce and Industry.—L. Oftedal.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The administrative division of the country is into twenty districts, each governed by a chief executive functionary (Fylkesmann), viz., the town of Kristiania and Bergen, and 18 Fylker (counties). There are 43 towns, 24 'Ladesteder' (ports), and 672 rural communes (Herreder), mostly parishes or sub-parishes (wards). The government of the Herred is vested in a body of representatives (from 12 to 48), and a council (Formannskap), elected by and from among the representatives, who are four times the number of the 'Formannskap.' The representatives elect conjointly every third year from among the 'Formannskap' a chairman and a deputy chairman. All the chairmen of the rural communes of a Fylke form with the Fylkesmann the Fylkesting (county diet), which meets yearly to settle the budget of the Fylke. The towns and the ports form 65 communes, also governed by a council (5 to 21), and representatives (four times the size of the council). The members of the local governing bodies are elected under the same conditions as those of the Storting. Since 1910 women are entitled to vote and to be elected, under the same conditions as men.

III. PRINCIPAL TOWNS.

At the census taken December 1, 1920, the number of towns with a population of above 100,000 was one, above 20,000 five, above 10,000 eighteen, above 5,000—twenty-six in all. The population of the principal towns was:—

As from January 1, 1925, the name of the capital, Kristiania, was changed to Oslo.

Religion and Instruction.

The evangelical Lutheran religion is the national Church and the only one endowed by the State. Its clergy are nominated by the King. All religions (except Jesuits) are tolerated. Ecclesiastically Norway is divided into 7 Bispedømmer (bishoprics), 91 Prostier (provostships, or archdeaconries), 514 Prestegjeld (clerical districts). In 1920 there were 71,062 dissenters, including 2,612 Roman Catholics, 11,455 Methodists, 7,214 Baptists, 464 Mormons, 73 Quakers. The Roman Catholics are under a Vicar Apostolic resident at Oslo.

Education is compulsory, the school age being from six and a half in towns and seven in the country to fourteen. In 1924-25 (the latest date for which there are statistics) there were in the country 5,775 public elementary schools with 294,830 pupils, and in towns 3,409 classes with 99,723 pupils; the amount expended on both being 74,167,055 kroner, of which 36,497,000 kroner were granted by the State, the rest being provided locally. The 13 normal schools (Teachers' Seminaries) had in 1924-25 2,155 students, of whom 1,858 were from the country, 297 from the towns. There are 225 secondary schools—17 public, 98 communal, and 10 private entitled to give certificates and 100 private not having this right, with respectively 5,803, 17,110 2,289, and 3,582 pupils in April, 1925. Most of the secondary schools are mixed. Norway has one University, viz. at Oslo (founded 1811), attended in 1924 by 2,800 students. There is a technical high school at Trondhjem, attended in 1924-25 by 551 students, one agricultural high school in Aas, with 200 students, and a Teachers' Training College at Lade. There are also several special schools, particularly continuation schools for young people between 15 and 18, and industrial, crafts, technical, and arts schools for both sexes.

There are 9 schools for defective children, deaf, blind, feeble-minded, and crippled, also 10 reformatory schools for neglected children. The number of children in reformatories in 1924 was 290 boys and 117 girls. There are, besides, 6 communal compulsory schools, established mainly for children neglecting the ordinary school (97 boys, 32 girls).

Norwegian is an independent language side by side with Danish and Swedish. As to the written language, there exist two idioms ('riksmaal' and 'landsmaal') and both may be officially used.

Justice and Crime.

For civil justice Norway is divided into 110 districts, each with an inferior court. There are 3 superior courts, having each one chief justice and two other justices, and one supreme court for the whole kingdom (Højesteret), consisting of 1 president and 21 other justices. There is a court of mediation (Forsikringsret) in each town and Herred (district), consisting of three men chosen by the electors, before which, as a rule, civil cases must first be brought.

According to the law of criminal procedure of July 1, 1887, all criminal cases (not military, or coming under the Rigsret—the court for impeachments) shall be tried either by jury (Lagnandsret), or Meddomsret. The Lagnandsret consists of three judges and 10 jurors. The Kingdom is divided into 4 jury districts (Lagdømmer), each having its chief judge. Each district is divided into circuits, in which courts are held at fixed times. The Meddomsret consists of the judge and is held in the district of the inferior court, and 2 assistant judges (not professional) summoned for each case. The Lagnandsret takes cognisance of the higher classes of offences, and is also a court of appeal. The Meddomsret is for the trial of other offences, and is also a court of first instance.

There are three convict prisons; inmates, June 30, 1927, 468 males and 15 females. There are 128 local prisons, in which were detained, June 30, 1927, 683 males and 46 females.

Pauperism.

The relief of the poor is mostly provided for by local taxation by the Communes. The number of persons receiving relief amounted to 85,233 in 1925.

Defence.

The most important fortresses of Norway are Oscarsborg, Tonsberg, Kristiansand, Bergen, and Agdenes; the old fortresses Karljohansvaern, Akershus in Oslo, Bergenhus in Bergen, Munkholmen near Trondhjem, and Vardøhus, are of no importance.

ARMY.

The army of Norway is a national militia. Service is universal and compulsory, liability commencing at the age of 18, and continuing till the age of 55. The men are called out at 21, and for the first 12 years belong to the line. Men from 18 to 21 and from 45 to 55 belong to the landstorm, which can be called out in a national emergency, and from 33 to 43 to the landvaern. The initial training is carried out in recruits' schools; it lasts for 48 days in the infantry and garrison artillery, 62 in the mountain batteries, 72 in the engineers, 92 in the field artillery, and 102 in the cavalry. As soon as their courses are finished the men are passed to the units to which they will permanently belong, and with them go through a further training of 24 days. Subsequent training consists of 24 days in the second, third and seventh years of service. The strength of the permanent forces in 1927 were 1,165 officers and 3,405 other ranks; the numbers trained in that year were approximately 9,700.

The army is organised as follows:

	Divisions	Regiments	Battalions	Squadrons	Batteries	Machine Gun Companies	Cyclist Companies	Companies	Flights
Infantry . . . . .	6	17	55	—	—	8	5	212	—
Cavalry . . . . .	—	3	—	17	—	3	—	—	—

The Norwegian infantry is armed with the Krag-Jørgensen rifle of 6.5 mm. The field artillery has Erhardt Q.F. guns of 7.5 cm.

The budget of the army for 1927-28 is 30,230,800 kroner.

NAVY.

The navy is administered under the Minister of Defence by a Commander-in-Chief. The principal vessels are:—

Laid down	Name	Displacement	Armour		Principal Armament	H.P.	Max. Speed
			Belt	Big Guns
1896	{Harald Haarfagre . . . . .}	8,900	7	8	2 Sin.; 6 4.7in. . . . .	4,500	17
	{Tordenskjold . . . . .}
1899	{Norge . . . . .}	4,200	6	8	2 Sin.; 6 6in. . . . .	5,200	17
	{Endevold . . . . .}

None of the above possesses any other than local value. The whole navy is designed for coast-defence duties.

There are also 1 large gunboat, 3 destroyers, 3 first-class torpedo boats and 23 others, 10 submarines and 3 mine-layers. There are now about 36 seaplanes and 20 other planes.

The navy numbers about 1,000 officers, warrant officers and men, on the permanent establishment, and 500 to 750 men conscripted annually. All seafaring men between the ages of 20 and 44 are enrolled on the lists of the active fleet, and are liable to the maritime conscription. The conscripts have to go through a training of at least 6 months.

The naval expenditure, 1927-28, amounts to 11,720,782 kroner.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

As Norway is a barren and mountainous country, there is little opportunity for agriculture. The arable soil is found in comparatively narrow strips, gathered in deep and narrow valleys and around fjords and lakes. Large continuous tracts fit for cultivation do not exist. Of the total area, 72.6 per cent. is unproductive, 24.2 per cent. forest, and 3.2 per cent. under cultivation.

The acreage and products of the principal crops for 3 years were as follows :

Crops	Acreage			Produce (quarters)
	1924	1925	1926	1924	1925	1926
Wheat .	21,365	22,027	22,062	54,929	59,569	71,247

<sup>1</sup> Bushels.

<sup>2</sup> Tons.

On June 20, 1926, the country possessed live-stock as follows:—Horses, 183,342; cattle, 1,200,279; sheep, 1,595,237; goats, 290,279; swine, 303,412.

II. FORESTRY.

The forests are one of the chief natural sources of wealth. The total area covered with forests is estimated at 28,956 square miles, of which 70 per cent. is under pine trees. The State forests occupy about 4,100 square miles. The value of unwrought or partly wrought timber exported from Norway in 1925 and 1926 was respectively 73,701,957 and 49,466,184 kroner, and of wood pulp and paper 312,966,720 kroner in 1925 and 225,764,016 kroner in 1926.

III. MINES AND MINERALS.

The pyrite is the most important mineral product for both its sulphur and copper content. Iron-ore deposits occur in many places, but there is a shortage of coal for smelting. The total value of mineral products in 1926 was 22,976,000 kroner. The chief mineral products are silver ore, 531,000 kroner in 1926; copper ore, 234,000 kroner; pyrites, 17,562,000 kroner; iron ore, 9,553,000 kroner. The most important metals produced in Norway are silver, electrolyte pig iron, ferro-alloys, aluminium and zinc. The value of these products in 1926 was: silver, 819,000 kroner; electrolyte ~~iron~~ 317,000 kroner; ferro-alloys, 27,024,000 kroner; aluminium, 46,907,000 kroner; zinc, 3,700,000 kroner.

IV. FISHERIES.

Fish and fish-products comprised in 1926, 22.9 per cent. of Norway's total export values. The number of persons in 1925 engaged in cod fishery was 81,246; in summer-herring fishery, 20,488; and in mackerel fishery, about 7,000.

The value of the sea fisheries (based on the prices paid at the fishing places) in kroner in 1925 was: Cod, 66,424,082; herring, 32,006,770; mackerel, 2,895,272; salmon and sea trout, 3,310,322; other fisheries, 23,677,525; lobsters, 1,172,769; total, 129,486,690.

Other fisheries are the whale, walrus, seal, and shark fisheries, which in 1925 produced a total of about 101,700,000 kroner.

Whale-oil production: 273,090 barrels in 1921; 342,290 barrels in 1922; 439,147 barrels in 1923; 377,553 barrels in 1924; 597,690 barrels in 1925; 642,000 barrels in 1926.

V. MANUFACTURES.

Although some coal is produced in Svalbard, the chief source of energy in Norway is water power, of which the country possesses an enormous amount, which produces motive power for manufacturing industry. Norway's water power has been estimated at 12,290,000 horse-power, of which 1,398,119 horse-power are in use. The chief manufacturing use of this power has been for the production of pulp and paper and of electro-chemical and electro-metallurgical products, which are important Norwegian industries. The principal products of the electro-chemical and the electro-metallurgical industry are ammonium nitrate, calcium nitrate, sodium nitrate, calcium carbide, ferro-alloys, aluminium and zinc.

The numbers of establishments and workers, etc., in the principal industries in 1925 were as follows:—

Industries	Estab-lish-ments	Number of		Hours of Work (1,000's)	Force employed (H. P.)
		Function-aries	Workers

Currency, Credit and Banking.

On June 30, 1926, the nominal value of the coin minted (the coinage after the monetary reform deducting the coins melted down) was: Gold coin, 22,639,850 kroner; silver coin, 9,779,768 kroner; nickel coin, 24,445,857 kroner; bronze and iron coin, 2,558,016 kroner; total, 59,423,191 kroner.

There is no Government paper money.

The 'Norges Bank' is a joint-stock bank, of which, however, a considerable part is owned by the State. The bank is, besides, governed by laws enacted by the State, and its directors are elected by the Storting except the president and vice-president of the head office, who are nominated by the King. It is the only bank in Norway that is authorised to issue bank notes for circulation. The balance-sheets of the bank for 1926 show the following figures:—Assets at the end of the year—bullion, 147,225,000 kroner; outstanding capital, 445,530,000 kroner, other assets, 119,812,000 kroner; total, 712,567,000 kroner. Liabilities—notes in circulation, 337,199,000 kroner (the issue of notes allowed was 422,227,000 kroner); deposits, 306,846,000 kroner; other liabilities, 68,522,000 kroner, net income 12,994,000 kroner; dividends payable for the year, 2,800,000 kroner, 8 per cent.

The 'Kongeriget Norges Hypothekbank' was established in 1852 by the State to meet the demand for loans on mortgage. The capital of the bank is mostly furnished by the State, and amounted to 52,000,000 kroner in 1926. At the end of 1926 the total amount of bonds issued was 382,071,000 kroner. The loans on mortgage amounted to 395,067,000 kroner.

The Norwegian 'Arbeiderbruk og Boligbank' was established in 1903 by the State to meet the demand for loans on mortgage from labourers and small proprietors. The capital of the bank is furnished by the State, and amounted to 7,200,000 kroner in 1926. On June 30, 1926, the total amount of bonds issued was 31,078,000 kroner. The loans on mortgage amounted to 32,930,000 kroner. This bank has been replaced by the 'Norske Stats Småbruk og Boligbank,' which was established in 1917. Its capital amounted to 18,000,000 kroner in 1926; on June 30, 1926, the total amount of bonds issued was 97,000,000 kroner. The loans on mortgage amounted to 145,787,000 kroner.

Further, several private credit associations are authorized to meet the demand for loans on mortgage. In 1925, there were 5 such associations in operation. The total amount of bonds issued by these credit associations at the end of 1925 was 46,768,000 kroner, and the total amount of loans on mortgage was 45,851,000 kroner.

In the year 1922, Den Norske Stats Fisherbank (established by law 1919) started with the purpose of making loans to fishermen for fishing vessels and fishing outfits, etc. The capital of the bank is furnished by the State and amounted to 6,500,000 kroner in 1926. On June 30, 1926, the total amount of bonds issued was 15,000,000 kroner, and the total amount of loans was 8,883,000 kroner.

In the year 1926, the Norges Kommunalbank was established by law for the purpose of making loans to communities. The bank began its operations on September 1, 1927. The capital of the bank is 23,000,000 kroner furnished by the State.

At the end of 1926, there were 162 private joint-stock banks reported, of which, however, 22 were under administration by the State and 17 in liquidation. The severe deflation period of 1921-23 caused several joint-stock banks to suspend their payments. In 1923, therefore, a new law was passed whereby banks in difficulties could continue their operations under administration by the State. The total amount of capital and funds possessed by joint-stock banks was 331,100,000 kroner (capital 210,200,000, funds 120,900,000), of which 323,400,000 kroner belonged to banks in free operation. Deposits amounted to 1,993,400,000 kroner, of which 173,300,000 kroner were deposits on demand, and 1,820,100,000 kroner deposits on time; 1,141,783,000 kroner of the total amount of deposits were deposited at banks in free operation.

The number of savings-banks at the end of 1926 was 601, of which 9 smaller banks were under administration by the State and 4 in liquidation. The total amount of the funds of the savings-banks amounted to 179,997,000 kroner, and total deposits 2,523,900,000 kroner, of which 21,100,000 kroner were on demand, and 2,502,800,000 kroner on time. The number of depositors was 2,005,016.

The operations of savings-banks have been regulated by law and controlled by the Ministry of Finance since 1887. Since January 1, 1925, the control has been made more stringent.

As from January 1, 1925, all private joint-stock banks must be chartered by royal licence. Their operations are regulated, to a considerable extent, by the law, and controlled by the Ministry of Finance.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

By a treaty signed October 16, 1875, Norway adopted the same monetary system as Sweden and Denmark. The Norwegian krone, of 100 ore, is of the value of 1s. 1½d. at par, or about 18 kroner to the pound sterling. The gold 20-kroner piece weighs 8·960572 grammes, '900 fine containing 8·0645 grammes of fine gold, and the silver krone weighs 7·5 grammes, '800 fine, containing 6 grammes of fine silver. The standard of value is gold. National Bank notes for 5, 10, 50, 100, 500, and 1,000 kroner are legal means of payment, and the Bank is ordinarily bound to exchange them for gold on presentation. The duty of the bank to pay the notes in gold was temporarily suspended from August, 1914, to March, 1916, and again from November, 1920, up to date.

The metric system of weights and measures is obligatory.

SPITSBERGEN, BEAR ISLAND, AND ADJACENT ISLANDS (SVALBARD).

An archipelago situated between 10° and 35° longitude east of Greenwich and between 74° and 81° latitude north. The distance from Norway to Bear Island is 240 miles, and to Spitsbergen (South Cape) 360 miles.

It is claimed that in all probability the archipelago was discovered by Norwegians in 1194 and re-discovered by the Dutch navigator Barents in 1596. The English explorer Henry Hudson visited Spitsbergen in 1607. In the 17th century a very lucrative whale-hunting was started and for some time there were Dutch, British, and Norwegian claims to sovereignty and quarrels about the hunting-places. But when in the 18th century the whale-hunting ended, the question of the sovereignty of Spitsbergen lost its actuality, and it was not until the beginning of this century that the question was again raised, owing to the discovery and exploitation of rich coalfields. It was settled by a Treaty, signed on February 9, 1920, at Paris, in which Norway's sovereignty over the Archipelago was recognised. On August 14, 1925, the Archipelago was officially taken possession of by Norway.

Total area about 25,000 square miles. The chief islands are West Spitsbergen or Mainland, North East Land (about half the former), Prince Charles Foreland, Edge Island, Barents Land, King Karl's Land, Hope Island, and Bear Island. The climate is essentially arctic, tempered by the Gulf Stream.

Coal is the principal product. There are six mining camps inhabited all the year round. The largest is Longyearbyen in Advent Bay with 529 inhabitants. In 1926, 291,211 tons of coal were exported.

PANAMA.

(REPÚBLICA DE PANAMÁ.)

Government.—Panama, formerly a department of the Republic of Colombia, asserted its independence on November 3, 1903, and the de facto Government was on November 13 recognised by the Government of the United States, and soon afterwards by the other Powers. In 1914 Colombia, in virtue of the Treaty of Bogotá entered into with the United States (see under Colombia), undertook to agree to recognise the independence of Panama. This Treaty was ratified by the United States and Colombia in 1921. On May 8, 1924, a Protocol was signed at Washington by the Panama and Colombian Plenipotentiaries by which diplomatic relations between the two countries were established, and on May 15, 1924, each country nominated its representatives to the other.

The Constitution, adopted February 13, 1904, and amended on December 26, 1918, provides for a Chamber of Deputies of 46 members (one for every 15,000 inhabitants), which meets biennially on September 1, and for a President of the Republic, elected by direct vote for 4 years, and not eligible for the succeeding term. The President who has been called to exercise the executive power owing to the death or resignation of a President is not eligible for re-election if he has exercised the power during any of that time. Nor is the President eligible for re-election if he has been called to exercise the executive power on account of the accidental or temporary absence of the titular President, and remains in power during any part of the six months immediately preceding the date of election for the new President. Beginning with 1924, elections of deputies are to be held every four years.

President of the Republic.—Rodolfo Chiari. Assumed office, October 1, 1924.

There are three Vice-Presidents, and a Cabinet of five Ministers.

A treaty for the demarcation of the boundary line between Panama and Costa Rica was signed on behalf of the respective Governments on March 17, 1910, and has been ratified by the congresses of both countries. By this treaty the question of what is the true boundary line was submitted to the arbitration of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, who gave his decision in 1914. Panama, however, refused to accept the award. The United States Government has insisted upon the acceptance of the White Award, with the result that in September, 1921, the disputed region was occupied by Costa Rica. Panama, however, has protested against the decision, and does not recognise the occupation, as a result of which diplomatic relations between the two countries have been broken off since 1921.

Area and Population.—Extreme length is about 480 miles; breadth between 37 and 110 miles; total area is 32,380 square miles; population according to the census of 1923 (excluding the Canal Zone), 442,522, including 52,069 whites, 85,970 Negroes, 33,425 Indians, 3,061 Orientals, and 267,961 Mestizos. The inhabitants are of a mixed race, comprising Spanish, Indian, and Negro elements, with a small number of temporary immigrants from the United States and European countries. There are approximately 40,000 British subjects in the Republic, chiefly from the West Indies. There are 9 provinces as follows (the capitals in brackets):—Bocas del Toro (Bocas del Toro), 22,239 inhabitants; Coclé (Penonomé), 42,219 inhabitants; Colón (Colón), 41,206 inhabitants; Chiriquí (David), 76,434 inhabitants; Darién (La Palma), formed April 13, 1923, out of the Eastern portion of Panama province, 10,728 inhabitants; Herrera (Chitré), 28,984 inhabitants; Los Santos (Las Tablas), 34,638 inhabitants; Panama (Panama), 103,876 inhabitants; and Veraguas (Santiago), 82,162 inhabitants. The capital, Panama, founded in 1518, on the Pacific coast has (1920) 59,458 inhabitants, and Colón on the Atlantic coast (1920), 31,203 inhabitants. Smaller ports on the Pacific are Aguadulce, Pedregal, Montijo, and Puerto Mutis; on the Atlantic Bocas del Toro, Portobello, and Mandinga (opened September 26, 1916). Some parts of the interior of Panama are unexplored.

Movement of population for three years:—

Year	Births					Marriages	Deaths
	Total	Boys	Girls	Legitimate	Illegitimate
1922	10,656	5,421	5,235	3,204	7,452	637	5,436
1923	13,910	7,214	6,696	3,851	10,059	704	11,406
1925	12,013	6,186	5,877	3,396	8,617	589	6,020

Religion.—The religion of the country is Catholicism, but other denominations are represented and have a fair following. In the Canal Zone Protestantism chiefly prevails. There are 71 Catholic churches and 58 parishes, served by 70 priests of various nationalities (20 are Panamanians, 27 Spaniards, 5 Italians, 4 French, 1 English, 3 North Americans, 3 Germans, 4 Colombians, 2 Venezuelans, and 1 Swiss).

Education.—Elementary education is obligatory for all children from 7 to 15 years of age. The Government maintains 446 public schools throughout the nine provinces and 54,214 children (excluding children enrolled in the Canal Zone public schools) received free instruction in 1926 from 1,492 teachers. The co-educational system has been adopted in all the schools of the Republic. Panama has a University (Instituto Nacional), with 1,573 students, a normal school for girls (696 pupils), and a school of arts and crafts or trades for boys from 14 years of age. In addition there are about 71 private institutions. Many young men and women are being educated in Europe and the United States at the cost of the Panama Government. Panama city is the site of the Bolivarian University, founded June 22, 1926, as an expression of Pan-American solidarity and supported by contributions from Colombia, Ecuador, Panama, Peru, and others.

Justice.—The laws have been codified and took effect on October 1, 1917, with the exception of the Administrative Code which was brought into force on November 15, 1918. These codes—civil, penal, commercial, judicial, administrative, fiscal, and mining—are designed to meet national needs and modern conditions, and will replace the old Colombian laws that have been in use since the separation of Panama. The death penalty has been abolished.

Finance.—All the revenue collected on importations into the Republic belongs to the Panama Government, but the United States reserve the right to import supplies of all descriptions required for canal construction and for the use of their employees free of all taxes.

A fiscal agent, detailed from the canal service, reorganised the budget system in 1920; expenditures and revenues are on a biennial basis.

The national revenue and expenditure for recent years were as follows for year ending June 30 (1 $\frac{1}{2}$  = 4.80 dollars):—

	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue . . .	1,104,166	1,100,783	2,124,836 <sup>1</sup>	2,558,895	2,979,682
Expenditure . . .	1,498,940	1,257,426	1,576,692	2,558,895	2,974,682

The revenue includes an annual subsidy of 250,000 dollars from the United States so long as the latter maintains and operates the canal.

The Republic has 127,671 $\frac{1}{2}$  in United States banks, 195,616 $\frac{1}{2}$  in the National Bank, and 437,500 $\frac{1}{2}$  in the International Bank of Panama. The foreign debt consists of bonds to the value of 2,204,166 $\frac{1}{2}$  issued in the United States for railway and road construction, &c. The internal debt amounts to 556,086 $\frac{1}{2}$ .

The Republic has no army or navy to support. The National Police Force numbers 60 officers and 630 men.

Production.—The soil of Panama is of great fertility. Of the whole area about five-eighths are unoccupied, and of the remainder only a small part is properly cultivated. Immigration of European settlers is encouraged, but, owing to the nature of the climate, this is not recommended. The most important product is bananas, which in 1925 were exported to the value of 430,000 $\frac{1}{2}$ . Other products exported are cocoa, 71,000 $\frac{1}{2}$ ; coconuts, 43,000 $\frac{1}{2}$ ; ivory nuts, 42,5007. Caoutchouc (about 180 tons annually) is collected by the Indians of the Cordillera, or is obtained from trees planted by Europeans near the coast. Coffee (about 500,000 bushes) is grown in the province of Chiriqui, near the Costa Rican frontier. In the province of Coclé (Atlantic coast) there is one large agricultural undertaking, begun in 1894 with German capital. Here about 75,000 cocoa trees, 50,000 coffee bushes, and 25,000 caoutchouc trees have been planted and are now beginning to yield returns. Other products of the soil of Panama are coconuts, mahogany and other woods, copaiba, sarsaparilla and ipecacuanha. Sugar and tobacco growing are assuming importance. The country has great timber resources. Cattle rearing is carried on successfully, and hides form an important article of export.

Pearl fishing is carried on at the Pearl Islands in the Gulf of Panama. Turtle-shell is also exported to a considerable amount. During the year a concession was granted to a local concern to fish for sponges. It is asserted that Panama possesses numerous common minerals.

Commerce, Shipping, Communications.—The imports and exports (excluding the Canal Zone) for 6 years are shown as follows (l. = 4·85 dollars :—

Year	Imports	Exports	Year	Imports	Exports
	£	£		£	£
1920	3,600,673	780,978	1923	2,640,494	497,860
1921	3,300,244	519,876	1924	2,833,129	618,930
1922	2,180,280	518,225	1925	3,011,589	730,742

Of the total imports in 1925, 65·5 per cent. came from the United States (exclusive of canal materials) and 9·5 per cent. from Great Britain. The principal exports in 1925 were bananas (2,165,150 dollars), coconuts, coffee, balata, hides, mother of pearl, ivory nuts (214,233 dollars), gum, tortoise shell, and timber.

Total trade between Panama and the United Kingdom (Board of Trade Returns) for 5 years :—

	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Panama to U.K.	87,587	71,545	64,200	119,298	66,868
Exports to Panama from U.K.	354,026	416,148	388,158	371,185	402,665

The Isthmus on both sides is in communication with European and American countries by several lines of steamers. All the maritime traffic (International commerce) for Colón and Panama now runs through the Canal Zone ports of Cristobal and Balboa ; Boca del Toro remains for the provincial trade. The new port of Mandinga, about 80 miles from the city of Colón, was opened on September 26, 1916.

The Panama Railroad, which connects Panama City on the Pacific with Colon on the Atlantic is the principal railway in the country. It is 47·61 miles long and, with the exception of the termini at Panama and Colon, passes through Canal Zone territory. As there is no road across the Isthmus, and as most vessels unload their cargo at Cristobal (Colon), the greater portion of the merchandise destined for Panama City is brought by the Panama Railroad. In the Province of Chiriqui there is a narrow gauge railway, 32 miles long, connecting the port of Peñagual with David, the capital. There is a branch line, 7 miles long, to the town of Potrerillos, which may be extended when funds are available. Between David and Concepcion there is a line 18 miles long. There is a project to extend this line to Puerto Armuelles. The proposed extension will add another 35 miles to the length of the State-owned railway.

There are telegraph cables from Panama to North American and South American ports, and from Colón to the United States and Europe. Roads are being constructed throughout the country. There are 96 post-offices, 33 telegraph offices, and seven radio stations, six of which are operated by the Navy Department of the United States.

Money and Credit.—The monetary unit is the gold Balboa weighing 1.672 grammes .900 fine, to which the United States gold dollar is legally equivalent. Silver coins are the peso (of 25 grammes .900 fine), and the half, fifth, tenth and twentieth peso pieces and nickel coins of 2½ cents. There is no paper money other than United States notes. Two silver pesos of Panama currency are taken as equivalent to one U.S. gold dollar. Altogether four millions of silver dollars of the new currency have been coined and placed in circulation.

Part of the 10,000,000 dollars (canal money) paid by the United States has been applied to the establishment of a real estate loan bank, part to public improvements in the several provinces, and 6,000,000 dollars have been invested in the United States, particularly in New York real estate.

English weights and measures are in general use as well as those of the metric system.

The Panama Canal and the Canal Zone.

On November 18, 1903, a treaty between the United States and Panama was signed, providing facilities for the construction and maintenance of the inter-oceanic Canal. In this treaty, Panama granted in perpetuity the use of a zone (Canal-Zone) five miles wide on each side of the Canal route, and within this zone the exclusive control for police, judicial, sanitary and other purposes. For subsidiary canals other territory was ceded and, for the defence of the Canal, the coastline of the zone and the islands in Panama Bay were also ceded. The cities of Panama and Colón remain under the authority of Panama, but complete jurisdiction was granted to the United States in both the cities and in their harbours in all that relates to sanitation and quarantine. In return for these grants the United States paid 10,000,000 dollars on the ratification of the treaty, and is paying 250,000 dollars yearly, beginning after nine years. The treaty was ratified on February 26, 1904, and in July, 1904, the agreement for the provisional delimitation of the boundaries of the United States territory on the Isthmus was signed. According to this agreement the city of Panama is, for all practical purposes, left without a seaport for foreign commerce, as the anchorage of vessels at Flamenco Island and the wharves at Balboa both lie within the territory of the zone. A similar port was opened on the Atlantic entrance to the Canal, called Cristobal.

Governor of Canal Zone.—Brigadier-General Meriwether L. Walker (U.S. Army). Appointed October 15, 1924.

The area of the Canal zone, including land and water, but not including the area within the 3-mile limit from the Atlantic and Pacific ends, is 553.8 square miles. This area includes the original grant of five miles on either side of the centre line of the canal, the shores of Gatun Lake between the 85 foot and 100 foot contours, certain lands taken over for fortifications, and 21.8 square miles in the valley of the Chagres river and its tributaries above Alhajuela, which were transferred from Panama to the United States on February 1, 1924, in anticipation of the construction of a dam at Alhajuela for the storage of more water to maintain the summit level of the canal during the dry season. The area of Gatun Lake, when its surface is at its normal elevation of 85 feet above sea level, is 163.4 square miles. The civil population of the Canal Zone on June 30, 1927, was 27,624, of whom 7,461 were Americans. Of this population, 2,111 American men, and 349 American women, and 4,166 men and 103 women of other nationalities (chiefly British West Indian negroes) were employed by The Panama Canal and Railroad. There are in the Canal Zone 2,501 American women and 2,585 American children, and 4,464 women and 8,938 children of other nationalities. No land in the Zone is privately owned and the Zone is, in effect, a Government owned reservation dedicated to the operation, maintenance and protection of the Canal and its appurtenances. However, building sites can be obtained on license by steamship companies, fuel oil dealers, and others with legitimate business interests depending on the Canal, and agricultural lands can be licensed in tracts not exceeding 50 hectares.

The Canal has a summit elevation of 85 feet above the sea. It is 44.08 nautical miles in length from deep water in the Caribbean Sea to deep water in the Pacific Ocean. The distance from deep water to the shore line in Limon Bay is about 4 miles, and from the Pacific shore line to deep water is about 4½ miles; hence the length of the Canal from shore to shore is approximately 35½ miles. The channel ranges in width from 300 to 1,000 feet. The average bottom width of the channel in this project is 649 feet, and the minimum width is 300 feet. The Canal has a minimum depth of 41 feet. The average time of passage through the Canal is from 7 to 8 hours. The record passage is 4 hours 10 minutes. The maximum traffic capacity of the Canal is estimated at 48 ships of usual size in a day or about 17,000 in a year.

The Gatun dam along the crest is 8,400 feet long, including the spillway, or over 1½ miles, and ½ mile wide at its greatest width. The crest of the dam is at an elevation of 105 feet above sea level, or 20 feet above the normal level of Gatun Lake, and 100 feet wide. The width of the dam at the normal water level of the lake, i.e., 85 feet above sea level, is about 388 feet. The length of the cut through the Continental divide (Culebra, now Gaillard Cut), is 6.97 nautical miles. The minimum bottom width of the cut is 300 feet. The bottom is 40 feet above sea level, giving a normal depth of 45 feet.

The appropriations for the construction, operation and maintenance of the Canal to June 30, 1927, totalled 487,567,627 dollars, and the revenues from tolls and other sources since it was opened to navigation have totalled 175,081,520 dollars. The current expenses of operation and maintenance, exclusive of depreciation and amortisations during the fiscal year 1926-27 were 8,049,074 dollars, and the gross revenue was 25,485,345 dollars.

The Canal was informally opened to commerce by the passage of the 9,000 ton steamer Ancon on August 15th, 1914, with specially invited guests. The journey was made without mishap in ten hours. The Canal has been in use since, except that owing to landslides in the Gaillard Cut traffic was interrupted for various short periods in 1915, and from September 18, 1915, to April 15, 1916, the channel was entirely blocked. Since April 15, 1916, traffic has moved with only slight delays, save only that in the latter part of August, 1916, Cucaracha slide became active, causing a suspension for six days, and Culebra slide caused a stoppage on January 10 and 11, 1917.

Since that time the channel has been maintained, and there has been no interruption of traffic.

The President of the United States proclaimed the official and formal opening of the Canal on July 12, 1920.

Particulars of the traffic through the Canal for the last 6 years are given as follows:—

Fiscal year ending June 30	Northbound (Pacific to Atlantic)		Southbound (Atlantic to Pacific)		Total		Tolls levied (in dollars)

Of the total number of commercial transits of the Canal during the year ended June 30, 1927, 2,685 were American, 1,351 British, 265 Norwegian, 212 German, 165 Japanese, 116 French, 106 Swedish, 105 Dutch, 105 Panamanian, 74 Italian, 63 Peruvian, 52 Colombian, 46 Danish, 30 Spanish, 29 Danzig, 27 Chilean, 16 Belgian, 14 Yugoslav, and 14 of 7 other nationalities. Total, 5,475.

The (Hay-Pauncefote) treaty between Great Britain and the United States signed November 19, and ratified by the United States Senate December 16, 1901, provides for the use of the Canal on equal terms by vessels of all nations. On August 24, 1912, the United States Congress passed the Panama Canal Act whereby privileges were given to certain classes of American shipping using the canal. The British Government lodged a protest against some of the provisions which it regarded as involving violation of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. After much discussion and many suggestions, President Wilson, on March 5, 1914, requested Congress to repeal that provision of the Act which discriminates between American and other vessels, holding that the exemption was 'in plain contravention of the treaty with Great Britain concerning the Canal concluded on November 19, 1901.' The repealing Bill was signed on June 15, 1914.

The postal address of the Canal administration is The Panama Canal, Balboa Heights, Canal Zone.

PARAGUAY.

(REPÚBLICA DEL PARAGUAY.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Paraguay gained its independence from Spanish rule in 1811, and after a short government by two consuls, the supreme power was seized, in 1815, by Dr. José Gaspar Rodríguez Francia, who exercised autocratic sway as dictator till his death, September 20, 1840. Dr. Francia's reign was followed by an interregnum, which lasted till 1842, when a National Congress, meeting at the capital, Asuncion, elected Don Mariano Roque Alonso and Don Carlos Antonio Lopez joint consuls of the Republic. Another Congress voted, March 13, 1844, a new Constitution, and, March 14, elected Don Carlos Antonio Lopez sole President; he was continued by another election, March 14, 1857. At the death of Don Carlos, September 10, 1862, his son, Don Francisco Solano Lopez, born 1827, succeeded to the supreme power. President Lopez, in 1864, began a dispute with the Government of Brazil, the consequence of which was the entry of a Brazilian army, united with forces of the Argentine Confederation and Uruguay, into the Republic, June, 1865. After a struggle of five years, in which Paraguay lost probably 500,000 men, Lopez was defeated and killed at the battle of Cerro Corá, March 1, 1870.

A new Constitution was proclaimed on November 25, 1870, whereby the legislative authority is vested in a Congress of two Houses, a Senate and a Chamber of Deputies, the executive being entrusted to a President, elected for the term of four years, with five ministers. There is also a non-active Vice-President, who is at the same time President of the Senate. The Senate and Chamber of Deputies are elected directly by the people, the former in the ratio of one representative to 12,000 inhabitants, and the latter one to 6,000 inhabitants, though in the case of the sparsely populated divisions a greater ratio is permitted. The electoral law of November 30, 1916, provides for 20 Senators and 40 Deputies. The Senators and Deputies receive each 5,000 paper dollars per month.

President of the Republic.—Dr. Eligio Ayala. (Assumed office on August 15, 1924.)

The President exercises his functions through a cabinet of responsible ministers, five in number, presiding over the departments of the Interior; of Finance; of Justice, Worship and Public Instruction; of War and Marine; and of Foreign Affairs. The President receives a salary of 30,000 pesos per month, and each of the ministers 15,000 pesos. The total administrative expenses are estimated (year ending August 31, 1928) at 1,379,358 pesos gold and 201,259,240 pesos paper.

The country is divided into 2 sections: the 'Oriental,' east of Paraguay river, and the 'Occidental,' west of the same river. The Oriental section is divided into 12 departments, subdivided into 104 'partidos'; the Occidental section (the Chaco) is divided into 3 'comandancias militares.'

The 12 departments are: Concepción, San Pedro, Caraguatay, Villarrica, Ytú, Caazapa, Encarnación, San Ignacio, Quirindy, Villeta, Paraguari and Pilar. The capital, Asunción, forms a district subdivided into 'secciones policiales.' The civil authority is exercised by a jefe político in each of the former, who is subject to the control of Government delegados, or comisionados, 12 in number, among whom are included the military commanders of the five military zones.

Area and Population.

The approximate area of Paraguay proper or 'oriental section,' which is situated between the rivers Paraguay and Alto Paraná, is estimated at 159,834 square kilometres, or 61,647 square miles. An area officially stated to be 100,000 square miles in extent, lying between the rivers Paraguay and Pilcomayo, known as the Chaco, is claimed by Paraguay, whose rights, however, are disputed by Bolivia. In 1926 the total population was estimated at 798,969 (not including the Chaco Indians, roughly estimated at 30,000), with a density of 5 per square mile. The population of Paraguay (oriental section) consists of people of Mestizo Indian, European (chiefly Spanish) and Negro blood, the Mestizo largely predominating. On June 30, 1926, the population of the capital, Asunción (founded 1537), was 113,684; other towns, as estimated in 1926, are Villarrica, 26,000; Concepción, 11,000; Encarnación, 7,500; San Pedro, 8,700; Luque, 13,000; Carapeguá, 12,000; Paraguari, 10,000; Villa del Pilar, 6,000. These figures include the surrounding districts in each case, and are estimated.

In 1913 the immigrants assisted by Government numbered 1,512; in 1923, 124; in 1924, 451; in 1925, 810; in 1926, 317 (Germans 196, Russians 86). The immigration figures for 1927 and, probably, for a few years, will be increased by the arrival of Mennonites from Canada, farmers who enjoying under a government concession certain exemptions and privileges in the conduct of their own affairs, are taking up considerable areas of land in the Chaco. A census taken in August, 1921, of the 27 National Colonies in the Republic gives them a total population of 13,808 (7,755 males). Very little land is now national property, most of it having been transferred to private ownership, much of it in very large tracts.

Religion, Instruction, and Justice.

The Roman Catholic Church is the established religion of the State, but the free exercise of other religions is permitted. Asunción, Suffragan to Buenos Aires, is the only Paraguayan Episcopal See. The law of civil marriage came into force on August 1, 1899. Roman Catholic and other religious marriage ceremonies are allowed, but the civil ceremony alone gives validity to a marriage.

Education is free and nominally compulsory, but schools are not everywhere available. In 1926 there were 576 government primary schools with 90,133 pupils (51,400 boys and 38,733 girls). The teachers numbered 1,984 (463 men and 1,521 women). Total expenditures for these schools in 1926-27 were 30,393,994 pesos paper. There were also 21 private schools, with 3,201 pupils (1,820 boys and 1,381 girls). There are National Colleges (i.e., high schools) at Asunción, Villarrica, and Pilar. The aggregate number of students is 800 and of teachers 55. There is also a University which had in 1926, 369 students and 60 professors. There are also 4 normal schools (Asuncion, Villarrica, Concepcion, Encarnacion, Barrero Grande, and San Juan Baptista), with 77 male and 405 female students. The School of Commerce has 432 students and 20 professors. A national library, the national archives, and a natural history museum and botanic zoological garden are under the care of the department of Public Instruction.

Justice is administered by a Supreme Court, two courts of appeal (one for civil causes and another for commercial and criminal causes), a court of jurymen, 10 judges of First Instance, and (at the capital) 3 police magistrates. The functions of magistrates are exercised in the provinces by upwards of 100 jueces de paz (all laymen), who are at the same time registrars of births, deaths, and marriages.

Finance.

The estimated revenue and expenditure for six years are given as follows:—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	£	£		£	£
1921-22	1,140,542	1,266,274	1924-25	1,103,250	802,500
1922-23	707,032	601,817	1925-26	1,110,150	1,103,810
1923-24	665,426	665,300	1926-27	1,220,558	1,220,550

On June 30, 1927, the public debt of Paraguay was given as 6,665,733 pesos gold, and 26,804,494 pesos paper.

Defence.

The small army of Paraguay is entrusted to a French military commission. Establishment (1926), 85 officers and 2,285 men, distributed at 5 centres. In the event of war the National Guard is called to the colours. Service is compulsory in the ranks for 2 years. The territory of the Republic is divided into 5 military zones.

The navy consists at present of a flotilla of 3 small converted merchant vessels, river craft armed with modern guns. The largest is about 200 tons gross register.

Production and Industry.

The soil of Paraguay is productive and the climatic conditions favourable to the cultivation of many sub-tropical products. But in its present condition much of the country is admirably suited to pastoral purposes. Excellent grazing land is abundant in Paraguay proper and in the Chaco region. There are three packing plants. The meat packing and curing industry is encouraged by Government; hides, jerked beef, and other animal products are exported. Yerba mate, or Paraguay tea, which is a natural product of the virgin forests, is one of the chief articles of export. Tobacco is also an important product; 9,670 tons were produced in 1926. Paraguay produces quebracho extract. Fruit-growing, especially oranges, is general. The total area devoted to sugar cultivation (largely for the manufacture of spirit) is about 11,120 acres; sugar production in 1925, 2,250 tons; in 1926, 2,000 tons. There are 10 sugar factories in Paraguay, the most important of which is at Tebicuari. Roots (chiefly mandioca, sweet potatoes, and ground-nuts), maize, beans, rice, &c., are grown for local consumption, but agriculture is primitive. The cultivation of cotton is encouraged by the authorities. In 1923 the acreage under cotton was 8,712; in 1924 about 23,900; and in 1926, 30,380 acres. Estimated yield for 1925-26, 9,998,200 kilos.

Iron, manganese, copper, and other minerals are encountered in abundance. The Ibiçui iron mines were worked as early as 1863. The Quiquió and Ibiçui manganese mines contain ore deposits estimated at 60,000,000 tons. Copper has also been found at San Miguel and Quiquió.

Commerce.

The following is the value of the imports and exports (5 dollars = £1):—

—	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports . . . . .	1,136,955	1,714,242	3,138,882	3,530,550	2,441,056
Exports . . . . .	1,079,227	2,401,311	1,782,892	3,183,235	3,099,500

The chief exports in 1926 were hides (365,391), yerba (8,118 tons), oranges (17,963 416 dozens), mandarines (16,000,000), tobacco (5,096 tons), meat extract (970 tons), quebracho logs (34,380 tons), canned and preserved beef (444 tons), petit grain oil, the essential oil from the leaf of the bitter orange (90,176 kgs.), cotton (2,006 tons), cotton-seed (3,601 tons), and quebracho extract (57,550 tons). Of the imports in 1926, the most important were cotton textiles, valued at 2,534,704 gold pesos, flour, and wheat. Of the total exports in 1926, goods to the value of 819,892£. went to Argentina, whence the bulk was re-exported. In 1925 Great Britain imported from Paraguay 97,759£. worth of tinned meat, and exported to Paraguay 89,828£. of cotton piece goods.

The trade between Paraguay and the United Kingdom (Board of Trade returns) for 5 years:—

—	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Paraguay to U.K. .	11,528	64,765	126,784	164,441	103,358.
Exports to Paraguay from U.K. .	135,797	153,043	104,983	135,340	112,482

Communications.

In 1926, 2,836 vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 323,587 tons, entered at the port of Asuncion, and 3,027 with a tonnage of 341,933 cleared. These figures include sailing vessels. The principal company engaged in the river service on the Paraguay and the Alto Paraná is the Argentine Navigation Company, Ltd., the controlling interest in which is British.

There is a British-owned railway (the Paraguay Central Railway) from Asuncion to Encarnacion, on the Rio Alto Paraná. This railway has a total main-track length of 232 miles, with 26 miles of side-track. The change of gauge from 5½ ft. to the standard 4 ft. 8½ ins., was effected in 1910 and a through train service without break of bulk from Asuncion to Buenos Aires was opened in 1911. Opposite Encarnacion is Posadas, to which an Argentine line is extended, and the two lines are connected by a train ferry (opened October 10, 1913). El Ferrocarril del Norte, owned by a Paraguayan company, runs from Concepcion as far as Horqueta, a distance of 43 kilometers (33 miles). This road is projected to run as far as Pedro Juan Caballero on the Brazilian border. The Azucarera Paraguaya, in the Department of Ibytymi, has 22 kilometres (15 miles) of its line open to the public. Total length of railways 517 miles. The country roads are in general mere bullock tracks, and transport is difficult.

There is a line of telegraph at the side of the railway. The national telegraph (1,200 miles of line and 1,770 miles of wire) connects Asuncion with Corrientes and Posadas in the Argentine Republic, and thus with the outside world; there were 985 miles of telegraph line and 77 telegraph offices in 1923. Number of messages in 1926: transmitted, 85,974; received, 96,576. The telephone at Asuncion was destroyed by fire in 1913. Wireless telegraph stations have been erected at Asuncion, Concepcion, and Paraguari. They are said to have a radius of 500 kilom. by day and 1,000 kilom. by night. Paraguay joined the postal union in 1881; in 1924 the number of post offices was 154. In 1926 the total number of pieces of mail matter handled was 5,080,000.

Money and Credit.

The principal banks in Paraguay are the Bank of the Republic (capital four million dollars gold); a branch of the Bank of London and South America, Ltd.; the Banco Germanico de la America del Sud and the Banco Agricola. The last mentioned is practically a department of the Government, charged with agricultural development.

There is no gold or silver current, and paper is the only circulating medium with the exception of nickel coins of which (in pieces of fifty cents, one peso and two pesos) two and a half million pesos (of the total of 10,500,000 pesos) were in circulation on December 31, 1926. The total paper currency in circulation on November 30, 1926, was 192,660,637 pesos.

Reserves, retained by the Exchange Office or deposited in various banks, and amounting on the same date to 2,200,571 pesos gold, guaranteed the total paper in circulation to the extent of 48.71 per cent.

Since 1923 the Exchange Office (Oficina de Cambios) has maintained the exchange at $18.75 Paraguayan currency to the Argentine paper pesos and $42.61 Paraguayan currency to the gold peso.

On the last days of March, June, September and December 1927 the variable exchange value of the gold peso gave, respectively, $212.49, $210.91, $212.49 and $213.05 Paraguayan pesos to the 17.

Transactions in Argentine pesos, gold or paper, are not unusual in Paraguay.

Weights and Measures.

The metric system was officially adopted on January 1, 1901.

PERSIA.

(IRÂN.)

Reigning King (Shah).

On October 31, 1925, the Majlis, 'in the name of the national welfare, proclaimed the deposition of the Shah, Sultan Ahmad, and the overthrow of the Kajar dynasty. On December 13 the Constituent Assembly elected Riza Khan Pahlavi Shah of Persia, and made the Crown of Darius hereditary in his family. On December 15 the new Shah took the oath to defend the Constitution, and on December 16 he was publicly proclaimed. On Feb. 25, 1926, he appointed his eldest son, Shahpur Mohammed Riza, Valiahd (Crown Prince) of Persia. Riza Shah was crowned on April 25, 1926.

Constitution and Government.

The form of government in Persia up to the year 1906 was, in its most important features, similar to that of Turkey. The Shah, within the limitations imposed by the Moslem religion, was an absolute ruler, but had to reckon with the power of the leading doctors of law (Mujtahid), who resided at Najaf and Kerbela in Mesopotamia. Unlike the Sultan of Turkey he had no religious standing. In 1905, the Persian people demanded representative institutions, and in January, 1906, the Shah gave his consent to the establishment of a National Assembly, or 'Majlis,' which sat from October, 1906, to June, 1908, and drew up a 'Constitution' which received the Shah's approval on December 30, 1906. The 6th 'Majlis' was opened by the Shah in July 1926.

The government of the country is in the hands of the Cabinet, which in June, 1927, was as follows:—

Prime Minister.—Mehdigholi Khan Hedayat (Mokhber es Saltaneh).

Minister for Foreign Affairs.—Ali Gholi Khan Ansari (Moshaver-el-Mamalek).

Minister of Interior.—Mirza Hussein Khan Samiyi (Adib-es-Saltaneh).

Minister of Finance.—Prince Firouz Mirza Firouz (Nusret-ed-Dowleh).

Minister of War.—Jaafar Gholi Khan Assad.

Minister of Justice.—Mirza Ali Akbar Khan Davar.

Minister of Public Works.—Abdullah Khan Tahmaspi (Amir Lashikar).

Minister of Education.—Yaha Khan Charagooloo (Jan. 1928).

Minister of Post and Telegraphs.—Mirza Ghassem Khan Sar.

The country is divided into thirty-three provinces, which are governed by governors-general, who are directly responsible to the central Government, and can as a rule nominate the lieutenant-governors of the districts comprised in their own governments. Some of the governments are very small, and do not bear subdivision into districts, &c.; others are very large, and comprise several provinces. Governors-general and governors are generally called Hâkim, but the former usually have the title of Wâli. Each quarter of a town or parish, and every village, has a chief who is called Katkhuda. These officers are generally appointed by the governors, but sometimes elected by the citizens. The chiefs of nomad tribes are called Ilkhâni, Ilbegi, Wâli, Sirdâr, Sheikh; they are responsible for the collection of the revenues to the governors of the province in which their tribes reside.

Towns generally have a municipality, the director of which is nominated by the Central Government.

Area and Population.

Persia, which has an area of about 628,000 square miles, lies between 25° and 40° north latitude and between 44° and 63°30' east longitude. A vast portion of this area is an absolute desert, and the population is everywhere so scanty as not to exceed, on the average, 18–14 inhabitants to the square mile.

The population is estimated at 10 millions, but all figures are largely conjectural. It is estimated that the country contains some three million nomads. Of these, 260 000 are Arabs, 720,000 Turks, 675,000 Kurds and Leks, 20,700 Baluchis and Gipsies, 234,000 Lurs. These figures, however, are merely round numbers, and estimates vary.

The principal cities of Persia are:—Teheran and district, with 350,000 inhabitants; Tabriz, 180,000; Isfahan, 100,000; Meshed, 85,000; Resht, 80,000; Kerman, 40,000; Kermanshah, 40,000; Shiraz, 35,000; Yezd, 30,000; Barfurush, 30,000; Hamadan, 30,000; Kazvin, 30,000; Kum, 25,000; Sultanabad, 20,000; Kashan, 15,000; and Mohammerah, 10,000.

Religion.

Of the population about 7½ millions are Moslems of the Shi'a sect, and of that branch of it known as the Ikhda'-Ashariyya, who recognise twelve Imams or spiritual successors of the Prophet Mahomet; 850,000 are of the Sunni sect; 10,000 are Parsis (Gabrs), 40,000 Jews, 50,000

Armenians, and 30,000 Nestorians; there are also many 'Bahais' and some Christians, whose number cannot, however, be estimated.

The Moslems of the sect called Shi'a differ to some extent in religious doctrine, and more in historical belief, from the Moslems of the Turkish Empire, who are called Sunnî. The Persian priesthood (ulemâ) is very powerful. Any person capable of reading the Koran and interpreting its laws may act as a priest (mullâ). As soon as such a priest becomes known for his just interpretation of the divine law, and for his knowledge of the traditions and articles of faith, usually gained by many years of study at Najaf and Kerbela, he is called a mujtahid, or doctor of law. There are many mujtahids in Persia, sometimes several in one town; there are, however, only four or five whose decisions are accepted as final. The highest authority, the chief priest of all, is the leading mujtahid, who resides at Najaf or Kerbela, near Baghdad, and some consider him the vicegerent of the Prophet, the representative of the Imâm. The Shah and the Government have no voice in the matter of appointing the mujtahids, but the Imâm-i-Jama, chief of the great mosque (Masjid-i-Jama) of a city, are appointed by Government. Under the Imâm-i-Jama are the pish namâz or khatib (leader of public prayers and reader of the Khutba, the Friday oration), the mu'azzin (crier for prayers), and sometimes the mutavali (guardian of the mosque); this latter, as well as the mu'azzin, need not necessarily be a priest. All mosques and shrines have some endowments (wakf), and out of the proceeds of these are provided the funds for the salaries of the priests attached to them. The shrines of some favourite saints are so richly endowed as to be able to keep an immense staff of priests, servants, and hangers-on.

The Gregorian National Armenians form two dioceses, each under a bishop. One bishop resides at Tabriz, the other at Isfahan. There are also a few thousand Roman Catholic Armenians in Persia who have a bishop of their own rite at Isfahan, the bishop of the Latin rite residing at Urumia. There is a wide tolerance exercised towards Armenians and Nestorians, Jews, and Parsis in cities where Europeans reside; in other places, however, they occasionally suffer oppression from Moslems belonging to the lower classes.

Instruction.

In recent years Public Instruction has made rapid strides in advancement, and the old system of instruction, which was generally religious, has been practically entirely changed, and at present a good broad education can be obtained in general knowledge from native professors who have studied abroad, although, of course, the purely religious schools are still maintained in the Mosques, and the old 'Maktab'—street schools for the very young at which the mere rudiments of reading and writing are taught—still abound. The latest available figures from the Ministry of Public Instruction show that in 1927 there were in the country 298 Government Schools, 272 National Schools, 112 Private Schools, 45 Foreign Schools, 279 Religious Schools (Mosques), and 2,257 'Maktab' Schools, or a total of 3,263 establishments. In the first four categories (non-Religious Schools) a total of 65,991 boys, and 18,050 girls were being instructed. In Religious Schools and Maktaba there were 184,987 students of both sexes.

The Government pays the whole budget of Government Schools and grants are paid to the public, private and foreign schools. Religious Schools are maintained from endowments. In 1926-27, the Government paid out a total of 17,006,610 Krans for public education, 1,600,000 Krans have been set aside for opening new schools in 1927-28, and this sum will be increased to 5,000,000 yearly within three years. High Schools on European lines maintained in Persia are as follows. School of Medicine, School of Fine Arts, School of Pedagogy, Technical School (Manufacture of Machinery and Higher Chemistry), School of Law and Political Science, School of Engineering, School for training Military Officers.

The Foreign Schools are maintained by funds from abroad supplied by The American Presbyterian Mission, The Church Missionary Society, The Alliance Française, The Alliance Israélite, and The French Roman Catholics' Mission, and there are also schools run by the German and Russian Governments; all the above have schools for boys and for girls.

Justice.

The judicial system of Persia is modelled on that of France. There are justices of the peace in villages and small towns, higher courts in the larger towns, police magistrates in all important places, courts of appeal in Teheran, Tabriz, Shiraz, Hamadan, Ispahan and Meshed, and a court of cassation, or supreme court, in Teheran. The courts are supervised by the Ministry of Justice. New Civil, Criminal and Commercial codes based on French and Swiss codes are being introduced into the Courts of Justice.

There are in every town of Persia police magistrates, and in big towns tribunals which deal with cases coming within the sphere of public and criminal laws. There are also courts of appeal in big towns and a High Court of Appeal in Teheran which is similar to the Cour de Cassation in France.

Finance.

From the autumn of 1922 until August 4, 1927, the entire finances of the country were under the control and charge of the American Financial Mission headed by Dr. Millspaugh. The Majlis has passed a bill to engage a German in his place; until the latter arrives the Prime Minister is acting as Treasurer General. The remaining American advisers will probably remain till their contracts expire. The 1926-27 Budget gave a surplus of 15,000,000 Krans.

The most productive items of revenue in order of importance are Customs Receipts, Tea and Sugar monopoly, Land Tax and Anglo Persian Oil Co. Royalties. The incidence of taxation, which is mainly indirect, weighs most heavily on the labouring classes.

Approximate gross Customs receipts for three years (£1=42 Krans in 1924-25; £1=43.50 Krans in 1925-26; and £1=48.60 Krans in 1926-27):—

In December, 1926 the recognised foreign debts of Persia were:—

Loans	Original Amount	Outstanding
1. Indian 5 per cent. loan . . . . . (£)	314,281 16 4	35,828 16 4
2. Imperial Bank of Persia . . . . . (£)	1,250,000 0 0	1,161,207 11 7
3. British Advances 1912-14 . . . . . (£)	490,000 0 0	490,000 0 0

The debt incurred to Great Britain during and immediately after the war, which has been placed at 2,000,000£, has not yet been funded.

Defence.

The army has been improved in all its branches since 1921, and now consists of 40,000 men of all ranks, exclusive of the 'Anniah' (Gendarmerie) for the surveillance of roads. The combined services (army and navy) cost some 2,000,000£. per annum. There are five divisions with centres at Teheran, Tabriz, Kermanshah, Sheiaz and Meshed. Latterly the Ministry for War acquired 4 armoured cars (Rolls Royce) together with 13 aeroplanes (7 French, 4 Russian, 2 German). Mechanical transport has also been started, and at present consists of some 50 lorries, 12 Citroën caterpillars and a variety of other machines. With the exception of 5 European pilots for the present Air force all other Europeans have been dispensed with.

The 'Nazmieh' (police) force consists of 3,700 men and 300 officers, with a yearly budget of some 200,000£. This force is spread out in 54 towns in the country. There is also a force of Municipal Guards utilised as guards for Legations and houses of officials.

Military service became compulsory by royal decree in November, 1926.

The navy is quite unimportant. The three gun-boats of which it consists are normally used for Customs purposes

Production and Industry.

Persia produces oil, wool, drugs, fruits, gums, rice, cotton, barley, wheat, &c.; great attention is being paid to the silk industry. Tobacco is now one of the principal products of the country; the present annual yield is estimated at 22,818,000 lbs., of which 11,023,000 lbs. are cigarette tobacco, and 8,818,000 lbs. pipe tobacco. The wool of Khurasan is famous. The wool clip for 1926 is estimated at 9,810,000 lbs. as against 6,540,000 lbs. in 1925. Persian carpets, of which there are many kinds, are all made by hand. The principal centres of the industry are Tabriz, Hamadan, Sultanabad, and Kerman. The export figures for opium, which in 1913-14 was 770,516 lbs., rose from 324,896 lbs. in 1919-20 to 690,833 lbs. in 1923-24, 1,138,124 in 1925-26 and 1,066,093 in 1926-27 according to customs figures, but a lot more is undoubtedly smuggled out, while the home consumption is very heavy. There is no means of estimating total production.

The mineral deposits of Persia are considerable but undeveloped. They include iron, coal, copper, lead, manganese, marble, borax, nickel, and cobalt. Oil is being developed with much success. The turquoise mines of Nishapur are worked in a most primitive fashion but with profit, as also are the iron ochre and rock salt in the Persian Gulf.

The production of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, which holds a concession for the whole of the country except the five northern provinces, was: 1921-22, 2,327,221 tons; 1922-23, 2,959,028 tons; 1923-24, 3,714,216 tons; 1924-25, 4,333,933 tons; 1925-26,<sup>1</sup> 4,500,000 tons; 1926-27,<sup>1</sup> 4,750,000 tons.

Commerce.

The principal centres of commerce are Tabriz, Teheran, Hamadan, Meshed, and Isfahan; the principal ports, Bandar Abbas, Mohamerah, and Busheer on the Persian Gulf, and Astara, Enzeli, Meshed-i-sar, and Bandar Gaz on the Caspian. On March 21, 1899, the Government abolished the farm system in Azerbaijan and Kermanshah, and one year later in all other provinces, establishing at the same time a uniform duty of 5 per cent. ad valorem on imports and exports. At present, after several revisions, the Customs Tariff differentiates on all classes of goods; the present tariff is of 1921. Till recently the 1903 Tariff was in force for Russia, and the 1921 for all other countries. In November, 1927, Russia concluded a new trade agreement and Customs Tariff with Persia.

According to the statistics published by the Minister of Finance the values of the imports and exports for six years were as follows :—

Years	Imports	Exports	Years	Imports	Exports
	£	£		£	£
1921-22	11,505,195	947,253	1924-25	18,368,000	23,814,000

Banking and Credit.

The Shah in 1889 granted a concession to Baron Julius de Reuter for the formation of a State Bank of Persia, with head office at Teheran and branches in the chief cities. The bank was formed in the autumn of the same year, with the title 'The Imperial Bank of Persia,' and incorporated by Royal Charter, dated September 2, 1889. The authorised capital is 4 millions sterling, which may be increased. The bank started with a capital of one million sterling, of which the greater part was remitted to Persia at the then reigning exchange of 32-34. In consequence of the great fall in silver and the rise in the exchange, to 50 or more, the capital was reduced in December, 1894, to 650,000/.. The bank has the exclusive right of issuing bank-notes—not exceeding 800,000/.. without the assent of the Persian Government. The issue of notes is on the basis of the silver krân. In virtue of one of the articles of the concession the cash reserve for the first two years was 50 per cent., and afterwards 33 per cent. There is also established at Teheran the Russian 'Banque d'Escompte,' formerly 'Banque des Prêts de Perse.' This Bank, with all its Concessions, was in March, 1921, handed over to the Persian Government by the Soviet authorities, and is now 'The Bank of Iran,' and forms part of the Ministry of Finance. The Ottoman Bank has also established branches in Teheran, Hamadan, and Kermanshah. Latterly the Russians started a bank, under the auspices of the Soviet Government, which has branches in the northern provinces. The Persian Government is also contemplating the establishment of a National Bank. A Government Pawnbroking Establishment was founded in January, 1927.

Communications.

Tonnage entered at Bushire, Lingah, Bandar Abbas, Mohammerah, and several smaller ports was: in 1925-26, 7,835,204 tons, of which 7,460,379 tons were British and 114,502 German; at Caspian Sea ports in 1925-26, 473,126 tons, of which 44,399 tons (steam) were Russian and 758 tons (steam) Persian, and 18,937 tons (sail) Russian and 9,432 tons (sail) Persian. The total number of vessels entered and cleared at Persian ports in 1926 was 23,321 compared with 26,025 in 1925.

Taking Teheran, the Capital, as the centre, there are the following available road communications for trade, post and travellers:—To the West: (1) Teheran-Kazvin-Hamadan-Kermanshah-Khanikin-Karaitu. (2) Teheran-Kum-Sultanabad-Kermanshah (direct or via Hamadan) to Khanikin, where is the railhead for the railway to Baghdad, whence via Basrah to the East or by the desert route to Beirut for the West, the latter route being served by the Nairn Transport Company. Road No. 1 is metalled throughout; it is available for all forms of transport, but it becomes difficult for a few days at a time in winter owing to snow on the Aven and Assadabad passes. This is the most used route at present. Road No. 2 is a made road up to Sultanabad only, but it is also carriageable for its entire length. There is a subsidiary caravan road, used only in good seasons, connecting Hamadan with Teheran by way of Robat Kerim (nearly desert). Transit for travellers by route No. 1, by motor transport, to Baghdad usually takes 4 to 5 days in good weather. (3) Teheran-Kazvin-Zenjan-Tabriz-Julfa (Russian frontier), and Teheran-Kazvin-Zenjan-Tabriz-Avadjik (Turkish frontier). The first named connects with the railway from Tabriz to Julfa, and thence to Erivan, Tiflis, etc. This railway has connection between Sofian and Sharafkhaneh on the Urumiah Lake. The second route leads to Trebizond. Both can be traversed by carriages or motors. There are subsidiary connections with this road: (a) Tabriz-Khoy-Urumiah and Julfa-Khoy; (b) Tabriz-Ardebil-Astara (both are carriageable); and (c) Tabriz-Hamadan direct. (4) Teheran-Kum-Sultanabad-Burujird-Khorrenabad to Dizful, thence to Ahwaz and Mohammerah. This route, very long out of use owing to the troubles with the Lurs tribes, was re-opened in 1924. There is practically no traffic thereon at present owing to want of accommodation and fodder, but it may become the principal highway and artery for trade, as it will mean communication direct with a noted Persian sea port. A road for motor transport is now being constructed from Burujird to Ahwaz and Mohammerah. Burujird is connected with Hamadan by a good road, and Sultanabad with Isfahan and Hamadan, both vehicular.

To the North and East: (5) Teheran-Kazvin-Resht-Enzeli (metalled, suitable for nearly all sorts of transport, apt to become difficult in a severe winter due to high passes); (6) Teheran-Demavend-Barfarsuh, and thence to Meshed i Sar on the one hand and Bandar Gez and Astarabad on the other, available for motor transport all the way to Barfarsuh; (7) Teheran-Sabzevar-Meshed natural-made road, but available for all traffic. From Meshed there are the following routes:—(a) to Koutchan-Askhabad (vehicular); (b) to Douchak; (c) to Khakester; (d) to Koutchan-Deregez; (e) to Ghahghahe;

(f) to Sarakhs (vehicular); (g) to Kariz-Torbat, thence to Herat (vehicular); (h) to Birjand-Sistan-Duzdab (railhead to Quetta, vehicular passable for motors); (i) to Birjand; (j) a road from Koutchan to Sabzevar (vehicular).

To the South: (8) Teheran-Kum-Kashan-Isfahan-Shiraz-Bushire, although at present somewhat difficult from Shiraz for a short distance, this road is available for mechanical transport in all its length. Isfahan has the following connections: (a) to Ahwaz direct caravan route only, to Ahwaz via Borasjun and Ganaveh passable for motors; (b) to Ahwaz via Burujird (see No. 4); (c) to Yazd-Kerman-Bander Abbas. Other existing roads are those connecting (a) Yazd with Torbat Haidari; (b) Bander Abbas with Lar; (c) Bander Abbas with Shiraz; (d) Mohanumerah with Abadan (vehicular); (e) Mohammerah with Basrah; (f) Mohammerah with the oil fields (vehicular); and (g) Kerman with Duzdab passable for motors.

The chief railway in Persia is from Tabriz to Julfa. This line was built by Russia during the occupation of 1909-1918 and handed over to the Persian Government, which now controls it, as part compensation for damage done in the battle area of Azerbaijan during the world war. At the close of 1926 the length of this line totalled 171 miles, of which 125 miles were main line, 35 miles branch line (from Solian to Lake Urumiah), and 11 miles sidings.

Operating revenues amounted to 3,805,421 kranas and operating expenses were 2,444,392 kranas. There were also about 43 miles of railroad in the extreme north-western corner of Persia, in bad condition, but this system has now been pulled up and no longer exists.

Navigation on the Lake of Urumiah, from Sharaffkhaneh to Danalou, is served by some five tugs and 15 barges for the transport of goods and passengers. There is a weekly service. On the River Karun likewise, from Mohammerah to Ahwaz (Nasseri), a fortnightly service both ways is run by the Mesopotamia Persia Corp., Ltd., and some native firms, run daily trips by motor boat, for passengers and merchandise. By changing into lighter draught boats at Nasseri both can be taken up to Shallili near Shushtar.

According to Persian figures for 1925-6 the system controlled by the Government attains a length of 7,964 miles with 13,829 miles of wire. In virtue of several conventions, dating from 1863, between the British and Persian Governments, the Indian Government constructed, and at present maintains and works with its own staffs; (a) The Indo-European Telegraph Department line from Teheran-Kum-Kashan-Isfahan-Shiraz to Bushire, and thence to Fao and also Karachi. This line is 669 miles in length with 2,292 miles of wire and 7 stations; and (b) the Central Persia Telegraphs from Teheran via Kashan-Yezd-Kerman-Bam to the Beluchistan frontier and thence to India with a mileage of 1,467 line and 4,183 wire and 10 stations. Subdivisions on this section exist between Kerman and Bander Abbas; Baft to Sirjan; and from Sistan to Duzdab. By its concession of 1868 the Indo-European Telegraph Company, Limited, constructed its line, and still maintains its upkeep with its own staff, from Teheran to Julfa on the Russian frontier, with 450 miles of line, 1,797 miles of wire and 6 stations situated at Teheran, Kazvin, Zenjan, Miandeh, Tabriz and Julfa. The exchanges of telegrams during the year 1922-23 amounted to nearly one million.

Wireless has been installed at Teheran, Tabriz, Meshea, Kermanshah, and Shiraz, and wireless stations are being completed in Kerman and Ahwaz.

The telephone system throughout the greater part of Persia is leased to the "Société Anonyme des téléphones Persans." There are a number of small private companies as well.

During the year ending March 31, 1925, there were 194 post offices and 38 postal agencies with 918 employés.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

Persia has a silver monetary standard. The monetary unit is the kran, a silver coin weighing only 24 nakhods (71 grains) or somewhat less. The proportion of pure silver was before the new coinage (commenced 1877) 92 to 95 per cent.; it was then fixed at 90, but occasionally coins with only 89½ have been turned out from the Mint. In 1874 a kran had the value of a franc, 25 being equal to 1*l*. A gold standard is now under consideration by the Ministry of Finance.

The coins in circulation, with their values calculated at exchange 1*l*. = 50 kran, are:—

Silver.	Nickel coins.
Three Sháhís . . . . . 72 d .	One Sháhí = $\frac{3}{5}$ Kran . . . . . 24 d .
Five Sháhís = $\frac{1}{2}$ Kran . . . . . 1·2 d .	Two Sháhís = $\frac{1}{5}$ Kran . . . . . 48 d .
Ten Sháhís = $\frac{1}{4}$ Kran . . . . . 2·40 d .
One Kran = 20 Sháhís . . . . . 4·80 d .
Two Kran . . . . . 9·60 d .
Five Kran . . . . . 2 s . 0·00 d .

Copper is out of circulation. In consequence of an excess of coinage by a former mint-master the copper money greatly depreciated in value since 1896 and was circulating at less than its price of copper, viz. 80 to 83 copper shahis (weighing about  $\frac{1}{2}$  lb.) to one silver kran ( $4\frac{1}{2}$  d.). The Government then decided to introduce a nickel coinage instead; great quantities of five and ten centime pieces, of same size and weight as those current in Belgium, and of the nominal value of  $\frac{1}{20}$  and  $\frac{1}{10}$  kran, were coined at Brussels and put into circulation in the autumn of 1900. Nickel coin has since then been minted at the Birmingham Mint.

Gold coins are:  $\frac{1}{2}$  Toman,  $\frac{1}{4}$  Toman, 1 Toman, and 2 Tomans, but they are not in circulation as current money, because of their ever-varying value in Kran (silver) and no coins of the higher values have been struck for some years. They are a commodity and are used for presents and hoarding. A Toman in silver is the equivalent of 10 krans (now worth 4*s*.), but a gold Toman is now worth about 16 Krans (6*s*. 6*d*.).

Accounts are reckoned in dínars, an imaginary coin, the ten-thousandth part of a toman of ten krans. A kran therefore = 1,000 dínars; one sháhí = 50 dínars.

The unit of weight is the miskál (71·6 grains), subdivided into 24 nakhods (2·96 grains) of 4 gandum (·74 grain) each. Sixteen miskáls make a sír, and 40 sír = 1 batman (Tabriz). Most articles are bought and sold by a weight called batman or man. The mans most frequently in use are:—

Man-i-Tabriz = 8 Abbásís . . . . .	= 640 Miskáls = 6·5464 lb.
Man-i-Noh Abbást = 9 Abbásís . . . . .	= 720 „ = 7·80 „
Man-i-Kohneh (the old man ) . . . . .	= 1,000 „ = 10·14 „
Man-i-Sháh = 2 Tabriz Mans . . . . .	= 1,280 „ = 12·98 „

Great attempts are being made to bring these to a decimal system.

The unit of measure is the zar or gaz; of this standard several are in use. The most common is the one of 40·95 inches; another, used in Azerbaijan, equals 44·09 inches. A farsakh theoretically = 6,000 zar of 40·95 inches = 3·87 miles. Some calculate the farsakh at 6,000 zar of 44·09 inches=4·17 miles. It is about 3½ miles in South Persia and about 4 miles in the North.

The measure of surface is jerib=1,000 to 1,066 square zar of 40·95 inches=1,291 to 1,379 square yards.

PERU.

(REPUBLICA DEL PERÚ.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Peru, formerly the most important of the Spanish Viceroyalties in South America, issued its declaration of independence on July 28, 1821; but it was not till after a war, protracted till 1824, that the country gained its actual freedom from Spanish rule. The Republic is politically divided into departments, and the departments into provinces. According to the Constitution of January 18, 1920, the legislative power is vested in a Senate (35 members) and a House of Representatives (110 members), and renewed totally every five years. The number of senators and deputies can only be altered by reform of the Constitution. An organic law designs the departmental and provincial electoral districts, and the number of senators and deputies which corresponds to each of them. Both senators and deputies are elected by a direct vote. Congress meets annually on July 28, and sits for 90 to 120 days. It may be summoned as often as necessary, but no extraordinary session may last more than 45 days.

The executive power is entrusted to a President, elected for 5 years and re-eligible for election indefinitely (under a change in the constitution authorized in 1927). He receives 30,000 soles (3,000*l.*) a year and an amount for administration expenses fixed by Congress each year.

President.—Señor Augusto B. Leguía (1924–1929).

President Leguía seized the presidency by a coup-d'état July 4, 1919; this was legalized by Congress and he took the oath of office October 15, 1919, for full term of 5 years. He was re-elected in 1924.

The President exercises his executive functions through a Cabinet of seven ministers, holding office at his pleasure. The ministers are those of the Interior, War, Marine, Foreign Affairs, Justice, with Worship and Instruction, Finance and Public Works. Each minister receives 16,800 soles (1,680*l.*) a year. None of the President's acts has any validity without the signature of a minister.

The departments are divided into provinces (113 in all), and these are subdivided into districts (949 in 1925). Each department is administered by a Prefect, and each province by a Sub-Prefect. There are three regional congresses in the country, one in the north, a second in the centre, and the third in the south. Deputies to these legislatures are chosen by the provinces. Municipal councillors are elected by direct vote, and foreigners are eligible.

By a decree issued by President Leguía in 1927, the Indians were freed from the peonage system which existed in some regions.

Area and Population.

There has been no enumeration of the population in recent years. The census returns of 1862 showed a total population of 2,487,916; that of 1876 put the number at 2,660,881, of whom about 13·8 per cent. were white, 1·9 per cent. negroes, 57·6 per cent. Indian, 24·8 per cent. Mestizos (Cholos and Zambos), and 1·9 per cent. Asiatic, chiefly Chinese. An estimate in 1921 gives the population in that year as 5,550,000.

The population of the capital, Lima, according to the official census of December 17, 1920, was 176,467 and of Callao 52,843. The estimated population in 1925 of the principal cities was as follows: Lima city 220,000; Lima and suburbs 260,000; Callao 66,000; Arequipa 58,000; Cuzco 37,000; Chiclayo 30,000; Ica 25,000; Trujillo 25,000; Chincha 20,000; Huancayo 20,000; Ayacucho 20,000; Iquitos 20,000; Huaráz 18,000; Piura 15,000.

The Republic (including Tacna) is divided into 19 departments and 3 provinces (Callao, Tumbes and Moquegua), the areas of which, according to estimates supplied by the Lima Geographical Society (1915), are given below with the population, according to the census returns of 1876 (the latest official one) and an estimate for 1896. The estimate, however, is not to be accepted as satisfactory, grave doubts being entertained whether the population is increasing. The chief towns are shown in brackets:—

There are, besides, many uncivilised Indians, but their numbers are absolutely unknown. The Peruvian Government encourages immigration of properly qualified persons, but would-be settlers entirely destitute of capital are mentioned as undesirable.

As a result of the war with Chile, the latter country annexed the province of Tarapacá. The Chileans also, under the Treaty of Ancon of March 8, 1884, occupied the provinces of Tacna and Arica since 1883. A popular vote should in 1894 have decided to which country they are to belong, but owing to the failure of negotiations for arriving at a modus operandi, the decision was deferred. In December, 1921, the Chilean Government invited the Government of Peru to concur in the holding of the plebiscite. The Government of Peru, however, suggested a settlement by arbitration, and in January, 1922, the Government of the United States invited Peruvian and Chilean delegates to Washington to discuss the Tacna-Arica controversy. The Tacna and Arica Plebiscitary Commission sitting at Arica awarded the return of the Province of Tarata, not included in the Treaty of Ancon, to the jurisdiction of Peru (1925). It failed on any other decision. Eventually in 1927, after many negotiations, the United States Government proposed that the Tacna-Arica territory should be ceded to Bolivia on the payment by the latter of certain sums, but this was not agreed to by Peru.

As to the boundary dispute with Bolivia an arrangement has been come to by direct negotiations between Bolivia and Peru. The frontier line between them was fixed from the mouth of the Heath to that of the Yaverija (1912), and finally demarcated by a joint commission. Those with Colombia and Ecuador (for the possession of over 100,000 square miles of land rich in rubber, timber, and probably gold lying about the head waters of the Amazon) were ultimately referred to the mediation of the United States, Argentina, and Brazil. A definite arrangement has been made with Brazil as to boundary, favourable, on the whole, to Peru, and this was finally demarcated in 1927 by a joint commission. A Treaty establishing the boundary between Peru and Colombia was ratified by the former on December 22, 1927.

The region north of the Marañon from the Pongo de Manseriche is claimed by Ecuador and Colombia and Peru. This region formed in the Spanish Colonial days the Comandancia General de Maynas, and was allocated to the Virreynato of Santa Fé, then to the Audiencia of Quito, and for religious and ecclesiastical purposes subject to the Archbishop of Lima. Peru contends that it was definitely handed over to the Vice-royalty of Peru by royal decree of July 15, 1802.

Religion.

By the terms of the new Constitution (January 18, 1920) there exists absolute political and religious liberty. The Roman Catholic religion is the religion of the State. There is a Roman Catholic archbishopric (Lima, dating from 1545), 9 bishoprics, 2 Apostolic Vicarages, and 2 Apostolic Prefectures. The ecclesiastical division of the country is (1924) into 107 vicarages, 152 rectories, 559 parishes and 325 sub-parishes. The churches and convents are the property of the State. In 1925, 26,087% was voted for public worship, and 1,633% for missions. In 1897 an Act was passed enabling non-Catholics to contract civil marriages. In 1903 an Act was passed giving still greater facilities for the marriage of non-Catholics.

Instruction—Justice.

By the law of February 5, 1921, elementary education is compulsory for both sexes between the ages of 7 and 14, and is free. In 1926, there were in Peru 3,830 primary schools with 5,487 teachers and 262,267 pupils. Special schools for the Indians enrolled 1,780 in 1926. There were also 80 travelling schools. There are 29 secondary schools with 583 teachers and 5,326 pupils. There are (1926) 7 normal schools, with a registration of 1,950. Higher education is provided at the central university in Lima, called 'Universidad de San Marcos,' founded by Charles V. in 1551; it had in 1925, 1,717 students in six faculties and two institutes. There are also universities at Arequipa (founded in 1827), with 216 students, Cuzco with 196 students in 1925 but now temporarily closed pending reorganization, and Trujillo (51 students in 1925); the Education Law of February 5, 1921, created the University of Technical Schools, which comprises advanced schools of engineering, agriculture, commerce, industrial arts, and a school of pedagogy. There are also State Colleges of Agriculture, Arts and Trades, and Engineering in Lima.

Justice is administered in the Supreme Court at Lima composed of 11 judges and 3 fiscals, and in Superior and Minor Courts at Lima and 11 other judicial districts. The judges of the Supreme Court are chosen by Congress from lists of names presented by the Government; those of the Superior Courts and of the Minor Courts are chosen by the Government from lists of names presented by the Supreme and Superior Courts, respectively.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure for 5 years (ended April 30) were as follows (10 soles = 12.) :—

<sup>2</sup> Not including the income from bond issues, etc., pledged to public works.

The foreign debt of Peru was made up of two loans, contracted in England in 1870 and 1872, amounting to 32,688,320*l*. In 1876 Peru was forced to suspend payments on its external debt, and in 1889 the debt, including arrears of interest, amounted to 55,209,133*l*. In January, 1890, by the signing of the Grace-Donoughmore contract, the Committee of Peruvian Bondholders assumed all responsibility for the foreign debt of Peru, and in return the Peruvian Government granted that organisation certain concessions (rights over guano deposits, mines, and lands) and the control of all State railways, for a period of 66 years. The Peruvian Corporation was then created by the Committee of Peruvian Bondholders to administer these concessions. In 1907 a new contract was effected between the Peruvian Corporation and the Peruvian Government by which certain disputes were adjusted and under which the railway lease was extended for an additional 17 years, during which time the Government was to receive 50 per cent of the net profits resulting from the operation of the railways after the service of the corporation's railway bonds had been met. The Government extended the contract with the Peruvian Corporation for 10 years from September 11, 1911.

The total debt of Peru (December 31, 1926) amounted to Lp. 17,247,509, of which the consolidated internal debt amounted to Lp. 4,238,830, the floating and short term debt to Lp. 2,666,773, and the foreign debt to Lp. 10,841,906.

Defence.

ARMY.

Military service is compulsory and universal, though only a limited number of the annual quota of conscripts is called up for active duty with the colours, the remainder being formed into local battalions, who receive instruction one day in the week (Sundays). The term of service is 2 years in the active army, 5 years in the first reserve, 5 in the second reserve, and 20 years in the National Guard.

The country is divided into 5 military districts, each furnishing a complete division. The division is made up of 2 regiments of infantry of 2 battalions each, with 1 machine gun company; 1 topographical section, 1 medical section, 1 commissariat section, 1 or 2 regiments of cavalry (2 squadrons), 1 regiment of mountain artillery.

The army at present is organized as follows: of infantry there are 20 regiments, of artillery 5 regiments, 5 mounted infantry companies, 5 battalions of engineers, and an independent commissariat corps.

The peace establishment of the army in 1925 was 671 officers and 8774 other ranks. Police and gendarmerie amount also to about 8,000 including civil guards and mounted police. The civil guard has been reorganised into 11 cavalry regiments, 1 infantry regiment of 4 battalions, 1 independent battalion and 1 machine gun battalion. Rifle instruction is also given in Peruvian schools. There is a military academy and war college at Chorillos, near Lima. Since May, 1927, the Peruvian army which for some years prior to 1924 was in the hands of a French Military Mission, has been entrusted to the technical direction of an ex-German general.

The infantry is armed with the 1912 Peruvian model of the Mauser rifle, cavalry with carbine of the same type and model, artillery with the Schneider-Canet gun and machine gun battalion with flat guns.

Aviation is controlled by a Director-General of Aviation.

NAVY.

The Peruvian Navy, which since 1922 has been under the supervision of a United States Naval Mission, consists of the following units:—2 (old) light cruisers, Almirante Grau and the Coronel Bolognesi, 3,200 tons, 24 knots speed, each with 2·6 inch and smaller guns, built in 1906, and re-boilered and adapted for oil fuel in 1923–25; 2 submarines; 1 submarine tender, La Lima and 1 destroyer. In addition there is a river flotilla on the Amazon consisting of five vessels. Two more submarines are under construction in the United States and are now practically completed. There is a naval school for cadets at La Punta, near Callao, and a submarine base on San Lorenzo Island, opposite Callao.

Agriculture and Industry.

The country may be divided into three zones: the coast strip, with an average width of 30 miles; the Sierra, or Uplands, lying between the coast range of mountains and the Andes proper; and the forest or wooded region, called the Montaña. In the arid coast region the government has brought under irrigation 28,000 hectares during the last few years; a gigantic irrigation project now under construction in the Olmos desert near Pimentel in northern Peru, will bring 170,000 hectares under irrigation during the next few years. Up to 2,292,762 has been spent by the Government in irrigation in the past decade. The chief agricultural productions of Peru are sugar, cotton, coffee, wool, hides, and skins. The chief coffee-growing districts are those of Chanchamayo, Perené and Paucartambo in Central Peru, where the Peruvian Corporation has done much useful colonising work. Coffee is also grown in the Huanuco district. The concession to the Corporation comprises about 2,750,000 acres, but the labour and transport difficulties in the tropical forest region are serious; much less than half the area conceded for colonisation is as yet occupied. The sugar industry, the most important in the country, is carried on chiefly in the coast region. In 1926, the area under cultivation was 131,449 acres, and the production 375,963 tons. Cotton likewise is important; production in 1926 reached 56,028 tons. Cocoa cultivation is extending, about 200,000 cocoa trees having been recently planted in the Perené region. Rice is extensively grown; the quality is excellent, but the quantity is insufficient to meet local wants. There are about 60 rice mills in the country, only 10 of which are of any importance. Tobacco, wines and spirits, olives, ramie, rubber, and maize are also produced. In 1909 the Government created a tobacco monopoly for the manufacture, importation and sale of tobacco. This industry is conducted by an organisation known as the Caja de Depositos y Consignaciones, Estanco del Tabaco, at Lima. Silk culture is being tried in the coast region. The most important coca growing district is in the province of Otuzco in the department of La Libertad, where there are several coca estates. Cocaine is manufactured in Lima, Otuzco, and several other towns. In addition there are in the country dyes, cinchona, and other medicinal plants. There is a large export of alpaca, sheep, and llama wool. A government model sheep farm, under the direction of a British Mission of Animal Husbandry has been in existence at Chuquibambilla, near Puna in southern Peru, since 1921 and is doing much to improve the native breed of sheep by crossing, selection, and other modern methods.

The guano deposits on Huanillos, Punta Lobos, and Pabellon de Pica, amounting to 40 or 50 thousand tons, which had been granted to the Peruvian Corporation, reverted to the Chilean Government on February 2, 1901; but those on the island of Lobos de Afuera, and at some places on the coast, still remain in possession of the Corporation. In 1919 a new company was set up by the Government for the administration of guano. In 1925, the production was 136,951 metric tons; in 1926, 87,396 metric tons.

The following table shows the mineral production for two years:—

Shipping and Navigation.

At Callao there entered, in the foreign trade, in 1926, 758 steamers of 2,470,505 tons, and cleared 761 of 2,469,213 tons. Since 1886, foreign sailing vessels may not engage in Peruvian coasting trade; but foreign steamers, with special authorisation, may.

Internal Communications.

In 1926 there were in the country 4,500 miles of road suitable for motor traffic, 470 miles under construction, and 670 miles planned making a total of 5,640 miles. All roads are national. Great strides are being made in road construction, and there is a road conscription law under which everybody must contribute to the upkeep of roads in Peru. There are now two paved concrete highways under construction, one between Lima and the port of Callao, and the other between Lima and Chosica.

In 1926 the total working length of the Peruvian railways was 2,118 miles, 1,486 miles being State railways under the control of the Peruvian Corporation. These include (1) the Peruvian Central (Oroya) Railway, from Callao and Lima to Huancayo, 259 miles; (2) the Southern Railway of Peru, from Mollendo to Puno, 326 miles; from Juliaca, 80 miles from Puno, the Cuzco section strikes off northward for 210 miles; (3) the Paita to Piura Railway, 60 miles; (4) the Pacasmayo to Chilote Railway, 82 miles; (5) the Pisco to Ica Railway, 46 miles. All the lines are standard gauge railways (4 ft 8½ in.), with the exception of the Trujillo Railway (65 miles long) between Salaverry and Ascope, and the Chimbote Railway (36 miles) between Chimbote and Tablonas, which are 3 ft. gauge. A small Government line connecting up Lima with a short distance south of Callao is being worked by the Peruvian Corporation. The North-Western Railway, Lima to Huacho and Sryan, 142 miles, is owned and now operated by the Government. Both are 3 ft. gauge. Also the railway from Huancayo-Huancavelria, completed in 1926, 90 miles long; this is now being continued to Castrovirreyna.

By an agreement (March, 1921) between the Peruvian Government and the Marconi Company, the latter undertakes the administration of the posts, telegraphs, and wireless services for a period of 25 years from May 1, 1921. In 1926, the Company handled 37,042,573 pieces of correspondence, and in 1925, 35,263,246 pieces. There were 245 telegraph stations in 1926. The length of State telegraph lines on December 31, 1926, was 10,010 miles. Number of telegraphic and wireless messages (1926), 3,030,067. Three submarine telegraph cables connect Peru and Chile, and one connects Peru and the Republics to the north. Wireless communication between Iquitos and Masisea, and between Iquitos and Puerto Bermudez was inaugurated July 8, 1908. In 1927 there existed 27 wireless stations in Peru, and 23 more are at present under construction. Very shortly an aerial postal service between different points in the Republic will be introduced.

Money and Credit.

A decree was issued by the President of the Republic on January 10, 1898, to give effect to the law of December 29, 1897, establishing a gold currency. By Act of December 14, 1901, gold became the only standard. The national gold coin, the libra, is of the same standard and weight as the pound sterling; 10 soles = 12 sterling at par of exchange.

The Peruvian gold libra is not in circulation at present because the gold standard basis which was suspended during the War has not yet been resumed.

The Peruvian pound's exchange value in 1927, ranged between 3.55 and 3.96 dollars (U.S.) against par value of 4.86 dollars. Silver is legal tender up to 100 soles. Silver coins are the sol, and half-sol, 5/10ths fine. Copper coins are 2 and 1 cent.; and nickel coins 20, 10, and 5 cents. Peru has a paper currency issued by the Government of Lp. 5, Lp. 1 and 5 sol denomination. The total note circulation on December 31, 1926, was Lp.

6,104,018. The amount of nickel and silver coins in circulation at that time was approximately Lp. 1,810,942. The amount of gold held in deposit on December 31, 1926, by the Reserve Bank and various private banks was Lp. 4,532,167.

On October 10, 1921, a Bill was introduced into the Senate for the establishment of a Government bank, to be known as the Banco de Reserva del Perú. The Bill became law on March 9, 1922. The Reserve Bank is bound to hold not less than 50 per cent of gold cover for the amount of notes in circulation, the balance being provided by commercial paper bearing the endorsement of the principal Lima banks. On June 30 1927, the gold cover was 84.21 per cent as compared with 69.63 per cent in June 30, 1926.

A Government Central Agricultural Bank is now under process of formation to extend credit to farmers at reasonable rates.

On May 31, 1927, the paid-up capital of all banks amounted to Lp. 2,275,000, the reserves to Lp. 813,914.

Savings deposits on the same date amounted to Lp. 2,152,970.

Weights and Measures.

The metric system of weights and measures was established by law in 1869, and is coming into general use, except for the customs tariff. It came into force in Lima and Callao on September 1, 1916. Spanish measures are still in use.

POLAND.

(RZECZPOSPOLITA POLSKA.)

POLAND was an independent State until the end of the eighteenth century. The Poles are Slavonic in race and Roman Catholic in religion.

During the seventeenth century the position of Poland rapidly declined, and eventually, by the three partitions of 1772, 1793, and 1795, the Polish Commonwealth, as it was then called, was divided between Prussia, Russia and Austria.

In 1807, Napoleon formed a part of the Old Commonwealth into a semi-independent State under the title of the Duchy of Warsaw and endowed it with a very liberal constitution, but in 1815, at the Congress of Vienna, this was undone, and Poland was re-partitioned between Prussia, Austria and Russia, except the small district of Cracow, which was constituted an independent republic and remained such until 1835, when it was annexed by Austria, despite a guarantee of neutrality by Prussia, Austria and Russia.

At the outbreak of the Great War in 1914, only Austrian Poland enjoyed autonomous government. It was governed by the Galician Diet at Lwow (Lemberg), under the control of the Central Government in Vienna.

During the war Russian-Poland was invaded by the Germans and Austrians, and by the end of 1915 the whole country was occupied by the Austro-German forces.

On November 5, 1916, the German and Austrian Emperors, in a joint manifesto, proclaimed the independence of Poland, but neither the boundaries nor the constitution of the State were defined. Shortly afterwards a Provisional Council of State, consisting of 25 members, all Poles, was summoned in order to draft the constitution of the new State, but this body did not exist for long. In September, 1917, a new Supreme Authority, the Regency Council, consisting of three members, was appointed, and under their auspices a Ministry was formed and a new Council of State summoned. It was composed partly of elected and partly of appointed members, 110 in all. In October, 1918, this Council of State was dissolved by the Regency Council and the convocation proclaimed a Constituent Assembly to determine the constitution of the Polish State and take over the supreme authority.

On November 9, 1918, the Independence of Poland was solemnly proclaimed. On November 14, General Pilsudski returned to Poland, assumed Supreme Power and convoked the Constituent Assembly (Sejm Ustawodawczy), which confirmed him in his office. On June 28, 1919, the Treaty of Versailles recognised the Independence of Poland. The same Treaty determined the western frontier of Poland from the sea to Upper Silesia. The fixing of the Polish-German frontier took place after the plebiscite in Upper Silesia and the territory east of the Vistula, according to the resolution of the Council of Ambassadors of August 12, 1920, and October 20, 1921. A resolution of the Council of Ambassadors has also fixed the Polish-Czechoslovakian frontier. Poland's eastern frontiers were determined by the Treaty of Riga, of March 18, 1921; the Allied Powers have acknowledged those frontiers, as also the frontiers with Lithuania fixed by the resolution of the Council of Ambassadors of March 15, 1923.

President.—Ignace Moscicki, born on December 1, 1867, in Mierzanów, near Plock, elected third President of the Polish Republic on June 1, 1926.

Constitution and Government.

The Constitution of the Polish Republic adopted by the Sejm (Parliament) on March 17, 1921, contains the following fundamental principles: The franchise is universal for both sexes, the voting age being 21 for the Sejm and 30 for the Senate. There are two chambers, a Diet (Sejm) and a Senate, both elected by general suffrage on the system of proportional representation. The President (Prezydent Rzeczypospolitej) convenes, opens, prorogues and closes the Sejm. By an amendment to the Constitution introduced in July 1926, the President is empowered to dissolve the Sejm on the advice of the Cabinet, and to issue decrees with the force of law between the dissolution of one Parliament and the meeting of the next, the elections for which must be held within ninety days. It is the President's duty to convene the Sejm for an ordinary session each year before the month of November. By the revised Constitution of July 1926, the Budget can only be discussed in the Sejm from September to January, and if it is not passed by the latter date, the proposals of the Government come automatically into force. The President is the Supreme Commander of the army, except in time of war. He is elected for a term of seven years by the Diet and Senate united in a National Assembly. He can make treaties with foreign Powers. In the case of the President's death, his duties are to be assumed by the Speaker of the House. Any Polish citizen of 41 years of age may be elected President. The President is not responsible either politically or personally, and therefore all his acts must be countersigned by a Minister. Freedom of conscience is granted to all citizens; and all citizens are equal before the law. Every citizen also has the right of preserving his nationality and developing his mother tongue.

The law of July 28, 1922, divides Poland into 64 electoral districts, returning altogether 444 deputies for the Sejm, and 111 for the Senate. At the elections held on March 4 and 11, 1928, the following parties were returned:—Lower House: Government Lists, 111; Right Block, 30; Christian Democrats and Piast, 28; Korfanty (Silesia), 3; National Labour, 8; Socialists, 51; Radical Peasant Parties, 55; Communists, 7; National Minorities, 72; Unclassified, 7.

Senate: Government Lists, 49; Right Block, 9; Christian Democrats (Piast), 6; Korfanty (Silesia) 1; National Labour, 2; Socialists, 10; Radical Peasant Parties, 10; National Minorities, 24.

The Executive, called the Council of Ministers (Rada Ministrów), consists (October 2, 1926) of the following departments:—

Premier and Minister of War.—Joseph Piłsudski.

Deputy Prime Minister.—Casimir Bartel.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—August Zaleski.

Minister of Finance.—Gabriel Czechowicz.

Minister of Justice.—Alexander Meysztowicz.

Minister of the Interior.—Stanisław Składkowski.

Minister of Commerce and Industry.—Eugène Kwiatkowski.

Minister of Agriculture.—Charles Nieczabłowski.

Minister of Agrarian Reform.—Witold Stanisławski.

Minister of Communications.—Vincent Romocki.

Minister of Labour and Social Affairs.—Dr. Jurkiewicz.

Minister of Public Works.—Andrew Moraczewski.

Minister of Education.—Dr. Gustaw Doburcki.

Minister of Posts and Telegraphs.—Bogusław Miedziński.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The Polish Constitution provides for the granting of a wide measure of autonomy to County Councils. The County of Silesia received a large measure of autonomy by the constitutional law of July 15, 1920. The Silesian Sejm (Diet), elected in November, 1922, consists of 48 deputies, 34 Polish and 14 German. The autonomous rights of the Counties of Lwów, Tarnopol and Stanisławów, were formulated in the law of September 26, 1922. A uniform system for all the remaining Counties of Poland is in course of elaboration.

By a law of July 31, 1924, the language rights of the Ruthenian, White Ruthenian and Lithuanian minorities were guaranteed.

Area and Population.

The territory of Poland comprises Congress Poland (i.e. Poland as delimited and handed over to Russia by the Congress of Vienna, 1815), Galicia, the former Prussian Poland, Upper Silesia, and a portion of the Wilno (Vilna) territory.

The Republic is divided into the City of Warsaw and 16 counties (województwo), subdivided into 277 districts (powiaty), and self-governing cities (miasta wydzielone). It comprises an area of 388,390 sq. kilometres (or 149,958 sq. miles), and a total population of 29,589,000.

The Counties of the Polish Republic are divided into the following groups: (1) Central Counties, i.e. the ancient Congress Kingdom and the district of Białystok (capital town Warsaw; counties: Warsaw, Łódź, Kielce, Lublin, and Białystok); (2) Eastern Counties (Wołyń, Polesie, Nowogródek, and Wilno); these two groups of counties belonged to Russia; (3) Meridional Counties (Kraków, Lwów, Stanisławów, and Tarnopol), which belonged to Austria; (4) Western Counties (Poznań, Pomorze, and Silesia), which belonged to Germany, with the exception of Teschen Silesia (Śląsk Cieszyński), which is a part of the County of Silesia, and till 1918 belonged to Austria.

The first census was taken in Poland on September 30, 1921, and the following table shows the area and population of the counties:—

The population on January 1, 1927, was estimated at 29,589,000.

The density of population is 182 to the square mile. Ratio of males to females (1921) 100 to 107. Of the total population 25 per cent. is urban; in agriculture and forestry, 64.3 per cent.; in mining and industry, 14.9 per cent.; in trade and transportation, 9.5 per cent.; in public service and other occupations, 11.3 per cent.

Emigration in 1926, 167,509 including: to France, 68,704; to the United States, 8,249; to Argentina, 11,435; to Canada, 15,810; to Palestine, 6,840. The Polish population in America is estimated to be 3,000,000.

Religion.

The great majority of the population profess the Roman Catholic faith, but there is no established church in Poland and all denominations enjoy equal rights, though Article 117 of the Constitution declares Roman Catholicism to be the dominant religion.

According to the Census of 1921 there were in Poland 17,365,350 (63.8 per cent.) Roman Catholics; 3,031,059 (11.2 per cent.) Greek Catholics; 2,846,855 (10.5 per cent.) Russian Orthodox; 2,845,364 (10.5 per cent.) Jews; 1,002,216 (3.7 per cent.) Protestants; and 85,873 (0.3 per cent.) others.

According to the Concordat between Poland and the Vatican, concluded in 1924, Poland is divided into 22 Dioceses, with 2 cardinals, 4 archbishops, 14 bishops, and 16 suffragan bishops. The Archbishop of Gnesen is the first ecclesiastic in Poland. The Greek Catholic Church has an Archbishopric in Lemberg and two Bishoprics, Przemyśl and Stanisławów. Since 1922 there is an Exarchate of the Russian Orthodox Church in Warsaw. The Armenian Catholic Church has an Archbishopric in Lwów.

The Roman Catholic Church has 5,965 churches and 8,373 priests; the Greek Catholic Church, 3,275 churches and 2,144 priests; the Greek Orthodox Church, 494 churches; the Armenian Church, 12 churches and 27 priests; the Protestants, 604 churches and 590 ministers.

Instruction.

All education is free, and elementary education is compulsory. The following statistics are for the Republic:—Elementary schools (1926–27), 26,775, with 69,360 teachers and 3,365,235 pupils. Secondary schools (1925–26), 780, with 14,733 teachers and 216,552 pupils. There were also 195 colleges for teachers with 1,931 teachers and 34,437 pupils, and 850 technical and professional schools with 110,000 pupils.

The following table gives particulars as to the various Polish universities and high schools during the year 1925-26:—

Justice and Crime.

Each of the three component parts of Poland still has its separate judiciary organisations. The unification of the courts of justice is being worked out by the Codification Commission appointed in November, 1919.

The highest court in Poland, with 4 judges sitting, is the Supreme Court in Warsaw, divided into 4 chambers: 1. Civil; 2. Criminal (both for Congress Poland); 3. Civil and Criminal for Galicia; and 4. Civil and Criminal for former Prussian Poland. It has 54 judges and 21 public prosecutors.

The lowest courts in Poland are District Courts (Sady powiatowe) and Courts of Peace (Sady pokoju). Courts of the second instance are the County Courts (Sady okregowe), and of the third instance Courts of Appeal (Sady apelacyjne).

In 1925 there were eight circuits, each with a Court of Appeal (in Warsaw, Lublin, Wilno, Cracow, Lemberg, Posen, Katowice, and Thorn). In the eight Appeal Courts there were 156 judges and 35 public prosecutors, in the 51 County Courts there were 1,027 judges and 320 public prosecutors, and in the 679 Courts of Peace (District Courts) there were 1,531 judges.

Pauperism and Old Age Pensions.

In the respective provinces of the Polish Republic there are still the same regulations and the same institutions as before the war in Russia, Prussia and Austria.

There are numerous private charitable institutions, such as asylums for aged and infirm, crèches for children, workhouses, eating houses for poor, etc., all over the country. In the Grand Duchy of Posen, West Prussia, East Prussia and Upper Silesia every inhabitant in distress must be relieved by the commune in which he becomes destitute; the costs are defrayed from the funds of the commune to which he belongs. In Galicia the funds for the support of the poor are derived from endowments, voluntary contributions, etc.; if these funds are insufficient the commune to which the destitute belongs must make provision. In the Kingdom of Poland the care for the poor is left entirely to private charity; in cases of hospital treatment the commune to which the patient belonged was obliged to refund the costs.

Insurance in case of sickness has been widened and unified by the law of May 19, 1920. It extends the obligation of insurance to all persons belonging to the wage-earning classes and establishes a uniform organisation of Sickness-insurance Officers in every district.

On July 1, 1927, there were 283 insurance funds, with 2,260,700 obligatorily insured persons, 2,320 voluntarily insured, and 2,933,200 members of families obligatorily insured. The contributions amounted in 1926 to 191,735,000 zlotys; of that sum 95,287,000 zlotys were expended on medical assistance and 38,650,000 zlotys on the monetary grants. Insurance against accidents is not yet unified. The total number of insured persons amounted in 1926 to 2,600,000. In 1926, 65,000 pensions were paid, with a total of 13,000,000 zlotys. Unemployment insurance was unified by the law of July 18, 1924. In June 1927, 24,758 persons obtained unemployment benefit and 62,404 immediate assistance. Invalidity, old age and survivors insurance in 1926, with 129,400 pensions, and the insurance of non-manual workers in private employments with 75,600 are not yet unified, and schemes exist only in parts of the State.

The principal items of expenditure for 1928-29 are (in thousand zlotys): Ministry of War, 689,419; education, 341,843; debt service, 204,795; Health Insurance, 111,618.

The national indebtedness of Poland consists of internal and external debts. On January 1, 1928, the total internal debt amounted to 293,900,000 zlotys, and the external debt to 3,537,078,000 zlotys. The external debt comprised (in zlotys): United States, 2,654,018,000; Great Britain, 205,678,000; France, 377,876,000; Italy, 207,971,000; Norway, 46,605,000; other countries, 44,935,000. At the same date obligations due to the execution of the Protocol of Insbruck amounted to 325,186,000 zlotys.

Defence.

Every able-bodied Polish subject is, according to the law of May 23, 1924, liable to serve in the army between the ages of 21 and 40. The duration of service is twenty years. Service in the active army is for two years.

The men then pass to the reserve, in which they remain for 18 years. At the age of forty they join the territorial army, in which they remain for 10 years.

In times of peace the Chief Command of the armed forces is exercised by the President of the Republic through the Minister of Military Affairs. The permanent collaborator of the latter is, in conformity with the Law of August 6, 1926, the Inspector General of the armed forces, who in case of war takes over the Chief Command. General questions relating to preparations for the defence of the country are examined by the Committee of National Defence, which, in virtue of the Law of October 25, 1926, is presided over by the President of the Republic. Members of this Committee are, the Prime Minister, the Minister of Military Affairs, the Minister of the Interior, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, the Minister of Finances and the Inspector General of the armed force.

The country is divided into 10 General Military Districts: Warsaw, Lublin, Torun, Lodz, Cracow, Lemberg, Posen, Grodno, Brzesc, and Przemyśl. The strength of the army in 1927 was 18,292 officers and 272,308 other ranks organised as follows:—

	Divisions	Brigades	Regiments	Battalions	Groups	Squadrons	Companies	Batteries
Infantry . . .	30	—	90	270	—	—	1,080	—
Tanks . . .	—	—	1	3	—	—	9	—

Aviation . . .	—	—	6	—	18	36	—	—
Train . . .	—	—	—	—	10	10	—	—

The air personnel consists of 6,510 officers and men, and the number of aeroplanes in 1926 was 560. There are, in addition, police and customs forces amounting to 52,640 men. The mobilisable strength of the army is approximately 1,200,000 men. The military budget for 1926 was 84·3 million zlotys.

There are the following fortresses in Poland: in the west, Thorn and Posen; in the south, Cracow and Przemyśl and armed camps; in the east, Brest Litowsk, Grodno, Osowiec; in the interior, Warsaw, Modlin, Doblin.

Poland maintains on the Vistula 12 small gunboats, and two sea-going gunboats, Pilsudski and Haller, 500 tons, have been built in Finland. There are also 1 surveying vessel, 1 armed transport, 4 mine-sweepers, and 5 ex-German torpedo-boats for police service. Two destroyers and 3 submarines are under construction in French yards.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture.—Poland is essentially an agricultural country. The following table shows the area and yield of the principal crops for two years:—

Crops.	Area (acres).		Yield (metric tons).
	1926	1927	1926	1927
Wheat . . . . .	2,718,047	2,812,527	1,281,316	1,678,800

Oats . . . . .	6,431,597	6,471,805	3,049,760	2,814,800
Potatoes . . . . .	5,831,670	5,942,983	24,878,620	24,789,900
Sugar Beet . . . . .	456,990	499,103	3,724,880	4,113,800

Other important crops are hemp, hops and chicory.

On July 16, 1920, a law was passed by the Sejm limiting the size of the larger estates and of holdings situated in the neighbourhood of large towns. The maximum has been fixed at 60 hectares (about 150 acres) for estates situated in industrial districts, at 400 hectares (about 1,000 acres) for Posen, Podolia, Volhynia, &c., and at 180 hectares (about 450 acres) for the other parts of the Polish Republic. In 1927, 2,567 properties with an area of 1,331,205 hectares (3,335,512 acres), were parcelled out.

The forest area of Poland is 8,943,762 hectares (22,323,630 acres), of which 2,833,406 hectares (7,058,515 acres) belong to the State, and 4,199,357 hectares (10,498,342 acres) to private owners.

On October 1, 1921, Poland possessed 3,201,166 horses, 7,894,586 cattle, 2,178,216 sheep, and 5,170,612 pigs.

Industry.—There are eight industrial centres in Poland, viz., Warsaw, Lodz, Cracow, Dabrowa, Katowice, Bialystock, Czestochowa and Drohobycz.

In the textile industry on October 1, 1927, there were 2,473,192 spindles and 39,793 looms in the manufacture of cotton, and 732,363 spindles and 2,752 looms in the manufacture of wool. Other important industries are paper manufactures of various kinds, chemicals, timber, iron and oil refining. This latter industry is of increasing importance. In 1926, there were 29 refineries employing on an average 5,750 workmen, and producing 709,963 tons of refined products, of which kerosene amounted to 233,596 tons, and lubricating oils, to 103,379 tons. There were in 1925-26, 72 sugar refineries in Poland, producing 521,000 tons of sugar, and in 1926-27, 71 refineries producing 517,000 tons.

Mining.—The following table shows the output of the more important minerals for three years (in metric tons):—

Product	1924	1925	1926
Bituminous coal . . . . .	32,280,482	29,081,327	35,747,318

Total trade between Poland (including Danzig) and the United Kingdom for four years (according to Board of Trade Returns) were:—

	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£
Imports from Poland into the United Kingdom	8,319,739	5,164,920	8,526,262	8,099,537
Imports to Poland from the United Kingdom	3,500,429	3,711,660	2,471,420	5,315,668

Internal Communications.

Poland has 30,070 miles of road. Of navigable waterways Poland has 1,875 miles, of which 298 miles are accessible for vessels of over 400 tons. On December 31, 1926, there were 16,709 miles of railways open for traffic in the Republic. Of this total, 10,658 miles were main line, 4,587 miles branch line, and 1,464 miles sidings. Operating revenue was 1,118,401,102 zloty, and expenses 997,843,814 zloty. All the lines are property of the State.

At the end of 1926 there were in Poland 1,671 post offices, and 2,326 postal agencies, 3,876 telegraph stations, and 1,967 telephone exchanges with 131,957 instruments. The length of telegraph lines was 20,459 miles, of telephone lines 12,353 miles local, and 27,999 miles inter-urban. In 1926 the following postal deliveries were effected: 736,121,948 letters, 11,421,574 parcels, 184,817,052 newspapers, and 17,029,898 money orders. 33,213,718 telegrams were sent, and there were 577,588,653 telephone calls.

Shipping and Navigation.

The Free City of Danzig is Poland's chief seaport. A great harbour is also being built in Gdynia.

The programme for Poland's commercial fleet as approved by Parliament, provides for 220,000 gross tons, including 20 vessels of 8,000 tons each and 10 vessels of 3,000 tons each, besides other smaller vessels for coast traffic. Five cargo vessels were acquired in 1926 to form the nucleus of a merchant marine.

Money and Credit.

The Polish national currency is the zloty, subdivided into 100 grosz. This currency was put into circulation on May 1, 1924, being then equivalent to the gold franc. The monetary reform of October 13, 1927, changed the gold contents, defining 1 klg. fine gold = 5,924.44 zlotys. Gold coins, of the new coinage (October, 1927), are of 100, 50, and 25 zloty (called a dukat); silver coins of 5 and 2 zloty; nickel coins of 1 zloty, 50, 20 and 10 grosz; and bronze coins of 5, 2 and 1 grosz.

The Bank of Poland, created by Act of Parliament, opened its doors on April 28, 1924. The Bank is a joint stock company with a capital of 150,000,000 zlotys. The Bank enjoys for a period, to Dec. 31, 1944, the sole privilege of note issue. Bank notes in denominations of 10, 20, 50, 100 and 500 zlotys are in circulation. The notes issued by the Bank, and the deposits must be covered by 40 per cent. In case of a lower cover, the Bank has to pay a special tax, which rises in proportion as the cover falls. At present the Bank is obliged to redeem banknotes in gold coin or in foreign currencies convertible into gold, where the sum presented for exchange exceeds 20 000 zlotys.

The amount of money in circulation (December 31, 1927) was 1,312,457,422 zlotys, consisting of 1,003,027,899 zlotys in the Bank of Poland notes, 142,323,525 zlotys in metallic currency, and 167,006,207 zlotys in treasury notes. In accordance with the Act of October 13, 1927, the Treasury notes are totally withdrawn from circulation and are replaced by the Bank of Poland notes and metallic currency.

On July 1, 1926, there were 82 principal banks in Poland, with a capital of 178,512,000 zlotys, and deposits amounting to 335,874,000 zloty.

The weights and measures are those of the metric system.

PORTUGAL.

(REPÚBLICA PORTUGUESA.)

PORTUGAL has been an independent State since the twelfth century; until 1910 it was a monarchy. The last King was Manoel II. of the house of Braganza-Coburg, born November 15, 1889, younger son of King Carlos I. and Queen Mary Amélie, daughter of Philippe Count of Paris. Manoel II. succeeded to the throne on the assassination of his father and elder brother, Prince Luiz Philip, February 1, 1908. On October 5, 1910, the republic was proclaimed, after a short revolution, and a provisional government established with Dr. Theophilo Braga as the Provisional President (October 5, 1910, to August 24, 1911). The first President of the Republic was Dr. Manoel de Arriaga (August 24, 1911, to May 27, 1915).

On August 20th, 1911, a new constitution was adopted. This provides that there shall be two Chambers. In the first, which is called the National Council, the members (164) shall be elected by direct suffrage for three years. The Second or Upper Chamber (71 members) shall be elected by all the Municipal Councils, and shall be renewable half at a time every three years. The President of the Republic is elected by both Chambers with a mandate for four years, but he cannot be re-elected. The President must be at least 35 years of age. He appoints Ministers, but these are responsible to Parliament. The President may not be present in the Chambers at debates. He is to receive a yearly salary of 4,000*l.*, with 1,300*l.* for allowances, or a total of 5,300*l.* yearly. The Constitution may be revised every ten years.

The Powers formally recognised the Republic on September 11, 1911.

President of the Republic (Acting).—General Antonio Oscar de Fragoso Carmo. (Appointed December, 1926).

State of Parties at the elections held on November 8, 1925:—

Senate.—41 Democrats; 9 Nationalists; 20 others; total 70.

Deputies.—84 Democrats; 23 Nationalists; 53 others; total 160.

The Cabinet, which was formed on July 9, 1926, and reconstructed on August 26, 1927, is as follows:—

Prime Minister.—General Antonio Oscar de Fragoso Carmona.

Minister of the Interior.—José Vicente de Freitas.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Antonio Maria de Bettencourt Rodrigues.

Minister of Finance.—General João José Sinel de Cordes.

Minister of Justice.—Dr. Manuel Rodrigues, Junior.

Minister of War.—Abilio Augusto Valdez de Passos e Sousa.

Minister of Marine.—Commander Agnelo Portela.

Minister for the Colonies.—Artur Ivens Ferraz.

Minister of Instruction.—José Alfredo Mendes de Magalhães.

Minister of Commerce and Communications.—Alfredo Augusto de Oliveira Machade e Costa.

Minister of Agriculture.—General Felisberto Alves Pedrosa.

In 1920 the population consisted of 2,855,818 males and 3,177,173 females, or 111 females to every hundred males. Of the total population in 1920, 29,070 were foreigners. In 1924, the latest year for which vital statistics are available, the movement of the population was: births, 210,830 (108,045 males and 102,785 females); deaths, 127,138 (65,367 males and 61,771 females); still-born, 8,753.

At a special census held in 1925, the population of Lisbon was 529,524 and that of Oporto 215,625. Other principal towns with their population in 1920 (census) were: Setúbal, 37,074; Braga, 21,970; Coimbra, 20,841; Évora, 16,148; Covilhã, 14,049; Faro, 12,925; Tavira, 11,043; Portalegre, 11,171; Aveiro, 10,357; Elvas, 11,747; Castelo Branco, 10,486; Beja, 10,521; Angra, do Heroísmo (Azores), 10,057.

The number of emigrants in 1924 was 29,710, of whom 14,964 went to Brazil, 1,058 to North America and 12,003 to European countries.

Religion.

There is freedom of worship in Portugal; the predominant faith is the Roman Catholic. Portugal, including the Azores and Madeira, is divided into three ecclesiastical provinces, with their sees severally at Lisbon, Braga and Évora. The Archbishop of Lisbon (Patriarch since 1716) has seven suffragans, of whom only two are on the European mainland; while the Archbishop of Braga (the oldest see in Portugal) has five, and the Archbishop of Évora two. The Azores, Madeira, and the Portuguese colonial possessions of West Africa, continental and insular, with five episcopal sees, constitute part of the ecclesiastical province of Lisbon. In East Africa there is also the province of Mozambique. In Asia there is a province of Goa with four suffragan sees (Macao included).

The total income of the upper hierarchy of the Church is calculated to amount to 300,000 milreis. In 1900 the number of Protestants in Portugal was 4,491, and that of Jews 481. The Republican government has separated the Church from the State, and State payments for the maintenance and expenses of worship have now ceased. The conventual establishments of Portugal were suppressed by decree of May 28, 1834, and their property was confiscated for the benefit of the State. Notwithstanding, several establishments of this nature were formed in later years; they were suppressed by the provisional government, which enforced the law of 1834.

Instruction.

According to the census of 1920, 60·3 per cent. of the Portuguese nation are still unable to read or write. Primary education is compulsory, and is rigorously enforced by a decree of the Provisional Government of March 29, 1911. In 1924-25 there were 6,850 public elementary schools, 33 secondary schools (with 11,304 pupils and 756 teachers, and 5 primary normal schools with 926 pupils and 89 teachers. For higher education there are 3 Universities: at Lisbon (founded in 1858), Coimbra (founded 1290), and Oporto. In 1924-25 the number of students at the universities was: Lisbon, 1,599; Coimbra, 1,334; and Oporto, 976. The Technical School at Lisbon provides instruction in engineering, chemistry, &c. There are also special colleges for music and art (Lisbon and Oporto), commercial, agricultural and veterinary schools, a military academy at Lisbon, and a naval school.

In 1925 there were 471 newspapers and periodicals published in Portugal—47 daily, 289 weekly and 135 monthly.

Justice and Crime.

The Republic is divided for judicial purposes into 194 comarcas; in every comarca there is a court of first instance. There are three courts of appeal (Tribunaes de Relação) at Lisbon, Coimbra, and Oporto, and a Supreme Court in Lisbon. There are also 7 municipal and 936 district courts.

Finance.

The estimated revenue and expenditure for four years are shown as follows (in escudos):—

	1924-25	1925-26	1926-27	1927-28
Revenue . .	1,237,986,167	1,306,193,012	1,289,032,292	1,421,993,021
Expenditure . .	1,824,188,853	1,869,758,749	1,555,304,830	1,614,321,560

On July 1, 1926, the external debt of Portugal was as follows:—New external 3 per cent. converted debt of 1902, 32,404,534*l.*; 4½ per cent. State railway loan of 1912, 620,960*l.*; total 33,025,494*l.*

The internal debt on July 1, 1926, amounted to 4,330,020,295 escudos.

Defence.

Military service is compulsory for every citizen from 17 years of age to 45. The terms of service are 4 years in the Active Service, 16 years in the Active Reserve, and 5 years in the Territorial Reserve. The period for training in the army is 17 months. The recruits are enlisted twice a year, in May and November.

Portugal and the adjacent islands are divided into 4 Military Regions: Porto, Coimbra, Tomar and Evora, and 3 Military Governments: Lisbon, Azores and Madeira, including 22 recruiting and reserve districts.

The total peace strength in 1927 was 4,758 officers and 31,778 other ranks, as follows:—

The Republican Guard consists of 5 Infantry Battalions and 1 Cavalry Regiment, the total number of men being 5,407.

The Fiscal Guard consists of 3 Battalions in the Continent and 4 Companies in the Islands, and its strength is 5,486 men.

The Portuguese Army is armed with rifles, Mauser-Vergueiro, 6.5 mm. and Lee-Enfield; Cavalry, Mannlicher, 6.5 mm. carbine; Artillery, 7.5 cm. Schneider-Canet gun, 7.5 cm. Krupp gun, 7 cm. Mountain Schneider-Canet gun, 11.4 cm. English howitzer, 15.2 cm. Vickers howitzer and 15 cm. Schneider-Canet du Bocage.

The navy of Portugal comprises:—4 so-called cruisers, Vasco da Gama (ex-coast defence ironclad of 3,000 tons), Adamastor (1,757 tons); Republica and Carvalho Araújo (1,200 tons—ex-British sloops); a variety of gunboats (mainly employed in Colonial waters), a mine-layer, 4 transports, the surveying vessel, 5 de Outubro (1,365 tons), 5 destroyers, 5 torpedo boats, 4 submarines, 1 steamer for torpedo and mine service, a salvage vessel, and a sailing training ship. A naval flying service has been established.

The naval personnel is about 6,000.

Production and Industry.

Of the whole area of continental Portugal 26.2 per cent. is annually cultivated under cereals, pulso, pasture, etc.; 3.5 per cent. is under vineyards; 3.9 per cent. under fruit trees; 17.3 per cent. under forest; 49.1 per cent. is waste.

In 1925 the wheat crop was estimated at 1,411,902 bushels; maize, 1,433,422 bushels; oats, 652,235 bushels; rye, 589,299 bushels; barley, 271,314 bushels; broad beans, 151,535 bushels; French beans, 134,176 bushels. Other products are rice and potatoes (264,000 metric tons in 1925). Wine (12,157,325 gallons in 1925) and olive oil (699,031 gallons in 1925) are also produced.

The live stock in Portugal in 1925 consisted of 80,078 horses, 236,800 asses, 88,410 mules, 767,904 cattle, 3,683,828 sheep, 1,557,743 goats, and 1,117,354 pigs.

The forests cover 17 per cent. of the total area of the country; pine extending to 1,909,663 acres; oak, 898,833 acres; cork, 817,081 acres; chestnut, 210,345 acres; Pyrenean oak, 169,150 acres: total, 4,005,072 acres. Cork is one of the principal sources of wealth; the production in 1925 was 42,000 tons.

Portugal possesses considerable mineral wealth, but for want of fuel and cheap transport, valuable mines remain unworked. The total mineral production in 1925, amounted to 352,771 metric tons. Coal deposits exist, but production is so unimportant that heavy imports are required. Tin, tungsten, copper pyrites, radium, arsenical pyrites, lead, zinc and manganese are among the minerals known to exist, but the extent of their deposits is unknown and production is light.

The fishing industry is of importance. In 1925 there were 48,636 men and boys employed, with 14,687 boats of 44,904 tons. In 1925, the value of the sardine catch was 13,544,319 escudos, and of tunny fish 3,562,113 escudos. The centre of the sardine industry is at Setubal, about 10 miles south of Lisbon.

The principal manufacturing industry is the production of textiles, which employed (1924) some 45,000 operatives—25,000 in cottons, and the remainder in woollens, silks and linen goods.

A characteristic industry of Portugal is the manufacture of azulejos or porcelain tiles. This was inherited from the Moors, and tiles are used extensively for interior and exterior decoration of public and private buildings. At Sacavem, near Lisbon, a large factory makes tiles and china-ware. In Peniche, an old fishing village on the coast north of Lisbon, there is a local pillow lace industry, and at Guimaraes famous embroidery is made.

In 1925, 7,891 vessels of 21,264,718 tons entered, and 7,873 vessels of 21,486,967 tons cleared the ports of Portugal. Of those entering, 2,945 (2,148,449 tons) were Portuguese, 1,612 (7,281,096 tons) British, and 1,021 (3,985,039 tons) German. In 1925 the merchant marine of Portugal consisted of 635 steam vessels and 20,381 sailing vessels of 161,275,585 tons and 188,838,917 tons respectively.

Portugal has 824 miles of State-owned railway, 735 miles being normal gauge and 89 miles narrow gauge. There are also six privately owned lines 1,177 miles in length, 882 miles normal and 295 miles narrow gauge. On January 1, 1926, total railway mileage was 2,001 miles. There were at that date 8,313 miles of road.

Banking, Money, Weights and Measures.

The Government financial institution is the Bank of Portugal. The cash on hand of the bank on January 18, 1928, was: gold, 8,577,180 escudos, nickel and copper, 541,000 escudos. The notes in circulation amounted to 1,849,928,000 escudos.

There are 22 other banks registered in the Republic with a capital of 169,929,444 escudos, and total deposits on December 31, 1925, of 871,482,625 escudos, and cash in hand, 342,297,803 escudos. The deposits in the Portuguese savings bank on December 31, 1925, amounted to 526,602,912 escudos, and those in the Post Office Savings Bank on the same date to 3,333,611 escudos.

The gold coinage of Portugal issued since 1854 amounts to the nominal value of 7,967,002 escudos, and the silver coinage to 37,934,523 escudos.

The Decree of the Provisional Government of May 22, 1911, established a new monetary system. The unit is the gold escudo, of 100 centavos, which is equivalent to the 1-milreis gold piece, and is worth normally about 4*s.* 5*d.* (but the rate of exchange has fallen considerably: March, 1928, 2*s.* 7*d.*); 1,000 escudos are called a conto. Gold coins are 2, 5, and 10-escudo pieces; silver coins are 1-escudo (0.835 fine) and 50, 20, and 10-centavos pieces; there are bronze and nickel coins of 4, 2, 1, and  $\frac{1}{2}$ -centavo. The gold coins and the silver escudos are .900 fine; the other silver coins are .835 fine.

Owing to the disappearance of practically all gold and silver in Portugal, the currency is on a paper basis. New notes of 5, 10, and 50 centavos have been issued by the Bank of Portugal. Small coins of 1 and 4 centavos have been placed in circulation to relieve the scarcity of small change.

The metric system of weights and measures is the legal standard. The chief old measures still in use are:—

The Libra	.	.	.	=	1.012 lb. avoirdupois.
,, Almude	{	of Lisbon	=	3.7	imperial gallons.
		,, Oporto	=	5.6	,, "
,, Alqueire	.	.	.	=	0.36 ,, bushel.
,, Moio	.	.	.	=	2.78 ,, quarters.

On August 15, 1914, partial autonomy was granted by the Home Government to all Portuguese colonies, giving each the right to establish its own code of laws for civil and financial Government,

The Cape Verde Islands consist of ten islands and four islets which are administered by a Governor, whose seat is at Praia, the capital. The islands are divided into two groups, named Barlavento (windward) and Sotavento (leeward). The former is constituted by the islands of S. Vicente, S. Antão, S. Nicolau, Santa Luzia, Sal and Boa Vista, and the small islands named Branco and Raso. The latter is constituted by the islands of São Tiago, Maio, Fogo and Brava, and the small islands named Rei and Rombo. S. Vicente is a coaling station which supplies all navigation to South America. The total area is 3,928 square kilometres (1,475 square miles). The population according to the census of 1926, is 131,147 (59,031 males and 72,116 females), including Europeans and foreigners. There are 146 primary schools, one secondary school in the Island of São Vicente and one Institute in the São Nicolau Island. For judicial purposes the Islands are divided into three comarcas: São Tiago, Santo Antão and São Vicente. Military force is not less than 264 men (168 natives). The chief products are sisal, castor oil, coffee, mustard, brandy, oranges and hides. Other products are maize, manioc, beans, tobacco, cane sugar, sweet potatoes. Estimated public revenue in 1926-27, 17,504,815 escudos (16,504,815 ordinary, 1,000,000 extraordinary); expenditure, 17,111,699 escudos (12,431,699 ordinary, 4,680,000 extraordinary); imports in 1926, 46,588,361 escudos; exports, 2,820,158 escudos. Banking operations are realised by the Banco Nacional Ultramarino through their branch at Praia and their Agent in Mindelo.

Portuguese Guinea, on the coast of Senegambia, is bounded by the limits fixed by the convention of May 12, 1886, with France, and is entirely enclosed on the land side by French possessions. It includes the adjacent archipelago of Bijagoz, with the island of Bolama, in which the capital of the same name is situated. It is divided for administrative purposes into 14 districts (Circunscrições Cíveis). The population, according to the census of 1924, is 770,791. The chief commercial products are rubber, wax, oil seeds, ivory, hides. Estimated public revenue for 1926-27, 19,966,900 escudos, and expenditure, 19,685,239 escudos (17,955,239 ordinary, 1,730,000 extraordinary). Military force not less than 247 (143 natives). Imports in 1925, 50,337,548 escudos; exports, 45,590,992 escudos. The chief port is Bissau. Other ports: Bolama, Cacheu and Bubaque. There are 100 miles of telegraph lines and 1,242 miles of roads.

The islands of S. Thomé and Príncipe, which are about 125 miles off the coast of Africa, in the Gulf of Guinea, were discovered in 1471, and now constitute a province under a Governor. Area of the islands 320 square miles. According to the census of 1921 the population of the two islands was 59,055; 52,150 in S. Thomé and 6,905 in Príncipe, and the distribution was as follows: whites, 1,115; natives, 57,123, 817 others. The islands are hilly, the soil is volcanic, and the vegetation rich and various. The chief commercial products are cacao, coffee, rubber and cinchona. Area of cacao plantations, 125,000 acres; production about 700,000 bags (of between 132 to 140 pounds). Revenue, 1926-27, 10,573,347 escudos; expenditure, 10,573,347 escudos. Military force consists of 145 men (135 natives). Imports at S. Thomé and Príncipe (1927), 36,271,746 escudos; exports, 91,776,486 escudos. On S. Thomé a railway of 310 miles is open for traffic. There are 28 miles in course of construction.

Angola (Portuguese West Africa), with a coast-line of over 1,000 miles, is separated from French Congo by the boundaries assigned by the convention of May 12, 1886; from the Congo by those fixed by the convention of May 25, 1891; from British South Africa in accordance with the convention of June 11, 1891, and from South-west Africa in accordance with that of December 30, 1886. The colony has belonged to the Portuguese since 1575, with the exception of the years 1641 to 1648, when it was held by the Dutch. It is under a High Commissioner, who resides at Loanda, and is vested with large powers. By the Charter of October 15, 1926, it is divided into 12 administrative districts: Zaire, Congo, Cuanza-Norte, Malange, Lunda, Loanda, Cuanza-Sul, Benguela, Bié, Moxico, Mossamedes, and Huila. The capital is S. Paulo de Loanda, other important towns being Cabinda, Ambriz, Novo Redondo, Benguela, Mossamedes, and Porto Alexandre. The indigenous population numbered about 5,000,000 in 1920. There are 52 Government schools, and 7 municipal and 2 private schools, with altogether about 2,410 pupils. Various missions are at work in the country. The military force varies between 2,721 men (1,976 natives) and 4,731 (3,602 natives). Estimated revenue in 1926-27, 185,218,863 escudos, and expenditure 193,187,692 escudos. The chief products are coffee, rubber, wax, sugar, vegetable oils, coco-nuts, ivory, oxen and fish. Cotton-growing, formerly remunerative, has been neglected, but is now increasing; tobacco is grown and manufactured for local consumption; petroleum and asphalt are worked by a British syndicate. The province contains large quantities of malachite and copper, iron, petroleum, and salt. Gold and diamonds have also been found. Imports, 1926, 225,569,000 escudos; exports, 188,459,000 escudos; 1925, imports, 253,146,000 escudos; exports, 233,638,000 escudos. The chief imports of the province are textiles, and the chief exports are coffee, maize, diamonds and oil-seeds. Dried fish are exported in considerable quantities. The trade is largely with Portugal. The Portuguese National Navigation Company has most of the carrying trade to and from Europe; the steamers of 3 British lines and one German line visit ports of the Colony. The length of railways open for traffic is 818 miles, made up as follows: Loanda-Lucalla line, 226 miles (metre gauge); Lucalla-Malanje line, 149 miles (metre gauge); Canhoca-Golungo Alto, 9 miles; Lobito-Chinguar, 323 miles; and Mossamedes-Chela Mountains, 111 miles. In July, 1918, the Government purchased the Trans-African railway. Angola is connected by cable with East, West, and South African telegraph systems. There are 2,420 miles of roads and 7,452 miles of telegraph lines.

Mozambique (Portuguese East Africa) is separated from British Central and South Africa by the limits of the arrangement between Great Britain and Portugal in June, 1891. It is separated from Tanganyika Territory, according to agreements of October and December, 1886, and July, 1890, by a line running from Cape Delgado at 10° 40' S. lat. till it meets the course of the Rovuma, which it follows to the point of its confluence with the 'Msinje, the boundary thence to Lake Nyasa being the parallel of latitude of this point. In accordance with the Treaty of Versailles the Peace Conference on September 23, 1919, allotted to Portugal 'as the original and rightful owner' the territory south of the Rovuma, known as the 'Kionga Triangle' (formerly part of German East Africa).

Portuguese East Africa, with an area of 428,132 square miles, comprises three distinct entities: (1) the Province of Mozambique, administered by the State (295,000 square miles), (2) the territory under the Companhia de Moçambique (59,840 square miles), and (3) the territory under the Companhia do Nyassa (73,292 square miles). The first is divided into 5 districts:

Lourenço Marques, Inhambane, Quelimane, Tete and Mozambique, each with its own Governor. Lourenço Marques (population 13,154 in 1912) is the capital of the Province. There is a Government Council composed of officials and elected representatives of the commercial, industrial and agricultural classes, and also an Executive Council. The existing organisation of the Province is that which was established by decree of May 23, 1907, with some modifications introduced by the Law of October 9, 1922. The population of this area is 3,657,008. Revenue and expenditure for 1927-28 were estimated at 399,701,814 escudos. The chief products of the Province are sugar, maize, cotton and mining products. In 1923 there were 54,199 oxen, 25,165 goats, and 12,387 pigs. The principal ports are Mozambique, Beira, Porto Amelia, Quelimane, Chinde, Inhambane and Lourenço Marques. Imports in 1926 amounted to 254,141,000 escudos, and exports to 248,479,000 escudos. The chief imports are cereals, foodstuffs, cement, cotton, alcoholic liquors and animals. The chief exports are sugar, raw cotton, maize, ores and ivory. At the port of Lourenço Marques there entered in 1926, 677 vessels of 3,337,454 tons.

The military force of the Colony varies between 2,250 men (1,379 natives) and 3,904 men (2,468 natives).

The Manica and Sofala region is administered by the Mozambique Company, which has a royal charter granting sovereign rights for 50 years from 1891. Under the Company's administration the country on either side of the Beira Railway has become settled, there is convenient transport by rail and river, and facilities are granted for securing titles and working mines. The census population of the Mozambique Company's territory (1925) was 298,859 natives, 3,187 whites, 1,372 Asiatics, and 1,748 half-castes; total, 305,166. Imports into this territory amounted in 1924 to 1,061,176*l.* and in 1925 to 1,253,094*l.*; exports, 1924, to 1,057,884*l.*; 1925, to 614,447*l.* Transit traffic through the port of Beira to and from Northern and Southern Rhodesia, Nyasaland and the Belgian Congo was valued at 9,196,997*l.* in 1924, and 9,775,949*l.* in 1925. The production of maize in 1923-24 was 49,285 tons; in 1924-25, 15,345 tons. Production of sugar, 1924, 35,822 tons; 1925, 21,845 tons. In 1925 there were 43,020 oxen, 19,467 goats, 4,269 sheep and 12,401 pigs. Gold production, 1923, 10,533 ounces; 1924, 11,468 ounces; silver, 1923, 1,000 ounces; 1924, 1,064 ounces. The port of this territory is Beira. There entered at Beira in 1925, 478 vessels with 6,928 passengers and 185,758 tons of cargo; and departed, 474 vessels with 5,109 passengers and 314,182 tons of cargo.

The Nyassa Company, with a royal charter, administers the region between the Rovuma, Lake Nyasa, and the Lurio.

The Delagoa Bay railway has a length of 57 miles in Portuguese territory, and is continued for 290 miles to Pretoria. Till recently the commercial relations and transit of goods by this railway between the Portuguese and British possessions were regulated by the agreement signed April 1, 1909. A new agreement is to be negotiated. A railway was constructed before the war to a point near the Swaziland border, 44 miles being open for traffic, but the linking up of this section with the South African Railways to provide a direct route from Lourenço Marques to Johannesburg has not yet been arranged. The Gaza railway (2 ft. 6 in. gauge) from Chai-Chai to Chikomo has 51 miles open for traffic.

The Beira railway has a length of 200 miles in the territory administered by the Mozambique Co., and links up at the frontier with the Rhodesian Railway system. The Trans-Zambesia Railway, 156 miles in length, from Dondo, on the Beira Junction Railway, to Murraça, on the southern bank of the Zambesi, was opened for traffic on July 1, 1922. On the northern bank of the Zambesi, the Central Africa Railway (61 miles long, of which 45 miles are in Portuguese territory), connects at Port Herald with the Shiré Highlands Railway. When a bridge is constructed over the Zambesi these three railways will give a continuous connection between British Nyasaland and the port of Beira.

The Government has been working on a definite plan, and the finished scheme for the Province south of parallel 22, the southern boundary of the Mozambique Co.'s territories, embraces the following lines: Moamba to Xinavane, 55 miles (completed); Xinavane via Chissano to Chai-Chai, or via Chibuto to Chigomo, 70 miles (not yet begun); Chai-Chai via Manjacasse to Chigomo, 51 miles (completed); Chigomo via Jinagai to Inharrime, 51 miles (projected); Inharrime to Inhambane, 55 miles (completed). Activities north of the Mozambique Co. are represented by two lines of penetration, one from the port of Quelimane, which taps what is said to be the richest region on the whole coast and now extends to Mocuba on the river Lujella, and the other from Lumbo, on the mainland opposite the island and port of Mozambique, capital of the district of that name and formerly capital of the Province, to Moonta. The extension of this line westwards towards the Namuli highlands is about to be begun.

Beira is connected by telegraph with Salisbury in Mashonaland, and Lourenço Marques with the Transvaal system. Quelimane has telegraphic communication with Chiromo. In 1925 there were 7,452 miles of telegraph line. There are 12,400 miles of roads.

Since September 1, 1922, the escudo currency has been in vogue in Portuguese East Africa, but at Lourenço Marques and Beira, libra esterlina (sterling) notes used still to be issued by the local banks. This right was rescinded in 1926, and the sterling notes are to be withdrawn from circulation within ten years.

Portuguese India consists of Gôa, containing the capital, Pangin, or Nova-Gôa, on the Malabar coast; Damão, on the coast about 100 miles north of Bombay; and Diu, a small island about 140 miles west of Damão. In 1915 there were 142 schools with 9,546 pupils (6,066 boys and 3,480 girls). In Gôa there are 501 salt works employing 1,968 men, the annual production amounting to about 12,200 tons. In Damão there are 11 salt works, and in Diu 5. In 1906 deposits of manganese were discovered near Mormugão and about 6 concerns with about 20 mines are at work. The military force consists of not less than 1,082 men (786 natives). The Mormugão railway (51 miles) connects this port with the lines of British India. The estimated revenue and expenditure of Gôa, &c., in 1926-27 was 4,872,324 rupees. The trade is largely transit. In 1925 the imports by sea and land amounted to 15,253,378 rupees, the exports to 3,945,247 rupees. Chief exports are: coconuts, fish (fresh and salted), spices, caju-nuts, salt, and copra. There are in Portuguese India 18 telegraph offices and 167 miles of telegraph line.

Macao, in China, situated on an island of the same name at the mouth of the Canton River, forms with the two small adjacent islands of Taipa and Colôane, a province, the city being divided into two wards, one inhabited by Chinese and the other by non-Chinese, each having its own administrator. The population, according to the census of December 31, 1920, is 83,984 (46,007 males and 37,977 females). There are 3,816 Portuguese and 80,168 of various nationalities. Estimated revenue in 1926-27, 3,029,210 escudos, and expenditure 3,321,742 escudos. The military force contains at least 488 men (164 natives). The trade, mostly transit, is in the hands of Chinese. Imports in 1925, 29,570,526 patacas; exports, 16,068,878 patacas.

Portuguese Timor consists of the eastern portion of the island of that name in the Malay Archipelago, with the territory of Ambeno and the neighbouring isle of Pulo Cambing, a total area of  $7\frac{1}{2}$  square miles. By treaty of April 1859, ratified August 18, 1860, the island was divided between Portugal and Holland; by convention of October 1, 1904, ratified in 1908, a boundary arrangement was made between the two Governments, certain enclaves being exchanged and the possession of other territories settled. This possession, formerly administratively joined to Macao, was in 1896 made an independent province. Population in 1926, 442,261 (237,946 males and 204,315 females). Estimated public revenue and expenditure for 1926-27, 1,882,527 escudos. Military force not less than 323 men (212 natives). Imports (1925) 604,123 escudos; exports, 711,757 escudos. Chief exports are: coffee, sandal-wood, sandal-root, copra, and wax. The port is Dilly, the capital.

ROME, SEE AND CHURCH OF.

FOR many ages until Pius IX.'s reign, with some comparatively short breaks, the Popes or Roman Pontiffs bore temporal sway over a territory stretching across Mid-Italy from sea to sea and comprising an area of some 16,000 square miles, with a population finally of some 3,125,000 souls. Of this dominion the whole has been incorporated with the Italian Kingdom. Furthermore, by an Italian law dated May 18, 1871, there was guaranteed to His Holiness and his successors for ever, besides possession of the Vatican and Lateran palaces and the villa of Castel Gandolfo, a yearly income of 3,225,000 lire, which allowance still remains unclaimed and unpaid.

Supreme Pontiff.—Pius XI. (Achilles Ratti), born at Desio, May 31, 1857; Archbishop of Milan, September 1921; Cardinal, June 18, 1921; elected Supreme Pontiff, as successor of Benedict XV., February 6, 1922.

The election of a Pope ordinarily is by scrutiny. Each Cardinal in conclave writes on a ticket his own name with that of the Cardinal whom he chooses. These tickets, folded and sealed, are laid in a chalice which stands on the conclave altar; and each elector approaching the altar repeats a prescribed form of oath. Thereupon the tickets are taken from the chalice by scrutators appointed ad hoc from the electing body; the tickets are compared with the number of Cardinals present, and when it is found that any Cardinal has two-thirds of the votes in his favour he is declared elected.

From the accession of Innocent IX., 232nd in the usual list of Roman Pontiffs, to Pius XI., 261st, the Popes (all Italian) have been as follows.—

The Roman Pontiff (in orders a Bishop, but in jurisdiction held to be by divine right the centre of all Catholic unity, and consequently Pastor and Teacher of all Christians) has for advisers and coadjutors the Sacred College of Cardinals, consisting, when complete, of 70 members, namely, 6 Cardinal-Bishops (holders of the suburbicary sees), 50 Cardinal-Priests, and 14 Cardinal-Deacons, but hardly ever comprising the full number. In March, 1928, the Sacred College consisted of 6 Cardinal-Bishops, 51 Cardinal-Priests, and 9 Cardinal-Deacons.<sup>1</sup> The following list gives the names, dates, and offices of these 66 Cardinals:—

<sup>1</sup> The terms Cardinal-Priest and Cardinal-Deacon have for centuries ceased to imply severally the particular orders of priest or deacon. Nowadays in the Sacred College a presbyteral title is freely given to one in episcopal or diaconal orders, and a diaconry to a priest or even to a simple clerk.

Though primarily belonging to the local Roman Church, the Cardinals, drawn from every nation of Christendom, are now regarded as Princes of the Church at large. Originally they were simply the parish rectors of Rome, or the deacons of Roman deaconries. In 1586 their number was finally settled by Sixtus V. at seventy. The Cardinals compose the Pope's Senate or Council and the various Sacred Congregations, govern the Church while the Apostolic See is vacant, and elect the deceased Pontiff's successor. They received the distinction of the red hat under Innocent IV., during the first General Council of Lyons, in 1246; and the title of Eminence from Urban VIII., in 1630.

The central administration of the Roman Catholic Church is carried on by a number of permanent committees called Sacred Congregations, composed of Cardinals, with Consultors and Officials. There are now eleven Sacred Congregations, viz., Holy Office, Consistorial, Discipline of the Sacraments, Council, Religious, Propaganda Fide, Rites, Ceremonial, Extraordinary Ecclesiastical Affairs, Seminaries and Universities, for the Oriental Church. Besides these there are several permanent Commissions, for example, one for Biblical Studies, another for Historical Studies, another for Preservation of the Faith in Rome, another for Codification of Canon Law. Furthermore, the Roman Curia contains three tribunals, to wit, the Apostolic Penitentiary, the Supreme Tribunal of the Apostolic Signature, and the Sacred Roman Rota; and, lastly, various offices, as the Apostolic Chancery, the Apostolic Datary, the Apostolic Chamber, the Secretariate of State, etc.

The States wherewith the Holy See maintains diplomatic relations are Austria, Bavaria, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, France, Germany, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Monaco, the Netherlands, Poland, Portugal, Rumania, Russia, Spain, and the United Kingdom (1914), together with most of the American Republics, except the United States and Mexico.

Within the British Empire the present number of Roman Catholic residential sees is 241, viz., 40 archbishoprics and 122 bishoprics, besides 58 apostolic vicariates (mostly held by Bishops of titular sees), and 26 apostolic prefectures; while the Roman Catholic population subject to King George V. is estimated at 15,280,660 souls, of whom 6,137,066 are in Europe; 2,660,954 in Asia; 988,731 in Africa; 4,070,551 in British America; and 1,423,357 in Australasia. Throughout the world the Roman Catholic population is reckoned (1927) at 334,664,791 souls, of whom 328,158,020 are of the Latin Rite (Catholic Directory, London).

RUMANIA.

(ROMÂNIA)

Reigning King.

Mihai (Michael) I., King of Rumania, born October 25, 1921, son of Carol (now known as Carol Caraiman) and Princess Helen of Greece. Proclaimed King on July 21, 1927, after the death of King Ferdinand I. (his grandfather). As the King is a minor, there is a Regency Council, composed of Prince Nicholas, the young King's uncle, the Patriarch Miron and M. Buzdugan, President of the Court of Appeal.

Father of the King :—Carol, born October 15, 1893, married March 10, 1921, to Princess Helen of Greece (now known as the Princess of Rumania).

Aunts and uncles of the King :—(1) Elisabeth, born October 11, 1894; (2) Marie, born January 8, 1900, married to Alexander, King of the Serb, Croat, and Slovene State, June 8, 1922; (3) Nicholas, born August 18, 1903; (4) Ileana, born January 5, 1909.

The Civil list, as approved on August 2, 1927, provides for 56 million lei annually, i. e., 18 million lei for King Michael, 4 million lei for the Council of Regency, 20 million lei for the Queen Dowager, and 7 million lei each for Prince Nicholas and the Princess of Rumania (mother of the King).

The union of the two Principalities of Wallachia and Moldavia was publicly proclaimed at Bucharest and Jassy on Dec. 23, 1861, the present name being given to the united provinces. The first ruler of Rumania was Colonel Cuza, who had been elected 'Hospodar,' or Lord, of Wallachia and of Moldavia in 1859, and who assumed the government under the title of Prince Alexandru Joan I. A revolution which broke out in February 1866 forced Prince Alexandru Joan to abdicate, and led to the election of Prince Carol I. The representatives of the people, assembled at Bucharest, proclaimed Rumania's independence from Turkey, May 21, 1877, which was confirmed by Art. 43 of the Congress of Berlin, signed July 13, 1878. King Carol I. reigned as Prince from 1866 to 1881, and as King from 1881 to 1914. In March, 1918, Bessarabia was joined to Rumania; Bukovina in November, 1918; and Transylvania in December, 1918.

Constitution and Government.

The Constitution of Rumania was adopted on March 28, 1923. According to this the subsoil and the forests are nationalized. The Senate consists of 170 members (Old Kingdom, 82; Transylvania, 45; Bessarabia, 24; and Bukovina, 19), including 4 for the Universities and 19 Bishops. The Heir to the Crown is also a Senator. There are also life senators—former Premiers who held office for at least 4 years; former Presidents of the High Court of Justice who held office for at least 5 years; former Commanders-in-Chief of the army who have held office (in peace time) for at least 4 years. The Chamber of Deputies consists of 347 members (Old Kingdom, 168; Transylvania, 112; Bessarabia, 51; and Bukovina, 16). A Senator must be 40 years of age, and a Deputy 25. Members of either House must be Rumanians by birth or naturalisation, in full enjoyment of civil and political rights, and domiciled in the country. All citizens of 21 years, paying taxes, are electors. Both Senators and Deputies receive 500 lei per each day of actual attendance, besides 2000 lei per month and free railway passes. The King has a suspensive veto over all laws passed by the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate. The executive is vested in a council of Ministers.

The elections held in June, 1927, resulted in the return of the following parties:—Lower House: Ministerialists, 328; Peasants Party, 46; Minorities, 13. Senate (July 1927): Liberals, 96; Peasants Party, 15; Minorities, 2.

The Cabinet (appointed June 22, 1927, and re-constituted on November 24, 1927) is composed as follows:—

Prime Minister and Finance.—M. Vintila Bratianu.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—M. N. Titulescu.

Minister of Interior.—M. I. G. Duca.

Minister of Agriculture.—M. C. Argetoianu.

Minister of Public Instruction.—Dr. C. Angelescu.

Minister of Public Worship.—M. A. Lapadatu.

Minister of Justice.—M. I. Nistor.

Minister of Public Health and Social Welfare.—M. I. Inculetz.

Minister of Labour.—Dr. N. Lupu.

Minister of Communications.—M. C. D. Dimitriu.

Minister of War.—General P. Angelescu.

Minister of Industry and Commerce.—M. L. Mrazec.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For purposes of local government Wallachia is divided into 17 districts, Moldavia into 13, the Dobrudja into 4, Bessarabia into 9, Bukovina into 5, and Transylvania (with Banat, Crisana and Maramuresh) into 23 districts, each of which has a prefect, a receiver of taxes, and a civil tribunal. In Rumania (1919) there are 71 districts and 8,854 communes, 165 urban and 8,689 rural. In the rural communes there are 11,522 villages and 1,048 hamlets. The appellations 'urban' and 'rural' do not depend on the number of inhabitants, but are given by law.

Area and Population.

As a result of the Treaties of Peace of 1919 Rumania was enlarged, and the area and population of the New Kingdom is shown as follows:—

Country	Area in sq. miles	Population
		Males	Females	Total
Old Rumania . . . . .	53,489	3,980,606	3,914,498	7,904,104

By the Treaty of Bucharest (August 7, 1913) between Bulgaria and Rumania, the former ceded to the latter 2,969 sq. miles of territory, with a population of 273,090, mostly Turks. The new land was formed into two departments, Durostor and Caliacra.

The number of births, deaths, and marriages, with surplus of births over deaths, was as follows for three years:—

Years	Births	Deaths	Marriages	Surplus of Births over Deaths
1923	608,763	372,480	165,216	236,283
1924	622,580	382,915	154,173	239,665
1925	605,053	363,074	153,480	241,999

The principal towns in Greater Rumania are (population 1914):—Bucharest, the capital and seat of Government, 345,628 (on January 6, 1917, 308,987—119,958 males and 189,029 females); Chisinau, 114,100; Cernauti, 87,128; Ismail, 85,600; Iasi (Jassy), 76,120; Galatz, 73,512; Timisioara, 72,223; Braila, 65,911; Oradea Mare, 64,169; Arad, 63,166; Cluj, 60,808; Ploiesti, 57,376; Craiova, 51,877; Brasov, 41,056; Tughina, 36,400; Satul Mare, 34,892; Cetatea Alba, 33,600; Sibiu, 33,419; Botosani, 32,874; Buzeu, 29,483; Constantza, 27,662; Berlad, 25,367; Focsani, 25,287.

Religion, Instruction, Justice, &c.

Of the total population of Rumania (in 1918) 9,695,714 belonged to the Orthodox Church, 1,456,147 were Greek Catholics, 1,483,929 were Roman Catholics, 1,344,970 Protestants, 17,596 Armenians, 834,344 Jews and 44,087 Mahometans. The government of the Orthodox Church rests with the four archbishops, the first of them styled the Primate of Rumania, the second the Archbishop of Moldavia, the third of Transylvania, and the fourth of Bukovina. Besides, there are ten bishops of the National Church. In February 1925, a Patriarchate of Rumania was created by the Holy Synod. In Transylvania there is a Greek Catholic archbishop and three bishops. In Rumania there are three Roman Catholic Bishops, two Protestant and one Unitarian. The clergy of the National Orthodox Church are paid by the State. The clergy of the other denominations are subventioned by the State. Full liberty of religion is assured to every creed or sect.

Education is free and compulsory 'wherever there are schools,' and it is improving from year to year. In 1918-19 there were 5,764 elementary schools with 11,088 teachers and 692,896 pupils.

The secondary schools in 1920-21 were, for boys, 230 lyceums, 17 gymnasiums and 10 seminaries, these 257 institutions having 3,624 teachers and 81,254 pupils; for girls 210 high schools with 2,880 teachers and 34,096 pupils; 82 normal schools for men with 539 teachers and 10,841 students, and 22 for women with 381 teachers and 4,797 students; 84 professional schools for boys with 475 teachers and 4,876 students; 25 commercial schools with 216 teachers and 4,656 pupils; 25 agricultural schools with 59 teachers and 669 pupils; 11 schools of domestic economy for girls with 35 teachers and 201 pupils. There are 4 universities: at Bucharest, founded in 1864 (499 professors and 7,532 students), Iasi (Jassy), founded in 1860 (172 professors and 3,584 students), Cluj (Kolozsvár), in Transylvania, founded in 1919 (1,980 students in 1920), and Cernauti (Czernowitz), in Bukovina, founded in 1920.

Justice is administered by a court of cassation, 11 appeal courts, 64 tribunals, and 494 justices of the peace. The prison population in 1920 numbered 15,536 (11,699 men, 1,618 women, 2,160 boys, and 59 girls). Assistance is given to the sick in 168 hospitals and hospices (departmental, communal, rural, and private).

The internal debt of Rumania amounted on January 1, 1927, to 25,415,900,000 lei, of which 14,835,800,000 lei was the consolidated debt, and 10,616,100,000 lei the floating debt. On January 1, 1927, the external debt (consolidated) was composed as follows:—44,590,000 dollars, 243,395,300 lire, 49,526,643 pounds sterling, 594,086,000 French francs.

Defence.

Military service in Rumania is compulsory and universal from the ages of 21 to 50. The normal terms of service are 2 years in the active army, 13 years in the regular army reserve, and 9 years in the militia. Young men exempted from service in the ranks, and those surplus to the annual contingent, are posted to a supplementary reserve.

The peace establishment of the army in 1927 was 12,293 officers, 128,483 other ranks organised as follows:—

	Army Corps	Divisions	Brigades	Regiments	Battalions	Companies	Machine Gun Companies	Squadrons	Machine Gun Squadrons	Groups	Batteries

The infantry is armed with the Mannlicher rifle; the Rumanian artillery is still largely armed with guns of the Krupp type, but a considerable number of batteries have the French type of 75 mm. field guns and French medium and light howitzers. The military budget for 1926 was 4,278,529,000 lei.

In the Black Sea are 2 flotilla leaders, 6 torpedo boats and 4 motor gunboats, formerly French. 2 flotilla leaders, 2 submarines and a depot ship are being built in Italy. The Danube force now comprises 7 monitors (600 tons), armed with 4·7-in. guns, 7 vedettes and some small craft. A naval base has been established at Sulina, on the Black Sea. The naval school is in Galatz.

Production and Industry.

According to a statistical estimate, the distribution of the soil of Rumania with respect to agriculture in 1919 was as follows:—Ploughed land, 30,715,834 acres; meadows, 4,580,267 acres; vineyards, 393,533 acres; forests, 16,918,964 acres; pastures, 7,218,505 acres; other lands, 12,884,387 acres. Total, 72,711,490 acres.

For 2 years the chief agricultural crops for Greater Rumania were as follows:—

Crop	Area cultivated		Production
	1926	1927	1926	1927
	Acres	Acres	Metric Tons	Metric Tons
Wheat . . . . .	8,372,184	7,752,882	3,510,174	2,634,465
Rye . . . . .	734,919	703,187	294,900	242,444

Maize . . . . .	—	10,548,557	—	3,695,208

Beet cultivation is of importance, the production for three years is as follows:—1924, 873,113 tons (134,280 acres); 1925, 987,804 tons (160,750 acres); 1926 1,284,825 tons (205,975 acres).

The forests of Rumania have an aggregate area of 16,918,964 acres, of which 6,820,000 acres are in the Old Kingdom, 5,500,000 acres in Transylvania, 1,700,000 acres in Maramuresh, and 1,500,000 acres in the Banat.

In 1927, Rumania had 1,877,285 horses, 4,798,384 cattle, 13,581,860 sheep, 476,760 goats, 193,286 buffaloes, and 3,167,722 swine, and 10,502 donkeys.

The catch of fish averages 25,057 metric tons yearly.

The principal minerals are salt, lignite, iron and copper ores, lead and antimony, and petroleum. Petroleum springs, both government and private, are worked at Prahova, Dambovitza, Bacau, and Buzau. The total output of crude reached in 1900, 250,000 metric tons; in 1923, 1,515,637; in 1924, 1,851,231; in 1925, 2,316,979; in 1926, 3,241,329 metric tons. The salt mines are situated in the region of the lower Carpathians, from Bukovina to the west of Oltenic, a stretch of over 250 square miles. Salt mining has been a state monopoly since 1863 (production in 1925, 330,355 tons). Output of coal (lignite), 1923, 2,229,410 tons; 1924, 2,479,083 tons; 1925, 2,615,278 tons.

Industries of some importance are flour milling, brewing, and distilling. In 1925 there were 3,445 industrial establishments, with a capital of 759,020,300 lei gold, and employing 208,683 workmen, and producing goods to the value of 34,723,328,725 lei.

Commerce.

The values of the imports into and exports from Rumania, exclusive of gold and silver (in 1000 lei) were:—

Years	Imports	Exports	Years	Imports	Exports

Shipping and Communications.

The European Commission of the Danube, called into being in 1856, consisted before the war of 8 delegates, one representing each of the following powers: Austria-Hungary, France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, Rumania, Russia, and Turkey. By article 846 of the Treaty of Versailles, only representatives of Great Britain, France, Italy and Rumania constitute the Commission at present. It has its seat at Galatz. Since November 29, 1904, it has existed, or will exist, for successive periods of 3 years unless denounced by one of the contracting powers a year before the conclusion of any such period. By the operations of the Commission the Danube below Braila and along the Sulina branch has been deepened and corrected, so that at Sulina the depth has been increased from 9 ft. to 24 ft., and of the Sulina branch the minimum depth has been increased from 8 ft. to 18½ ft., while by canalisation and other works the navigation has been shortened from 45½ to 33½ nautical miles. The income of the Commission is derived entirely from taxes levied on shipping leaving the river. Receipts in 1926, 35,589,546 French francs (paper); expenditure 34,800,106 French francs (paper); balance from 1925, 4,990,023 francs, balance at December 31, 1926 5,774,002 francs.

The tonnage clearing from the Danube ports in 1926 was 1,662,932 as compared with 1,403,317 in 1925 and 1,382,498 in 1924. In 1926, 782 ships of 1,614,684 tons and in 1925, 645 ships of 1,216,174 tons cleared at the seaport of Constanza.

Railway history in Rumania commenced in 1860. All the main railway lines are owned and operated by the State, but there are also several privately owned lines, mainly in Transylvania. The length of Rumanian State Railways at the close of 1926 was 6,414 miles, of which 3,869 miles were main line and 2,545 miles were branches. In addition, the State Railways own and operate 421 miles of narrow-gauge railways. Operating revenues amounted to 11,886,214,428 lei and other revenues to 488,683,152 lei while operating expenses reached 11,783,271,406 lei and other expenses 12,319,094,075 lei, thus creating an excess of expenditures over revenues amounting to 444,196,495 lei. The State has, besides, under the general railway direction, a commercial navigation service on the Danube and Black Sea. Several additional lines are projected or in course of construction to the extent of 460 miles.

Within Rumania there were 54,648 miles of roads in 1927, of which 32,292 miles are of macadam.

The Compagnie Internationale de navigation Aerienne runs a daily air service from April to October between Paris, Bucharest and Constantinople.

In 1926 there were 4,225 post-offices, through which there passed 170,760,000 letters, 57,682,000 post-cards, and 112,135,000 newspapers, samples, &c. In 1924 there were 8,865 miles of telegraph lines, and 46,813 miles of wire, on which 9,944,553 messages were forwarded. The number of offices was 3,826. In 1924 the telephone systems had 2,120 miles of line and 79,862 miles of wire. Number of conversations, 59,524,029.

Banking, Money, Weights, and Measures.

The National Bank of Rumania has a capital and reserves of 7,026,022,176 lei; its notes in circulation on February 19, 1927, were of the value of 20,995,750,000 lei. The privilege of the National Bank to issue currency notes was prolonged to December 31, 1960, according to a convention signed in May 1925. The capital of the bank was at the same time raised to 100 million lei. Other public credit institutions are a Savings Bank, a Deposit and Consignment Bank, an Agricultural Loan Bank, 1,849 Popular Banks, a Rural Crédit Foncier, 2 Urban Crédit Fonciers (at Bucharest and Jassi), an Agricultural Bank, and a Cassa Rurala, an institution whose purpose is to buy properties and sell them in lots to peasants. There are also three private banking institutions.

A unified paper currency came into use for the whole of Rumania on August 1, 1920.

The metric system for weights and measures was introduced into Rumania in 1876. The unit of the monetary system was made the leu (of 100 bani), equivalent to the franc. Silver is legal tender up to 50 lei only. Gold coins are 20-, 10-, and 5-lei pieces. Nickel is coined in 5-, 10-, and 20-centime (bani) pieces.

UNION OF SOCIALIST SOVIET REPUBLICS

(RUSSIA.)

On March 12, 1917, a revolution broke out in Russia, as a result of which the Emperor Nicholas II abdicated. A Provisional Government under Prince George Lvoff was set up by the Duma, which held office until May 16, 1917, when it was reorganised. On August 6, 1917, a new Cabinet under M. Alexander Kerensky was formed. This too was reorganised on October 8, 1917, and maintained itself until November 7, 1917, when the Military Revolutionary Committee of the Petrograd Soviet seized the government authority, and handed it over the next day to the All-Russian Congress of Soviets.

The Constitution of the new State was adopted at the fifth All-Russian Congress of Soviets, on July 10, 1918, and additions or alterations were made at subsequent Soviet Congresses (December, 1920-23). On December 30, 1922, delegates from the four principal Soviet Republics met at Moscow and concluded a Treaty of Union, setting up a Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, covering Russia (R.S.F.S.R.), Ukraine (U.S.S.R.), White Russia (W.R.S.S.R.), and the Transcaucasian Federation (T.S.F.S.R.). In September, 1924, the Uzbek S.S.R. and the Turcoman S.S.R. were formed and joined the Union. The Constitution of the Union was ratified by the Second Union Congress of Soviets, which met in January and February, 1924.

The Government of the Union consists of a Union Central Executive Committee and a Union Council of People's Commissaries. The former is elected by the Union Congress of Soviets, the supreme authority of the Union, and between Congresses is the sovereign legislative, administrative, and judicial authority of the Union. It is convened three times a year, and consists of two chambers—the Union Council, consisting of 450 members elected on the principle of proportional representation of the six constituent Republics, and the Council of Nationalities of 135 members, elected on the basis of 5 members for every independent and autonomous republic, and 1 member for every autonomous region. All legislation must be adopted by both chambers. The Presidium, or Standing Committee, which transacts current business, is composed of 27 members, 9 from each chamber and 9 elected at a joint meeting.

Chairmen of the Union Central Executive Committee.—MM. Kalinin (R.S.F.S.R.), Petrovsky (Ukraine), Cherviakov (White Russia), Musabekov (Transcaucasia), Aitakov (Turcoman S.S. Republic), Faizula-Khodzhaev (Uzbek S.S. Republic). M. Yenukidze is secretary of the Union Central Executive Committee.

Subordinate legislative and executive authority is vested in the Union Council of People's Commissaries, or Cabinet. Each People's Commissary is the head of a 'collegium' or Board responsible for the work of the People's Commissariat or ministry under its care. Decisions of the Union Council of People's Commissaries may be revised by the Presidium of the Union Central Executive Committee, which alone has the right of making war, ratifying peace treaties, conferring decorations, receiving the credentials of foreign diplomatic representatives, etc. The Council of People's Commissaries is also responsible to the full Central Executive Committee and to the Union Congress of Soviets, to which it makes a report as a whole, in addition to the departmental reports.

The following is the constitution of the Union Council of People's Commissaries (March, 1928):—

President.—A. I. Rykov.

Vice-Presidents.—A. D. Tsurupa.

G. K. Ordzhonikidze.

Foreign Affairs.—G. V. Chicherin.

War and Marine.—K. E. Voroshilov.

Foreign and Home Trade.—A. I. Mikoyan.

Transport.—Y. E. Rudzilik.

Posts and Telegraphs.—I. N. Smirnov.

Workers' and Peasants' Inspection.—G. K. Ordzhonikidze.

Supreme Economic Council.—V. V. Kulyshchev.

Labour.—V. V. Schmidt.

Finance.—N. P. Brukhchanov.

Director of the Central Statistical Department.—V. V. Osinsky.

In addition, the Procurer-General of the Republic enters the Council with a consultative voice, as does also the chairman of the State Political Department.

Each of the six constituent States of the Union—R.S.F.S.R., Ukraine, White Russia, Transcaucasia, Uzbek, and Turcoman—retains its own Central Executive Committee and Council of People's Commissaries. Certain of the departments mentioned above are the exclusive prerogative of the Union Government. Others exist both in the Union Government and in the individual Republics (supreme economic council, labour, finance, and workers' and peasants' inspection). Finally, a number exist only in the individual Republics (agriculture, interior, justice, education, health, social welfare).

The British Government recognised the Government of the U.S.S.R. de jure on February 1, 1924. Similar recognition has been given by Afghanistan, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Italy, Latvia, Lithuania, Norway, Persia, Poland, Sweden, Turkey, France, Japan, Mexico, and China.

Constitution and Government of the R.S.F.S.R. (Russia Proper)

The greater part of the former Russian Empire is under the rule of the Soviet Government. But a number of States have gradually evolved and are maintaining themselves on the borders of the old Empire. Five have received formal recognition by the Western Powers, viz., Finland, Poland, Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania. A number of other independent Republics, which have adopted the Soviet form of Government, are federated with the Government of Russia. These include: White Russia, the Ukraine, Uzbek and Turcoman, Armenia, Georgia, Azerbaijan. (The last three constituting the Transcaucasian Federation of Soviet Republics.) All the remaining territory of the former Russian Empire constitutes the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic (R.S.F.S.R.). This contains the provinces of Russia proper, autonomous Republics (Kirghiz, Tartar, Bashkir, Dagestan, Yakutsk, Crimea, Karelia, the German Republic on the Volga, Cuvashian Republic, Bieviento—Mongolia and Katakaskaia), and autonomous regions or areas (Komi, Mariiskaia, Votskaia, the Region of the Kalmyks, Karatchaev-Cherkesskaia, Chechenskaia, Kabadino-Balkarskaia, Northern Osetia, Ingushutia, Adygaiskaia, Oiivatskaia, Kara-Kalpakskiaia). The autonomous republics are governed by their own Central Executive Committee and Council of People's Commissaries: the regions and areas are governed by executive committees elected by the local Congress of Soviets, like the ordinary provinces (gubernii).

So far as the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic is concerned, a Constitution was adopted by the fifth All-Russian Soviet Congress, the text of which was published on July 19, 1918, and amended and amplified 1919-1923. Further amendments have been introduced (1925) in order to bring the Constitution into line with the Constitution of the U.S.S.R. It remains, however, the constitutional model for the other States of the Union. According to the Constitution, which has been declared a 'fundamental law' of the Republic, Russia is a Republic of Soviets of Workers', Soldiers', and Peasants' Deputies; and all central and local authority is vested in these Soviets. Private property in land is abolished, all land being the common property of the people; all forests, mines, waters having a national importance and all livestock and fixtures, model estates and agricultural concerns are all national property. The State owns all factories, mines, railways, and other means of production and transport, but may, according to recent legislation, lease them to private individuals, corporations, or State trusts.

The R.S.F.S.R. is a free Socialist community of all the labouring masses of Russia. Freedom of conscience, of opinion, of the press, and of meeting are guaranteed by the Constitution. In order to protect the conquests of the revolution, universal military service is incumbent on all citizens. The privilege of defending the Revolution with arms is, however, reserved for the labouring classes only; the non-labouring sections of the population will discharge other military duties. The political rights of Russian citizenship will be granted without any formalities to foreigners residing on the territory of the Russian Republic for purposes of labour.

The highest authority in the State is the All-Russian Congress of Soviets, which consists of representatives of town Soviets on the basis of one delegate for every 25,000 inhabitants, and of Provincial Congresses of Soviets on the basis of one delegate for every 125,000 inhabitants. The Congress elects an All-Russian Central Executive Committee, consisting of 700 members, which constitute the supreme legislative, administrative, and controlling body in the Republic, and meets not less frequently than once in three months, current affairs being administered by a Standing Committee (Presidium). The Central Executive Committee also forms a Council of People's Commissaries for the general administration of the affairs of the Republic, to consist of 12 People's Commissariats (see list above). Each People's Commissary has a Board attached to him under his chairmanship.

The franchise is enjoyed irrespective of religion, nationality, residence, sex, etc., by all citizens over 18 years of age who earn their livelihood by productive labour, and soldiers and sailors in the Red Army and Navy.

The following classes are deprived of the franchise: Those employing others for profit, or living on unearned income, monks and priests of all religions, agents and employees of the former police, secret service, etc., members of the former reigning dynasty, imbeciles and wards, and persons deprived of civic rights by the criminal courts.

In accordance with the latest decrees, however, persons employing hired labour, or enjoying unearned incomes or engaged in trade, may be granted the right to vote by the provincial election commissions, providing they can present a certificate from the local factory workshop committee, a local working peasant organisation, or local trade union committee, testifying that at the time of the election the given individual lives on an income derived from his own labour and does not exploit the labour of others.

Individuals engaged in agriculture and employing hired labour within the limits specified in the agricultural codes of the Constituent Republics of the Union are not deprived of their vote if they are otherwise eligible. Similarly the vote is enjoyed by people who are in receipt of interest from deposits in workers' savings banks, or from Government or municipal loan scrip, providing they are otherwise eligible.

Provision is also made in the Constitution for Local Government by means of local Soviets in villages and towns, with district, provincial and regional Congresses, which meet annually. Each Congress elects an Executive Committee, which administers the territory under its control until the next Congress.

Area and Population

PROGRESS AND PRESENT CONDITION.

The old Empire of Russia comprised one-seventh of the land-surface of the globe. Its area, without internal waters, was, since the Treaty of Portsmouth, 8,417,118 English square miles (19,155,587·7 square versts).

The total area of the Soviet Union in 1927 was given as 21,352,572 sq. Kilometres, or 8,241,910 square miles, with a population of 147,013,609, made up as follows (capitals in brackets) :—

Constituent Republics of the Union	Area in Sq. Miles (Jan. 1, 1927)	Total Population (Dec. 17, 1926)	Urban Population (Dec. 17, 1926)	Rural Population (Dec. 17, 1926)
R. S. F. S. R. (Moscow) . . . . .	7,620,717	100,857,085	17,440,478	83,417,507
White Russia (Minsk) . . . . .	48,751	4,983,884	840,557	4,135,327

Religion.

By decree of Jan. 23, 1918, the Soviet Government disestablished the Church and appropriated certain categories of its property. Since the revolution of March, 1917, all religions may be freely professed in the Union. The prevailing religion of the country is the Græco-Russian, officially called the Orthodox Faith. It has its own independent synod, but maintains the relations of a sister Church with the four Orthodox patriarchates of Constantinople, Alexandria, Antioch, and Jerusalem. The Holy Synod, the board of government of the Russian Church, was established in 1721; to it was committed the superintendence of the religious affairs of the Empire. It is composed of the three metropolitans (Leningrad, Moscow, and Kiev), the archbishop of Georgia (Caucasus), and several bishops sitting in turn.

It is estimated that there are more than 12,000,000 dissenters in Great Russia alone. The affairs of the Roman Catholic Church are entrusted to a Collegium, and those of the Lutheran Church to a Consistory, both settled in Leningrad. Roman Catholics are most numerous in the former Polish Provinces, Lutherans in those of the Baltic, and Mohammedans in Eastern and Southern Russia, while the Jews are almost entirely settled in the towns and larger villages of the western and south-western provinces. The Soviet authorities are now endeavouring to settle Jews who have lost their business or occupation as a result of the wars and revolution on the land—particularly in the Crimea. In 1914, 53,000 Jews were engaged in agriculture; in 1924, this number had grown to 76,000, and in July, 1925, to 130,000.

All churches may be leased from the State free by not less than 20 citizens constituting part of the congregation. The teaching of religion in State and Private Schools is prohibited; for persons above the age of 18 special religious classes may be organized. Religious instruction may be given to children in their homes if their parents so desire.

Instruction.

Education in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is conducted by the Commissariats for Education of the constituent and autonomous Republics of the Union. The Commissariats for Education of the Constituent Republics (R.S.F.S.R.) Ukraine, White Russia, Trans-Caucasia, Turkmenistan, and Uzbek are completely independent of one another. With regard to the autonomous republics, the higher educational institutions and also the scientific institutions situated in their territory are subordinated to the Commissariat for Education of the Union Republic of which they form an autonomous part.

The Commissariat for Education of the R.S.F.S.R. consists of the following departments:—The Administrative Organising Board; The State Scientific Council; The Chief Department for General and Technical Education; The Chief Department for Trade and Technical Education; The Chief Political Educational Committee of the Republic; The Chief Board for Scientific Art and Music Institutions; The Chief Board for Literature and Publication; and The Central Council for the Education of Nationalities other than Russian.

The State Publishing Agency, which is an independent commercial undertaking, also forms a constituent part for the Commissariat for Education, as does also the State Musical Trust. In addition the Commissariat for Education is the largest shareholder of the companies, Sovetskoye Kino (Soviet Cinema) and the company for the construction and supply of educational apparatus and equipment.

Education is obligatory, and certain classes of private schools (under State control) are permitted. Co-education has been adopted in all schools. The principle of 'labour' education is applied differently in the schools of each grade; in taking part in the self-government of the schools, the pupils are taught the art of self-government as citizens. Technical work is conducted as a part of the general industrial life of the country.

The Commissariat for Education has local departments for people's education attached to the Executive Committees of the Workers, Peasants, and Red Army Councils throughout the Republic.

The following table shows the number of educational institutions and pupils on December 1, 1926, throughout the Soviet Union:—

Previous to the revolution universities existed in the following places in the territory now included in the R.S.F.S.R. and administered by the People's Commissariat for Education: Moscow (2), Leningrad, Kazan, Saratov, Tomsk, Perm, Irkutsk. The Universities of Dorpat and Warsaw, evacuated during the war, were reorganised in 1918 as the Voronezh and Don Universities, and in the same year another was set up at Nizhni-novgorod. In 1919 universities were established at Yaroslav, Smolensk, Kostroma, Tambov, Astrakhan, Tashkent, Samara, Simbirsk, Orel; in 1920, at Ekaterinburg, Ekaterinodar, and Veliki Usting.

Justice and Crime.

The basis of the Judiciary System is the same throughout the whole of the Soviet Union, but the Constituent Republics have the right to introduce modifications and to make their own rules for the application of the code of laws. The supervision of the Legal System of the separate Republics is entrusted to the People's Commissariat for Justice of each Republic. The Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. is the chief Court and Supervising Organ for all Union Republics.

In accordance with the declaration by the Central Executive Committee of the U.S.S.R. on October 29, 1924, the fundamental objects of the Judiciary System of the U.S.S.R. are to safeguard the conquest of the proletarian revolution and to protect the Workers' and Peasants' Government and the laws laid down by the latter.

In the main, there is very little difference between the code of laws and their application in the separate republics. The legal system of the R.S.F.S.R., therefore, can be taken as an example of that in force in all the other Republics of the Union.

The Law Courts of the R.S.F.S.R. are divided into People's Courts and Special Courts. The People's Courts consist of the People's Judge and two Assessors, and their function is to examine as the First Instance, most of the Civil and Criminal cases, except the more important ones, some of which are tried at the Provincial Court, and those of the highest importance at the Supreme Court. The Provincial Courts supervise the activities of the People's Courts and also act as Courts of Appeal from the decisions of the People's Court. The Supreme Court exercises supervision over all the Courts of the Republic, and forms an Appeal Court from the Provincial Court.

The Judges of the People's Courts and the Presidents and Members of the Provincial Courts are selected for one year by the Provincial Executive Committee, from individuals who enjoy electoral rights and who have the necessary qualifications with regard to their public or legal work.

The people's assessors are called upon for duty for six days in a year from lists of electors drawn up in the Rural Districts, Industrial Enterprises and Army Corps. The People's Assessors for the Provincial Court must have had at least two years' experience in Public or Trade Union work. The list of Assessors for the Supreme Court is drawn up by the Central Executive Committee of the Republic.

In addition to the People's Courts there are the following Special Courts :— (1) the Labour Section of the People's Court, whose duty it is to supervise the regulations relating to the working conditions and the protection of labour as well as to give decisions on conflicts arising between employers and employees, the violation of regulations; (2) Rural Commissions, which settle disputes concerning agrarian matters, such as claims relating to the use of the land, etc.; (3) Arbitration Committees, which settle disputes arising between separate State organs concerning property rights, with certain exceptions; (4) Military Tribunals, which deal with military offences, espionage, and other classes of crime, when there is no other Law Court on the spot but a military tribunal; (5) Disciplinary Courts, which deal with offences and neglect of official duties committed by members of the Central Executive Committee and similar State organs.

The People's Commissary for Justice is the State Chief Prosecutor, and in every province and district there is a Provincial Prosecutor who is immediately subordinate to the Chief Public Prosecutor of the Republics. The duties of the Public Prosecutors are the supervision of the correct application of the law by all State organs.

There is also a College of Solicitors which decides the questions as to the provision of free legal assistance for impecunious persons and as to guarding against the imposition of excessive defence fees for workers. In other cases, solicitor's fees are fixed by arrangement.

During 1925 and 1926 a variety of alterations were introduced in the Civil and Criminal Code and in the Processual Codes.

Among the chief amendments to the Criminal Code introduced in 1926 was the reduction, in a large variety of cases of the maximum term of imprisonment from ten years, as laid down in the Criminal Code of 1922, to only five years, and the reduction of the minimum term from six months (1922) to only one day in certain cases.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure for five years are shown as follows (in millions of roubles):—

On September 1, 1917, the total indebtedness of Russia amounted to 32,300 million roubles, made up as follows:—Pre-war debt, 8,800 million roubles; seven internal war loans, 10,500 million roubles; loans contracted abroad, 8,000 million roubles; short-dated loans, 5,000 million roubles. On March 31, 1921, the indebtedness of Russia to Great Britain was £561,402,000 (excluding interest since December 31, 1918). All these debts were cancelled by decree of January 28, 1918.

On December 1, 1927, the internal debt amounted to 1,163,900 roubles, of which 882,200,000 roubles were loans issued by the State and 281,700,000 roubles loans guaranteed by the State. Of the former total 389 millions were subscribed by official institutions and 493 millions by private individuals totalling about eight millions.

Defence.

I. ARMY.

The military system of the Union of Soviet Republics was reorganized in 1925.

The Red Army is now organised on a basis of universal military service. Service is divided into (a) preparatory; (b) service with the colours; (c) reserve service. Preparatory training is on a militia basis and begins at the age of 19. It consists of a preliminary course of 96 hours, lasting 1½ months, and a supplementary course of 280 hours, lasting 28 days, the whole spread over 2 years. The number of men available for military service each year is approximately 1,000,000, but only a portion of this number is called to serve. In 1927 the approximate number to receive training was 800,000. Service with the colours begins at the age of 21 and is for 5 years, one of which is spent on leave. During the first year training is for 3 months, and in subsequent years for 2 months. In 1927, the approximate strength of the regular army was 540,000.

The whole territory of the U.S.S.R. is divided, for the purposes of the Army, into 10 military districts.

The Red Army is organised as follows: Infantry, consisting of 21 Rifle Corps, 27 Rifle Divisions, 43 Territorial Divisions, and 210 Regiments, or 610 Battalions in all. Cavalry, consisting of 13 Cavalry Divisions, 3 Brigades, and 98 Regiments; Artillery, 175 Groups and 525 Batteries; Engineers, 29 Battalions.

The armed forces (army, navy and air) are controlled by the Military Soviet of the Union. The army is directed by the Revolutionary War Council with the People's Commissary as President. It is commanded by a Commander-in-chief, with a Chief of the Staff at the head of the army staff. The army in peace time is organised in—

- (1) Field troops, which include fortress garrisons, and comprise the regular army
- (2) Instructional detachments.
- (3) Auxiliary troops for service behind the front line.
- (4) Special troops for political and frontier guard service.

Those on active service both in the Standing Army and the Territorial Forces, in the Navy, etc., whilst subject to the Rules and Regulations and Military Discipline, at the same time, enjoy all the civic rights of Soviet citizens.

II. NAVY

The proposed reconstruction of the Russian Navy has been retarded, though it has been officially stated on more than one occasion that a reconstructution of the forces is contemplated. So far it has taken the form of re-naming the existing vessels of the fleet. There are but two battleships, the Marat and Parizheskaya-Kommuna, now serviceable in the Baltic, the sister ships Gangut and Poltava no longer being effective.

In the Black Sea the force is inconsiderable. Part of General Wrangel's force, comprising one Dreadnought, 10 destroyers, 4 submarines and other vessels are still at Bizerta under French protection, and have ceased to have any effective value as fighting units.

State dockyards were at Nevsky, New Admiralty and Galernyi Ostrov, Leningrad; Kronstadt, Sevastopol, and Vladivostok. Guns were made at the Putiloff steel works, 3 or 4 submarines are reported to be under construction at Petrograd, but otherwise very little work appears to be in hand.

The following table gives the principal ships remaining of the Baltic and the Black Sea Fleets, the new names being inserted.

BALTIC FLEET.

Date of Launch	Name	Displacement	Horse-power	Speed	Officers and Men	Main armament
----------------	------	--------------	-------------	-------	------------------	---------------

Battleships.

1911	{ Parizheskaya-Kommuna Marat }	23,000	42,000	23	59—1,066	12 12in.; 16 4 7in.
------	---	--------	--------	----	----------	---------------------

These ships are the former Sevastopol and Petrovavlovsk.

Cruisers.

1915	Sornarkom	7,600	50,000	30	—	15 5 1in.; 4 3 9in.
1900	S.S.S.R.	6,830	11,600	20	573	10 6in.
1906	Profintern	15,190	20,675	21.5	900	4 10in.; 8 8in.; 20 4 7in.

There remain now in the Baltic about 13 destroyers of any fighting value. The modern submarines are about 8 in number. There are also 2 gunboats, several mine-layers and mine-sweeping trawlers, motor-boats, and surveying and training ships. The flying service includes 50 or 60 planes. A small destroyer and submarine force is in the White Sea. The training sloop Vorovsky (ex-yacht Lysistrata) recently proceeded to Vladivostok.

BLACK SEA FLEET.

Cruiser.

1915	{ Tchernonaya Ukraina }	7,600	55,000	30	—	16 6in.
------	--	-------	--------	----	---	---------

The above is the only one out of 4 cruisers laid down in 1913 which has been completed. There are 3 destroyers in the Black Sea and 8 torpedo boats. There are also about 4 modern submarines. A number of useful auxiliaries are in the Black Sea, and the flying service includes about 40 various planes. There is a flotilla on the Dnieper, and a small force is in the Caspian.

Production and Industry.

The country is mainly agricultural in character. The total area sown with grain, potatoes, flax, and other industrial plants, kitchen garden produce, etc., was, for the years mentioned, in millions of dessiatines (2.7 acres) as follows:—1913, 106.7; 1923, 86.2; 1924, 92.8; 1925, 98.5; 1926, 102.8; 1927, 105.5 (88.8 sown with grain, 6.7 with industrial plants, and 10 with other kinds of produce).

The following table shows the acreage and yield of the principal crops for three years:—

Crop	Area (millions of acres)			Harvest (millions of tons)
	1921	1925	1926	1911-15 (Average)	1925	1926
Rye . . . . .	65.0	71.8	71.3	19.8	23.1	22.9
Winter Wheat . . . . .	14.0	61.2	72.6	21.5	19.9	22.3
Summer Wheat . . . . .	31.2			13.2
Barley . . . . .	16.7	15.9	18.6	12.4	6.1	5.5
Oats . . . . .	28.0	32.1	38.3	8.2	11.6	14.3
Buckwheat . . . . .	6.5	7.3	7.8	9.7	1.7	1.9

Maize . . . . .	5.1	8.4	7.3	1.07	4.5	8.6

. In 1927, the production of the principal cereals was, in millions of metric tons: wheat 20.4, rye 24.6; barley 47 and oats 13.

Other important crops (with figures for 1924, 1925 and 1926) were as follows:—

	Area (thousands of acres)
	1924	1925	1926
Cotton . . . . .	1,246	1,615	1,742
Flax . . . . .	2,427	3,186	3,168
Hemp . . . . .	1,725	2,015	1,908
Sunflower . . . . .	6,686	7,985	6,691
Sugar beet . . . . .	802	1,307	1,336
Tobacco . . . . .	140	207	217
Potatoes, beans, peas, grasses, etc. . . . .	31,000	32,500	33,800

The following table shows the yield of some of the principal crops in thousands of tons at pre-war value:—

	1924-25		1925-26
	Thousand Tons	Value Million Roubles	Thousand Tons	Value Million Roubles
Grain . . . . .	50,280	2,522	74,500	3,740
Potatoes . . . . .	34,900	509.3	44,852	656.6
Hay and Grasses . . . . .	58,449	1,082	60,506	1,290.5
Raw Cotton . . . . .	370	91.1	548	320.8
Flax Fibre . . . . .	241	70.1	308	89.2
Hemp Fibre . . . . .	806	62.6	459	93.8
Oil Seeds . . . . .	2,393	167.9	3,827	268.5
Sugar Beet . . . . .	3,245	19.0	8,007	68.2
Yellow Tobacco . . . . .	24.6	18.6	45.9	34.7
Makhorka . . . . .	75.4	6.0	132.7	10.5

For 1926-27, the yield of grain crops was (in millions of roubles), 3,802; of industrial plants, 605; and of other products, 3,765; making a total of 8,192.

The number of animals (million heads) in the Soviet Union is shown as follows for four years:—

	1924	1925	1926	1927
Horses, of all kinds . . . . .	25.3	26.8	29.1	31.3
Horses, working farm, alone . . . . .	19.8	20.1	21.7	23.1
Cattle . . . . .	55.9	60.6	64.1	67.8
Sheep and Goats . . . . .	87.8	111.5	121.6	134.3
Pigs . . . . .	18.2	18.8	18.1	20.0

There were in addition, in 1926, about 1,318,400 heads of Camels.

Of the whole of the forest land of the U.S.S.R., a large portion is administered and worked, or let out as concessions, by the State, and the other is granted for use to the Peasantry free of charge, the latter being 72,900,000 acres in extent.

The Forest Lands of the U.S.S.R. are estimated to cover 2,040,330,000 acres, of which 1,984,547,500 acres are situated in the R.S.F.S.R. and 55,782,500 in the other constituent Republics of the Union. In European Russia alone, there are 405 million acres of Forest Land, most of it being in the North, some in the Centre, but very little in the South.

A large proportion of the Forest Lands of the U.S.S.R. lies in Asiatic Russia (some 300,000,000 acres in extent) where, owing to the absence of roads it is not accessible for working. The forests of the Caucasus, on the other hand, are capable of furnishing the world's market, with an inexhaustible supply of many valuable varieties of timber. A total of 18,600,000 acres in the Caucasus are covered by Forest Lands.

The Soviet Union is rich in minerals. The output of some of the principal ores during the last two years was as follows:—

Ores	1925-26	1926-27
	Tons	Tons
Iron . . . . .	3,128,613	4,772,283
Manganese <sup>1</sup> . . . . .	461,277	472,096
Chrome . . . . .	26,680	17,930
Copper . . . . .	352,175	478,924
Total value in Roubles (at pre-war prices)	36,927,000	—

<sup>1</sup> Not including the Chistura region.

The total gross output of coal in 1926-27 was 30,940,000 tons.

The number of coal miners increased from an average of 134,700 in 1921-22 to 213,786 in 1925-26.

The output of the oil industry during the last two years was as follows:—

	1925-26	1926-27
	Tons	Tons
Baku . . . . .	5,513,623	6,796,500
Grozny . . . . .	2,411,935	3,034,500
Enba . . . . .	218,114	253,000
Kurban . . . . .	72,414	82,000
	8,216,084 <sup>1</sup>	10,166,000 <sup>1</sup>

The organisation of industry in Soviet Russia is based on State ownership and control, and is administered in accordance with the Decree of April 10, 1923, and subsequent slight modifications, by State Trusts and Combines. The Trusts in the large scale and middle sized State industries number over 600, but there are 291 big Trusts and these cover about 80 per cent. of the total State industries. A small number of Trusts, called Monopoly Trusts, combine all the enterprises of a given branch of industry in the whole Union. Such are, for instance, the Rubber Trust, Silk Trust, Tea Trust, Urals Asbestos Trust, etc. In some industries there are several trusts. Thus the Electrical, Oil, Cement and a few other industries have four trusts each, but in the vast majority of industries in the Soviet Union there are a number of separate Trusts in the various parts of the Union.

The Combines are trusts which cover a variety of interconnected industries, e.g. the Southern Steel Combine, the Southern Chemical Combine, etc. In order to co-ordinate the work of the various Trusts, Syndicates have been formed. Amongst the most important syndicates may be mentioned the Textile Syndicate which combines the cotton, wool, linen, silk and some of the hemp Trusts. The Oil Syndicate co-ordinates the work of the Azerbaijan, Grozny and Emba Oil Trusts, and so on.

The following figures show the value (measured in pre-war prices) of the output of Soviet large scale State industry during the last five years:—

Year	Value million roubles at 1913 prices	Per cent. of 1913
1921-22.	850.0	20.8
1922-23.	1,239.0	30.3
1923-24.	1,621.0	39.6
1924-25.	2,643.9	64.6
1925-26.	3,772.1	92.2
1926-27.	4,421	108.0

Commerce.

The foreign trade of the U.S.S.R. is organized as a state monopoly. Importation and Exportation of goods is effected by special licences issued by the Commissariat for Foreign and Home Trade and its respective departments in pursuance of a plan annually sanctioned by the Government. The right of purchasing goods for Importation, and that of selling Russian exports abroad is vested in the Trade Delegations of the U.S.S.R. in foreign countries. By special decrees respective Government Departments select those state and co-operative organizations which are authorized, under the control of the Trade Delegation, to engage in foreign trade.

For the purpose of encouraging the participation of foreign capital in the foreign trade of the country there have been formed in the U.S.S.R. 'Mixed Companies' in which shares are held by the Soviet Government and foreign concerns. The largest organizations through which the export and import trade is carried on are the Gostovy, the Exportkhlel (Cereals Export Company), Exportles (Timber Export Company), Textilimport (Textiles, Import Company), and others. The Co-operative Organizations which are granted the right of 'exit to the foreign markets' are the Centrosoyuz (Central Union of Co-operative Societies), the Selskосоyuz and several other organizations.

The following table gives the value of imports and exports over the European frontiers, for four years, in thousands of roubles at 1913 prices:—

Year	Imports	Exports	Year	Imports	Exports
1923-24 .	200,533	339,689	1925-26	465,153	470,648
1924-25 .	415,549	365,169	1926-27	497,434	558,011

Imports and exports for 1926-27, over the European frontiers, were shown as follows (the values represent current prices):—

Imports	1926-27		Exports	1926-27
	1,000 metric Tons	1,000 roubles		1,000 metric Tons	1,000 roubles

SOVIET CENTRAL ASIA.

Soviet Central Asia embraces the Uzbek Socialist Soviet Republic, the Turkoman Socialist Soviet Republic, the Tajik Autonomous Republic, the Autonomous Regions of Kara-Kalpakia and Kirghizia (Kara-Kirghizia) as well as the regions to the north of Tashkent, peopled by Kaizaks (Kirghiz), and which are now included in the Autonomous Kaizak Republic.

Turkestan was conquered by the Russians about 60 years ago. In 1866 Tashkent was occupied and in 1868 Samarkand, and subsequently further territory was conquered and united with Russian Turkestan. In the 70's Bokhara was subjugated, the Emir, by the agreement of 1873 recognising the suzerainty of Russia. In the same year Khiva became a Vassal State to Russia. Until 1917, Russian Central Asia was divided politically into the Khanate of Khiva, the Emirate of Bukhara, and the Governor-Generalship of Turkestan.

After the outbreak of the Revolution various political parties contended for power in Turkestan. In the summer of 1919 the authority of the Soviet Government became definitely established in these regions, and subsequently the native dynasties in Khiva and Bukhara were expelled. The Khan of Khiva was deposed in February 1920, and a People's Soviet Republic was set up, the mediæval name of Korezm being revived. In August 1920 the Emir of Bukhara suffered the same fate, and a similar regime was set up in Bukhara. The former Governor-Generalship of Turkestan was formally constituted an Autonomous Socialist Soviet Republic within the R. S. F. S. R. on April 11, 1921.

In the autumn, 1924, a decision was accepted by the Congresses of the Soviets of Turkestan, Bokhara and Khiva Republics to redistribute the territories of these Republics on a national basis; at the same time Bokhara and Khiva became Socialist Republics. As a result of the redistribution completed in May, 1925, the New States of Uzbekistan, Turkmenistan and Tajikistan and several Autonomous Regions were established. The remaining districts of Turkestan populated by Kaizaks (Kirghiz) were reunited to Kazakhstan.

The Autonomous Kirghiz Socialist Soviet Republic (sometimes called Kaizakistan), comprising the Governments of Uralsk, Turgai, Akmolinsk and Semipalatinsk, had already been created within the R.S.F.S.R. (August 26, 1920). To this Republic were added the parts of the former Governorship of Turkistan inhabited by a majority of Kirghiz, and comprising the greater parts of the old Provinces of Sir Daria and Semirechinsk, together with the eastern part of Ferghana and the foothills of the Pamirs. Area, 94,956 sq. miles. Within this Autonomous Kirghiz Republic, two Autonomous Regions were established, in the interests of distinct sub groups of Kirghiz tribesmen, that of Kara-Kalpakia, extending south-east of the Sea of Aral, and Kara-Kirghizia, covering most of the old Semirechinsk Province. The remaining parts of Russian Turkestan, with the territories of the old native states of Khiva and Bukhara and the Trans-Caspian Province, constitute the two Socialist Soviet Republics of Uzbekistan and Turkmenistan. In October 1924, the Central Executive Committee of the U.S.S.R. decided to admit these two Republics to membership of the Union, a decision which was confirmed by the Third Union Congress of Soviets in May 1925.

TURKMENISTAN.

(TURKOMAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC.)

The Turkoman Soviet Socialist Republic was formed in February 1925 and covers the territory of the former Trans-Caspian Region of Turkestan, the Charjiui vilayet of Bokhara, and a part of Khiva situated on the right bank of the Oxus. In May 1925 the Turkoman Republic entered the Soviet Union as one of its Constituent Republics. It is bounded on the north by the Autonomous Kaizak Republic (Kirghizia), by Persia and Afghanistan on the south, by the Uzbek Republic on the east and the Caspian Sea on the west.

The principal Turkoman tribes are the Tekkés of Merv, and the Tekkés of the Attok, the Ersaris, Yomuds and Goklans. All speak closely related varieties of Jagatai Turkish, and they are Sunni Mohammedans. The country passed under Russian control in 1881, after the fall of the Turkoman stronghold of Gok-Tépé.

The area of Turkmenistan is 491,200 square kilometres (189,603 sq. miles), and its population 1,030,549. The Turcomans form about 70 per cent. of the population and the Uzbeks about 16 per cent.

The capital is Ashkabad (Poltaratsk), and other large towns are Merv, Charjiui, Kerki, Tashauz.

The main occupation of the people is agriculture, based mainly on irrigation. Turkmenistan produces cotton, wool, Astrakan fur, etc. It is also famous for its carpets, and produces a certain special breed of Turkoman horses. It is fairly rich in mineral resources, producing ozokerite, oil, sulphates, common salt, sulphur, etc.

There are 1,541 kilometres (955 miles) of railway line. Tashkent is connected with the main Russian railway system via Orenburg. From Tashkent the railway is carried south, until it branches westward to Bukhara, Merv, Ashkabad and Krasnovodsk, and eastward to Kokand, with extensions to Namangan and Andijan. At Krasnovodsk, on the Caspian, the railway line connects by boat-service with Baku and the main Russian and Trans-Caucasian systems. At Merv it branches south, along the valley of the Murghab, to Roushk on the Afghan frontier.

Motor communication has been established between Ashkabad to Meshed (Persia), and an air line runs between Charjiui and Tashauz. Turkmenistan (particularly the territory along the railway line) is connected by telegraph with the rest of the Union.

UZBEKISTAN.

(UZBEK SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC.)

The Uzbekistan Soviet Socialist Republic was formed in February 1925, from lands formerly included in Turkestan, Bokhara and Khorezm. It includes a large part of the Samarkand region, the southern part of the Sir-Daria, Western Fergana, the Western Plains of Bokhara, the Uzbek regions of Khorezm and the Autonomous Republic of Tadjikistan. In May 1925, Uzbekistan, by the decision of the Congress of Soviets of the U.S.S.R. was accepted as an equal member into the Soviet Union.

Uzbekistan lies between  $36^{\circ}40'$  N. latitude and  $59^{\circ}50'-75^{\circ}$  E. longitude. It is bordered on the north by the Kazak Autonomous Republic, on the east by the Kirghis Autonomous Republic and Chinese Turkestan, on the south by Afghanistan, and on the west by the Turkoman Soviet Socialist Republic.

The Uzbeks, who form the majority of the population over the area of the old States of Khiva and Bukhara, and the Provinces of Samarkand and Ferghana, were the ruling race in Central Asia, until the arrival of the Russians during the third quarter of the nineteenth century. The several native States over which Uzbek dynasties formerly ruled were founded in the fifteenth century upon the ruins of Tamerlane's empire. The Uzbeks speak Jagatai Turkish, which is clearly related to Osmanli and Azerbaijani Turkish, and are Sunni Mohammedans. The term 'Sart,' which is in use in Central Asia, has a social rather than an ethnical meaning, and is applied to the settled population of the towns and villages in contrast to the nomads.

The area is 340,400 square kilometres (131,394 sq. miles); population 5,270,195. The Uzbeks form about 63 per cent. of the total; the Tajiks about 15 per cent.; the Russians about 7 per cent. The capital of the Republic is Samarkand (population 101,000); other important cities are Tashkent, Bokhara, Khiva, Andijan, Kokand, Namangan.

Uzbekistan is a land of intensive farming, based on artificial irrigation. Cotton growing has been developed; about 9 million poods were produced in 1926-27. Uzbekistan also produces fruits, wool, and silk. Its industry consists of cotton spinning (51 factories), oil and coal-mining.

The total length of railway is 1,721 kilometres (1,067 miles), of which 734 kilometres (455 miles) form that part of the line which connects central Asia with Russia. From this main line branches lead to Karshe-Kitab, Kerki-Termes, Djelalabad, Namangan, Andijan and other centres. On the territory of the Republic there are 113 postal telegraph institutions, an air-line which serves all of Central Asia, and this air-line is most developed in Uzbekistan. The existing air-lines are: (1) Kagan, Chardjui, Khiva, Chimbai; (2) Kagan, Termes, Dushambe.

TAJIKISTAN.

The Tajikistan Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic was formed from the former regions of Bokhara and Turkestan where the population consisted mainly of Tajiks.

Tajikistan is situated between  $39^{\circ}40'$  and  $36^{\circ}40'$  N. latitude and  $67^{\circ}20'$  and  $75^{\circ}$  E. longitude, north of the Oxus. On the west and north it is bordered by Uzbekistan and by the autonomous Republic of the Kirghiz; on the east by Chinese Turkestan and on the south by Afghanistan.

The Tajiks speak an Iranian dialect, little different from Persian, and they are considered to be the descendants of the original Aryan population of Turkestan. Unlike the Persians, the Tajiks are mostly Sunnis.

The area of the territory is 135,000 square kilometres (52,110 sq. miles) and the population about 824,000. The capital is Dushambe.

The occupations of the population are mainly farming and cattle-breeding. Gold, oil and coal are being produced, but by very primitive methods. Irrigation is being developed and cotton growing introduced.

In regard to roads, it is the poorest region in Central Asia. The only means of communication up to the time of the formation of the Republic were camel-tracks. A railway line is now being built between Termez and Dushanbe (about 200 kilometres—124 miles). Automobile transport roads are also being built. A steamship line on the Oxus runs between Termez and Saraya. Dushanbe is connected by an air line with Termas and Kagan.

THE TRANS-CAUCASIAN SOCIALIST SOVIET REPUBLIC.

The Trans-Caucasia has as natural boundaries—on the north, the Caucasian Mountains, separating it from Northern Caucasia; on the west, the Black Sea; on the south, mountains, steppes and rivers which divide it from Persia; and on the east the Caspian Sea. The area of the Trans-Caucasian Republic is 184,600 square kilometres (71,255 sq. miles). After the November revolution Trans-Caucasia became separated from the rest of Russia and split up into three separate Republics: Georgia, Armenia and Azerbaijan. In April 1920, Azerbaijan became a Soviet Republic. Towards the end of the same year, Armenia also became a Soviet Republic, and in 1921 a Soviet Government was established in Georgia. The three Republics, on March 12, 1922, concluded an agreement whereby they formed a Trans-Caucasian Federation, thus establishing the Trans-Caucasian Soviet Socialist Republic. Total population, 5,810,000, made up as follows: Georgians, 33.4 per cent.; Armenians, 24.1 per cent.; Turko-Tatars, 23.1 per cent.; Russians, 4.6 per cent.; Ossetians, 1.7 per cent.; Abkhazians, 0.8 per cent.; others, 12.3 per cent.

On January 1, 1924, the total length of railways was 1,350 miles, 41.7 per cent. of which were in Georgia, 39.8 per cent. in Azerbaijan, and 18.5 per cent. in Armenia. The main lines run from Batoum, through Tiflis to Baku and along the Caspian Sea through Derbent to the R.S.F.S.R. There is also a railway running from Tiflis to the south in Armenia. This line passes through the Allaverd copper mines and through Leninakan and Erivan to Persia. The railways in Transcaucasia, as in the rest of the Union, belong to the State.

ARMENIA.

(SOCIALIST SOVIET REPUBLIC OF ARMENIA.)

In November 1917, the Trans-Caucasian districts of the former Russian Empire, having refused to recognise the Bolsheviks, set up a Trans-Caucasian Commission as the supreme authority in the country.

February 1918, the Sejm or Diet of Trans-Caucasia, convoked in Tiflis, set up a Provisional Government. On April 22, 1918, the Trans-Caucasian Sejm declared its de jure independence of Russia, and established the Federal Democratic Republic of Trans-Caucasia. The three main nationalities in Trans-Caucasia, the Armenians, the Georgians and the Tartars, were parties to this Federation, each holding their own respective territories. This Federal Republic lasted only five weeks, owing mainly to the divergent political tendencies of the three constituent peoples. On May 26, 1918, the Trans-Caucasian Republic was dissolved, and the three peoples respectively declared their independence. An Armenian Republic was established at Erivan under the control of the Dashnak (Social Democratic) Party. The territory of the Republic comprised, from November 1918 to January 1921, the whole of the former Governments of Kars and Erivan and part of that of Elizabetopol. Its de facto independence was recognised by the Allies in January 1920, and its de jure recognition was embodied in the Treaty of Sèvres, signed in August 1920 between the Allied Powers and Turkey. The Armenians failed to secure the union of the Turkish-Armenian districts. In December 1920, the Turks occupied the whole of the former Government of Kars. On April 2, 1921, Armenia was proclaimed a Soviet Republic. The Armenian Soviet Government, with the Russian Soviet Government, was a party to the Treaty of Kars (March 1921) which confirmed the Turkish possession of the former Government of Kars and of the Surmali District of the Government of Erivan.

Armenia (capital Erivan) which covers an area of 80,260 square kilometres (11,680 sq. miles), adopted to Soviet Constitution in November 1920. In 1925, the population of Armenia numbered 876,557, 85·9 per cent. of whom were Armenians, 9·8 per cent. Turko-Tartars, 2·4 per cent. Russians, and 1·8 per cent. other nationalities. Only 16·6 per cent. of the population live in towns. In 1926, the population was 867,671. Armenia is essentially an agricultural country; in 1925, 255,900 dessiatines were cultivated; 84·7 per cent. of the cultivated land was under grain and 5·9 per cent. under industrial plants. The area under cotton was 15,103 dessiatines, the yield being 862,890 poods of raw cotton. Since the establishment of the Soviet Government irrigation works have been restored or constructed to a total length of 350 kilometres (187 miles). The principal of these is the Shirak Lenin Canal, 22 kilometres (13 miles) long, commenced in 1922 and completed in 1925.

In 1923 there were 1,376 industrial enterprises in the towns of Armenia, amongst them being textile sheds, quarries, conserving factories, breweries, spirit distilleries, wine-presses, etc.

In 1926 a new electric station was erected at Erivan and the construction of a number of powerful electric stations was started.

In 1925 there were 81,000 pupils in the schools of Armenia. In addition there are a number of Trade Technical Schools, a State University, a Musical Academy and two Workers' Faculties.

On October 22, 1926, Leninakhan suffered a severe earthquake, which destroyed the greater part of the town and 40 of the surrounding villages. Efforts are being made to make good the damage and restore the town and villages.

AZERBAIJAN.

(AZERBAIJAN SOCIALIST SOVIET REPUBLIC.)

The 'Mussavet' (Nationalist) party who dominated the National Council or Constituent Assembly of the Tartars, declared the independence of Azerbaijan on May 28, 1918, with a capital, first at Ganja (Elizabetopol) and later at Baku. A Government of 12 ministers was formed, which the British Government recognised as a de facto administration in February 1920. On April 28, 1920, the 'Hummet' or Bolshevik Party overthrew the existing Government, and admitted Russian troops to Baku. On September 30, 1920, a military and economic treaty was concluded between Azerbaijan and Russia, and in the following year Azerbaijan was declared a Soviet Republic.

Azerbaijan covers an area of 85,363 square kilometres (32,950 sq. miles) and has a population (1926) of 2,313,172. Its capital is Baku, population 447,000. Azerbaijan includes the Nakhichevan Socialist Soviet Republic and the Nagorno Karabakh Autonomous Region. It has a temperate climate throughout the year. Most of the inhabitants are Turko-Tatars. It also contains a fair number of Armenians, comparatively few Georgians, and Russians, most of whom live in the towns, particularly in Baku and employed principally in the oilfields. 77.6 per cent. of the total population live in the country districts.

Azerbaijan is in the main an agricultural country, the chief products being grain, cotton, vine, kitchen and garden produce, and to some extent, also tobacco and silk. In the mountain regions the occupation of the people is cattle-breeding. Over the whole of Azerbaijan, there are 7,283,000 dessiatines of land of which over 75 per cent is suitable for cultivation. The area under cotton in 1925 was 97,700 dessiatines, or very nearly that of pre-war. The average yield was 45 to 50 poods per dessiatine and the total harvest of raw cotton was 4,500,000 poods.

The most important industry is the oil industry, especially in the Baku Region. The total output of oil in 1926-27 was 625,500,000 poods, and in 1925-26 336,000,000 poods. The number of men employed is 38,678. All the oilfields have been electrified and are now connected with the town of Baku and, for the most part, with the new workers' settlements which have been constructed more or less on the American type. Amongst the other industries in Azerbaijan are copper, salt, textiles, and fishing industries.

In 1925-26 134,855 pupils attended the primary and secondary schools. There is also a State University, a Polytechnic Institute, a State Conservatoire, a Higher Arts School, a number of Teachers' Training Centres, 14 Technical Institutes and 6 Workers' Faculties.

GEORGIA.

(GEORGIAN SOCIALIST SOVIET REPUBLIC.)

The independence of the Georgian Social Democratic Republic was declared at Tiflis on May 26, 1918, by the representative body, the National Council, elected by the National Assembly of Georgia on November 22, 1917. The Act of Independence of Georgia was confirmed on March 12, 1919, by the Constituent Assembly, which had been elected on a basis of universal suffrage.

The Government, which was controlled by the Menshevik Party, received de jure recognition by the Allies on January 27, 1921. In February, 1921, however, a Soviet Government was set up. The territory of Georgia comprises most of the former Government of Tiflis and the whole of that of Kutais. Some small frontier districts were ceded to Turkey by the Treaty of Kars (March, 1921).

Georgia occupies the whole of the western part of Trans-Caucasia and covers an area of 39,000 sq. miles. Its population in 1926 was 2,660,963. Georgia embraces the Abkhazian Socialist Soviet Republic, the Ajaristan Autonomous Soviet Republic and the Autonomous Region of Southern Ossetia. The majority of the population (68 per cent.) consists of Georgians. There are also in Georgia a fair number of Armenians, Tartars, Russians and a large number of other nationalities. In 1925, the number of pupils in the schools of Georgia was 211,210, including 1,600 students in the higher education institutions. There is a State University, a polytechnic institute, a Trans-Caucasian Communist University, an Academy of Art and a Conservatoire.

Tiflis (population 283,000) is not only the capital of Georgia, it is also the capital of Trans-Caucasia. It is one of the oldest towns of Georgia, but it is now being to a certain extent rebuilt and modernised. All the Central Government Departments of Trans-Caucasia and of Georgia are in Tiflis.

Agriculture is important; much work has been done in the drainage of land, and in the construction of irrigation works. Georgia is very rich in forest lands where fine varieties of timber are grown. The most important mining industry of Georgia is the exploitation of the manganese deposits, the richest of which lie in the Chiatura region. The annual export of manganese from Georgia before the war was 35,000,000 poods. The Civil War wrought enormous damage to the Manganese Mines, but these are being restored, and already 44 per cent. of the pre-war exports have been reached. The manganese deposits in Georgia are calculated to amount to 5 to 9 milliard poods (from 80 to 150 million tons). In the Kutais Country and in Abkhazia, there are coal deposits estimated at 80 milliard poods (about 1,300 million tons). The most powerful electric station in Trans-Caucasia is in Georgia on the River Kura, the Zemo-Avchal hydro-electric station of 36,000 horse power. The second most powerful station is the Abash Hydro Electrical Station; a number of other stations are either in the course of construction or are to be constructed shortly.

Communications.—The railway system of Georgia extends to 570 miles. The trunk line leading from Batum through Tiflis to Baku on the Caspian Sea has several narrow gauge branches on Georgian territory to the coal mines of Tkhibuli, to the port of Poti, to the manganese mines of Chiaturi, to the mineral springs of Borjom and the health resort Bakuriani, to the towns Signakh and Telavi, in Kakhetia, and to the Armenian frontier, across the coal mine district of Alverdi. The last branch divides in Armenia, going on the one side to Tabriz in Persia, and on the other to Erzerum in Anatolia. All the railway lines on the territory of Georgia belong to the State.

A railway line from Akhal-Senaki along the Black Sea coast, through Sukhum to Tuapse, is being constructed.

UKRAINE.

(UKRAINIAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC.)

The Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic was formed after the Soviet Revolution of November 7, 1917. In December 1920, the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic concluded a military and economic alliance with the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic and the following united People's Commissariats were formed:—For military and naval affairs, the Supreme Economic Council, Foreign Trade, Finance, Labour, Transport and Posts and Telegraphs.

On July 6, 1923, the Ukrainian Socialist Soviet Republic formed, together with the other Soviet Socialist Republics in Russia, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

The Ukrainian S.S.R. covers an area of 451,800 sq. kilometres (174,201 sq. miles) and includes the Autonomous Moldavian Republic.

The population in 1926 was 29,020,304.

Religion.—The population of the Ukraine belongs to a variety of churches, the chief being the Orthodox Greek Church, and the Catholic church. There are also some Protestants, and adherents of other Christian Sects, as well as Jews and others.

Education.—On January 1, 1926, there was a total of 17,832 elementary and secondary schools with 2,122,100 pupils; 165 kindergarten (8,700 pupils); 33 schools for defective children (1,600 pupils); 404 homes for normal children (47,000 pupils). The Republic has 1,032 various trade, technical, medical and similar schools and courses with 178,100 pupils. There were also 14,036 Higher Educational Institutions with 589,000 students. The all-Ukrainian Academy of Science is one of the most important institutions for the spread of the national culture of the Ukraine.

Finance.—The Budget of the U.S.S.R. in 1925-26 was 182,594,886 roubles.

Agriculture.—The total land capable of being cultivated is 38,395,000 dessiatines. Most of this land (about 29,000,000 dessiatines) consists of peasant farms, about 600,000 dessiatines is worked by aytels and communes. Soviet farms and experimental institutions have about 1,000,000 dessiatines, and the reserve for colonisation and concession is about 1,000,000 dessiatines. In 1925 there were a total of 4,904,500 peasant farms, the land at their disposal being 10,000,000 dessiatines more than they had before 1917. There were also in 1925, 6,300 peasant aytels, communes and land associations.

Industry.—Some of the industries of the Ukraine are amongst the most important in the whole of the U.S.S.R. The Ukraine accounts for 80 per cent. of the coal output of the Union, 70 per cent. of the pig iron, 50 per cent. steel, 60 per cent. of the iron ores, 85 per cent. of sugar, 66 per cent. to 70 per cent. of agricultural machinery, 95 per cent. of manganese ores.

Railways.—The total length of Railways of the U.S.S.R. at the end of 1925 was 10,180 miles.

WHITE RUSSIA.

(WHITE RUSSIAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC.)

The White Russian Soviet Socialist Republic was formed on January 1 1919. At present, its territory covers 126,300 square miles (48,751 square miles), and includes the former provinces of Minsk, Vitebsk, Mogilov, and a section of the Grodno provinces as well as the Gemel province. The most important towns of White Russia are Minsk, Vitepsk and Gomel. In 1926, the population of White Russia was 4,983,884, of whom 82·2 per cent. were White Russians, 3·4 per cent. Russians and Ukrainians, 10·6 per cent. Jews, 2·0 per cent. Poles and 1·1 per cent. others. About 16 per cent. of the population live in towns. White Russia forms one of the constituent Republics of the U.S.S.R. Its constitution is similar to that of the R.S.F.S.R.

Education.—There are 4,533 elementary schools with 325,200 pupils; 292 secondary schools with 96,900 pupils; 24 Technical Schools with 11,500 pupils; and 162 institutes for children with 8,700 inmates.

In addition there are 3 Workers' Faculties with 882 students, and 4 higher educational institutions in which the number of students on January 1, 1927, was 4,094. The 4 institutions are the White Russian State University, the Communist University, the Agricultural Academy and the Veterinary Institution. In addition, there is a Science Research Institute known as the Institute for White Russian culture and containing 83 members and 224 Research workers.

Agriculture.—The area under cultivation (in dessiatines) in 1926 was about 2,900,000 including about 110,000 flax and about 370,000 potatoes. The total number of heads of farm stock was 8,113,400, including 1,052,300 horses, 2,067,700 cattle, 2,937,700 sheep, and 2,055,500 pigs.

Industry.—Over the whole of the territory of White Russia, there were, at the end of 1925–26, 337 large scale industrial enterprises employing 30,213 workers and with a gross value of output in 1925–26 of 115,300,000 roubles.

SALVADOR.

(REPUBLICA DE EL SALVADOR.)

Constitution and Government.—In 1839 the Central American Federation, which had comprised the States of Guatemala, Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica, was dissolved, and Salvador became an independent Republic. Its Constitution, proclaimed in 1824 under the Federation, and modified in 1859, 1864, 1871, 1872, 1880, 1883, and 1886, vests the legislative power in a Congress of 42 Deputies, 3 for each department. The election is for one year, and by universal suffrage. The executive is in the hands of a President, whose tenure of office is limited to four years.

President of the Republic.—Dr. Pio Romero Bosque. Term of office, from March 1, 1927, to March 1, 1931.

Vice-President.—Señor Gustavo Vides.

The administrative affairs of the Republic are carried on, under the President, by a ministry of four members, having charge of the department, of:—Foreign relations, Justice, and Instruction; War and Marine; Interiors Government and Agriculture; Finance, Charities, and Public Credit.

Area and Population.—The area of the Republic is 34,126 square kilometres, or 13,176 English square miles, divided into 14 departments. Estimated population (Jan. 1, 1927). 1,657,000. Aboriginal and mixed races constitute the bulk of the population, Ladinos or Mestizos being returned as numbering 1,307,200, and Indians 326,800. The capital is San Salvador, with 87,900 inhabitants. Other towns are Santa Ana, population 74,200;

San Miguel, 37,000; Santa Tecla, 28,000; San Vicente, 33,000; Sonsonate, 16,800.

The number of births in 1926 was 60,391; the number of deaths 37,405. Of the deaths, 19,315 were males and 18,090 females.

Religion, Instruction and Justice.—The dominant religion is Roman Catholicism. There is an archbishop in San Salvador and a bishop at Santa Ana and San Miguel respectively. Education is free and obligatory. There were in Salvador, in 1926, 849 public primary schools, with 1,555 teachers and 51,933 enrolled pupils (average attendance, 35,063). There were also 37 private primary schools and 61 municipal schools. There are 10 travelling teachers for the rural districts. Secondary education is given (1922) at the National Institute (free) and at 16 private Lyceums. There are also commercial schools, and there are two normal schools, one for men (83 students) and one for women (77). There is a National University with faculties of jurisprudence, medicine, pharmacy, dentistry, and engineering. Expenditure on public instruction in 1926, 1,870,000 colones.

Justice is administered by the Supreme Court of Justice, one court of third instance (in the capital) and several courts of first and second instance, besides a number of minor courts. All judges of second and third instance are elected by the National Assembly for a term of 2 years, while the judges of first instance are appointed by the Supreme Court for a similar period. In 1922, 1,917 crimes of all kinds were committed in the Republic.

Finance.—Revenue and expenditure for five years:—

	1923-24	1924-25	1925-26	1926-27	1927-28
	£	£	£	£	£
Revenue . . . .	1,373,655	1,851,355	2,022,888	2,067,000	2,225,100
Expenditure . . .	1,360,682	1,823,000	2,018,555	2,066,000	2,222,800

The total outstanding debt on December 31, 1926, was 48,059,000 colones, of which 88 per cent. was internal debt, and 12 per cent. external debt.

Defence.—The army may be divided into three parts: (1) available force, 78 officers, 512 petty officers, and 15,554 men; (2) forces that can be made available at short notice, 49 officers, 356 petty officers, and 4,000 men; (3) reserve force, 251 officers, 1,743 petty officers, and 56,151 men. Total, 378 officers, 2,611 petty officers, and 75,705 men. The army is organised in 3 divisions of 12 infantry, 2 cavalry and 4 artillery regiments. In case of war, military service is compulsory from 18 to 50 years of age. The permanent armed force for 1926 was 3,000 men.

Production and Commerce.—The population of Salvador is largely engaged in agriculture. The chief product is coffee, under which in 1923 there were about 140,000 acres, with some 100,000,000 trees, producing 60,000 tons. In value coffee alone forms 80 per cent. of the exports. Germany is the principal buyer. Other agricultural products are maize (250,000 tons), cacao, rubber 30,000 kilos exported in 1926), tobacco, henequén (14,000 tons), sugar (production 1926, 21,000 tons). In the national forests are found dye woods and such hard woods as mahogany, cedar, and walnut. Balsam trees also abound. The mineral wealth of the Republic includes gold, silver, copper, iron and mercury, but mining operations languish.

The imports (subject to duty) and the exports have been as follows in five years (in pounds sterling):—

	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports . . . . .	1,527,850	2,060,795	2,324,111	3,419,000	3,374,434
Exports . . . . .	3,242,761	2,346,253	5,415,000	3,474,000	5,174,611

Customs receipts, 1926, 13,462,000 colones.

The trade is chiefly with the United States, the United Kingdom, and France. Imports from the United States, France, Germany, Italy, Spain, Belgium and Switzerland enjoy preferential treatment under most-favoured-nation treaties with Salvador. The chief imports are cottons, hardware, flour, drugs and chemical products. The chief exports are coffee, henequén, and rubber; the sugar surplus is exported but it is small.

Total trade between Salvador and the U.K. (Board of Trade Returns) for 5 years:—

	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Salvador to U. K. .	16,264	36,267	172,737	40,279	47,264
Exports to Salvador from U. K. .	426,985	503,696	628,682	615,026	376,319

Shipping and Communications.—In 1926, 653 steamers entered at the ports of the Republic, with a tonnage of 1,405,000

A British-owned railway connects the port of Acajutla with Santa Ana and La Ceiba; with this system San Salvador, the capital, is connected—a distance of 65 miles. Another line (the American-owned International Railways of Central America) runs from the eastern to the western boundary of Salvador. The line from Mega to the capital with its extension has a total length of 156 miles. Another short railway connects the capital with Santa Tecla. Total length of railway open (1927), 330 miles, all of narrow gauge. There are 1,476 miles of national road in the Republic, including a fine highway completed in 1926 between San Salvador and La Libertad. Of these, 353 miles are suitable for motors.

In 1927, there were 192 post offices, which handled nearly 10 million pieces of mail matter. In 1926 there were 254 telegraph offices, 1,520 miles of telegraph wire and 2,650 miles of telephone wire. There are 275 telephone-exchanges and 2,777 telephones. A radio transmitting and receiving station at San Salvador maintains communications with Latin America. The All America Cables maintain a station at San Salvador.

Money, Weights and Measures.

MONEY.

There are 3 banks of issue, the Banco Salvadoreño (paid-up capital, 4,000,000 pesos silver), Banco Occidental (paid-up capital, 6,000,000 pesos silver), and Banco Agrícola Commercial (paid-up capital, 1,540,000 pesos silver). On December 31, 1926, they had notes in circulation to the value of 15,904,868 colones, with a gold cover amounting to 65 per cent.

According to the law of July 16, 1920, the theoretical monetary unit of Salvador is the colon, a coin containing 836 milligrams of gold 900 millesimos fine, and equal in value to 50 cents. (United States currency). The colon, which represents 100 centavos, is issued in denominations of 5, 10, 20, and 40 colones. Auxiliary silver coins are minted in denominations of 20, 50, and 100 centavos each, and nickel coins in denominations of 1, 3, 5, and 10 centavos each.

National gold coins and gold coins of the United States of all denominations are unlimited legal tender, the United States coins having a fixed value of 2 colones to the dollar. National and United States silver coins are legal tender in an amount representing up to 10 per cent. of each payment, and national nickel coins in amounts up to 2 per cent. of each payment.

The coinage of silver must not exceed 10 per cent of the total fiduciary circulation and that of nickel must not be in excess of 5 per cent. of said circulation, and in no case shall nickel be coined in an amount exceeding 1,000,000 colones.

With the exception of United States gold and silver coin, foreign money is not a legal tender in the Republic, and payments contracted for in such money shall be liquidated by the equivalent of the money in question tendered in United States gold, or in colones, at the rate of exchange of the place of payment on the date of settlement.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

On January 1, 1886, the metric system of weights and measures was made obligatory. But other units are still commonly in use, of which the principal are as follows:—

Libra . . .	= 1.043 lb. av.		Arroba . . .	= 25.35 lb. av.
Quintal . . .	= 104.3 lb. av.		Fanega . . .	= 1.5745 bushel.

SAN MARINO.

The independent Republic of San Marino, which claims to be the oldest State in Europe, is embraced in the area of Italy. A new treaty of friendship with the Kingdom of Italy was concluded June 28, 1907, revised in 1908 and in 1914. The Republic has extradition treaties with England, Belgium, Holland and United States. The legislative power of the Republic is vested in the Grand Council of 60 members elected by popular vote, a third of whom are renewable every three years, and two of whom are appointed every six months to act as Regents (Capitani reggenti). The regents exercise executive power, assisted by various nominated congresses, viz., Congresso Economico d. Stato, Congresso dei Legati, Congresso degli Studi, Congresso militare. The administration of justice is under magistrates, who are Italian citizens. There are several elementary schools and one high school, the diplomas of which are recognized by Italian universities.

The frontier line is 24 miles in length, area is 38 square miles, and population (December 1925) 12,952.

The revenue and expenditure for 1926-27 balanced at 4,145,179 lire, and for 1925-26 at 4,529,296 lire. There is no public debt. The militia consists of all able-bodied citizens between the ages of 16 and 55, with the exception of teachers and students. The chief exports are wine, cattle, and the building stone quarried on Mount Titano. Italian currency is in general use, but the Republic issues separate postage stamps. An electric railway from Rimini to the city of San Marino is under construction.

SERB, CROAT, AND SLOVENE STATE.

(KRALJEVINA SRBA, HRVATA, I SLOVENACA.)

Reigning King.

Alexander I, born December 17, 1888, son of King Peter I and Duchess Zorka, daughter of the late Nicholas I, ex-King of Montenegro; married on June 8, 1922, to Princess Marie, born January 9, 1899, daughter of King Ferdinand I of Rumania; Prince Regent from June 24, 1914 to August 16, 1921, when his father died. On November 6, 1921, he swore to the constitution and received full royal rights.

Sons of the King.—Prince Peter, born September 6, 1923<sup>c</sup>; Prince Tomislav, born January 19, 1928.

Brother of the King.—Prince George, born September 8, 1887; on March 27, 1909, he renounced his right of succession to the throne.

Sister of the King.—Princess Hélène, born November 4, 1884; married, September 9, 1911 to Prince Ivan Constantinovitch, son of the Grand Duke Constantine Constantinovitch of Russia.

The founder of the dynasty was Kara-George (i.e. Black George) Petrovitch, who, in 1804, was proclaimed Commander-in-Chief in Serbia, but was murdered in 1817, leaving two sons—Alexis, born 1801, and Alexander, born 1806. In 1842 Alexander was chosen reigning Prince by the Skupshchina or National Assembly, and the title was confirmed by the Porte, but the dignity was not hereditary. In 1858 Alexander had to abdicate and was banished, and in 1885 he died in exile. King Peter was the third of his house who have ruled in Serbia. He succeeded to the throne on the murder of King Alexander of the Obrenovitch dynasty; was elected King by the Skupshchina June 2 (O.S.), and assumed royal rights and duties June 12 (O.S.), 1903.

The independence of Serbia from Turkey was established by Article 34 of the Treaty of Berlin, signed July 13, 1878, and was proclaimed by Prince (afterwards King) Milan at his capital, August 22, 1878. The King's civil list amounts to 18,000,000 dinars, plus 6,000,000 French francs.

After the Revolution in Austria-Hungary, Slovenia, Croatia, Dalmatia, and Bosnia declared their independence, and a movement commenced for the formation of the State of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes (Yugoslavia) by the union of the Austro-Serbian, Croatian, and Slovenian parts of the former Austro-Hungarian monarchy with Serbia. The union with the Croats and Slovenes was proclaimed on December 1, 1918. In regard to Montenegro there was some doubt as to her position, but on the death of King Nicholas on March 1, 1921, the country was definitely joined to Greater Serbia.

On December 29, 1918, the first Ministry of the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes was formed, representing all the Yugoslav provinces, and the Allied Governments were informed of the creation of the new State, which has received recognition. By the Treaty of Rapallo the boundaries of the new State on the side of Italy were definitely determined, except as regards Fiume, an agreement on which was not reached till January 1924, Fiume going to Italy and Baros to Yugoslavia. On December 5, 1923, Serbia obtained from Greece a free zone in the harbour of Salonica.

Constitution and Government.

The Constitution of the Kingdom of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes, adopted on June 28, 1921, provides for a single chamber called Narodna Skupština (National Assembly) consisting of 315 representatives. The King is Commander-in-Chief of the Forces, and can declare war should the country be attacked or war be declared against it; he can also make peace. He summons Parliament and has the right of dissolving it. Parliament is elected for four years on the basis of one deputy for every 40,000 inhabitants.

The elections for the Constituent Assembly, held on September 11, 1927, resulted as follows:—111 Radicals, 23 Independent Democrats, 61 Democrats, 62 National Agrarian Party (Raditch Party), 9 Agrarians, 18 Mahomedans, 21 Yugoslavian People's Party, and 10 members of other parties.

Religion.

By Article 12 of the Constitution, all religions recognised by law enjoy the same rights. According to the census of 1921 there were of the total population :—Greek-Orthodox, 5,602,227 (47 per cent.); Roman Catholics, 4,735,154 (39 per cent.); Greek Catholics, 41,597; Protestants, 216,847 (2 per cent.); Mahomedans, 1,337,687 (11 per cent.); Jews, 64,159.

In the new territories are a large number of Roman Catholics; there are Roman Catholic bishops in Prizren and Skoplje. In June, 1914, Serbia concluded a concordat with Rome. Under the concordat a Roman Catholic Archbishopric of Belgrade is established, with jurisdiction over Roman Catholics within the old frontiers of Serbia. After the union of all the Orthodox Serbs in the kingdom, the Church became a Patriarchate under the rule of the Patriarch and Holy Synod for ecclesiastical purposes.

The Serbian Orthodox Church is governed by the Synod of Bishops. All the ecclesiastical officials are under the control of the Minister of Public Worship.

Instruction.

Elementary education is compulsory, and, in all the primary schools under the Ministry of Education, it is free. In 1925-26 there were 7,208 elementary schools with 17,576 teachers and 786,324 pupils. The number of secondary schools was 173 with 3,595 teachers and 83,399 pupils. There were also 44 training colleges for elementary school teachers with 454 instructors and 7,549 students. Of civil schools there were 155, with 1,423 teachers and 26,635 pupils. There were also 16 commercial schools with 159 teachers and 2,535 pupils. In Zagreb (Agram) there was 1 veterinary school (founded in 1919), with 4 teachers and 62 pupils; an engineering school with 17 teachers and 340 pupils; and 3 naval academies with 26 teachers and 163 pupils.

There are three Universities in the Kingdom: At Belgrade, founded in 1838, with (1925-26) 143 professors and 6,114 students; at Zagreb (Agram), with 145 professors and 3,175 students; and at Ljubljana, founded in 1920, with 72 professors and 1,031 students; a Law School at Subotica with 13 professors and 306 students; a Philosophical Faculty at Skoplje with 10 professors and 120 students; and an Economic-commercial Academy at Zagreb with 8 professors and 460 students.

In May, 1926, the Yugoslavian war debt to U.S.A. was funded at 51 million dollars.

Defence.

The organisation of the army of the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes is based on the law of 1923. Compulsory service is in force for men between the ages of 21 and 45, and, as a last defence, men can be taken as fit to carry arms from the ages of 18 to 21 years and from 45 to 50 years. Service in the active army is for 10 years, of which 18 months are with the colours, the remainder of the service being spent on leave subject to recall for training. From 31 to 38, service is with the 2nd base of the reserve, from 38 to 45 with the 3rd base.

The kingdom is divided into five army commands subdivided into divisional and regimental districts.

In 1927, the peace strength of the active army was 6,433 officers and 109,509 men organised as follows:

	Divisions.	Brigades.	Regiments.	Battalions.	Companies.	M.G. Comps.	Squadrons.	M.G. Squadrons.	Flights.	Batteries.
Infantry . . . . .	16	16	55	174	402	58	—	—	—	—

The strength on mobilisation is approximately 1,000,000. Military education is provided by the Military Academy at Belgrade for the training of cadets for officers of all arms and by the superior course of the Academy for the training of staff officers and commanders.

The infantry is armed with quick-firing rifles of French pattern and those taken as booty from Austria-Hungary; the artillery with French quick-firing guns (Schneider-Canet system) and those taken as booty from Austria-Hungary, which are of various models.

The Royal Yugoslav navy is under the command of a Vice-Admiral, a special Naval Department being maintained at the War Office for technical and administrative purposes. The organisation comprises the seagoing squadron; the river flotilla; the air service. The seagoing squadron, composed of 12 torpedo-boats, 6 mine-layers, 2 submarines, and a number of smaller vessels, is used mainly for training purposes. A small ex-German Cruiser, Dalmacija, is being refitted and re-armed to serve as flagship. Two more submarines are being built in France. The main base is at Kotor (Cattaro), where there are facilities for repairs and docking, and a naval engineering college. There are training establishments at Gruz (Gravosa) (for officers) and Šibenik (Sebenico) (for warrant and petty officers). The river flotilla includes 4 monitors, armed with 4·7 inch guns, besides patrol vessels, motor boats, mining launches, and other small craft. The air service consists of sea-plane detachments attached to the seagoing squadron and to the river flotilla. The total active service personnel of the navy is in the neighbourhood of 2,500 officers and men, with a further 700 in reserve.

Production and Industry.

Yugoslavia, with a total area of 24,848,829 hectares, has a cultivated area of 11,354,405 hectares (1926) distributed as follows (in hectares):—crop lands, 6,111,691 (54 per cent.); gardens, 123,914 (1·1 per cent.); grass lands, 1,681,568 (15 per cent.); pastures, 2,866,630 (25 per cent.); vines, 175,016 (1·54 per cent.).

The area and production of the principal crops for 2 years were:—

There were in 1926, 50,852,151 plum trees in the whole kingdom (average yield of each 19·35 kilos), 6,772,739 apple trees (average yield 28·83 kilos), 3,619,670 pear trees (average yield 26·72 kilos), 4,222,428 olive trees (chiefly in Dalmatia). Tobacco production of Yugoslavia in 1926, 14,821 tons. Silk culture is of importance; cocoon production in 1927, 970 metric tons; number of silk growers, 44,000. In 1926-27 the output of sugar was 70,018 metric tons.

The catch of sea-fish in 1925 was 3,986,862 kilos, valued at 35,355,136 dinars.

In January, 1927, there were in Yugoslavia 1,227,707 horses, mules, and asses; 3,787,538 head of cattle; 7,932,875 sheep; 2,806,182 pigs; and 1,721,268 goats.

The forest area of Yugoslavia is 18,186,427 acres (1926). The largest forest area is in Bosnia and Herzegovina (6,380,800 acres). The forests consist largely of beech, oak, and fir, but are less profitable than, with proper management, they might be. The normal timber cut is about 530 million cubic feet per annum.

Yugoslavia has considerable mineral resources, including coal and lignite, iron, copper ore, gold, lead, chrome, antimony and cement. The total output of coal was 4,140,752 tons in 1926; 4,152,126 tons in 1925; and 4,185,240 tons in 1924. The most important iron mines are at Varesb and Ljubija in Bosnia and there are also considerable siderite and limonite iron ores between Prijedor and Sanski Most. Copper ore is exploited chiefly at Bor (Serbia); output in 1926, 220,005 tons; in 1925, 176,058 tons. The principal lead mines are at Mežica (Slovenia); production of lead ore in 1926, 79,531 tons; in 1925, 78,549. Chrome mines are found in the southern part of Serbia and more especially in the neighbourhood of Skoplje (Uskub); output of chrome ore in 1926, 15,983 tons; in 1925, 12,160 tons. There are 2 antimony mines in western Serbia (Podrinje) which produced 740 tons in 1926; and in 1925, 519 tons of antimony ore; 54,816 tons of salt were produced in 1924, 58,532 in 1925, and 59,949 in 1926; bauxite in 1926, 131,828, (79,032 in 1925), manganese 1,244, (2,716, in 1925), pyrites 53,376 tons (38,988 tons in 1925).

Oil-boring operations are in progress at several places in Croatia.

Of the industries, flour milling is one of the most important, especially in Bačka; there are 50 large flour mills in the country; brewing and distilling are extensively carried on, as are also cotton spinning and weaving, tanning, boot-making, pottery, and iron-working. Carpet weaving is one of the oldest industries in Serbia. The product is manufactured principally at Pirot, in south-eastern Serbia, and the carpets are named after that place. The chief characteristics of these carpets are that they are made of pure wool, dyed with natural colours by local dyers, who pride themselves that the process of dyeing and colour mixing is a secret transmitted by father to son, and is known only to the inhabitants of Pirot. Meat-packing is also becoming important, and there is also an important cardboard and paper-making industry.

Shipping and Communications.

Yugoslavia in 1925 possessed 147 steamers of 97,597 (net) tons and 656 sailing vessels of 8,282 (net) tons.

In 1925, 11,301 sailing vessels of 442,227 net tons and 12,642 steamships of 18,494,067 net tons entered and cleared the ports of the kingdom.

Yugoslavia has (1926) 9,940 miles of railway, of which 6,725 miles are of normal gauge, and 3,215 miles of narrow gauge. With the exception of about 351 miles belonging to a private company, all the lines are State owned.

The first Yugoslav air-line for passengers between Belgrade and Zagreb was opened in February, 1928.

Of highways there are (1925) 21,139 miles, many of them in a ruinous condition. Total length of waterways, principally the Danube, the Save, the Drave, and the Tisa, 1,697 miles. The navigation on the Danube and Save is in the hands of the Navigation Syndicate of the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes.

There were (1926) 15,130 miles of telegraph line and 11,590 miles of telephone line.

There were 910 State post-offices and 1,482 communal post-offices in 1926. In 1926 Yugoslavia had 1,108 telegraph stations, 1,007 telephone stations, and 156 railway telegraph stations.

Banking and Credit.

The principal bank is the National Bank of the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, in Belgrade, with the nominal capital of dinars 50,000,000 in coined gold, of which 28,229,100 dinars are paid up. To cover the issue of new bank notes the State has pledged with the Bank its domains estimated at 2,000,000,000 dinars. The Bank may issue notes equal to three times the amount of the metallic deposits it holds. Notes in circulation on February 22, 1928, 5,339,760,090 dinars; gold, 89,176,342 dinars; silver, 17,575,398 dinars. The Export Bank, with agencies abroad, assists in the exportation of Yugoslav produce. The Državna Hipotekarna Banka or State Mortgage Bank, the only large State institution of the kind in Yugoslavia, makes advances to a large amount for agricultural operations. On December 31, 1927, there were 703 banks in Yugoslavia, with a total capital of 1,863,000,000 dinars, and reserves of 593,000,000 dinars. The deposits totalled 7,474,000,000 dinars.

Money, Weights and Measures.

Yugoslavia has the decimal system for its weights, and measures. The dinar, the unit of currency, is equal to the French franc. In circulation are bank-notes of 5, 10, 100, and 1000 dinars; 100 paras = 1 dinar; metallic coins of 0.50 dinar, 1 dinar, and 2 dinars.

The metric weights and measures have been in practical use since the commencement of 1883. The wagon of 10 metric tons is frequently used as a unit of measure for coal, roots and corn.

SIAM.

(SAYAM, OR MUANG-THAI.)

Reigning King.

Prajadhipok, of Sukhodaya, born November 8, 1893, succeeded to the throne on the death of his brother, Rama VI., on November 26, 1925, being the seventh monarch of the present reigning dynasty.

Government.

The executive power is exercised by the King advised by a Council of State consisting of four elder statesmen of the Royal House. There is also, by the Royal Decree of January 10, 1895, a Legislative Council composed of the Ministers of State (Senabodi) and others, not less than 12 in number, appointed by the Crown. The total membership is now 40. In the preamble of the Royal Decree it is stated that the object of this body is to revise, amend, and complete the legislation of the kingdom. It is to meet at least once a week, and it may appoint committees of 3 or 4 members, with the addition of competent outsiders who must not outnumber the members. An important article gives the Legislative Council power to promulgate laws without the Royal assent in the event of any temporary disability of the Crown. At other times the Royal signature is indispensable. This Council has shown considerable legislative activity.

The Siamese dominions are divided, as from April 1, 1926, into 14 circles (Monthons), of which 13 have each a Lord-Lieutenant, deriving authority direct from the King, and having under him subordinate governors over the various parts of his circle. These Lords-Lieutenant and their subordinate governors and other officials have now complete administrative control even in the North and South-West where local hereditary chiefs formerly held sway. The circle of Bangkok (which includes the capital) is under the control of a Lord Prefect. The 14 circles are subdivided into 79 provinces (Changwats), 413 districts (Ampurs), and 5,109 communes (Tambons).

Area and Population.

Siam is called by its inhabitants Thai, or Muang-Thai, which means 'free,' or 'the kingdom of the free.' The word Siam is probably identical with Shan, applied in Burma to the Lao race, as well as to the Shan proper and the Siamese.

The limits of the Kingdom of Siam have varied much at different periods of its history. The boundary between Burma and N.W. Siam was delimited in 1891. By the Anglo-French Convention of April, 1904, the agreement of 1896 was confirmed, and its provisions more clearly defined, the territories to the west of the Menam and the Gulf of Siam being recognised as in the British sphere, and those to the east in the French. In 1904, the Luang Prabang territory to the west of the Mekong was acknowledged by Siam to belong to France, and the provinces of Maluprey and Barsak (west of the Mekong) were also transferred to French rule, so that an area of about 7,800 square miles passed from Siamese possession. On March 23, 1907, a new boundary in this region was accepted by Siam whereby the provinces of Battambang, (Siamese, Pratabong) Siem Rap, and Sisophon were ceded to France, while the strip of coast to the south with the port of Krat returned to Siam. At the same time a rectification of the boundary was made in the Luang Prabang region, whereby a tract of the Laos country was restored to Siam. By these arrangements the territory of Cambodia is increased by about 7,000 square miles. The treaty also provides for the future jurisdiction of the Siamese courts over all French Asiatic subjects and protégés in Siam, under certain conditions.

A treaty for a modification of British extra-territorial rights in Siam and for the cession of the Siamese tributary States of Kelantan, Trengganu and Kedah to Great Britain was signed at Bangkok on March 10, 1909. A new general and a new commercial treaty between Great Britain and Siam were signed on July 14, 1925, and ratified May 10, 1926, giving Siam full jurisdictional and fiscal autonomy, subject to certain limitations. The three states have an area of about 15,000 square miles, and a population estimated at over 600,000, of whom about 300,000 are in Kelantan.

The area of Siam is 200,148 square miles, about 45,000 being in the Malay Peninsula. The first detailed census in Siam was taken in 1905, but included only 12 of the circles or Monthon. The first census of the whole country was taken in 1909.

The census figures for 1911-12 gave a population of 8,266,408. According to the revised census figures for 1919-20 the population was 9,207,355, of whom 4,599,662 were males, and 4,607,693 females. The following table gives the details for each circle:—

Of the total population the 'Thai' number well over 8,000,000.

The estimated population for 1925-26 is 9,831,000.

In 1925-26 the deck passengers arriving in Bangkok by sea numbered 87,717, mostly from Hong Kong and China; those departing numbered 56,862.

Religion and Instruction.

The prevailing religion is Buddhism. On March 31, 1926, there were 16,185 Buddhist temples, and 129,206 priests.

The Minister of Education is responsible for education throughout the country, with the exception of certain Departmental Schools, such as the Military, Naval, and Law Colleges, and the Police School, and of certain schools under direct Royal Patronage.

On March 31, 1925, Government schools numbered 343 (including 236 secondary departments) with 47,268 pupils and 1,958 teachers. There were also (1923-24), 65 special (technical) departments in Government schools, with 1,101 pupils, principally for the training of teachers. Local schools, run by the local authority but under Departmental inspection, numbered in 1924-25 4,707 with 527,603 pupils (of whom over 37 per cent. were girls) and 9,872 teachers. Private schools numbered 573, with 27,435 pupils and 1,446 teachers, including schools connected with American, French and English Missions. Over 90 per cent. of local schools and 60 per cent. of the Government schools are situated in Temples.

The Chulankarana University was inaugurated at Bangkok, in 1917, for medicine, political science, literature, engineering and natural science.

The Hospital service under the Red Cross Society of Siam includes a Pasteur Institute.

Finance.

£2,600,000	stg.	7%	loan 1922.
£3,000,000	stg.	6%	loan 1924.

Up to March 31, 1925, the amount spent on works of development was: construction of railways, £14,054,821; irrigation, £1,804,921; Bangkok waterworks, £394,844.

A British officer occupies the position of Financial Adviser, and there are other British officers holding advisory positions under the Government, more especially in the Forests, Survey, Justice, Customs, Mining, and Education departments. There are also a number of Europeans of other nationalities in various Departments.

Defence.

Under the Military Service Act of 1917 every able-bodied man is liable to serve (a) two years with the colours; (b) seven years in the first reserve, with a maximum service of two months per annum; (c) ten years in the second reserve, with a maximum service of 30 days per annum; (d) five years in the third reserve, with a maximum service of 15 days per annum.

The army is divided into 10 Divisions, grouped into 3 Army Corps, and 1 independent division. Each division consists of 2 regiments of infantry, 1 regiment of either cavalry or chasseurs, 1 group of artillery, 1 company of machine guns, and 1 Ambulance Corps. The engineers are grouped into special regiments and are employed mainly in railway construction and the cadastral survey of Siam. Aviation schools were started in 1914, and a Flying Corps has been formed. It is chiefly employed in the development of civil aviation.

Siam maintains a small naval force, which consists of five gunboats, three destroyers (including the ex-British destroyer Radiant, renamed Phra Ruang), four torpedo-boats, the Royal yacht Maha Chakri, and various small craft; the ex-British sloop Havant, renamed Chow Phryya, serves as a sea-going training ship. There are 1,000 men available for service afloat and 1,000 marines, besides a reserve of 20,000.

At the mouth of the Menam River are the Paknam forts. The bar prevents ships of more than 13 feet draught from ascending to Bangkok. The naval arsenal dock has recently been reconstructed.

Production and Industry.

Forced labour is still exacted from the rural population, but recent enactments have made calls for it far less frequent, and a poll-tax, varying in amounts in the different districts, is now levied on all adult males with practically no exemptions. The cost of labour is probably higher than in any other Oriental country. Chinese coolies do the chief part of both skilled and unskilled labour in the south, especially in the mills and in mining; while in the north forest work is confined almost entirely to Laos, Burmese, Karens, and Khamus.

To the north of Bangkok, large tracts of land, formerly lying waste, have been opened up by the Royal Irrigation Department, which has connected by a canal the Menam and Bangpakong rivers, and has constructed numbers of smaller canals. In 1916 the Government, acting on the advice of an irrigation expert lent by the Government of India, started work on the Prasak South Canal Project. Actual irrigation from these works commenced in 1922. The area to be protected is estimated at 100,000 hectares.

The chief produce of the country is rice, which forms the national food and the staple article of export. The figures of the rice crop for the last four years are as follows: 1923-24, area, 3,863,200 acres, yield, 2,191,600 tons; 1924-25, area, 4,064,600 acres, yield, 2,845,000 tons; 1925-26, area, 4,076,900 acres, yield, 2,209,900 tons; 1926-27, area, 4,076,800 acres, yield (of paddy), 5,184,560 tons. In Bangkok and district there are some 80 rice mills.

The live-stock on March 31, 1926, consisted of 8,389 elephants, 247,158 horses and ponies, 4,013,882 bullocks, and 4,216,127 buffaloes.

Much of Upper Siam is dense forest, and the cutting of teak is an important industry, almost entirely in British hands. Siam teak wood is mainly produced in the north of Siam, the dry logs being floated by river to Bangkok during the rainy months of the year. In 1926-27 the exports of teak amounted to 59,389 tons, valued at 747,144*l*. The forests are under the control of a Siamese conservator, aided by several British officers. The export of rubber is now negligible, but planting of rubber trees is proceeding in the Malay Peninsula.

The mineral resources of Siam are extensive and varied, including tin, tungsten, wolfram, coal and iron, zinc, manganese, antimony, probably quicksilver. Tin mining on a considerable scale is pursued on the island of Puket (or Junk Ceylon) and also in the northern portion of the province of Puket at Renong on the mainland, and the ore is found in ever-increasing quantities in other parts of the Siamese portion of the Malay Peninsula; where also wolfram is now being extracted in considerable quantity. The total output of metallic tin in 1924-25 was 133,588 piculs (7,952 tons); in 1925-26 was 132,461 piculs (7,865 tons); in 1926-27 was 170,348 piculs (10,140 tons).

Commerce.

The foreign trade of the Kingdom for the past four years is as follows:—

Shipping and Communications.

In 1926-27, 1,042 vessels of 1,131,105 tons entered and 1,041 of 1,127,984 tons cleared the port of Bangkok. Of those entering 245 of 317,024 tons and of those clearing 244 of 316,161 tons were British.

On June 30, 1926, 1,631 miles of State Railways were open to traffic and 281 miles were under construction. The Northern Line runs through Nakorn Lampang to Chiangmai, the extreme northern terminus. The Southern Line runs from Bangkok down the Peninsula to the frontier station of Padang Besar, where it connects with the Federated Malay States Railway from Penang, and to Singapore. Another line branching off from Haad Yai runs along the East Coast of the Peninsula to Sungei Golok, where it connects with the Federated Malay States Line. There are branches to Singora, Nakorn, Sritamaraj and Kantang. The North-Eastern Line is being extended from Korat to Khonkaen. The Korat-Ubol line has now been opened to traffic as far as Buriram. Both these lines should be completed by 1928-1929. The extension from Krabinburi, the present terminus of the Eastern Line, to Aranya Pradesa on the Cambodian frontier was completed in 1927. Since January 1922, a through express service between Bangkok and Penang has been introduced, the distance being traversed in 34 hours. A similar service between Bangkok and Chiangmai on the Northern Line was inaugurated in November, 1922, the journey being accomplished in 26 hours. Arrangements have been made, and the work is proceeding, for the construction of a railway bridge across the Menam Chao Phrya, whereby the system on the east bank of the river and the Southern Railway system will be linked together. All State Railways are under one management.

Private lines of an aggregate length of 66 miles include those (worked by companies) from Bangkok to Paknam at the mouth of the Menam, and from Bangkok to Tachin and Meklong on the coast to the west of the Menam, also from Thonburi to Bang Bua Thong, together with a tramway connecting the Northern Line (Northern branch) with Phrabat.

In 1925-26 there were 455 post offices and agencies. The inland mail matter received at the different offices for delivery consisted of 6,764,183 letters, 2,479,230 post cards, 3,553,719 pieces of printed matter, and 395,873 pieces of other postal matter. For foreign countries the returns of mails dispatched were 512,252 letters, 35,676 post cards, 109,161 printed matter, 22,603 other postal matter. Foreign letters received 981,459, post cards 93,756, printed matter 772,642, other postal matter 153,751.

There were (1925-26) 318 telegraph offices. Number of inland telegrams 135,575, of foreign telegrams, 106,478 dispatched and 154,603 received. Length of line, 4,390 miles; length of wire, 7,535 miles.

There were (1926) seven telephone exchanges, and 1,935 instruments. A complete set of new instruments from Sweden for the telephone exchange in Bangkok were installed in 1919.

Three wireless stations on the Telefunken system have been erected, one at Bangkok, one at Singora, and one at Koh-Khan. The two former are under the control of the Siamese naval authorities, the third under that of the Post and Telegraph Department.

A new high-powered station, also on the Telefunken system, is at present in course of erection at Bangkok. It is expected that it will be open in the course of the year 1928.

Money, Weights and Measures.

In Bangkok there are branches of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, the Chartered Bank of India, the Banque de l'Indo-Chine, the Mercantile Bank of India, and the Bank of Canton. A number of Chinese Banks have established branches here during recent years. There is also a branch of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China at Phuket. A Siamese bank, formerly with a German but now with a British manager, was established under Royal Charter in 1906, with the name of the Siam Commercial Bank, Limited. The Government in 1902 began to issue currency notes (5, 10, 20, 100 and 1,000 ticals, and since October, 1918, 1 tical notes). On March 31, 1903, there was 181,203½ worth of currency notes in circulation; on March 31, 1925, 10,735,305½. The currency notes are temporarily inconvertible.

On April 1, 1913, the Siamese Treasury Savings Bank was opened with 529 depositors. By March 31, 1926, the number was 12,985, with a total deposit of 195,074½.

The silver tical (officially called baht), weighs 15 grams, .900 fine. By an amendment to the Gold Standard Act, dated Sept. 4, 1919, the value of the tical has been fixed at 1s. 8d., or 12 ticals = 1£ sterling, the gold value of the tical being equal to 61 centigrammes of pure gold. The currency actually in use is mainly in the form of notes, of various denominations of from one to 1,000 ticals. In addition to the tical, the following coins are now actually in use:—(silver), the Satung = ¼-tical; the 2-Satung piece = ½-tical; (nickel), the 10-Satang piece, = 1/10 of a tical; the 5-Satang piece, = 1/20 of a tical; and (bronze) the Satang, = 1/100 of a tical. The fineness of the subsidiary silver coins (2-Satung and 1-Satang pieces) was, by the Gold Standard Act, fixed at .800, but in July, 1919, the fineness was reduced to .650.

In 1924 a law was passed for the introduction of the metric system as optional in 1925, to become compulsory in 1930. The metric system has already been adopted in many of the Government departments and on State Railways. The customary measures of weight are:—1 Tical = 15 grams or approximately .53 oz.; 4 Ticals = 1 Tamlung (60 grams or 2.1 oz.); 20 Tamlungs = 1 Chang (1.2 kilograms or 2 lb. 10.3 oz.); 1 Picul or Hap = 60.48 kilograms = 133½ lb. = 100 Catties of 1½ lb., which is the catty usually used in commerce.

The unit of length is the Wah. The measures of length are:—1 Niew = .83 inches; 12 Niu = 1 Keub (10 inches); 2 Keup = 1 Sarak (20 inches); 4 Sarak = 1 Wah (80 inches); 20 Wah = 1 Sen (133 feet); 400 Sen = 1 Fote (10 miles, roughly). For square measure the unit is the Rai = .39 acres, and for capacity the kanahn = 1/10 litre.

Government and Constitution.

I. CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

The present Constitution of Spain, drawn up by the Government and laid before a Cortes Constituyentes, elected for its ratification, March 27, 1876, was proclaimed June 30, 1876. It enacts that Spain shall be a constitutional monarchy, the executive resting in the King, and the power to make laws 'in the Cortes with the King.' The Cortes are composed of a Senate and Congress, equal in authority. There are three classes of senators—first, senators by their own right, or Senadores por derecho propio; secondly, life senators nominated by the Crown—these two categories not to exceed 180; and thirdly, 180 senators, elected by the Corporations of State—that is, the communal and provincial States, the church, the universities, academies, &c.—and by the largest payers of contributions. Senators in their own right are the sons, if any, of the King and of the immediate heir to the throne, who have attained their majority; Grandees who are so in their own right and who can prove an annual renta of 60,000 pesetas, or 2,400*l.*; captains-generals of the army; admirals of the navy; the Primate of Spain; the Patriarca de las Indias (the 'Patriarch of West Indies'), i.e., the Bishop of Sion (head chaplain of the Royal Household) and the archbishops; the presidents of the Council of State, of the Supreme Tribunal, and of the Supreme Council of War and of the Navy after two years of office. The elective senators must be renewed by one-half every five years, and by totality every time the Monarch dissolves that part of the Cortes. The Congress is formed by deputies 'named in the electoral Juntas in the form the law determines,' in the proportion of one to every 50,000 souls of the population. According to a law of August 8, 1907, voting is compulsory for all males over the age of 25: with a few unimportant exceptions. This law further enacts that all such voters must be registered on the voting list, possess full civil rights, and must have been residents of a Municipal district for at least 2 years. Members of Congress must be 25 years of age; they are re-eligible indefinitely, the elections being for five years. Deputies to the number of 98 are elected by scrutin de liste in 28 large districts in which minorities may be duly represented. There are in all 417 deputies. The deputies cannot take State office, pensions, and salaries; but the ministers and State officials of a salary higher than 15,000 pesetas are exempted from this law. Since April 1, 1920, senators and deputies are paid 6,000 pesetas (240*l.*) a year. A law was voted in July 1922, increasing this allowance to 12,000 pesetas (480*l.*) a year; this law was subsequently withdrawn by Congress owing to the protests made all over the country. Both Congress and Senate meet every year. The Monarch has the power of convoking them, suspending them, or dissolving them: but in the latter case a new Cortes must sit within three months. The Monarch appoints the president and vice-presidents of the Senate from members of the Senate only; the Congress elects its own officials. The Monarch and each of the legislative chambers can take the initiative in the laws. The Congress has the right of impeaching the ministers before the Senate.

The Constitution of June 30, 1876, further enacts that the Monarch is inviolable, but his ministers are responsible, and that all his decrees must be countersigned by one of them. The Cortes must approve his marriage before he can contract it, and the King cannot marry any one excluded by law from the succession to the crown. Should the lines of the legitimate descendants of the late Alphonso XII. become extinct, the succession shall be in this order—first, to his sisters; next to his aunt and her legitimate escendants ; and next to those of his uncles, the brothers of Fernando VII., unless they have been excluded.' If all the lines become extinct, 'the nation will elect its Monarch.'

The executive is vested, under the Monarch, in a Council of Ministers.

On September 15, 1923, as a result of the action taken by Lieut.-General Don Miguel Primo de Rivera y Orbaneja, Marquis de Estella, a Royal Decree was published appointing Marquis de Estella Chief of the Government and President of a Military Directory, charged with the government of the State.

On December 3, 1925, the Military Directory was superseded by a Civil Government, under the presidency of Lieut.-General Primo de Rivera, and composed of members of the new political party, the 'Union Patriótica.' All the former Ministerial Departments have been set up again.

The Government is constituted as follows :—

President of the Council.—Primo de Rivera.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Primo de Rivera (February 27, 1927).

Minister of Justice and Worship.—Señor Galo Ponte.

Minister of War.—Gen. Duke of Tetuan.

Minister of Marine.—Vice-Admiral Cornejo.

Minister of Finance.—Señor Calvo Sotelo.

Minister of the Interior.—Gen. Martínez Anido.

Minister of Public Instruction.—Señor Callejo.

Minister of Public Works.—Señor Benjumea.

Minister of Labour.—Señor Aunos.

Parliament was dissolved by a Royal Decree of September 16, 1923, but a National Assembly, which is not a legislative but a consultative body, was convoked by Royal Decree of September 12, 1927, and sat for the first time on October 10. It is composed of 375 members, including 15 women, and is divided into 18 special committees. The Assembly consists of 49 municipal representatives, 49 provincial representatives, 49 members of the Patriotic Union, 170 representatives of the State, 95 of whom are appointed by the Government from all branches of administrative bodies and corporations, and 75 by virtue of their office (such as Archbishops and Bishops, Captains-General, Presidents of the Council of State and of the Law Courts, and Governors of Banks). The remaining members up to 375—that is, 58—are directly chosen by the Government from among the industries, trades, agriculture, and all branches of national activities. The mandate of the Assembly is for three years.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Since January 1, 1918, every commune has its own elected Ayuntamiento, consisting of from five to fifty Regidores, or Concejales, and presided over by the Alcalde, at whose side stand, in the larger towns, several Tenientes Alcaldes. The entire municipal government, with power of taxation, is vested in the Ayuntamientos. Half the members are elected every two years, and they appoint the Alcalde, the executive functionary, from their own body. Members cannot be re-elected until after two years. Each province of Spain has its own Assembly, the Diputación Provincial, the members of which are elected by the constituencies. The Diputaciones Provinciales meet in annual session, and are permanently represented by the Comision Provincial, a committee appointed every year. The Constitution of 1876 secures to the Diputaciones Provinciales and the Ayuntamientos the government and administration of the respective provinces and communes. Neither the national executive nor the Cortes have the right to interfere in the established municipal and provincial administration except in the case of the action of the Diputaciones Provinciales and Ayuntamientos going beyond the locally limited sphere to the injury of general and permanent interests. In the Basque provinces self-government has been almost abolished since the last civil war, and they are ruled as the rest of Spain but, unlike the rest of the provinces, certain 'fueros,' or exemptions, are granted to them. In 1925 a new statute of exemptions came into force.

By a Royal Decree of September 30, 1923, all the Mayors and Municipal Councils in Spain were dismissed from their posts, and replaced by Members of the Associated Councils of Householders.

An important innovation introduced in Municipal Administration is the Royal Decree of May 8, 1924, by which a law was passed establishing the Estatuto Municipal, governing the organisation and administration of Municipalities in future.

The new Statute tends to give to Municipalities their maximum independence. By its means the different Ayuntamientos are now authorised to determine the organisation that will best suit them.

Female suffrage has been granted, and all women householders are allowed to vote and to be elected. The voting age has been reduced to 23 years for both males and females. A special corporative vote has also been established for Guilds and other corporations.

Area and Population.

Continental Spain has an area of 190,050 square miles, but including the Balearic and Canary Islands and the Spanish possessions on the north and west coast of Africa, the total area is 194,800 square miles. The growth of the population has been as follows :—

Census year	Population	Increase	Rate of annual increase
1857	15,464,340	—	—
1860	15,655,467	191,127	0·44
1877	16,631,869	976,402	0·37
1887	17,560,352	928,483	0·56
1897	18,121,472	561,120	0·32
1900	18,607,674	486,202	0·29
1910	19,950,817	1,343,143	0·72
1920	21,338,381	1,387,564	0·65

The population of Ceuta (37,076) is included in that of Cádiz. Besides Ceuta, Spain has, on the African Coast, the Alhucema isles (pop. 322), the Chafarinas (320), Melilla (58,376), Peñon de la Gomera (398), Rio de Oro (253), and Nador (3,958). The North African possessions are no longer used as convict stations, the centuries old 'Presidios' having been suppressed by a recent Decree and the prisoners brought back to the Peninsula. The Basques in the North, numbering some 400,000, differ in race and language from the rest of Spain; there are 50,000 gipsies.

The following were the estimated populations of the principal towns on December 31, 1926, viz. :—

Town	Pop.	Town	Pop.	Town	Pop.
Madrid . .	799,894	Cádiz . .	78,222	Huelva . .	41,425

<sup>1</sup> Population Census 1920.

The movement of population for 3 years was as follows :—

Years	Marriages	Births	Deaths	Surplus of births
1924	158,816	652,860	430,474	222,386
1925	158,849	644,093	432,164	212,529
1926	159,848	657,229	421,702	235,467

Emigration figures for 4 years as follows :—

Year	Male	Female	Total	Year	Male	Female	Total
1923	80,375	37,429	123,804	1925	60,670	33,276	93,946
1924	83,805	38,007	121,812	1926	50,972	29,707	80,739

Emigration from Spain is chiefly to Argentina, Cuba, Brazil, Uruguay, and Mexico.

Religion.

The national Church of Spain is the Roman Catholic, and the whole population of the kingdom adhere to that faith, except a small number of Protestants, Jews, Rationalists, etc. Liberty of worship is now allowed to Protestants and all other religious bodies. Within the Peninsula, apart from Portugal, there are 9 metropolitan sees and 51 suffragan sees, the chief being Toledo. The Constitution requires the nation to support the clergy and the buildings, etc., of the Church, and for this purpose the State expended 61,039,414 pesetas in 1925-26. The relations between Church and State are regulated by the Concordat of May 6, 1851, and although it is laid down in this that only the orders of San Vicente de Paul, and Felipe Neri, with one other to be subsequently named, should be permitted in Spain, many other orders have been allowed to establish themselves. The communities of the religious orders are numerous and influential in Spain. Many of them have schools, and about 9,000 of their members are engaged in teaching boys of the upper and middle classes, while, within many of their establishments, industries of all kinds are carried on. The number of religious houses in Spain in 1926 was 4,637, of which 963 are for men and 3,674 for women. Of those for men, 543 are devoted to education, 107 to charity, 8 to industries, 215 to the training of priests, and 90 to a contemplative life. The total number of monks is about 12,000 (including 1,510 foreigners). The orders for women comprise 1,446 for education, 1,339 for charity, and 889 for a contemplative life. The number of nuns is about 42,000 (including 2,323 foreign women). In 1926 there were in Spain 66 cathedrals, 22 collegiate churches, 20,247 parish churches, and 15,280 chapels and sanctuaries.

Instruction.

The latest census returns (1920) show that 46·28 per cent. of the population could read and write, 0·94 could read only, and 45·46 per cent. could neither read nor write. The remaining 7·32 per cent. corresponds to the infant population under 6 years.

By a law of 1857 an elaborate system of primary education was ordained : education was to be compulsory, there was to be a primary school for every 500 inhabitants, and instruction was to be on a uniform plan. This system has not been rigidly enforced, but various improvements have been effected, especially by a law of June 9, 1909, which made education obligatory. The country is divided into eleven educational districts, with the universities as centres. The public and primary schools are since 1902 supported by the Government; the total sum spent in 1925-26 was 104,406,650 pesetas. Most of the children are educated free.

On Jan. 1, 1926, there were 28,870 public schools, and about 5,500 private schools, the total number of pupils being about 3,000,000. Secondary education is conducted in 'institutions,' or middle-class schools, and there must be at least one of them in every province. There are at present 60 institutions with 68,916 pupils. These institutions prepare for the universities, of which there are eleven, attended by 29,650 students. The universities are at Barcelona, Granada, Madrid, Murcia, Oviedo, Salamanca, Santiago, Sevilla, Valencia, Valladolid, and Zaragoza. There are, besides, a medical and science faculty at Cádiz in connection with the University of Seville, and in the Canary Islands an educational establishment dependent on the University of Seville. In 1925-26 the total sum expended on education and the fine arts was 169,667,571 pesetas.

Justice and Crime.

Justice is administered by Tribunales and Juzgados (Tribunals and Courts), which conjointly form the Poder Judicial (Judicial Power). Judges and Magistrates cannot be removed, suspended or transferred except as set forth by law.

The Judicature is composed of:—1 Tribunal Supremo (Supreme High Court); 15 Audiencias Territoriales (Divisional High Courts); 50 Audiencias Provinciales (Provincial High Courts); 522 Juzgados de Primera Instancia (Courts of First Instance); and 9,310 Juzgados Municipales (District Court, or Court of Lowest Jurisdiction held by Justices of the Peace).

The Tribunal Supremo consists of a President, three Courts of Justice and one for administrative purposes; it is empowered with disciplinary faculties; is Court of Cassation in civil and criminal trials; decides in first and second instance disputes arising between private individuals and the State; and hears criminal causes against Princes of the Royal Family, Cabinet Ministers, and Presidents of the Senate and Congress.

The Audiencias Territoriales have power to try in second instance before the changes of 1923, sentences passed by judges in civil matters, and in first instance all criminal trials of the province.

The Audiencias Provinciales are Courts competent to try and pass sentence in first instance on all cases filed for delinquency. In the most important, evidence was taken by a jury composed of twelve lay judges. But since the advent of the Military Directorate, the jury system has been suppressed.

The Juzgados Municipales are constituted of a Judge and two Deputy Judges. This Court is competent to try small civil cases not exceeding 500 pesetas (£20) in value, and petty offences.

On July 1, 1925, the 'Court of Minors' (Tribunal de Niños) was established for trying cases of delinquency of boys and girls from 9 to 18 years of age.

Old Age Pensions and Social Insurance.

By a law dated February 27th, 1908, the 'Instituto Nacional de Prevision' was created for the purpose of granting Old Age Pensions, and administering a system of social insurance. The funds of the Institution are made up of an endowment, annual State subsidy, and private and public donations. The maximum annual pension obtainable is 1,500 pesetas (£60). The number of old-age pensions available up to December 31, 1926, was 171,573, and 389,416 for infants, a total of 560,989 pensions.

Defence.

ARMY.

Military service in Spain is compulsory. The total term of service is for 18 years. The law in force (Decree of February 20, 1925) provides for active service in the army to be for 2 years, and the other standings are to be distributed over the remaining 16 years. Exemptions are more frequent than formerly.

In January, 1916, a central general staff of the army was appointed. The country is divided into 8 territorial districts, each under a 'Captain-General,' the area of the Balearic and Canary Islands, and the Moroccan area. The strength of the active army during 1927 was 13,625 officers and 122,116 other ranks, and 32,000 gendarmérie, total 167,741, organised as follows:—

	Divisions	Brigades	Regts.	Battalions	Squadrons	Batteries
Infantry . . .	16	33	73	124	—	—
Cavalry . . .	—	5	27	—	81	—

Engineers . . .	—	—	10	30	—	—
Air Force . . .	—	—	3	—	9	—
Intendance . . .	—	—	8	—	—	—

<sup>1</sup> Includes 5 fortress and 3 coast regiments.

For 1927, 184,636 men were called to the colours.

For the units of the second line, or reserve troops, there are at present 116 battalion cadres, 14 squadron cadres, and 14 battery cadres. The second line troops are intended to provide 7 divisions of about 13,000 combatants each. Total about 90,000.

There are also the Guardia Civil and the Carabineros. The former is a constabulary, and the latter a military police used as Customs guard on the frontier. Both are recruited from the army and under military discipline. The total strength of the Guardia Civil for 1926 is as follows:—Infantry, 21,027; cavalry, 5,197. Carabineros: Infantry, 14,994; cavalry, 450.

The troops in the Balearic and Canary Islands are mostly recruited from the islanders. In Africa the troops are partly Spanish and partly native, and are always on a war footing. At the close of the year 1927, the total pacification of the Spanish zone at Morocco was complete. The number of troops is at present 92,000 men, of which 15,000 are European volunteers and 27,000 natives.

The Spanish infantry is armed with the Mauser rifle, model 1893. Calibre .275. The cavalry have the Mauser carbine. The field artillery gun is a Schneider Canet 14½ pr. of 19106.

Spain has several fortresses which guard the frontiers and the coast. On the Western Pyrenees, Oyarzun and Pamplona; on the central Pyrenees, Jaca; and on the eastern Pyrenees, Girona; on the Portuguese side, Badajoz (an old fortification); and finally on the coast, Ferrol, Cádiz, Cartagena, Mahon (Balearic Islands) and Ceuta (Africa).

There are 1 flotilla leader, 7 destroyers, 22 modern torpedo boats, 14 gunboats, and 14 submarines.

The dockyard at Ferrol is worked by a British syndicate, employing Spanish workmen. A third cruiser of the Principe Alfonso type (Miguel de Cervantes) is building here, and three more flotilla leaders are under construction at Cartagena. Four submarines are also in hand at the latter yard.

A naval wireless telegraphic station, Telefunken system, with a range of 300 miles, is situated at San Fernando (Cadiz). There are also wireless stations at Cartagena and Ferrol. A naval flying service is at work.

For 1928 the strength of the navy was fixed at 14,000 sailors and 2,673 marines. Total number of officers in active service in the navy, including all departmental corps: 1,881. Reserve: 303.

Production and Industry.

Spain is a preponderatingly agricultural country. The productive area was calculated at 45,595,000 hectares (113,987,500 acres) or 90.4 per cent., and the remainder, 4,856,688 hectares (12,141,720 acres) or 9.6 per cent., as being unproductive. A large part of the productive area is not under direct cultivation, but in recent years modern methods and up-to-date machinery are being employed.

Of the total area of Spain (50,451,688 hectares, or 126,129,220 acres), the area under production in 1924 was 22,429,323 hectares (or 56,073,307 acres), an increase of 726,443 hectares (1,816,107 acres) over the last census. The area devoted to pasture and mountains occupies 24,055,547 hectares (60,138,876 acres), as in the last census, while the area classed as unproductive for agriculture is reduced to 3,969,618 hectares (9,924,045 acres), having decreased 633,643 hectares (1,584,107 acres) from the last census.

In 1921, 1,622,122 hectares (4,055,305 acres) were devoted to olive culture (3.2 per cent.); 1,333,781 hectares (3,334,452 acres) to vineyards (2.6 per cent.); 433,711 hectares (1,084,277 acres) to fruit (0.86 per cent.); and 15,410,072 hectares (38,525,180 acres) to agriculture and gardens (30.54 per cent.). In 1920 the alienation of rural property was calculated at 431,002 estates representing a value of 793,482,525 pesetas; and of urban property, 120,143 estates of a value of 388,755,650 pesetas.

The area under the principal crops and the yield (for 3 years) were as follows:—

In 1926, 3,453,755 acres were under vines (3,312,986 acres in 1924) and produced 6,094,350,900 pounds of grapes (3,313,722,307 pounds in 1924), yielding ordinary red and white wines to the extent of 416,050,938 gallons (574,494,022 gallons in 1924). In 1925-26 there were 468,270 orange trees planted and 219,518 lemon trees, yielding 23,430,096 cwts. of oranges and 949,202 cwts. of lemons, showing an aggregate value of 232,402,148 pesetas (oranges) and 9,092,955 pesetas (lemons). In 1926, 178,406 acres of beet root sugar planted yielded 36,447,058 cwts., producing a value of 147,947,926 pesetas. In 1926, 741,306 acres of potatoes planted yielded 63,299,756 cwts., producing a value of 620,432,022 pesetas. In 1926, 56,965 acres of onions planted yielded 10,510,774 cwts., producing a value of 61,345,546 pesetas. In 1926-27 there were 156,967,827 olive trees planted, covering an area of 4,184,676 acres, yielding 25,813,314 cwts. of olives and 4,602,236 cwts. of oil. 7,036,514 almond trees planted in 1926-27, covering an area of 377,448 acres, produced 1,941,630 cwts. of almonds of a total value of 107,485,973 pesetas. Hazel nut trees planted in 1926-27 amounted to 2,287,322, covering an area of 29,988 acres, and produced 440,932 cwts. of nuts of a total value of 32,826,686 pesetas. Other products are esparto, flax, hemp, pulse; oranges and hazel nuts are largely exported, and Spain has important industries connected with the preparation of wine and fruits. Silk culture is carried on in Valencia, Murcia, and other provinces (843,424 kilos were produced in 1926). There are 26 cane sugar factories and 48 beet-root sugar factories in Spain. The production in 1925 of the former was 8,704 metric tons and of the latter 95,986 metric tons. In 1926, the total number of resinous pine-trees amounted to 8,587,579. The total number of alcohol factories in 1925 was 6,266, producing brandy and spirituous liquors to the extent of 25,873,992 gallons. Beer factories in operation amounted to 43; yielding 11,480,320 gallons.

The number of farm animals in 1925 was estimated as follows:—Horses, 697,678; mules, 1,286,360; asses, 1,077,377; cows, 3,794,029; sheep, 20,067,209; goats, 4,749,463; pigs, 5,267,328; camels (Canary Islands), 4,268.

Spain is rich in minerals. Iron is abundant in the provinces of Vizcaya, Santander, Oviedo, Navarra, Huelva, and Seville; copper in the provinces of Seville, Córdoba, and Huelva; coal is found in Oviedo, Leon; Gerona, Valencia, and Córdoba; zinc in Santander, Murcia, Guipúzcoa, and Vizcaya; cobalt in Oviedo; lead in Murcia, Jaen, and Almería; manganese in Oviedo, Huelva, and Seville; quicksilver in Ciudad Real and Oviedo; silver in Guadalajara; sulphate of soda in Burgos; salt in Guadalajara; sulphur in Murcia and Almería; phosphorus in Cáceres and Huelva. Platinum is reported to have been discovered in Spain in 1915.

In 1926 workers employed in connection with the mining industries were as follows: 136,408 men, 3,774 women, and 18,684 boys and girls under 18. The total value of the mineral output in 1926 was 475,598,411 pesetas at the pit mouth, there being 2,561 productive mining concessions covering an area of 302,102 hectares. Mining accidents caused 217 deaths. The number of factories engaged in the mining and metallurgical industries amounted to 701 in 1926 (536 in 1925), with a total output of 918,979,850 pesetas (896,020,150 in 1925). The quantities and values of the more important minerals in 1926 were as follows:—

Minerals	Metric tons	Value, Pesetas	Minerals	Metric tons	Value, Pesetas
Anthracite . .	402,857	13,237,962	Iron pyrites . .	4,398	39,582

The total production of cement in 1925 amounted to 1,135,767 metric tons, representing a value of 71,642,890 pesetas. There are 22 important cement factories. In 1926, there were 298 hydroelectric power stations, developing 976,885 H.P.

Spain has considerable manufactures of cotton goods, principally in Catalonia. In 1923 there were (in Catalonia) about 750 undertakings employing 56,000 looms, with 2,000,000 spindles; in woollen manufactures there are 6,700 looms with 274,800 spindles. There are in Spain about 165 paper mills (production in 1922 was 37,080 metric tons, likewise in Catalonia), making writing, printing, packing and cigarette paper. There are 29 glass-making factories.

In the Spanish fisheries the total number of boats employed was, in 1921, 17,878, of which 1,520 are steamers; fishermen, about 130,000; and the value caught 344,438,920 pesetas, representing a total weight of 427,253 metric tons. The most important catches are those of sardines, tunny fish, and cod. In Spain there are 505 factories, with about 24,000 workmen, for the preparation of sardines and fish-preserves. The value of their output in 1923 was over 500 million pesetas.

Shipping and Navigation.

The merchant navy of the Kingdom contained on January 1, 1927, 1,763 steamers of 1,232,805 tons net, and 529 sailing vessels of 83,585 tons net.

Barcelona, Bilbao and Cadiz are the chief maritime centres.

The shipping entered and cleared at Spanish ports in two years was as follows :—

	1924		1925
	No.	Tons	No.	Tons

Of the vessels entered in 1925, 10,372 vessels of 10,872,067 tons (entered) were Spanish and 8,665 vessels of 8,044,265 tons (cleared) were Spanish.

Internal Communications.

In 1925 the total length of highways and roads in Spain was 86,988 kilometres (53,932 miles).

The total length of the railways in Spain in 1925 was 16,118 kilometres (10,010 miles), of which 11,684 kilometres (7,256 miles) are of normal gauge (1.67 metres, or 5.48 feet), and 4,434 kilometres (2,754 miles) are of varying gauges, chiefly 1 metre (3.28 feet). There are 15 kilometres (9 miles) of cogwheel and funicular lines. In 1925, 117,883,215 passengers were carried on the different lines, and 41,489,060 tons of goods transported. In October, 1919, the first underground electric railway service in Spain (on the model of the London 'tubes') was inaugurated in Madrid, covering a distance of 5 kms. (3 miles). In June 1924 a second line was inaugurated covering a similar distance. Two more lines were opened in 1925. Barcelona inaugurated her first 'tube' on December 30, 1924. In 1926 the total length of electric tramways in Spain was 1,049 kilometres (650 miles).

The whole of the Spanish railways belong to private companies, but nearly all have obtained guarantees or subventions from the Government. These amounted in 1925 for all the different lines to 6,950,343 pesetas. The State tax on tickets and merchandise for the year 1925 amounted to 67,196,420 pesetas. There are 29 companies of normal gauge and 57 of narrow gauge, the most important being those in the North, with 3,681 kilometres (2,209 miles); Madrid-Saragossa-Alicante (system Antigua and Catalana), 3,664 kilometres (2,198 miles); Andaluces, 1,305 kilometres (783 miles); Madrid-Caceres-Portugal and West, 777 kilometres (467 miles); South of Spain, 397 kilometres (238 miles); La Robla to Valmaseda and Luchana (narrow gauge), 312 kilometres (187 miles); Medina-Zamora-Orense and Vigo, 299 kilometres (199 miles); and Calatayud-Teruel-Valencia (Central de Aragon), 299 kilometres (199 miles). The official gauge of the principal Spanish railways has hitherto, for strategical reasons, been purposely kept different from that of France, and in consequence of this passengers are obliged to change trains at the frontier stations. The attempt made in 1882 to remedy this state of affairs was not successful. In January, 1914, however, a scheme was ordered to be drawn up for the construction of a standard-gauge railway with a double track from Madrid to the French frontier.

Recent legislation provides for a measure of State control of railways, the extent of which will depend, however, upon individual decisions of the railway companies. At present (1925), with one or two exceptions of little importance, all the Spanish railways are under private ownership. Total length of line State-controlled is 162 kilometres (98 miles) of which 115 kilometres (69 miles) are normal gauge and 47 kilometres (29 miles) narrow gauge. In 1925 the 'Consejo Superior Ferroviario' (Supreme Council of Railways) was created, a State Department under control of the Ministry of Public Works.

British railways in Spain are: Great Southern of Spain (Lorca-Aguilas), 104 miles; Zafra-Huelva, 112 miles; West Galicia (Pontevedra-Santiago), 47 miles; Alcoy-Gandia (narrow gauge), 34 miles.

The Post Office carried in 1925, in the inland service, 482,950,061 correspondence of all classes; in the international service, 106,051,843 correspondence in general. There were 10,174 post-offices. Receipts, 81,216,602 pesetas; expenses, 57,006,282 pesetas.

The length of lines of telegraphs in Spain in 1925 was 50,808 kms.; the total number of interior messages sent and received was 20,717,285. International messages sent 1,285,168, received 1,242,097, transit 368,040. The number of telegraph offices was 2,944.

In October, 1924, the entire telephone system of Spain was taken over by the 'International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation' of New York, and a Spanish Company constituted 'Compañía Telefonica Nacional de España,' whose purpose will be to provide an automatic service throughout the urban system. On December 29, 1926, this service was inaugurated in Madrid, and the system is being rapidly installed all over the country. At the close of 1927 there were in service 1,612 centrals, employing over 120,000 telephones. Number of urban calls in 1927, 215,000,000; interurban calls, 5,000,000. Number of telephone messages during the year, 3,400,000.

The 'Compañía Nacional de Telegrafia sin Hilos' holds the Government concession for the Public Service with ships, and between the Peninsula and the Canary Islands, and the International Service with England, Italy, Austria, France, Switzerland, America and Germany, as well as various special Press Services. They have 10 wireless stations of the Marconi system.

A royal decree ordains that all Spanish merchant vessels carrying passengers or mails, or subsidised by the Government, must be fitted with wireless telegraphy. Since February, 1917, wireless telegraphy has been made compulsory, by Royal Order, for all vessels from 500 tons upwards, excepting those in the coasting trade. All Spanish men-of-war built in Spain since 1911 are also fitted up with Marconi wireless. Lately the stations at Aranjuez and Barcelona have been equipped with a 15 kw. Valve Transmitter of the latest Marconi pattern and special receiving installations of the most sensitive and up-to-date design.

Banking and Credit.

On December 31, 1921, the existing contract between the Bank of Spain and the Government ended. On January 1, 1922, new regulations came into force, according to which the Government will participate in the net profits of the Bank, up to certain limits. The note issue was prorogued for another 25 years, up to December 31, 1946. The capital of the Bank was increased from 150,000,000 pesetas to 177,000,000 pesetas. After 5 years the Bank is authorised further to increase the capital, up to the limit of 250,000,000 pesetas.

On February 18, 1928, the position of the Bank was as follows:—

	1,000 Pesetas		1,000 Pesetas
Cash in hand { gold . . . . .	2,607,614	Property . . . . .	24,098

Savings bank deposits in Spain, December 31, 1925, 1,186,651,870 pesetas, distributed over 1,389,460 accounts. Post Office Savings Banks, which were created under the law of June 4, 1909, were opened on March 12, 1916. In 1925 there were 1,026 offices in operation, covering a total of 565,352 current accounts, representing 153,457,806 pesetas.

The nominal value of the money coined in Spain from 1868 to 1907 was : gold, 920,613,935 pesetas ; silver, 1,330,589,807 pesetas. In 1905-07 no gold was coined ; in 1906-07, no silver was coined. No coinage was struck during the years 1908 and 1909. In 1910, money coined to the value of 1,976,180 pesetas in 50 centime pieces (silver) to replace money retired from circulation. In 1911, 286,843 pesetas of 50 centime pieces were coined, as well as 60,286 pesetas of bronze centime pieces. In 1913, 1,429,149 pieces of 1 centime and 1,639,500 pieces of 2 centimes were coined. A new coin was put into circulation in 1925, consisting of a nickel piece representing 25 centimes ; 2,000,000 pesetas were struck, and 2,000,000 pesetas in 50 centime pieces (silver) to replace money withdrawn from circulation. In 1927 the 2 pesetas coin was withdrawn from circulation.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The Peseta of 100 Centesimos is of the value of a franc,  $9\frac{1}{2}d.$ , or 27 to 28 pesetas to the pound sterling, but the actual value is about  $9d.$

Gold coins in use are 25, 20, 10, and 5-peseta pieces. Silver coins are 5-peseta, 2-peseta, 1-peseta, and 50-centime pieces.

Both gold and silver coins are of the same weight and fineness as the corresponding French coins. Under a law of July 29, 1903, the Government is withdrawing from circulation the spurious 5-peseta pieces which had become common. Gold coinage is not in general circulation.

Theoretically, there is a double standard of value, gold and silver, the ratio being  $15\frac{1}{2}$  to 1. But of silver coins only the 5-peseta piece is legal tender, and the coinage of this is restricted.

On January 1, 1859, the metric system of weights and measures was introduced in Spain. But, besides these, the old weights and measures are still largely used. They are :—The Quintal = 220.4 lb. avoirdupois ; the Libra = 1.014 lb. avoirdupois ; the Arroba, for wine =  $3\frac{1}{2}$  imperial gallons ; for oil =  $2\frac{3}{4}$  imperial gallons ; the Square Vara = 1.09 vara = 1 yard ; the fanega =  $1\frac{1}{2}$  imperial bushel.

Colonies.

The area and population of the colonial possessions of Spain are approximately as follows:—

Colonial Possessions	Area: English square miles	Population
Possessions in Africa:
Rio de Oro and Adrar . . . . .	109,200	495
Ifni . . . . .	965	20,000
Spanish Guinea . . . . .	10,030	140,000
Fernando Po, Annobon, Corisco, Great Elobey, Little Elobey . . . . .	795	23,346
Spanish Morocco <sup>1</sup> . . . . .	7,700	600,000
Total, Africa . . . . .	128,696	784,341

For administrative purposes the Canary Islands are considered part of Spain. The area of the islands is 2,810 square miles, and their population 503,151.

Rio de Oro and Adrar, stretching from the Wadi Draa 29° N. and 11° 4' W. to Cape Blanco 20° 46' N. and 17° 3' W. Politically there are three zones:—(1) Colony of Rio de Oro, 26° N. to 20° 46' N., an area of 65,500 square miles; (2) the Protectorate, between 27° 40' N. and 26° N. bordered on the East by 8° 40' W., an area of 34,700 square miles; (3) the occupied territory, between 27° 40' N. and the Wadi Draa, an area of about 9,000 square miles, settled by various treaties, 1900 to 1912. The Colonies are under the governorship of the Canary Islands, with a sub-governor resident at Rio de Oro. The capital of this colony is Villa Cisneros (lat. 28° 46' 55" N., long. 18° 11' 13" west of Paris). There is no town called Rio de Oro, the name being applied to the arm of the sea and the colony generally. The budget for 1927 amounted to 6,060,000 pesetas. There is little or no agriculture. Fishing is the principal occupation of the inhabitants.

Ifni was ceded to Spain by Morocco in 1860. By the Franco-Spanish agreement of 1912 it extends along the West Coast of Morocco to the north of Wadi Draa, from Wad Nun on the south to Wad Bu Sedra on the north, and a distance of 15 miles inland from the coast. The occupation is purely nominal. Area, 965 square miles, population, 20,000. There are several small harbours and villages; the population is engaged in fishing, and in cultivating dates and garden produce.

The Spanish territory on the Gulf of Guinea extends from the Muni to the Campo river and the Cameroons, its eastern boundary being on the meridian of 11° 20' E. of Greenwich. The capital is Santa Isabel, in the Island of Fernando Po, with a population of 8,345. The principal mountain is known as the Pico de Santa Isabel, or Clarence Peak (9,185 feet). The island is considered one of the most fertile spots on the West Coast of Africa. The other possessions of Spain in the Gulf of Guinea comprise the Islands of Annobon ( $7\frac{1}{2}$  square miles), Little Elobey (22 acres), Great Elobey ( $\frac{3}{4}$  square mile) and Corisco ( $5\frac{1}{2}$  square miles), and the district of Rio Muni on the mainland (9,470 square miles), the principal town of which is Bata. The coast region is low and marshy and contains vast forests. The vegetation is luxuriant and at places along the coast there are Spanish, French, and English factories. But there are no harbours and the rivers are all inaccessible to vessels. The population of Fernando Poo is 20,873. There are about 250 to 300 Europeans in the island, about 30 of these being British. The population of Little Elobey is 222. Great Elobey is covered with bush; its population is 123. Corisco has a population of 1,438 and Annobon of 1,204, while the population of Rio Muni territory is estimated at 130 whites and 89,000 natives. All the colonies are under the control of a Governor-General, resident at Santa Isabel. A Sub-Governor is appointed to the district of Bata and another to the district of Elobey, which includes the Islands of Corisco and Annobon. The aborigines of Fernando Poo are called Bubis. Those of Elobey and Corisco are mostly of the Benga tribe, but like the people of Annobon they take the names of their respective islands. In Bata the Pamwes are the principal tribe. There are Catholic and American Presbyterian missions at work among the natives. Spain has given to France the right of pre-emption in case of the sale of any of these African colonies or the adjacent islands.

Constitution and Government.

The fundamental laws of the Kingdom of Sweden are:—1. The Constitution or Regerings-formen of June 6, 1809; 2. The amended regulations for the formation of the Diet of June 22, 1866 (modified by acts passed in 1909–1925); 3. The law of royal succession of September 26, 1810; and 4. The law on the liberty of the press of July 16, 1812. The King must be a member of the Lutheran Church. His Constitutional power is exercised in conjunction with the Council of State or (in legislation) in concert with the Diet, and every new law must have the assent of the crown. The right of imposing taxes is, however, vested in the Diet. This Diet, or Parliament of the realm, consists of two Chambers, both elected by the people. The First Chamber consists of 150 members. Their election takes place by the members of the 'Landstings,' or provincial representations, and electors of six towns, not represented in the 'Landstings.' The constituencies are 19, arranged in 8 groups, in one of which an election takes place in September every year. The manner of the election is proportional and regulated by a special election law. All members of the First Chamber must be above 35 years of age, and must have possessed for at least three years previous to the election either real property to the taxed value of 50,000 kronor (2,777 l.), or an annual income of 3,000 kronor (166 l.). They are elected for the term of eight years. The Second Chamber consists of 230 members elected for 4 years by universal suffrage, every man and woman over 23 years of age, and not under legal disability, having the right to vote. The country is divided into 28 constituencies, in each of which one member is elected for every 230th part of the population of the Kingdom it contains. All men and women who are entitled to vote have the right to stand for election, but only in their own election areas. The method of election is proportional. The places to be given to the different groups of voting papers are decided according to the d'Hondt rule. The members of both Chambers obtain salaries, free of income tax, for their services, at the rate of 3,400 kr. (24 kr. a day) and 4,500 kr. (32 kr. a day) for members living in or outside the capital, for each ordinary session, or, in the case of an extra session, 24 or 32 kr. a day, besides travelling expenses. The salaries and travelling expenses of the deputies are paid out of the public purse.

The executive power is in the hands of the King, who acts under the advice of a Council of State, the head of which is the Minister of State. The Ministry (Liberal Democratic), appointed on June 7, 1926, is composed as follows:—

Minister of State (Premier).—Carl Gustaf Ekman.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Eliel Löfgren.

Minister of Justice.—Johan Thyrén.

Minister of Defence.—Gustav Rosén.

Minister for Social Affairs.—Jakob Pettersson.

Minister of Communications.—Carl Meurling.

Minister of Finance.—Ernst Lyberg (Sept. 30, 1926).

Minister of Education and Ecclesiastical Affairs.—John Almqvist.

Minister of Agriculture.—Bo von Stockenström (July 12, 1927).

Minister of Commerce.—Felix Hamrin.

Ministers without Portfolio.—Sigurd Ribbing and Natanael Gärle.

All the members of the Council of State are responsible for the acts of the Government.

The second chamber, elected 1924: 65 Moderates, 23 of the Agrarian Party, 33 Liberals and members of the Liberal Democratic Party, 105 Socialists and 4 Communists. The upper chamber: 52 Moderates, 14 of the Agrarian Party, 31 Liberals and members of the Liberal Democratic Party, 52 Socialists, and 1 Communist.

The provincial administration is entrusted in Stockholm to a Governor, and in each of the 24 counties to a prefect, who is nominated by the King. As executive officers of the prefects there are 491 sub-bailiffs. The right of the people to regulate their own local affairs is based on the municipal laws of March 21, 1862. Each rural parish, and each town, forms a commune or municipality in which all men and women over 23 years of age, and not under legal disability, who have paid the local taxes for at least one of the preceding three years, are voters. In small communes and towns the ratepayers' assembly may itself decide on all questions of administration, police and communal economy. It may, however, elect a parish or town council to decide on the questions, and all communes with 1,500 inhabitants and over have to do so. These councils are named Kommunalfullmäktige in the country, and Stadsfullmäktige in the towns. Ecclesiastical affairs and questions relating to primary schools are dealt with by the parish assemblies, presided over by the pastor of the parish. Each county has a county council (Landsting) elected by men and women who enjoy municipal suffrage, and have completed their 27th year. Towns having a population of at least 1-150th of the total population of the realm, and towns already separated from the 'Landstings,' and where the number of inhabitants is not fallen below that which caused their separation, are administered separately by their municipal councils: these towns are Stockholm, Göteborg, Malmö, Norrköping, Helsingborg and Gävle. As in elections for the Diet, so in the elections of municipal representatives, of members of the 'Landstings,' &c., the method of election is proportional. Women are eligible for communal offices.

Area and Population.

I. PROGRESS AND PRESENT CONDITION.

The first census took place in 1749, and it was repeated at first every third year, and subsequently, after 1775, every fifth year. At present, a general census is taken every ten years, besides which there are annual calculations of the people.

The area and population of Sweden, according to the census taken on December 31, 1920, and estimate for December 31, 1926, are as follows:—

Governments (Län)	Area: English square miles	Population Dec. 31, 1920	Population Dec. 31, 1926	Pop. per square mile 1926

In 1926 there were 2,982,625 males and 3,091,743 females.

The growth of the population has been as follows :—

Year	Population	Increase per ct. per annum	Year	Population	Increase per ct. per annum
1880	4,565,668	0.95	1910	5,522,408	0.73
1900	5,186,441	0.71	1920	5,904,489	0.69

With the exception of 30,247 Finns, 7,162 Lapps, and some thousands others, the Swedish population (1920) is entirely of the Scandinavian branch of the Aryan family.

On December 31, 1920, there were 22,811 foreigners in Sweden, including subjects of Finland 5,897, Germany 4,532, Norway 2,996, Denmark 2,780, Russia 1,885, the United States 1,072, the United Kingdom and Ireland 487, other states 3,212.

The population was divided as follows in 1920 :—

II. PRINCIPAL TOWNS.

In 1860 the town population numbered only 434,519, in 1900 1,103,951, and at the beginning of 1927, 1,898,290, showing an increase of from 11 per cent. of the whole population of Sweden (in 1860) to 31 per cent. (in 1927).

Religion and Instruction.

The mass of the population adhere to the Lutheran Protestant Church, recognised as the State religion. There are 12 bishoprics (Uppsala being the metropolitan see) and 2,572 parishes at the beginning of 1927. At the census of 1920, the number of 'Evangelical Lutherans' was returned at 5,880,941, the Protestant Dissenters numbering, Baptists, 7,265, and Methodists, 5,452. Of other creeds, there were 3,425 Roman Catholics (under a Vicar Apostolic resident at Stockholm), 6,469 Jews, and 937 others. No civil disabilities attach to those not of the national religion. The clergy are chiefly supported from the parishes and the proceeds of the Church lands.

The Kingdom has two universities, at Uppsala (founded in 1477) and Lund (founded in 1668), the former having 3,084 and the latter 2,169 students in the autumn of 1926. There are also a State faculty of medicine in Stockholm (founded in 1810), with 839 students, and private universities in Stockholm (founded in 1877), philosophical and law faculties, with 1,165 students, and Göteborg (founded in 1889), philosophical faculty, with 336 students. In Stockholm and Göteborg there are also academies of commerce. In 1926 there were 77 public secondary schools, with 28,564 pupils; 53 people's high schools, 3,457 pupils; 2 high and 7 elementary technical schools, about 2,800 pupils; military schools, navigation schools, agricultural schools, veterinary and other special schools; besides institutions and schools for the deaf-mutes and the blind. Public elementary instruction is gratuitous and compulsory (since 1842), and children not attending schools under the supervision of the Government must furnish proofs of having been privately educated. The school age is 7 to 14 years. In 1926 there were in the elementary schools, 26,669 teachers and 665,032 pupils.

Justice and Crime.

The administration of justice is entirely independent of the Government. Two functionaries, the Justitie-Kansler, or Chancellor of Justice, and the Justitie-Ombudsman, or Attorney-General, exercise a control over the administration. The former, appointed by the King, acts also as a counsel for the Crown; while the latter, who is appointed by the Diet, has to extend a general supervision over all the courts of law. The Kingdom, which possesses one Supreme Court of Judicature, is divided (beginning of 1927) into 3 high court districts and 211 district courts divisions, of which 89 are urban districts and 122 country districts.

In town these district courts (or courts of first instance) are held by the burgomaster and his assessors; in the country by a judge and 12 jurors—peasant proprietors—the judge alone deciding, unless the jurors unanimously differ from him, when their decision prevails. In Sweden trial by jury only exists for affairs of the press.

Finance.

Revenue and Expenditure for six years are shown as follows (18·16 kronor = 1£):—

<sup>2</sup> Estimates.

The budget of revenue and expenditure for the budget year July 1, 1927–June 30, 1928 was as follows (18·16 kronor = 1£):—

		Kronor
Taxed: Agricultural land in the country	. . . . .	6,287,985,105

The expenditure for the Church is chiefly defrayed by the parishes and out of the revenue of landed estates belonging to the Church, and the amounts do not appear in the budget estimates. The expenses for public instruction are in great part defrayed by the parishes.

On January 1, 1928, the public liabilities of the Kingdom, contracted principally for productive purposes (railways, &c.), were as follows:—

The debt amounts to about 286 kronor per head of the population; but as the receipts from business undertakings and outstanding loans in ordinary times exceed the whole interest, the charge per head is nominal. The assets entered in the State register on July 1, 1927, amounted to 3,102,000,000 kronor. To this sum may be added about 550,000,000 kronor, representing other assets that have not been booked. Thus the financial situation of the State shows a surplus of assets of about 1,800,000,000 kronor.

The income of the communes in 1924 was 626,970,618 kronor, and the expenditure 672,151,441 kronor. Their assets amounted to 2,053,717,682 kronor, and their debts to 1,246,410,272 kronor. The revenue of the provincial representative bodies (landsting) in 1925 was 72,002,757 kronor, and expenditure 81,257,896 kronor; their assets 238,624,910 kronor, and debts 73,544,886 kronor.

Defence.

ARMY.

The military forces are recruited on the principle of universal service, but aided by a voluntarily enlisted personnel which forms the permanent cadres for training purposes. In June 1925 a new defence scheme was accepted by the Diet.

Liability to service commences at the age of 20, and lasts till the end of the 42nd year. The men belong to the first 'uppbåd' of the active army or Beväring for 11 years; then for 4 years to the second 'uppbåd'; and finally for 8 years to the Landstorm. The initial period of training for the main part of the infantry is 90 days (150 days for 20 per cent. of the annual quota), 140 days for cavalry, horse and field artillery, and engineers. The infantry is called up for regimental training periods twice for 25 days each time (3 times for 20 per cent. of the annual quota). The cavalry, artillery and engineers have 2 training periods of 30 days.

The army is organised in 4 divisions and the separate troops of Upper Norrland and Gotland. In the eastern division there is 1 supplementary brigade. Each infantry regiment has 2 battalions. The establishment in 1927 was 1,685 officers and 7,282 N.C.O. and voluntarily enlisted men. There is besides that a draft conscriptives of about 24,500 men. Two drafts are called up simultaneously for regimental training periods.

This establishment was organised as follows:—

	Regiments (Corps)	Battalions	Machine Gun Companies (Squadrons)	Trench Mortar and Pioneer Sections	Squadrons	Machine Gun Troops	Groups	Companies
Infantry . . . . .	22	45	23	—	—	—	—	—

Train and Medical . . . . .	4	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Intendance . . . . .	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	3

The total number on the rolls amounts to about 600,000.

The strength of the reserve of officers and voluntarily enlisted men amounts to about 28,500, that of the Beväring to about 400,000.

The Landstorm amounts to about 195,000 of all ranks.

The infantry is armed with the Mauser rifle (calibre 6·5 mm.) and light machine-gun, model 21 (calibre 6·5 mm.); the cavalry is armed with short rifle (Mauser, calibre 6·5 mm.), sword, and light machine-gun, model 21 (calibre 6·5 mm.); the horse and field artillery have the Krupp 7·5 cm. Q.F. gun. The field artillery has also 10·5 cm. howitzers. The heavy artillery is armed with 10 cm. gun and 15 resp. 21 cm. howitzers.

The military budget for 1927-28 amounts to 86,399,768 kronor for the army, and 349,200 kronor for the ministry of defence (common to the army and navy).

AIR FORCE.

The Swedish Air Force consists of a chief, an air staff, four flying corps, and several aviation training schools, bases, depôts, and factories.

NAVY.

The Swedish Navy is maintained principally as a coast-defence force.

The following is a list of the principal ships:—

	Drottning Victoria . . }

There are 12 destroyers, 3 old torpedo-gunboats, 26 torpedo boats, one mining vessel, and 19 submarines.

The personnel of the Royal Navy is divided into three classes, viz. : 1. The Active List; 2. The Reserve; 3. The Beväring (Conscripts). On the active list are 5 flag-officers, 8 commodores, 35 captains, 111 commanders and lt.-commanders, 100 lieutenants, 46 sub-lieutenants, 868 warrant officers, and 2,900 petty officers and men, while about 360 officers belong to the Reserve. These figures exclude non-combatant branches.

On the active list of the Royal Coast Artillery are 1 general, 2 colonels, 4 lieutenant-colonels, 7 majors, 32 commanders and lieutenant-commanders, 34 lieutenants, 16 sub-lieutenants, 149 warrant officers, and 650 petty officers and men.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

Sweden has always been an agricultural country. In 1751 only 9·5 per cent. of the population depended for a livelihood on the various industries and commerce, in 1870 the percentage had advanced to 12·3, in 1900 to 29·1, in 1910 to 37·8, and in 1920 to about 44·2 per cent., so that to-day the population of Sweden is about equally divided in the pursuit of agriculture on the one hand and commerce and industries on the other.

The number of farms in cultivation in 1919 was 428,026; of these there were of 2 hectares and under, 119,899; 2 to 20 hectares, 270,625; 20 to 100 hectares, 34,926; above 100, 2,576. Of the total land area of Sweden (41,058,000 hectares), 3,860,000 hectares are under cultivation, 923,000 hectares under natural meadows, and 24,584,000 hectares under forests, the products of which form a staple export.

The following table shows the area and yield of the chief crops for 3 years:—

The value of all crops was estimated in 1924 at 1,197 million kronor, in 1925 at 1,206 million kronor, and in 1926 at 1,168 million kronor. On June 1, 1920, the live-stock was estimated as follows: Horses, 728,000; head of cattle, 2,736,000; sheep and lambs, 1,568,000; pigs, 1,011,000.

II. MINES and MINERALS.

Mining has been from time immemorial the leading industry of Sweden, which was the biggest producer of iron in Europe until the use of coal for the manufacture of pig-iron revolutionized that industry. The lack of fossil fuel is the reason why at present mining in Lappland merely concerns itself with the raw products, though experiments made in recent years have carried the problem of electric production of iron ore a good step forward. There were raised in 1926, throughout the Kingdom, 8,465,914 tons of iron ore. The pig-iron produced amounted in 1926 to 462,155 tons, and the ingot iron to 495,220 tons. Of iron ore, in 1926, 7,655,521 tons, and of pig-iron 77,297 tons were exported. There were also raised in 1926, 3,987 tons of silver and lead ore, 40 tons of copper ore, 56,267 tons of zinc ore, 15,258 tons of manganese ore, and 69,759 tons of sulphur pyrites. The lead produced amounted to 563,000 kilogram, the copper to 4,006,000, the zinc to 4,800,000, the tin to 4,000. No gold or silver was produced in 1926. There are not inconsiderable veins of coal in the southern parts of Sweden, giving 383,673 tons of coal in 1926. The most important produce of the Swedish quarries is paving stone; the amount produced for sale in 1926 had a value of 8,211,468 kronor, though unemployment then was very considerable. In 1926 there were 53,085 persons (2,447 young people under 18) engaged in the mining and metallurgical industries.

III. INDUSTRIES.

The industries of Sweden are spread fairly well over the whole country. The mining of iron ore has reached its highest perfection north of the Polar circle, and the most important sawmills are located along the shores of the Gulf of Bothnia. The production of iron and steel has taken place in central Sweden since the earliest times in Swedish history; pig iron is produced chiefly in Sandviken, Domnarvet, Uddeholm, and Fagersta. Cream separators, lighthouse apparatus, telephone supplies, motors, and many kinds of electrical machinery are among the highly specialised products of the metallurgical industries. The porcelain factories of Rörstrand and Gustavsberg and the glass factories of Kosta and Orrefors produce wares that have achieved a high reputation in the markets of the world. Innumerable factories for the production of finished products are scattered all over the countryside. Of the workmen employed in the industries of Sweden, those who reside in the country exceed in number the workmen who live in towns.

The timber and wood-work industries of Sweden are of great importance. The public forests have an area of 9,806,659 hectares, of which crown and ecclesiastical forests extend to 7,276,237 hectares. The latter yielded, in 1925, 5,319,676 cubic metres of timber. The yield of all forests, public and private, was estimated in 1923 to about 42 millions cubic metres of timber. In 1925 there were in Sweden 1,260 sawmills and planing mills with 41,419 workers who turned out sawn or planed timber to the value of 306,760,674 kronor; 869 factories for joinery and furniture with 13,451 workers, the output for the year being valued at 75,142,762 kronor; 103 factories for wood-pulp with 17,662 workers, output 296,030,266 kronor; and 73 paper and pasteboard mills with 16,255 workers, output 203,250,617 kronor.

The following are some data for the most important Swedish industries :—

Branch of Industry	No. of establishments		Average No. of workers		Value of output (1,000 Kronor)
	1925	1926	1925	1926	1925	1926

The total number of industrial factories (including mines and quarries) was, in 1925, 11,493, and in 1926, 12,905. The total output had a value of 4,197,991,000 kronor in 1925, and 4,403,600,000 in 1926. The total power used in industry amounted to 3,090,000 effective h.p. in 1925 and 3,260,000 effective h.p. in 1926.

In 1925, 304,404 men, 64,614 women, 27,744 boys, and 9,929 girls (under 18 years of age) were employed in factories.

IV. FISHERIES.

The total value of the Göteborg and Bohus fishing industry in 1926 was estimated at 14,176,000 kronor, an increase of about 340,000 kronor over the value for 1925.

Commerce.

The total customs-duties levied in 1926 amounted to 137,849,000 kronor, and in 1927 to 151,810,000 kronor.

Since Jan. 1, 1914, returns as to value of imports and exports are given by the importers and exporters themselves for all goods exported and for most import goods (the so-called declared value). Imports are recorded as from the country of consignment, and exports as to the country of ultimate destination.

A national Swedish trade-mark was introduced (1911) by Sveriges Allmänna Handelsförening (General Commercial Association of Sweden). The upper half of the mark shows the three royal Swedish crowns, on a light-blue ground, and the words 'Svensk Tillverkning' (Swedish manufacture) are shown on a light-yellow ground below.

The following table shows the value of the trade with the principal countries with which Sweden deals :—

Internal Communications.

At the end of 1926 the total length of railways in Sweden was 16,079 kilometres, of which 6,055 kilometres belonged to the State. The receipts of the State railways in 1926 were 191 million kronor, and expenses 158 million kronor. The total cost of construction for the State railways to the end of 1926 was 1,063 million kronor, and for private railways, 751 million kronor. The total number of passengers on the State railways was, in 1925, 27,660,000, and in 1926, 27,922,000; weight of goods, 16,331,000, and 16,568,000 tons; private railways, 38,078,000 passengers, in 1925, and 37,940,000 in 1926; goods 21,772,000 tons and 21,175,000 tons. The line between Luleå and Riksgransen (the Lapland iron ore line) is run by electric power, as is also, since summer, 1926, the line between Göteborg and Stockholm.

The length of the wires of the telegraph at the end of 1926 was 79,042 km., 34,308 km. of which belonged to the railways. The wires of the State telephone had a length of 817,398 km., the wires of the private telephone lines a length of only 11,775 km. The number of taxed telegraph messages sent in the year 1926 was 6,427,060, including 1,238,940 in transit. In 1926 there were 450,646 instruments (in Stockholm 119,067) employed in the telephone service, including only 5,774 private telephones.

The Swedish Post Office carried 698,786,910 letters, post-cards, journals, &c., in the year 1926. The number of post-offices at the end of the year was 3,778. The total receipts of the Post Office in 1926 amounted to 67,130,019 kronor, and the total expenditure to 54,638,655 kronor.

Banking and Credit.

The Riksbank, or National Bank of Sweden, belongs entirely to the State and is managed by directors elected for three years by the Diet, except one, the president, who is designated by the King. It is a bank of exchange to regulate financial relations with foreign countries; it accepts deposits of money, and on sufficient security it lends money for purposes in which there is no speculative element. The Bank is under the guarantee of the Diet, its capital and reserve capital are fixed by its constitution, and its note circulation is limited by the value of its metallic stock and its assets in current accounts at home and abroad; but its actual circulation is kept far within this limit.

There are 9 jointly responsible private banks and 20 joint-stock banks (December 1927). Since December 31, 1903, only the Riksbank has the right to issue notes.

The following table gives statistics of the National Bank, and private banks (joint-stock banks included) in Sweden for December 31, 1927 (18'16 kronor = 11.) :—

Money, Weights, and Measures.

By a treaty signed May 27, 1873, with additional treaty of October 16, 1875, Sweden, Norway, and Denmark adopted the same monetary system. Since then the small money circulated in all the said countries. In 1924, when the money of the neighbouring countries became depreciated, it was found necessary to cease taking the Danish and Norwegian small coins as legal payment in Sweden. By a treaty still in force each of the three countries withdrew their own money from the other countries.

The Swedish Krona, of 100 öre, is of the value of 1s. 1½d., or about 18 kronor 16 öre to the pound sterling.

The gold 20-kronor piece weighs 8·960572 grammes, ·900 fine, containing 8·0645 grammes of fine gold, and the silver krona weighs 7·5 grammes, ·800 fine, containing 6 grammes of fine silver. Iron coins were issued in 1917, 1918, and 1919; nickel coins from 1920.

The standard of value is gold. Gold coins, however, practically do not exist as a currency. National Bank notes for 5, 10, 50, 100, and 1000 kronor are legal means of payment, and the Bank is bound to exchange them for gold on presentation.

The metric system of weights and measures is obligatory.

SWITZERLAND.

(SCHWEIZ.—SUISSE.—SVIZZERA.)

Constitution and Government.

I. CENTRAL.

ON August 1, 1291, the men of Uri, Schwyz, and Lower Unterwalden entered into a defensive League. In 1353 the League included eight members, and in 1513 thirteen. Various allied and subject territories were acquired either by single cantons or by several in common, and in 1648 the League became formally independent of the Holy Roman Empire, but no addition was made to the number of cantons till 1798. In that year, under the influence of France, the unified Helvetic Republic was formed. This failed to satisfy the Swiss, and in 1803 Napoleon Bonaparte, in the Act of Mediation, gave a new constitution and out of the lands formerly allied or subject increased the number of cantons to nineteen. In 1815 the perpetual neutrality of Switzerland and the inviolability of her territory were guaranteed by Austria, Great Britain, Portugal, Prussia, and Russia and the Federal Pact which had been drawn up at Zürich, and which included three new cantons, was accepted by the Congress of Vienna. The Pact remained in force till 1848, when a new constitution, prepared without foreign interference, was accepted by general consent. This, in turn, was, on May 29, 1874, superseded by the constitution which is now in force.

The constitution of the Swiss Confederation may be revised either in the ordinary forms of Federal legislation with compulsory referendum, or by direct popular vote (popular initiative) a majority both of the citizens voting and of the cantons being required, and the latter method may be adopted on the demand of 50,000 citizens with the right to vote. The Federal Government (i.e., the Parliament and the Federal Council) is supreme in matters of peace, war, and treaties; it regulates the army, the railway, postal and telegraph systems, the coining of money, the issue and repayment of bank notes, and the weights and measures of the Republic. The Federal Parliament legislates on matters of copyright, bankruptcy, patents, sanitary police in dangerous epidemics, and it may create and subsidise, besides the Polytechnic School at Zürich, a Federal University and other educational institutions. There has also been entrusted to it the authority to decide concerning public works for the whole or great part of Switzerland, such as those relating to rivers, forests, and the construction of railways.

The supreme legislative authority is vested in a parliament of two chambers, a 'Ständerat,' or Council of States, and a 'Nationalrat,' or National Council. The first is composed of forty-four members, chosen and paid by the twenty-two cantons of the Confederation, two for each canton. Their remuneration depends on the wealth and liberality of the cantons, the average being about 20 francs per day; representatives from the canton of Geneva receive 30 francs, from Uri and from Unterwalden 15 francs per day. The mode of their election and the term of membership depend entirely on the canton. Three of the cantons are politically divided—Basel into Stadt and Land; Appenzell into Ausser Rhoden and Inner Rhoden; and Unterwald into Obwald and Nidwald. Each of these parts of cantons sends one member to the State Council, so that there are two members to the divided as well as to the undivided cantons. The 'Nationalrat' consists (according to the Census of 1920) of 198 representatives of the Swiss people, chosen in direct election, at the rate of one deputy for every 20,000 souls. The members are paid from Federal funds at the rate of 25 francs for each day on which they are present, with travelling expenses, at the rate of 20 centimes per kilometre, to and from the capital. Members employed on commissions receive additional pay at the same rate. On the basis of the general census 1920, the cantons are represented in the National Council as follows:—

Canton	Number of Representatives	Canton	Number of Representatives
Zürich (Zurich)	27	Schwyz	8
Bern (Berne)	34	Unterwald—Upper and Lower	2
Luzern (Lucerne)	9	Glarus (Glaris)	2
Uri	1

St. Gallen (St. Gall) . . . . .	15	Genève (Genf) . . . . .	9
Graubünden (Grisons) . . . . .	6	Total . . . . .	198

At the elections held on October 24–25, 1925, the following parties were returned:—Radicals, 59; Catholics, 42; Social Democrats, 49; Agrarians, 31; Liberal Conservatives, 7; other parties, 10.

A general election of representatives takes place by ballot every three years. Every citizen of the Republic who has entered on his twenty-first year is entitled to a vote; and any voter, not a clergyman, may be elected a deputy. Both chambers united are called the 'Bundes-Versammlung,' or Federal Assembly, and as such represent the supreme government of the Republic. Laws passed by the Federal Assembly may be vetoed by the popular voice, which means in effect that 30,000 citizens or eight cantons may demand that the law in question should be submitted to the direct vote of the nation, which can only say 'Yes' or 'No.' For the decision of the question submitted a majority both of the cantons and of the voters is required. This principle, called the referendum, is frequently acted on.

The chief executive authority is deputed to a 'Bundesrat,' or Federal Council, consisting of seven members, elected for three years by the Federal Assembly. The members of this council must not hold any other office in the Confederation or cantons, nor engage in any calling or business. In the Federal Parliament legislation may be introduced either by a member, or by either House, or by the Federal Council (but not by the people). Every citizen who has a vote for the National Council is eligible for becoming a member of the executive.

The President of the Confederation and the Vice-President of the Federal Council are the first magistrates of the Confederation. Both are elected by the Federal Assembly in joint session of the National and State councils for the term of one year, January 1 to December 31, and are not re-eligible to the same offices till after the expiration of another year. The Vice-President, however, may be, and usually is, elected to succeed the outgoing President.

President of the Confederation for 1928.—Edmund Schulthess (Argovie).

Vice-President of the Federal Council for 1927.—Dr. Robert Haab (Zurich).

The seven members of the Federal Council—each of whom has a salary of 1,000*l.* per annum, while the President has 1,080*l.*—act as ministers, or chiefs of the seven administrative departments of the Republic. These departments are:—1. Foreign Affairs. 2. Interior. 3. Justice and Police. 4. Military. 5. Finance and Customs. 6. Agriculture and Industry (Economie publique). 7. Posts and Railways. The city of Bern is the seat of the Federal Council and the central administrative authorities.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Each of the cantons and demi-cantons of Switzerland is sovereign, so far as its independence and legislative powers are not restricted by the federal constitution; each has its local government, different in its organisation in most instances, but all based on the principle of absolute sovereignty of the people. In a few of the smallest cantons the people exercise their powers direct, without the intervention of any parliamentary machinery, all male citizens of full age assembling together in the open air, at stated periods, making laws and appointing their administrators. Such assemblies, known as the Landsgemeinden, exist in Appenzell, Glarus, Unterwald, and Uri. In all the larger cantons there is a body chosen by universal suffrage, usually called der Grosse Rath, or Cantons Rath, which exercises all the functions of the Landsgemeinden. In all the cantonal constitutions, however, except those of the cantons which have a Landsgemeinde, the referendum has a place. By this principle, where it is most fully developed, as in Zurich, all laws and concordats, or agreements with other cantons, and the chief matters of finance, as well as all revision of the constitution, must be submitted to the popular vote. In all the cantons, the popular initiative for constitutional affairs, as well as for legislation, has been introduced, except in Lucerne, where the initiative exists only for constitutional affairs. The members of the cantonal councils, as well as most of the magistrates, are either honorary servants of their fellow-citizens, or receive a merely nominal salary. In most cantons there are districts (Amtsbezirke) consisting of a number of communes grouped together, each district having a Prefect (Regierungstatthalter) representing the cantonal government. In the larger communes, for local affairs, there is an Assembly (legislative) and a Council (executive) with a president, maire or syndic, and not less than 4 other members. In the smaller communes there is a council only, with its proper officials.

Area and Population.

I. PROGRESS AND PRESENT CONDITION.

Area and population, according to the census held on December 1, 1920, and the estimated population on December 1, 1926, are shown in the following table. The cantons are given in the official order, and the year of the entrance of each into the league or confederation is stated:—

Canton	Area: sq. miles	Population		Pop. per square mile, 1920
		Dec. 1 1920 (census)	Dec. 1, 1926 estimated
Zürich (Zurich) (1351) . . .	667	538,602	548,800	823
Bern (Berne) (1353) . . .	2,657	674,394	695,400	254

Total . . . . .	15,940	3,880,320	3,959,000	243

The German language is spoken by the majority of inhabitants in 19 of the 25 cantons, the French in five (Fribourg, Vaud, Valais, Neuchâtel and Genève), the Italian in one (Ticino). In 1920, 2,750,622 spoke German, 824,320 French, 238,544 Italian, 42,940 Romansch, and 23,894 other languages.

The number of foreigners resident in Switzerland in 1920 was 402,385.

II. MOVEMENT OF POPULATION.

Years	Total Births	Stillbirths	Marriages	Deaths and Stillbirths	Surplus of Births over Deaths
1922	78,586	2,246	30,063	52,538	25,998
1923	77,694	2,143	29,561	48,126	29,560
1924	75,564	2,066	28,510	51,043	24,520
1925	74,509	1,989	28,110	49,816	24,693
1926	73,963	1,845	28,079	48,297	25,666

In 1926 the illegitimate births numbered 2,844. The number of divorces was 2,215 in 1926.

The number of emigrants in five years was : 1922, 5,737 ; 1923, 8,006 ; 1924, 4,140 ; 1925, 4,334 ; 1926, 4,947.

III. PRINCIPAL TOWNS.

In 1925 the estimated population of the principal towns was as follows :—Zürich, 210,720 ; Bâle, 139,560 ; Geneva, 126,000 ; Bern, 107,960 ; Lausanne, 74,250 ; St. Gallen, 65,650 ; Winterthur, 51,950 ; Luzern, 45,900 ; Biel, 36,100 ; La Chaux-de-Fonds, 35,950 ; Neuchâtel, 22,050 ; Fribourg, 20,800 ; Schaffhausen, 20,800 ; Thun, 18,350 ; Montreux, 18,250 ; Chur, 15,250 ; Herisau, 15,200 ; Lugano, 13,950 ; Solothurn, 13,550 ; Vevey, 12,550 ; Olten, 12,400 ; Le Locle, 12,150 ; Bellinzona, 11,800 ; Aaran, 11,500 ; Rorschach, 11,250.

Religion.

There is complete and absolute liberty of conscience and of creed. No one is bound to pay taxes specially appropriated to defraying the expenses of a creed to which he does not belong. No bishoprics can be created on Swiss territory without the approbation of the Confederation. The order of Jesuits and its affiliated societies cannot be received in any part of Switzerland; all functions clerical and scholastic are forbidden to its members, and the interdiction can be extended to any other religious orders whose action is dangerous to the State, or interferes with the peace of different creeds. The foundation of new convents or religious orders is forbidden.

According to the census of December 1, 1920, the number of Protestants amounted to 2,230,597 (57 per cent. of the population), of Roman Catholics to 1,585,311 (41 per cent.), and of Jews to 20,979 (0.5 per cent.). Protestants are in a majority in twelve of the cantons, and Catholics in ten. Of the more populous cantons, Zürich, Bern, Vaud, Neuchâtel, and Basel (town and land) are mainly Protestant, while Luzern, Fribourg, Ticino, Valais and the Forest Cantons are mainly Catholic. The Roman Catholic priests are much more numerous than the Protestant clergy, the former comprising more than 6,000 regular and secular priests. They are under five bishops, viz., of Basel and Lugano (resident at Solothurn), Chur, St. Gallen, Lausanne and Geneva (resident at Freiburg), and Sitten (Sion), all of them immediately subject to the Holy See. The government of the Protestant Church, Calvinistic in doctrine and Presbyterian in form, is under the supervision of the magistrates of the various cantons, to whom is also entrusted, in the Protestant districts, the superintendence of public instruction.

Instruction.

In the educational administration of Switzerland there is no centralization. Before the year 1848 most of the cantons had organised a system of primary schools, and since that year elementary education has steadily advanced. In 1874 it was made obligatory (the school age varying in the different cantons), and placed under the civil authority. In some cantons the cost falls almost entirely on the communes, in others it is divided between the canton and communes. In all the cantons primary instruction is free. In the north-eastern cantons, where the inhabitants are mostly Protestant, the proportion of the school-attending children to the whole population is as one to five; while in the half-Protestant and half-Roman Catholic cantons it is as one to seven; and in the entirely Roman Catholic cantons as one to nine. The compulsory law has hitherto not always been enforced in the Roman Catholic cantons, but is rigidly carried out in those where the Protestants form the majority of inhabitants. In every district there are primary schools, and secondary schools for youths of from twelve to fifteen.

The following are the statistics of the various classes of educational institutions for 1925-26:—primary schools 4,407, with 17,128 teachers (8,359 men and 8,769 women), and 491,289 pupils (247,878 boys and 243,911 girls); the 599 secondary schools had 25,369 boys and 24,413 girls, with 1,776 men and 536 women teachers; 111 lower middle schools had 9,446 boys and 5,348 girls with 693 men and 68 women teachers. There are also cantonal schools, gymnasia, higher schools for girls, complementary schools, teachers' seminaries, commercial and administrative schools, trade schools, art schools, technical schools, schools for the instruction of girls in domestic economy and other subjects; agricultural schools, schools for horticulture, for viticulture, for arboriculture, and for dairy management. There are also institutions for the blind, the deaf and dumb, and the feeble-minded. In 1926 the Federation spent on primary education 2,465,436 francs.

There are seven universities in Switzerland. These universities are organised on the model of those of Germany, governed by a rector and a senate, and divided into four 'faculties' of theology, jurisprudence, philosophy, and medicine. There is a Polytechnic School, maintained by the Federal Government, at Zürich, with 1,443 matriculated students in 1925-26. The academy of Neuchâtel was transformed into a university in May, 1909, but without the faculty of medicine. The following table shows the year of foundation of each university, the number of teaching staff and of matriculated students in the various branches of study in each of the seven universities in the winter of 1926-27 :—

	Theology	Law	Medicine	Philosophy and Science	Total	Teaching Staff 1925-26

Justice and Crime.

The 'Bundes-Gericht,' or Federal Tribunal, which sits at Lausanne, consists of 24 members, with 9 supplementary judges, appointed by the Federal Assembly for six years and are eligible for re-election; the President and Vice-President, as such, for two years and cannot be re-elected. The President has a salary of 22,000 francs a year, and the other members 20,000 francs. The Tribunal has three sections, to each of which is assigned the trial of suits in accordance with regulations framed by the Tribunal itself. It has original and final jurisdiction in suits between the Confederation and cantons; between cantons and cantons; between the Confederation or cantons and corporations or individuals, the value in dispute being not less than 3,000 francs; between parties who refer their case to it, the value in dispute being at least 3,000 francs; and also in such suits as the constitution or legislation of cantons places within its authority. There are also many classes of railway suits which it is called on to decide. It is a Court of Appeal against decisions of other Federal authorities, and of cantonal authorities applying Federal laws. The Tribunal also tries persons accused of treason or other offences against the Confederation. For this purpose it is divided into four chambers: the Chamber of Accusation, the Criminal Chamber (Cour d'Assises), the Federal Penal Court, and the Court of Cassation. The jurors who serve in the Assize Courts are elected by the people, and are paid ten francs a day when serving.

Each canton has its own judicial system for ordinary civil and criminal trials.

On December 31, 1926, the prison population of Switzerland consisted of 3,737, of whom 387 were women.

Capital punishment exists in Appenzell-I.-Rh., Obwalden, Uri, Schwyz, Zug, St. Gallen, Luzern, Valais, Schaffhausen, and Fribourg.

Social Insurance.

The Swiss Federal Insurance Law (insurance against illness and accident), as passed by both Chambers on June 13, 1911, was accepted by the electors of the Republic with a small majority. The total number of votes cast was 529,001, of which 287,583 were for and 241,418 against the measure.

All Swiss citizens are entitled to insurance against illness, and foreigners also may be admitted to the benefits of the law. Compulsory insurance against illness does not exist as yet, but cantons and communities are entitled under the act to declare obligatory insurance for certain classes or, in general, to establish public benefit (sick fund) associations, and to make employers responsible for the payment of the premiums of their employees.

Insurance against accident is compulsory for all officials, employees, and workmen of all the factories, trades, &c., which are under the Federal liability law. Every person above the age of 14 can insure voluntarily at the Federal insurance administration (or at any insurance corporation). The Swiss Accident Insurance Institution commenced operations on April 1, 1918. In 1925 the 1,017 societies insuring against illness had 1,100,716 members.

Finance.

The entire proceeds of the Federal alcohol monopoly (estimated at 6,547,000 francs in 1928) are divided among the cantons, and they have to expend one-tenth of the amount received in combating alcoholism in its causes and effects. Of the proceeds of the tax for exemption from military service, levied through the cantons, one-half goes to the Confederation and the other to the cantons.

Revenue and expenditure for six years (1£ = 25 francs) :—

The public debt of the Confederation (exclusive of the railway debt) amounted, on January 1, 1926, to 2,068,470,000 francs. The floating debt (January 1, 1926) was 106,794,000 francs. The total debt was thus 4,832,279,000 francs.

Defence.

There are fortifications on the south frontier for the defence of the St. Gothard pass; others have been constructed at St. Maurice and Martigny in the Rhone Valley.

Switzerland depends for defence upon a national militia. Service in this force is compulsory and universal, with few exemptions except for physical disability. Those excused or rejected pay certain taxes in lieu. Liability extends from the 20th to the end of the 48th year. The first 12 years are spent in the first line, called the 'Auszug,' or 'Elite'; the next 8 in the Landwehr; and the remaining 8 in the Landsturm. For cavalry, however, service is 11 years in the Auszug, and 12 in the Landwehr. The Landsturm only includes men who have undergone some training. The unarmed Landsturm comprises all other males between 20 and 50 whose services can be made available for non-combatant duties of any description.

The initial training of the Swiss militia soldier is carried out in recruits' schools, and the periods are 65 days for infantry, engineers, and foot artillery, 75 days for field artillery, and 90 days for cavalry. The subsequent trainings, called 'repetition courses,' are 11 days annually; but after going through seven courses (8 in the case of the cavalry) further attendance is excused for all under the rank of sergeant. The Landwehr men are only called out once for training, also for 11 days.

The country is divided into 6 divisional districts. There is a staff organisation for three army corps. There are the usual departmental troops, pontoon and railway corps, telegraph troops, &c. The peace establishment normally under training is 46,200, organised as follows:—

	Divisions	Brigades	Regiments	Battalions	Squadrons	Batteries	Companies
Infantry . . . .	6	18	37	110	—	—	482
Cavalry . . . .	—	3	6	—	36	—	—

Aviation . . . .	—	—	—	—	—	—	30

The fortress troops, mostly Landwehr, man the fortifications which close the St. Gothard Pass and the Rhone Valley to a possible invader from the south. They amount to about 21,000 men. The Landwehr is organised in 56 battalions and 36 squadrons. Altogether Switzerland can mobilise nearly 200,000 men (combatants), irrespective of the organised Landsturm, who may amount to another 60,000.

The administration of the Swiss army is partly in the hands of the Cantonal authorities, who promote officers up to the rank of captain. But the Federal Government is concerned with all general questions, and makes all the higher appointments.

The Swiss infantry are armed with the Swiss repeating rifle. The field artillery is armed with a Q.F. shielded Krupp 7.5 cm. calibre. The 'position' artillery has batteries of 8.4 and 12 cm. guns. The Swiss Government inaugurated an aviation service in 1919. It is organised in 5 flights and 2 balloon companies and has 60 fighting and 120 scouting aeroplanes.

Production and Industry.

The soil of the country is very equally divided among the population, it being estimated that there were (1920) 212,290 peasant proprietors.

Of the total area 926,897 hectares, or 2,317,242 acres, being 22·4 per cent., is unproductive; of the productive area 926,193 hectares, or 2,315,482 acres, being 28·9 per cent., is forest; and of the rest about 1,210,000 hectares, or 3,025,000 acres (53·2 per cent.) is under grass, and about 800,000 hectares, or 2,000,000 acres (35·7 per cent.) is pasturage. In 1926, there were 123,667 acres under wheat and 49,725 acres under rye.

The chief agricultural industries are the manufacture of cheese and condensed milk. Wine is produced in eight of the cantons, tobacco in three. On April 21, 1926 (last census), there were in Switzerland, 139,283 horses, 3,843 mules, 901 donkeys, 1,587,110 cattle, 873,293 cows, 162,252 sheep, 635,349 pigs, 287,083 goats.

The Swiss Confederation has the right of supervision over the police of the forests, and of framing regulations for their maintenance. The entire forest area of Switzerland on January 1, 1924, was 2,434,053 acres in extent (comprising 111,333 acres of cantonal forest, 1,641,675 acres belonging to municipalities and other corporations, and 631,042 acres of private forests). The district over which the Federal supervision extends lies to the south and east of a tolerably straight line from the eastern end of the Lake of Geneva to the northern end of the Lake of Constance. It comprises about 1,825,175 acres, and the Federal forest laws apply to all cantonal, communal, and municipal forests within this area, those belonging to private persons being exempt, except when from their position they are necessary for protection against climatic influences. In 1876 it was enacted that this forest area should never be reduced; servitudes over it, such as rights of way, of gathering firewood, &c., should be bought up; public forests should be surveyed, and new wood planted where required, subventions for the purpose being sanctioned. In the year 1925, 15,281,250 trees (chiefly coniferous) were planted. The free forest districts comprise 1,477 square miles.

There were, in 1925-26, 238 establishments for pisciculture with 176,493,000 fry of various species, produced from the incubation of 223,612,000 eggs. Of these, 174,667,000 fry were released in public waters under official control.

Many industries flourish in Switzerland. There are 2 salt-mining districts; that at Bex (Vaud) belongs to the Canton, but is worked by a private company, and those at Schweizerhalle, Rheinfelden and Ryburg are worked by a joint-stock company formed by the Cantons interested. The output of salt of all kinds in 1926 reached 772,673 quintals (751,409 in 1925). In the province of St. Gall (Gonzen mine) iron ore and manganese ore are mined. In 1926, the output was 45,000 tons of hematite and 15,000 tons of manganese ore. In 1926 there were 8,123 factories in Switzerland. Watch and clock making is an important branch of manufacture; number of clocks exported in 1926, 18,851,928; in 1925, 21,161,343. The number of persons employed in factories (1925) was 363,730; the motive machinery had 1,838,797 horse-power. In 1926, 67 breweries produced 2,044,075 hectolitres (44,969,650 gallons) of beer.

In 1926 the Swiss embroidery establishments numbered 722 and employed 11,044 workers.

In 1925 there were 335 electric power enterprises, with an installed capacity of 1,182,070 kw., of which 1,113,300 kw. was from water power (with 300 kw. and more).

Commerce.

The special commerce, not including precious metals, was as follows in five years (25 francs = 1l.) :—

Internal Communications.

On January 1, 1928, the State railways of Switzerland (excluding tramways and funiculars) had a length of 1,789 miles. The net operating receipts from traffic of the Swiss Federal railways amounted (1927) to 390,000,000 francs, of which 142,000,000 francs were for passenger traffic. Operating expenses amounted to 250,000,000 francs. The State railways are gradually being electrified; by the beginning of 1928, 925 miles of electrified normal gauge lines were being operated by the Federal Railways. According to the pre-ent programme 1,032 miles should be open for traffic in the early part of 1929. The traffic on the Swiss waters (not including Lago Maggiore) in 1926 was carried on by 118 boats or barges belonging to 14 companies.

State aerial service is being gradually developed. In 1926 there were 8,157 flights, and 12,730 passengers were carried.

In 1926 there were in Switzerland 4,007 post-offices. By the internal service there were forwarded 195,100,000 letters, 69,800,000 post-cards, 122,600,000 packets of printed matter and samples, 313,496,168 newspapers. In the international service there were forwarded 33,200,000 letters, 24,700,000 post-cards, 11,500,000 packets of printed matter and samples, 2,185,468 newspapers. Internal post-office orders were sent to the value of 841,719,333 francs. Receipts, 1926, 136,605,000 francs; expenditure, 123,140,000 francs.

Switzerland has a very complete system of telegraphs, consisting (1926) of 623 miles of line with 23,430 miles of wire. There were transmitted 1,019,471 inland telegrams, 3,846,736 international, and 1,052,938 in transit through Switzerland. Number of offices, 2,569. There were 206,826 telephones installed, and 18,617 miles of line and 585,735 miles of wire; conversations, 159,655,000 (1926). The telegraph and telephone receipts in 1926 amounted to 88,500,642 francs; the expenditure to 86,507,935 francs.

The Marconi Company under a concession from the Federal Government has erected a wireless telegraphy station at Münchenbuchsee near Bern.

Banking and Credit.

On December 31, 1926, the coin minted in Switzerland was as follows:—15,268,678 gold coins of the nominal value of 279,273,560 francs; 88,149,419 silver coins of the nominal value of 151,766,206 francs; 195,861,400 nickel coins of the nominal value of 19,040,285 francs; and 124,023,120 copper coins of the nominal value of 1,616,742 francs; total (including other ken coins), 423,302,617 coins of the nominal value of 451,696,793 francs.

There were in Switzerland in 1918, 1,894 savings banks of all kinds, with 2,749,859 depositors having to their credit 2,646,645,767 francs.

The National Bank, with headquarters divided between Bern and Zurich, opened its doors on June 20, 1907. It has the exclusive right to issue bank-notes in Switzerland. On March 7, 1928, the condition of the bank was as follows:—

	Francs		Francs

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The international metric system is the sole legal standard of weights and measures in Switzerland. It was made compulsory in the country by the Federal law of July 3, 1875, and since January 1, 1887, no other units than the metric units have been legal. By the Federal law of June 24, 1909, the international electric units were also adopted. By that law, copies of the French standards, deposited at the International Office for Weights and Measures at Sèvres (France), were adopted as the legal standards for Switzerland.

The Franc of 10 Batzen, and 100 Rappen or Centimes, is the monetary unit. The par rate of exchange is 25·22½ francs = £1 sterling.

As a result of the dissolution of the Latin Monetary Union in 1926, the gold currencies of other countries of the Union are, after April 1, 1927, no longer legal tender in Switzerland, where they have circulated since 1860.

Before the war 50-franc National Bank notes were the smallest paper currency, but in consequence of the war, notes of lesser denominations have been issued, viz., 20-franc notes (by law of July 30, 1914), 5-franc notes (August 3, 1914), and 25-franc notes (September 9, 1914).

The Centner, of 50 Kilogrammes and 100 Pfund = 110 lbs. avoirdupois. The Quintal = 100 Kilogrammes = 220 lbs. avoirdupois. The Arpent (Land) = 8·9ths of an acre.

The Pfund, or pound, chief unit of weight, is legally divided into decimal Grammes, but the people generally prefer the use of the old halves and quarters, named Halbpfund, and Viertelpfund.

TURKEY

(THE REPUBLIC OF TURKEY)

In November, 1922, a change of capital importance took place in the internal economy of Turkey. Up to that time Constantinople continued to be the residence of the Sultan, and a Government deriving its authority from him still existed there. This Government, however, exerted no effective power outside Constantinople, together with a small adjacent area and another small area adjoining Chanak on the Dardanelles. Except for the small areas mentioned above, the whole of Asia Minor was under the authority of the de facto Government set up at Angora in April, 1920, under the name of the 'Government of the Grand National Assembly of Turkey.' On November 1, 1922, the Grand National Assembly voted a resolution declaring that the office of Sultan had ceased to exist and providing that the office of Caliph, which had hitherto been vested in the person of the Sultan, should be filled by election from among the Princes of the House of Osman. Previous to this the Angora Government had made preparations not only to take delivery of Eastern Thrace from the Greek occupying authorities in accordance with the military Convention concluded at Moudania on October 11, 1922, but also to take over the administration of Constantinople whenever an opportunity offered. On November 4, 1922, the administration of Constantinople passed into the hands of the Angora Government. The same day the Grand Vizier, Tewfik Pasha, presented the resignation of the Constantinople Cabinet to the Sultan. The Sultan himself, on November 17, left Constantinople. Nearly a whole year was, however, to elapse before the decisive step of proclaiming a Republic was taken. On October 29, 1923, the national leader, Ghazi Mustafa Kemal Pasha, who had been born at Salonica in 1881, was elected first President of the Turkish Republic, and the revolution was complete when, on March 2, 1924, the Grand National Assembly decided upon the abolition of the Turkish Caliphate, a decision which was immediately followed by the expulsion from Turkey of all the male members of the House of Osman, at the same time depriving them of their Turkish citizenship. On November 1, 1927, Mustafa Kemal Pasha was re-elected President of the Republic by the unanimous vote of the new Assembly which met on that day.

President of the Republic.—Mustafa Kemal Pasha, born at Salonica in 1881, re-elected November 1, 1927.

By a decision of the Grand National Assembly on October 13, 1923, Angora was declared to be the capital of Turkey. All central departments of state are now established there.

Constitution and Government.

For a list of the former sovereigns of Turkey and an account of the older constitutions of the country, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1923, page 1380.

The Grand National Assembly of Angora voted, on January 20, 1921, a Fundamental Law which introduced constitutional changes of the most radical kind. It declared that all sovereignty belonged to the people, and that all power, both executive and legislative, was vested in the Grand National Assembly as being the sole representative of the people. The old name 'Ottoman Empire' was discarded in favour of the designation 'Turkey.' No provision was made for a Senate. It was laid down that the members of the Grand National Assembly should be elected for a period of two years, and that the Assembly should delegate its executive powers to a certain number of Vekils or Commissioners. The mode of effecting this delegation of power varied somewhat, and ultimately at the beginning of 1924 circumstances necessitated a further revision of the Constitution. This was effected by the law of April 20, 1924, in the first articles of which the Turkish State was declared to be a Republic, the religion of which is Islam, the official language Turkish and the capital Angora. The new law provided for the election of the Assembly every four years, while according to article 7 'the Assembly exercises the executive power through the President of the Republic elected by itself and through the Council of Ministers chosen by him,' with the proviso that the Assembly may at any time control the actions of the Government and at any time dismiss it.

The new law also provided that the President of the Republic should be chosen from among the deputies constituting the National Assembly, and that his term of office should be identical with the life of each Assembly. He is ipso facto President of the Assembly and also, in case of necessity, of the Council of Ministers. He may, however, take no part in the debates of the Assembly, nor has he absolute powers to veto legislation or to dissolve the Assembly.

The present Cabinet, which was formed on November 2, 1927, is constituted as follows :—

President of the Council — Ismet Pasha.

Minister of Interior.—Shukri Kaya Bey.

Minister of Finance.—Sarrajoglu Shukri Bey.

Minister of Public Works.—Behij Bey.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Dr. Tefik Rushdi Bey.

Minister of Justice.—Mahmud Esad Bey.

Minister of Public Instruction.—N-jati Bey.

Minister of Public Health.—Dr. Refik Bey.

Minister of Agriculture and Commerce.—Rahmi Bey.

Minister of Defence and Marine.—Mustafa Abdul Halik Bey.

The present Grand National Assembly which was elected in September, 1927, and met on November 1, 1927, is the third assembly to meet at Angora, and consists of 315 deputies.

Subjects of Western Powers resident in Turkey formerly enjoyed extraterritorial privileges, including extensive fiscal immunities, in virtue of an ancient system called Capitulations. Before the Great War it had long been felt that these privileges needed revising, especially in so far as they exempted foreigners from the fiscal burdens of Ottoman subjects, but when, in September 1914, the Porte issued a decree designed to abolish them, the Powers unanimously protested against this unilateral action. In the circumstances prevailing in Europe at that time this protest, which applied also to the simultaneous suppression of the International Board of Health and the foreign Post Offices, was academic rather than effective. During the War the Central Powers recognised the fait accompli and entered into new treaty arrangements with the Porte. By the Treaty signed at Lausanne on July 24, 1923 (see below under 'Area and Population'), the Allied Powers agreed to the suppression of the Capitulations and concluded with Turkey a Convention respecting conditions of Residence and Business and Jurisdiction and a Commercial Convention. They agreed also to the suppression of the International Board of Health and the foreign Post Offices. Turkey on her side agreed by declarations appended to the Treaty to engage for not less than five years European legal counsellors to assist in the reorganisation of the legislative and judicial system and to entertain complaints arising out of the administration of justice, and to engage similarly three European medical advisers to act for five years as advisers in connection with the sanitary administration for the frontiers.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The Fundamental Law, voted at Angora in January, 1921 (see above), altered the system in force up to 1920 by providing that the country should be divided into Vilayets (now sixty-three in number) divided into Cazas, subdivided in their turn into Nahies. At the head of each Vilayet is a Vali representing the Government. The system aimed at is one of decentralisation. Each Vilayet has an elective council of its own. The Caza is regarded as a mere grouping of Nahiés for certain purposes of general administration. The Nahie or commune is an autonomous entity and possesses an elective council charged with the administration of such matters as are not reserved to the State.

Area and Population.

The series of wars beginning with the Turco-Italian War of 1911-12 and ending with the General War of 1914-18 caused the break up of the old Ottoman Empire, the acquisition by Italy and the Balkan States of considerable portions of the territories which constituted it, and the creation of several new states or mandated territories, viz. Albania, Syria (now a federation of States under the French mandate), Iraq or Mesopotamia (now an independent state under the British mandate), Palestine (British mandate), and the Hejaz (now an independent kingdom). To these losses must be added the termination of the sovereignty which up to the Great War Turkey technically possessed over Cyprus and Egypt, and the cutting off from Turkey of the various states in Arabia over which the Sultans exercised or claimed suzerainty. Towards the end of the General War, on the other hand, Turkey reacquired the territory known as the 'three Sanjaks' of Kars, Ardahan and Artwin, and she still retains under the Treaty concluded with the Caucasian States at Kars in October, 1921, a portion of this territory, not however including Batoum. The Treaty of Peace between the Allied Powers and Turkey which was signed at Lausanne on July 24, 1923, defined the European frontier of the new Turkey and to some extent her Asiatic frontiers. This Treaty was ratified by the Grand National Assembly on August 23, 1923, and entered into force August 6, 1924, on its ratification by three of the four Allied Powers.

The present territories of Turkey as determined by the Treaties mentioned above are as follows:—

1. Constantinople and Eastern Thrace up to a line running roughly East and West from the mouth of the River Resvaya to a point North of Adrianople, whence the boundary takes a generally Southerly direction determined for the most part by the River Maritza, but includes in Turkey a portion of the territory West of that river in the neighbourhood of Adrianople.

2. The whole of Asia Minor, comprised within the Caucasian frontier defined by the Treaty of Kars, which leaves Kars, Artwin and Ardahan to Turkey, the Northern portion of the old Turco-Persian frontier, a boundary line between Turkey and Iraq, as determined by the Treaty signed at Angora in June, 1926, whereby Mosul was ceded to Iraq, and a boundary line between Turkey and Syria running from Jezira-ibn-Omar on the Tigris to a point on the Gulf of Alexandretta immediately South of Payas;

3. Imbros, Tenedos and Rabbit Islands.

The Treaty of Lausanne and the Conventions attached to it provided for the demilitarisation of zones adjoining the European frontier, the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus, subject to the right to maintain a garrison at Constantinople, for the demilitarisation of the Islands named above as well as the islands in the Sea of Marmora with one exception, and for a special administrative régime in Imbros and Tenedos. Otherwise Turkey holds the above territories in unrestricted sovereignty.

The area of the Republic of Turkey is estimated at 494,538 square miles.

For the first time in its history a general census was taken in Turkey on October 28, 1927, and showed the total population of the Republic to be 13,649,945, of whom 6,584,404 were men and 7,065,541 women.

The population of the vilayets was given as follows :—

		Konia . . . . .	502,228	Zunguldak . . . . .	267,965

With the exception of Angora, which has a population of 75,000, the populations of the principal towns have not yet (March, 1928) been published, but Turkish returns prepared early in 1924 gave them as follows :—

Constantinople . . . . .	580,998	Adana . . . . .	64,110	Urfa . . . . .	42,751
Smyrna . . . . .	98,846	Caesarea . . . . .	49,567	Sivas . . . . .	31,248
Konia . . . . .	71,104	Adrianople . . . . .	56,847	Mardin . . . . .	31,077
Broussa . . . . .	64,664	Aintab . . . . .	47,930

The events of recent years have caused an enormous reduction in the Christian population of the territory still remaining to Turkey. A very large proportion of the Armenian population of Asia Minor disappeared after the war, owing to the fact that large numbers migrated to the Republic of Erivan. The Greek population has practically ceased to exist in Asia Minor and in European Turkey outside Constantinople. A Turco-Greek agreement signed at Lausanne on January 30, 1923, provided for the compulsory exchange of the Greeks of Turkey, not including Constantinople, against the Turks of Greece, not including Western Thrace, as from May, 1923. The Moslem population of Turkey has also suffered greatly from the effects of the war. It comprises besides the Turks of Asia Minor a few Kurds in the Eastern provinces, and a few Circassians. There is a fairly considerable but diminishing Jewish element in the towns.

Religion.

Mahommedans now form the vast majority of the population of the new Turkey. Under the old imperial system the non-Moslem communities were recognised as organised communities or milletts, the heads of which exercised not only spiritual but civil functions. The scope of these civil functions varied. They were in some cases, and more especially in that of the Greek Patriarch, of considerable importance. The whole position is now fluid. The Treaty of Lausanne has deprived the spiritual heads of the communities of their administrative prerogatives, and their authority is now purely ecclesiastical.

Formerly over half the settled inhabitants of Constantinople were Moslem, the other half being made up mostly of Orthodox Greeks, Armenians, Roman Catholics, Armenian and other Uniates, and Jews of two rites. Recent events have caused a decrease in the non-Moslem elements. There is, besides, a large foreign population of various professions.

A priesthood in the strict sense of the term cannot be said to exist in Mahomedan Turkey. Till 1926, the Ulema, or persons connected with the official ministrations of Islam, formed a separate class. Legislation in 1926, however, has suppressed the Ulema, and there remains only an Imam for each mosque to carry out the religious ceremonies.

Instruction.

In Turkey, elementary education is nominally obligatory for all children of both sexes. According to the Provisional Law of October 6, 1913, all children from 7 to 16 are to receive primary instruction, which may, however, be given in State schools, schools maintained by communities, or private schools, or, subject to certain tests, at home. Until recently there were throughout the country, both in towns and villages, Moslem religious schools, particularly for small children. In accordance with the present tendency to secularisation these were abolished by a law of March 3, 1924. The State schools are under the direct control of the Ministry of Public Instruction. They include not only primary schools, but also secondary schools, 'preparatory' schools (for students intending to enter higher schools), and a certain number of lycées or secondary schools of a superior kind. There are also training schools for male and female teachers, and a certain number of higher technical schools, besides the University of Constantinople, founded in 1900. The University has a large number of Moslem women students. Towards the end of 1925 a School of Law was founded at Angora, where Turkish professors, possessed of French and Swiss degrees, teach the new laws adopted by Turkey, some of which, such as the Civil Code and the Code des Obligations and the Law of Civil Procedure, have been borrowed from Swiss legislation. The Government intends to attach certain other faculties to this School of Law and create a University. A further plan is on foot for the foundation of a Higher Technical School. The important non-Moslem communities in Constantinople maintain their own schools, which, like all 'private' schools, are subject to the supervision of the Ministry of Public Instruction. Finally, there are in Constantinople and Smyrna a number of foreign schools, mostly conducted by British, French, Italian, and American congregations or societies on more or less missionary lines.

A general tendency has been manifested since 1926 to introduce the use of the Latin alphabet in Turkish official documents.

Justice.

It is in the sphere of justice that the New Turkey has realised the greatest progress. Since the beginning of the work of secularisation two years ago, nothing now remains of the old Ottoman laws based on the religious principles. The Turkish Government began by suppressing the religious Courts (Sheri) in 1924, in order to obtain this result. The system which was thus unified consists of (1) juges de paix (single judges with limited but summary penal and civil jurisdiction); (2) tribunaux de base (a president and two assistant judges with wider powers); (3) assize courts (a president and four assistant judges who hear serious penal cases). Appeal has been abolished. The Court of Cassation sits at Eski Shehr.

The laws applied by these Courts have been recently drawn up and adopted. The Turkish Civil Code is, with the exception of a few modifications, a reproduction of the Swiss Civil Code, as also the Code of Obligations, and both entered into force towards the end of 1926 and replaced the old Mejella which was promulgated in 1869 and based upon the religious principles. The old Civil Code, which was modelled on the French one, did not suffice for modern needs and was replaced the last year by a new commercial code. The new Penal Code, which is based in great measure upon the Italian Penal Code, and the Code of Civil Procedure, which, without being identical, nevertheless closely resembles that of the Canton of Neuchatel, came into force during last year. A Committee of Turkish jurists is at present engaged in drafting the articles of the new Code of Penal Procedure. It is thus seen that the Turkish Republic possesses a complete collection of modern laws.

Finance.

The revenue is derived from land, property, income and profits taxes, Customs, consumption taxes, sheep and cattle tax, monopolies, and other sources. The principal monopolies in 1927 were, tobacco, sugar, petroleum, alcohol, matches, explosives, cartridges and salt.

Estimates of revenue and expenditure for five financial years were as follows:—

—	1924-25	1925-26	1926-27	1927-28	1928-29
	£T	£T	£T	£T	£T
Revenue . .	129,214,610	145,806,978	218,315,245	194,580,544	206,291,668
Expenditure .	140,438,860	162,288,942	233,361,930	194,454,620	206,291,668

The Budget Estimates of Expenditure for the financial year 1928-29 are as follows:—

	£T		£T
National Defence . .	57,474,810	Marine . . . . .	6,024,680
Finance and Pensions .	27,107,532	Posts and Telegraphs .	5,416,853

Health . . . . .	3,403,400	Other Items . . . . .	2,533,822

The service of the Foreign Debt incurred previously to 1881 (Unified Bonds and 'Lots Turcs') is in normal times assured by the 'Conseil de la Dette Ottomane,' created under the Decree of Muharrem of Dec. 20, 1881, to which certain revenues were ceded by the Turkish Government. The Foreign Debt incurred subsequently to 1881 is secured on certain Government revenues assigned by contract to the respective Loans, and for the collection of these revenues the 'Council of the Debt' acts as intermediary, the service of the loans being in the hands of the Ottoman Bank and other Banks. After the Treaty of Lausanne the Turkish Government entered into negotiations with the Bondholders' Representatives with a view to an arrangement for the payment of the Debt of the former Ottoman Government which Republican Turkey does not refuse to recognise. On account of the difficulties due to the claim, advances by the Bondholders' Representatives that all interest matured should be paid in gold francs, and Turkey's refusal to consent to this, the negotiations dragged considerably, but finally, an arrangement in principle was arrived at towards the end of 1927, and the Turkish Government included the necessary credit for these payments in its 1928-29 Budget. By the Treaty of Lausanne the foreign debt of Turkey was to be distributed among the succession States, of which the new Turkey is one. The Turkish debt has been apportioned as follows (the first figure refers to the loans prior to October 17, 1912, the second to those between October 17, 1912 and November 1, 1924): Turkey, 62.25 per cent. and 76.54 per cent.; Greece, 10.57 per cent. and 0.55 per cent.; Yugoslavia, 5.25 per cent.; Bulgaria, 1.63 per cent. and 0.16 per cent.; Albania, 1.57 per cent.; Syria, 8.15 per cent. and 10.02 per cent.; Iraq, 3.96 per cent. and 4.87 per cent.; Palestine, 2.49 per cent. and 3.06 per cent.; and the Arab States, 4.13 per cent. and 4.80 per cent. The total debt of Turkey is £T82,000,000.

Defence.

Under the law of January 24, 1924, military service is for 18 months in the infantry and for two years in the cavalry, artillery and air service. The number of men liable to service in any given year is approximately 170,000. The strength of the active army in 1927 was 120,000 organised in 3 armies and 9 army corps, subdivided as follows:—

	Divisions	Regiments	Artillery Groups	Aviation Groups	Battalions	Batteries
Infantry . . .	18	54	—	—	162	—
Cavalry . . .	5 <sup>1</sup>	11	—	—	—	—
Artillery:—
Horse . . .	—	—	3	—	—	8
Field . . .	—	19	—	76	—	228
Heavy . . .	—	7	2	—	—	69
Air Force . . .	—	—	—	15	—	—

The infantry is equipped with Mauser rifles. The artillery with 75 mm. Krupp field guns and 10.5 and 12 c.m. Schneider howitzers.

The Turkish Navy is at present undergoing reorganisation, all vessels of any fighting value being taken in hand for refit as soon as money for this purpose can be spared. The effective fleet when this renovation programme has been completed will comprise the ex-German battle cruiser Favuz launched in 1911, displacing 22,500 tons, and armed with ten 11-inch guns; the old battleship Touregout Reis, 9,900 tons, and six 11-inch guns, now used as a training ship for naval cadets; the light cruisers Hamidieh, 3,830 tons, and Medjidieh, 3,300 tons, both dating from 1903; 8 gunboats of from 1,000 to 400 tons; 5 obsolete torpedo boats and two small submarines.

The Favuz is undergoing an extensive refit at Ismid under a contract made with a group of French shipbuilding yards. The repairs should be completed by December 1928.

A new naval base at Ismid has replaced the former dockyard in the Golden Horn. It is proposed to order two small submarines, two destroyers and a minelayer, to be built abroad.

The future strength of the personnel does not appear to have been fixed, but no difficulty is anticipated in manning the ships at present ready for sea.

Efforts are being made to develop an air service, with headquarters at Smyrna. A certain number of aeroplanes and hydroplanes have been bought, and further orders have been placed in France and Germany. Owing, however, to a dearth of pilots, and especially of trained mechanics, it cannot be said that this service is in an efficient condition, but the personnel is gradually being increased.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture.—Agriculture is most primitive, but modern methods are now being adopted. The soil for the most part is very fertile; the principal products are tobacco, mohair, cereals, figs, silk, olives and olive oil, dried fruits, nuts and almonds, skins and hides, furs, licorice root, wool, gums, canary seed, linseed and sesame. Tobacco, wool, mohair, dried fruit, opium nuts and valona nuts are the principal exports from Anatolia. Opium is an important crop in Konia and Afion Karahissar. Tobacco is grown both in European and Asiatic Turkey. The principal tobacco districts are Samsun (the most important), Bafra, Tsmid, Charchamba and Smyrna. The production of tobacco was in 1924, 61,000 tons, and in 1925, 52,060 tons. In 1926, 46,660 tons of tobacco were exported. The principal centres for silk production are Brusa and Constantinople. The production of olive oil, mainly confined to the Vilayet of Aidin, is very important. The production of figs in 1926 was estimated at 28,000 tons, and that of raisins, 35,000 tons. In 1925, about 200,000 bales of cotton were produced.

The forest laws of the empire are modelled on those of France, but restrictive regulations are not enforced, and the country is being rapidly deprived of its timber. About 17 million acres are under forest. The most-wooded vilayets are Castamouni, Aidin, Broussa, Bolou, Trebizond, Konia and Karassi. Of the forest land, about 88 per cent. belongs to the State, 6 per cent. to private persons, and the rest to communes and wakfs (pious foundations).

In 1926 there were in Turkey 12,871,894 sheep, 10,876,387 goats, 5,492,615 cattle, 968,754 asses and mules, and 529,082 horses.

Mining.—The Turkish provinces, especially those in Asia, are reported rich in minerals, which are little worked. Chrome ore is to be found in Menteshe, Kutahia, Smyrna, Adana, Brusa, Konia and Diarbekir. The Government owns silver mines at Bulgar Maden; zinc is found in the Ismidt district, Aidin, Trebizonde, Adana, and at the Dardanelles; manganese ore in Aidin, Menteshe, Brussa, Karassi and Merghir, and antimony in Aidin. Copper ore is found in the Taurus, at Tireboli, near Trebizond, at Arghana Maden, near Diarbekir, said to be one of the largest and most productive mines in the world; borax from 6,000 to 8,000 tons exported annually from the Marmora; meerschaum at Eskishehr; emery principally in the vilayet of Aidin; asphalt in small quantities at Aivalik; coal at Heraclea and at Zoungouldak on the Black Sea (500,000 tons in 1925). Lignite is found on the European coast of the Black Sea, a short distance from the entrance to the Bosphorus, Erzeroum, Aidin, Angora, Karassi, Sivas and Keshan near Uzun Kenpru near the Dardanelles. There are salt works at Erzeroum and in the vicinity of Smyrna and other places. Gold is found at Bulghar Maden (Konia); mercury at Sisma near Konia, at Ouchak, and in the vilayet of Aidin; arsenic in Aidin and Sivas; iron in the sandjak of Carassi, in the vilayet of Aidin, and in the Adana region. There is a good deal of brass-turning and beating of copper into utensils for household purposes.

Fisheries.—The fisheries of Turkey are important; the total value of marine produce for Constantinople and dependencies was in 1921–22 £T2,400,77£.15 as against £T2,922,332.21 in 1920–21. The total weight of marine produce in 1922–23 attained 22,000 tons. No later statistics are available.

Industry.—Industries are relatively unimportant. The vilayet of Aidin, was before the war one of Turkey's industrial centres. An attempt is being made by the Government to revive industry in Smyrna, and a fair amount of machinery has been imported. Carpet weaving represents approximately 60 per cent. of pre-war capacity. Textile factories have not suffered any material damage. The number of fig-packing establishments has been reduced from 35 to 12. Cotton ginneries are being rebuilt, and in June, 1926, an oilcake factory was established at Adana. A further recent development has been the opening in December, 1926, of sugar factories at Ushak, near Smyrna, and at Alpollu in Thrace, their estimated total production being about 15,000 tons per annum.

Commerce.

Imports and exports for three years:—

	1923	1924	1925
	£T	£T	£T
Imports . . . .	144,788,671	194,000,000	242,814,118
Exports . . . .	84,651,190	159,000,000	193,119,456

Turkish trade for 2 years was distributed among the principal countries as follows:—

Country	Imports		Exports
	1925	1924	1925	1924
	£T	£T	£T	£T
United Kingdom . . . .	87,846,817	84,278,190	17,441,277	23,281,808

SHIPPING & NAVIGATION—INTERNAL COMMUNICATIONS 1357

The value of the commercial intercourse between Turkey and Great Britain during the last five years according to the Board of Trade Returns is shown in the following table:—

—	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
Imports into U. K. from Turkey	£ 3,146,153	£ 3,154,902	£ 2,424,459	£ 3,003,922	£ 3,003,947
Exports of British produce to Turkey	£ 3,930,226	£ 4,216,079	£ 4,600,192	£ 3,103,229	£ 3,180,672

Shipping and Navigation.

At the beginning of 1927, the vessels under the Turkish flag had a tonnage of 186,986 tons. The coasting privileges in Turkish waters which certain foreign companies enjoyed by virtue of the Treaty of Lausanne came to an end in July, 1926. The most important Turkish company engaged in the coastal service is the "Seri-Séfine." This company, which lost the greater part of its vessels during the war and which possessed 12,258 tons at the Armistice, has increased this tonnage to 34,240. Other craft flying the Turkish flag included 29 tugs, 12 power barges, 300 ordinary barges and 42 motor launches. Three thousand seamen were employed in the Turkish merchant service.

In 1926 a total of 2,227 vessels of an aggregate tonnage of 1,935,200 called at the port of Smyrna, as against 2,554 vessels of 1,999,000 tons in 1925. At Constantinople the number of vessels clearing and in transit in 1926 was 5,994 of a total tonnage of 10,643,812.

Internal Communications.

In 1926, there were 30,319 miles of road in Turkey, of which 8,500 miles were national roads and 21,819 miles provincial roads.

The length of railway line in Turkey in January, 1926, was about 3,500 kilometres (2,173 miles).

The Oriental Railway (336 kilometres, or 208 miles) connects Constantinople via Adrianople with Sofia, Belgrade, and the chief centres of Europe. The Anatolian Railway (1,035 kilometres, or 643 miles) runs from Constantinople to Angora and Konia. The Bagdad Railway (633 kilometres, or 393 miles), starting from Konia, was completed during the war as far as Nisibin in Mesopotamia. Other railways are Smyrna-Aidin-Eghirdir (English Company) (606 kilometres, or 376 miles), Smyrna-Cassaba-Afion Karahissar (French Company) (703 kilometres, or 440 miles), Smyrna-Balikessir-Panderma (French Company), and Mudania-Brusa (42 kilometres, or 26 miles). The following railways are in course of construction: Samsoun-Sivas (Samsoun-Turhal, built by the Government, is now in operation; remainder Turhal-Sivas is being built by a Belgian Company); another line is being built from Césaréa to Sivas; Samsoun-Charshamba (narrow gauge); a Swedish Company is building a line from Angora to Ereghli with branch from Zafranbolou to Seughid-Euzn, and a further line from Keller to Diarbékir via Marash, Malatia and El Aziz. A German Company has commenced a line from Kutahia to Tavchanli. Others projected are Bafra-Samsoun, Césaréa to Oulou-Kishla; Ozoun-Keupru-Keshan (narrow gauge), Trebizonde-Erzzeroum. A contract was also signed with a German group for the construction of the Césaréa-Oulou-Kishla line and the Kutahia-Tavchanli-Balik Hissar lines.

There are over 2,000 post-offices in Turkey. Foreign post-offices disappeared as a result of the Treaty of Lausanne.

Banking and Credit.

In January, 1917, the Turkish Government issued a Charter for a new National Bank, to be styled the Ottoman National Credit Bank (Osmanli Itibar milli Bancasi). Its capital is 4 million Turkish pounds. The future status of this bank was fixed in 1926 by an agreement with the Government. A fusion took place recently between this Bank and the Banque d'Affaires, the head office of which is in Angora. Amongst the more important Turkish banks may be mentioned the Banque Agricole, the oldest of the Turkish institutions, with a capital of 30,000,000 Turkish pounds. The other banks are the Banque d'Affaires, the business of which is increasing rapidly, Banque Industrielle et Minière, Banque de Commerce et d'Industrie, Banque d'Emlak (Crédit Foncier). The principal Bank in Turkey is the Ottoman Bank, founded in 1863. It has a Branch in every important town of Turkey. The concession of the Ottoman Bank was extended in August 1925, by the Turkish Government, for a further period of 10 years.

The total amount of paper currency in circulation on January 31, 1926, was approximately £T153,000,000. New notes to this amount were printed in London, and are being issued to replace the old notes, which bore the name of the Ottoman Empire. This in no sense means an increase of the paper currency. The new notes are for the value of 1, 5, 10, 50, 100, 500, and 1,000 pounds. The notes of 50 piastres and £T25 will, therefore, disappear from circulation. All the new notes, except that of £T1, have on them a portrait of the Turkish president.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

On April 17, 1916, an order was issued reforming the currency. A gold standard, with the piastre as the unit, was thenceforth to be general all over Turkey, and the piastre to equal 40 para. The piastre, as well as the half piastre (20 para), quarter piastre (10 para) and eighth piastre (5 para) pieces were to be of nickel. Silver coins were 2, 5, 10, and 20 piastres; and gold coins 25, 50, 100, 250, and 500 piastres. Silver was legal tender up to 300 piastres, and nickel up to 50 piastres.

The only money in general circulation, apart from nickel coins for 10 and 20 paras and for 1 piastre and coins for 2½, 5, 10 and 25 piastres, is paper money issued during the war. This forced currency is very depreciated, the Turkish paper lira being worth about one-eighth of the gold coin of the same denomination.

The gold 100-piastre piece (which is equivalent to £T1) weighs 7·216 grammes, .916 fine, and thus contains 6·6147 grammes of fine gold. The silver 20-piastre piece weighs 24·055 grammes, .830 fine, and therefore contains 19·965 grammes of fine silver. £T11 equals £10 approximately (pre-war).

Weights and measures are as follows:—

1 Oke	= 400 drams	. . .	= 2·8264 lbs.
1 Batman = 6 Okes	. . .	. . .	= 16·958 lbs.
39·6263 Okes	. . .	. . .	= 1 cwt.
1 Cantar = 44 Okes	. . .	. . .	= 124·8616 lbs.
1 Cheki = 195 Okes	. . .	. . .	= 551·148 lbs.
1 Kileh	. . .	. . .	= 0·9120 bushel.
1 Muscal (Ess. of rose) 1½ drams	. . .	. . .	= 74·171 grains.
1 Arshin (cloth)	. . .	. . .	= 26·96 inches.

1 Endaze . . . . .	= 25.555 inches.*
1 Arshin (land) . . . . .	= 29.830 inches.
1 Deunum . . . . .	= 1098.765 sq. yards.
1 Djerib (hectare) . . . . .	= 2.47 acres.

In 1889 the metric system of weights was made obligatory for cereals; metric weights were decreed obligatory in January 1892, but the decree is not yet enforced. In 1915 the metric system was made the official standard of weights and measures.

On March 1, 1917, the Gregorian calendar was introduced into Turkey, to be used side by side with the Hegira calendar, while as from January 1, 1926, it was decided finally to adopt the Gregorian calendar alone, the Turkish civil year 1342 becoming 1926.

URUGUAY.

(REPÚBLICA ORIENTAL DEL URUGUAY.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Uruguay, formerly a part of the Spanish Viceroyalty of Río de la Plata, and subsequently a province of Brazil, declared its independence August 25, 1825, which was recognised by the Treaty of Montevideo, signed August 27, 1828. The Constitution of the Republic was last amended on January 3, 1918, and came into force on March 1, 1919. The franchise is universal for males over 18 years of age; voting is secret, and the principle of proportional representation operates. The legislative power is vested in a Parliament of two Houses, the Senate and the Chamber of Representatives, which meet in annual session, extending from March 15 to December 15. In the interval of the session, a permanent committee of two senators and five members of the Lower House assumes the control of the executive power. The representatives are chosen for three years, in the proportion of 1 to every 12,000 inhabitants of male adults who can read and write. The senators are chosen by an Electoral College, whose members are directly elected by the people; there is one senator for each department, chosen for six years, one-third retiring every two years. There are 124 representatives and 19 senators.

The executive is divided between the President of the Republic and a National Administrative Council. The President is elected for four years by the direct vote of the people, and may be re-elected after an interval of 8 years since his last holding office. The National Administrative Council consists of nine members (with nine alternates), elected for six years; six are of the majority party, and three of the largest minority; three retire every two years. The election is by direct popular vote. The President appoints the Ministers of Foreign Affairs, of War and Marine, and of the Interior, and has supreme control of these departments. The other ministers—of Finance, Public Works, Industry and Education—are appointed by the Council, which is the controlling power of these departments. It proposes the annual budget and recommends to the President such fiscal measures as it deems expedient.

President of the Republic.—Senor Dr. Don Juan Campisteguy (March 1, 1927, to February 28, 1931). Salary, 24,000 pesos per annum.

Area and Population.

The following table shows the area and the estimated population of the 19 departments (capitals in brackets) on December 31, 1926:—

Total	72,153	1,720,468	22.7

The last census was taken in 1908, when the total population was 1,042,686, divided into 861,464 native-born and 181,222 immigrants, including 62,357 Italians, 54,885 Spaniards, 27,789 Brazilians and 18,600 Argentinians. The population on December 31, 1926 (1,720,468) included 945,964 males and 774,504 females.

In 1914 the Uruguayan and Brazilian Boundary Commissions drew up the documents respecting three islands belonging to Uruguay, to be called Socorro, Jacinto, and Denis.

The population of Montevideo City on December 31, 1926, was 439,129. Of the other cities, Paysandu had 26,000 inhabitants; Salto, 30,000; Mercedes, 23,000.

Births, deaths, and marriages for three years:—

Years	Living Births	Still-Births	Marriages	Deaths	Surplus of Living Births over Deaths
1924	41,880	1,472	9,178	19,182	22,748

1926	43,091	1,437	9,585	17,828	25,263

Of the living births in 1926, 12,458 were illegitimate. Divorces: 368 in 1926; 381 in 1925; 231 in 1924.

For five years the arrivals and departures by sea at all the ports were:—

	1922	1923	1924	1925	1926
Immigrants . .	165,435	172,503	173,833	161,942	170,535
Emigrants . .	152,339	153,078	158,633	147,305	153,016

Religion and Instruction.

State and church are separated ; and there is complete religious liberty. The religion professed by the majority of the inhabitants is Roman Catholic. The archbishopric of Montevideo has 2 suffragan bishops in Salto and Melo. The 1908 census showed 430,095 Catholics, 12,232 Protestants, 45,470 unspecified and 126,425 Liberals Primary education is obligatory. In 1926 there were 1,264 public and private schools with 148,485 enrolled pupils and 3,890 teachers. There were also 64 evening courses for adults with 7,161 pupils and 160 teachers. Pupils attending secondary schools numbered 1,188 in 1926.

The University of the Republic at Montevideo has 2,230 students. There are two normal schools for males and for females, and a school of arts and trades supported by the State where 185 pupils receive instruction gratuitously. There are also many religious seminaries throughout the Republic with a considerable number of pupils, a school for the blind, two for the deaf and dumb, and a school of domestic science.

The Asistencia Pública is an institution which has general charge of hospitals, asylums, dispensaries, and similar relief works all over the country. In March 1919 old-age pensions were first granted.

Justice.

The judicial power rests with the High Court of Justice, consisting of 5 judges elected by the General Assembly of the Chambers. The President is chosen annually by the members of the Court from amongst themselves. This court has original jurisdiction in constitutional, international, and admiralty cases, and will hear appeals in cases in which the decision has been modified or altered in other appeal courts, of which there are 2 each with 3 judges. In Montevideo there are also 3 courts for ordinary civil cases, 2 for commercial cases, 1 for Government, 2 for criminal cases, 2 correctional courts, and 3 for criminal investigation. Each departmental capital has a departmental court, and each of the 214 judicial sections into which the Republic is divided has a justice of peace court; further, each section is divided into districts, in which deputy judges (alcaldes) try cases involving small amounts.

In September 1907 the death penalty was abolished, penal servitude for a period of 30 to 40 years being put in its place.

Finance.

The receipts and expenditure for recent years are stated as follows (4·7 gold pesos = £1) :—

—	Receipts	Expenditure	—	Receipts	Expenditure

This budget was prolonged to cover the finances of 1926-1927 (during which period expenditure had increased to 48,255,930 gold pesos and revenue was estimated at 48,139,893 pesos), and it has since been prolonged for the financial year 1927-1928. Expenditure has been increased, by laws promulgated since July, 1926, to 52,082,757 pesos, while revenue is estimated at 51,820,577 pesos.

The amount of the public debt of Uruguay on January 1, 1927, is given as 222,111,295 pesos, of which 146,674,044 was external, 72,898,751 pesos internal and 2,538,500 pesos was the debt contracted jointly with Brazil for the construction of an international bridge over the Yaguaron River.

Defence.

The army of Uruguay consists of a small standing army, and the National Guard. Service in the standing army is voluntary, lasting from 2 to 5 years with re-engagement up to the age of 44. It consists of 19 line battalions, 4 rifle companies, 9 cavalry regiments, 3 field artillery regiments of 3 batteries each, a fortress artillery company and machine gun company, 1 engineers' battalion, and 1 bearer company with a peace strength in 1926 of 788 officers and 7,464 men, and a nominal war strength of 50,000.

The National Guard is a militia, service in which is compulsory in the event of war. It is divided into three classes, or 'bans.' The first 'ban,' or 'mobile' national guard contains all the young men fit for military duty between the ages of 17 and 30, who would take the field with the standing army. The second ban, consisting of men fit for service between 30 and 45, is the 'departmental,' or provincial, national guard. Its units do not move out of their own departments, but the men can be drafted to make good the losses of the mobile units in time of war. The third ban, containing all the men between 19 and 45, is the 'territorial' force, and is only liable to garrison duty in its own districts. The total strength of the National Guard (all three bans) is, nominally, about 100,000 men and 120 guns.

There is also a police force, with an establishment of 5,000, and a force of mounted police ('Guardia Republicana') of 392. The Fire Brigade, which also undertakes police duties, numbers 360.

The infantry of the active army is armed with the Mauser rifle, the field batteries have either Schneider or Krupp 7.5 cm. guns. The National Guard is mainly armed with the Remington rifle and old de Bange guns.

The Military Aviation School possessed, at the end of 1925, some 65 machines. The School has its own workshops and staff of mechanics, and an establishment of 8 instructors and 335 officers and men. A naval aeronautical service is also in process of being organized.

The fleet consists of the light cruiser Montevideo, the training vessel (ex-yacht) 18 de Julio, the torpedo gunboat Uruguay, 1,400 tons, speed 23 knots, launched at Kiel in 1910, and a few smaller craft.

Production and Industry.

Uruguay is primarily a pastoral country, 60 per cent. (27,573,919 acres) of the total area being devoted to the stock-raising industry, 20 per cent. (10,002,126 acres) to mixed farms and ranches, and only 5 per cent. (2,681,613 acres) to agriculture. The remaining 15 per cent. of the country's area is unproductive. Animals and animal products constitute 95 per cent. of the country's exports. Wool shipments for recent seasons have been: 1924-25, 89,000 bales; 1925-26, 108,400 bales; and 1926-27, 125,000 bales. Nutria skins are exported at the rate of 50,000 a year.

In 1925 there were within the Republic 8,431,613 head of cattle, including 3,124,957 cows, 1,230,765 heifers, 333,105 oxen, 14,443,341 sheep, and 73,464 young bulls.

Agricultural products are raised chiefly in the Departments of Canelones, Colonia, San José, Minas, and Florida. The average farm is about 250 acres. The principal crops and their yield for two years were as follows:—

	Area		Yield
	1925-1926	1926-1927	1925-1926	1926-1927
	Acres	Acres	Metric tons	Metric tons

The National roads of Uruguay have a total length of 2,240 miles, and there are about 3,100 miles of departmental roads, of which about 300 miles are macadamised. River transport is also very extensive.

The three principal railway systems are the Central (Combined System, 980 miles), the Midland (320 miles), North Western (113 miles), Northern (73 miles), all British owned. The East Coast Railway (78 miles) and 3 minor lines are controlled by the State. On June 30, 1924, the railway system of Uruguay open for traffic had a total length of 1,654 miles of standard gauge, of which 1,060 miles are under State guarantee. Early in 1927, 27·9 miles of the State line from San Carlos to Garzon were opened; 45 miles of the line from San Carlos to Rocha are expected to be available for traffic very shortly.

The telegraph lines in operation have a total length of 6,398<sup>3</sup> miles; in 1925, 249 offices through which 1,868,742 telegrams passed. Two telephone companies of Montevideo have 45,719 miles of wire, and in the Republic, 26 companies in 1926 have 47,243 miles of wire. Number of subscribers, 24,838.

In 1926 there were 995 post offices. The movement of mail in 1926 (internal) comprised 121,030,668 letters, packets, &c., and external, 11,837,410. Postal savings deposits on May 14, 1927, totalled 550,000 pesos.

Money and Credit.

The Bank of the Republic, whose president and directors are appointed by the Government, had a paid-up capital on June 30, 1927, of 35,000,000 gold pesos. Its earnings for year ending December 31, 1926, were 2,371,000 pesos. This bank has the exclusive right to issue notes. On September 30, 1927, notes to the value of 63,194,968 pesos were in circulation, and its stock of gold amounted to 59,011,816 pesos. British gold coin held by the Bank on December 31, 1926, amounted to £5,263,000.

In 1912 the Government created a National Insurance Bank (Banco de Seguros del Estado) with a monopoly of insurance business of all kinds. No new insurance companies may now be established. The Insurance Bank opened its doors on March 1, 1912. In 1926 the premiums collected amounted to 5,780,834 pesos, and the claims settled totalled 2,610,553 pesos. This bank's reserves on July 31, 1927, amounted to 11,246,705 pesos.

The British Banks operating in Uruguay are: British Bank of South America, Bank of London and South America, and Royal Bank of Canada.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

There is no Uruguayan gold coin in circulation, but the monetary standard is gold, the theoretical gold coin being the peso oro, weighing 1·697 grammes, ·917 fine. The actual circulating medium consists of paper notes issued by the Bank of the Republic in denominations of 10, 5, and 1 dollars. Silver coins of 50 and 20 centesimos; and nickel coins of 5, 2, and 1 centesimos are also in circulation. The paper issue is fully covered by gold reserves.

The exchange value of the peso in London ranged during 1927 between 48½ pence and 51½ pence; in New York, between 99 cents and 1·04 dollars.

The metric system of weights and measures was adopted by a law of May 20, 1862, and came into force on January 1, 1867, replacing the old Spanish weights and measures which were current with slight modifications. By a law of October 2, 1894, the metric system was made compulsory in all civil and commercial transactions. The strict requirements concerning weights and measures were reinforced by a decree of February 8, 1918.

VENEZUELA.

(ESTADOS UNIDOS DE VENEZUELA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Venezuela was formed in 1830 by secession from the other members of the Republic of Colombia. The Constitution in force is that of July 1, 1925. Legislative authority is vested in a Congress of 2 chambers, the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies. The former consists of 40 members elected for 8 years, 2 for each State, Venezuelans by birth and over 30 years of age. The latter is constituted as follows: Each State chooses by direct election for 3 years one deputy, a Venezuelan by birth and over 21 years of age, for every 35,000 inhabitants, and one more for an excess of 15,000. A State with fewer than 35,000 of population will have one deputy. The Federal District and the Territories which have, or may reach, the population fixed by law will also elect deputies.

The executive power is exercised by the President of the Republic in conjunction with the Cabinet Ministers through whom he acts. The President is elected by Congress for 7 years, must be a Venezuelan by birth and over 30 years of age.

President of the Republic.—General Juan Vicente Gómez, elected May 3, 1922, for the period 1922–1929. Assumed office on June 24, 1922.

First Vice-President.—General José Vicente Gómez, elected June 24, 1922.

The seat of the General Powers of the Nation is at the City of Caracas, but, when any unforeseen circumstance requires, the Executive Power may fix its residence at any other point of the Federal District.

The States are autonomous and politically equal. Each has a Legislative Assembly, whose members are chosen in accordance with their respective Constitutions. Each State has a President and a general Secretary. The States are divided into districts and municipalities. Each district has a municipal council, and each municipio a communal junta. The Federal District and the Territories are administered by the President of the Republic through Governors who in turn appoint secretaries.

Area and Population.

Venezuela has an area of 398,874 square miles. According to the census of January, 1926, the population was 3,026,878, not including 10,520 Venezuelans known to be residing abroad. Estimated population on December 31, 1926, was 3,053,497.

The long-standing boundary dispute with Colombia, which has continued since the separation of the two Republics in 1830, is now settled; the decision of the President of the Swiss Confederation, to whom it was submitted by a Convention signed at Bogotá in 1916, was given on March 24, 1922. By it the line fixed by the award of the King of Spain of March 16, 1891, is practically upheld, the north-eastern end of the Goajira Peninsula being definitely assigned to Colombia. Swiss surveyors, with airplanes and cameras, mapped out the unexplored areas in dispute.

The country is now divided into a Federal District, 20 States and 2 Territories, as follows:—

State	Capital	Pop. January, 1926	State	Capital	Pop. January, 1926
Anzoátegui .	Barcelona	112,797	Portuguesa .	Guanare	58,721

1926	17,834	91,648	66,092	21,672	16,552

Religion and Instruction.

The Roman Catholic is the State religion, but there is toleration of all others. The Archbishop of Caracas has 5 suffragan bishops.

Elementary instruction is free, and from the age of 7 to the completion of the primary grade, compulsory. The number of pupils in the Government primary schools in 1926 was 63,747; in 341 private schools, 15,302; in 236 municipal schools, 10,473; in secondary schools, 588; in special schools, 1,618; in institutes of higher learning, 716. At Caracas is the Central University (re-opened in July, 1922, after being closed since October, 1912), with 570 students in 1926-27, and in Mérida is the University of Los Andes. Superior instruction is divided into schools, viz.: Philosophy and Letters; Physical, Mathematical, and Natural Sciences; Medical Science; Political Science; and Ecclesiastical Science. These schools can be established separately or can unite to form Universities. There are at present in activity, the University of Los Andes, eight schools of Political Science and of Ecclesiastical Science, and in Caracas Schools of Medical Science and of Ecclesiastical Science, besides private schools of Political Science. The Government supports also the following Institutes for special instruction: a School of Plastic Arts, another of Music and Elocution, two of Arts and Trades (one for men and the other for women), and three of Commerce.

Justice.

Judicial authority resides in the 'Federal Court of Cassation,' which is the supreme tribunal of the Federation and States, and in various tribunals and courts established by special laws. Members of the Federal Court of Cassation (seven in number) are elected by Congress for 7 years, one for each of seven groups of States into which the Republic is divided for this purpose. They select their own President, Vice-President, and Chancellor. The Federal Procurator-General is appointed for 3 years.

The States have each a Supreme Court with 3 members called respectively President, Relator, and Chancellor. Each State has also a superior court, courts of first instance, district courts, and municipal courts. The States' judicial officers hold their posts for 3 years. In the Territories there are civil and criminal judges of first instance, and also judges in the municipalities.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure for five years were as follows (25·25 bolivars = £1):—

—	1923-24 <sup>1</sup>	1924-25 <sup>1</sup>	1925-26 <sup>1</sup>	1926-27	1927-28 <sup>1</sup>

The public debt on June 30, 1927, was 87,367,816 bolivars. The internal debt amounted to 36,239,440 bolivars, and the external debt to 51,127,876 bolivars.

Defence.

In 1920 a law was promulgated according to which all Venezuelans have to serve two years with the active forces of the army, and to remain in the reserve until the age of 45. The active army consists of infantry, 20 battalions, each of 400 men; artillery, 8 batteries, each of 200 men, and 1 naval battalion. The naval force contains one battalion distributed among the vessels of the navy, which consists of 3 gunboats and a training ship acquired in 1912.

Production and Industry.

The surface of Venezuela is naturally divided into 3 distinct zones—the agricultural, the pastoral, and the forest zone. In the first are grown coffee, cocoa, sugar-cane, maize, cotton, beans, &c.; the second affords runs for cattle; and in the third, which covers nearly half the country, tropical products, such as caoutchouc, balatá (a gum resembling rubber), tonka beans, copaiba, vanilla, growing wild, are worked by the inhabitants. Forest resources have been barely tapped; 600 species of wood have been identified. The area under coffee is estimated at from 180,000 to 200,000 acres. The coffee plantations number about 33,000, and those of cocoa 5,000. Coffee and cocoa together represent in value two-thirds of the exports of the country, not excluding oil. There are about 600 sugar plantations. The annual production of sugar may be estimated at 60,000 tons; exports ranged from 9,406 tons in 1924 to 4,679 tons in 1926.

One-fifth of the population is engaged in agriculture. The live-stock in Venezuela is estimated as follows:—2,077,684 oxen, 118,439 sheep, 2,154,716 goats, 167,708 horses, 54,565 mules, 200,439 asses, 512,086 pigs. In the agricultural and cattle industries about 60,000 labourers are employed.

Venezuela is rich in metals and other minerals. One of the principal mining industries is the production of gold in the region to the south-east of Ciudad Bolívar. Copper ore is also produced. Coal is worked at Coro, in Falcon State, and at Naricual. Salt mines in various States are now worked by the Government. Venezuela to-day is one of the principal petroleum producing countries in the world; the production in 1926 amounted to 33,473,644 barrels against 19,022,214 barrels in 1925. The only difficulty lies in transport; oil tankers able to cross the sand bar into Lake Maracaibo have to be specially built. Asphalt from Lake Bermudez is exported to the United States. Round the island of Margarita and neighbouring islets off the north coast of Venezuela pearl fishing is carried on under government licence.

Venezuela has few industries, most manufactured materials required being imported. There are two cotton mills at Valencia, one at Caracas, and one at Cumana, producing textiles which compete with imported Manchester goods in the cheaper qualities. There is also a cement and a glass factory at Caracas. Salt and matches are Government monopolies; the latter is farmed by a British Company.

Commerce.

The value of the imports into and exports from Venezuela for 4 years was :—

—	1923	1924	1925	1926
	Bolivars	Bolivars	Bolivars	Bolivars
Imports . . . .	102,249,052	215,925,000	303,673,000	386,616,000
Exports . . . .	186,744,504	213,486,434	323,278,427	395,403,000

The distribution of the commerce in 2 years was mainly as follows :—

—	Imports		Exports
	1925	1926	1925	1926
	Bolivars	Bolivars	Bolivars	Bolivars
United States . . . .	163,305,000	228,613,000	54,123,000	98,214,000

Total trade between Venezuela and the United Kingdom (according to the Board of Trade returns) for 5 years :—

	1923	1924	1925	1926	1927
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Venezuela to U. Kingdom	504,107	480,437	1,370,076	299,707	410,293
Exports to Venezuela from U. Kingdom	1,554,495	1,742,894	2,450,027	2,290,583	2,170,502

Shipping and Communications.

The number of vessels in the foreign trade which entered the ports of Venezuela in 1926 was 1,963, of an aggregate tonnage of 2,459,938 (British vessels, 137 of 270,119 tons). The number that cleared was 3,797 of 4,719,574 tons (British, 518 of 557,630 tons). Foreign vessels are not permitted to engage in the coasting trade, except by special concessions or by contract with the Government.

There are good motor roads from Caracas to La Guaira and Macuto, from Caracas to Valencia and Puerto Cabello, eventually to be continued to San Cristobal (683 miles), and from Caracas to Guatire, projected as far as Ciudad Bolivar; from Maracay two new roads have been opened to Ocumare de la Costa, and to Villa de Cura and the Llanos of Apure; in remoter parts, away from the rivers, traffic is carried on by means of pack animals and small mule-carts. A new road has also been constructed in the western part of the country from Uraca, the present terminus of the Tachira Railroad, southward of the mountains of San Cristobal. Two great new roads are under construction, the Gran Carretera Oriental (626 miles), and the Gran Carretera Occidental (540 miles). Altogether there are about 4,064 miles of road fit for motor traffic.

In Venezuela there are 12 lines of railway (5 national and 7 foreign—the latter including 4 British and 1 German) with a total length of (January 1st, 1927) 661 miles. The Great Railway of Venezuela, 113 miles in extent, is one of the longest lines in the Republic, running between Caracas and Valencia. Other lines are the La Guaira and Caracas line (22 miles), the Venezuela Central Railway (45 miles), the Puerto Cabello and Valencia Railway (84 miles), the Bolivar Railway (143 miles), the oldest line in operation in the country, and which runs from the port of Tucucas to Barquisimeto; Great Tachira Railway (74 miles); Great Railway of La Crita (52 miles); Carenero Railway (33 miles); Guanta to Barcelona Railway (22 miles); and Santa Barbara to El Vigia Railway (37 miles). In 1923 gross railway receipts amounted to 16,680,380 bolivars, and in 1924 to 18,092,782 bolivars. In Caracas electric tramways are worked by a British Company.

There are about 11,160 miles of navigable water in Venezuela. The Compañía Venezolana de Navegacion has a virtual monopoly of the navigation of the river and its tributaries and the Lake of Maracaibo.

The telegraph system has a network of 6,244 miles with 218 telegraph offices handling 1,000,000 messages. A British company supplies telephonic communication in most parts of the settled country in the neighbourhood of Caracas. There are 359 post-offices.

There are wireless stations at Caracas, Maracay, Maiquetia, San Cristobal, Porlamar, La Guaira, and Barquisimeto.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The Bank of Venezuela (capital 24,000,000 bolivars) had on June 30, 1921, a reserve fund of 4,404,719 bolivars; cash holdings (June 30, 1922) of 50,562,207 bolivars gold and 8,135,861 bolivars silver. The Bank of Caracas has a capital of 6,000,000 bolivars. There are also two other banks, the Bank of Maracaibo with a capital of 1,250,000 bolivars, and the Commercial Bank of Maracaibo with a capital of 400,000 bolivars, as well as local branches of British, American and Dutch banks.

The new Venezuelan banking law (July 18, 1927) authorises the free establishment of banks in Venezuela, which, provided they are incorporated as native companies, shall have power to issue notes to bearer convertible on presentation. They must publish monthly balance sheets, keep 10 per cent. of their reserves in gold and 60 per cent. in Venezuelan securities. Circulation of foreign banknotes is prohibited; they must be declared by travellers at the Customs before they can be exchanged into local currency.

The official monetary unit is the Bolívar (equivalent to 0.290323 grammes fine gold), which corresponds to the franc. It is divided into 100 céntimos. The face value of £1 is 25.25 bolivars. The following are the coins in current circulation: Gold, 100 (morocotas) and 20 bolivars; silver, 5, 2.50, 2, 1, 0.50 (real) bolivars, and 0.25 (medio) bolivars; nickel, 0.125 (locha), 0.05 (centavo) bolivars.

The bank notes in circulation are as follows (the figures in brackets showing their values at par): 1,000 bolivars (£39 11s. 8d.); 800 bolivars (£31 13s. 4d.); 500 bolivars (£19 15s. 10d.); 400 bolivars (£15 16s. 8d.); 100 bolivars (£3 19s. 2d.); 50 bolivars (£1 19s. 7d.); 20 bolivars (15s. 10d.); and 10 bolivars (7s. 11d.).

Gold coins are the old Spanish onza (80 bolivars—very rare) and 20 bolivars. Silver coins are 5-bolivar pieces, commonly called fuerte (3s. 11½d.); 2½ bolivars (1s. 11¾d.); 2 bolivars (1s. 7d.); 1 bolivar (9¼d.); ½-bolivar, called a real (4¼d.); and ¼ bolivar, called a medio (2¼d.). Nickel coins are 0.125 bolivar, commonly called a cuartillo or a locha (1¼d.), and 0.05 bolivar, called a centavo (½d.).

A decree of May 18, 1912, provided that the official system of weights and measures shall be the metric system.

INVESTORS!

The Financial Times

EVERY MORNING Ensures a Satisfying Sense of SECURITY ALL DAY.

THE field for investment is now so wide and varied, and the pitfalls for the unwary are so cunningly designed, that it is becoming more and more the duty of every man possessed of capital, however small, to understand and to be well informed of the varied conditions of the money market, and with industrial progress and developments.
